Bennett Electrocuted Early Today for Murder at Dallas

CONFESSION IN COURT LAST JULY WAS SENSATIONAL

Says "Sorry" for His Crimes, "Ready To Go"

HUNTSVILLE, Aug. 18. (UP)—R. T. Bennett, 31, Dallas negro, died in the electric chair at 12:13 this morning for the slaying of Mrs. Leona Smiley Buchanan at Dallas.

CONFESSION LAST JULY SENSATIONAL

DALLAS, Tex. (UP)—A negro's heart that once thumped with painful knowledge of guilt was stilled for ever today as the state exacted its penalty for a confessed murder.

R. T. Bennett walked to the electric chair at Huntsville with a light heart today because he had gotten "right with God." He squared his conscience last July 11 when he rose from his seat to announce to a startled court room crowd here he wanted to confess to two murders and end "a thumping" in his breast that had bothered him since his first victim had died.

The young negro's death closed one of Dallas' most lurid criminal careers. The two murders, promiscuous robberies, jewel thefts, prowlings and terrorism lay in his wake.

He had served three years at Huntsville previously on a theft charge and had been at liberty only a year before his last apprehension.

Arrested for the ambush slaying of Policeman Sam G. Lanford here June 30, Bennett broke under grilling to confess shooting the officer when chased on an early morning round of prowling. Later he confessed the strangling of Mrs. Leona Smiley Buchanan, pretty theatrical company employe, in her apartment Dec. 5, 1932.

With the confession of the latter officers put the answers to an unsolved mystery that had become known as the "dice murder."

When Mrs. Buchanan's body was found two red dice weighting down a poorly scrawled note was the principal clue to her slayer's identity. "So you don't love me anymore?" were the taunting words scribbled on the cheap paper.

That note was a clever ruse, officers believed, to throw them off the slayer's trail. Such cunning, they later declared, befitted the Booker T. Washington high school graduate whose treachery kept him outside the grasp of the law. By day he worked in positions of trust and was looked upon by charity workers in the negro district as a potential leader of his race.

Bennett's arrest, however, broke his deception. Once after officers had reported confessions obtained the negro retracted. Then as suddenly as he had changed his plea to not guilty he returned to again accept full blame for both murders.

"I wanted to get right with God," he said after he interrupted his trial to announce to a startled court room that he was a sinner. There had been "a thumping" in his breast ever since Mrs. Buchanan was choked to death with her silk stockings as she lay in her bed, Bennett told District Judge Grove C. Adams.

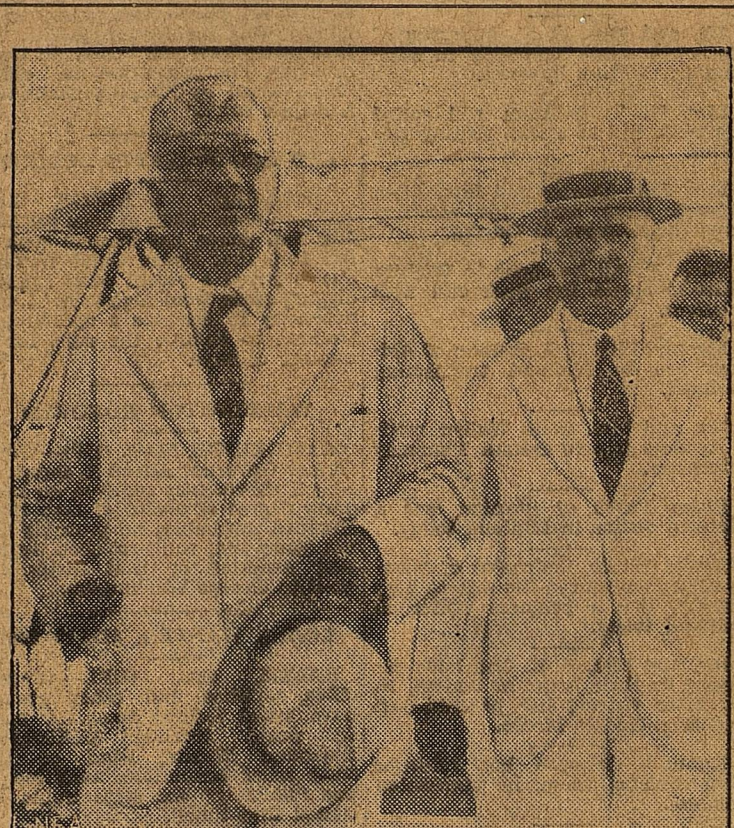

"I want to go to Huntsville as soon as I can and get it over with and tell God the things I told Judge Adams just now," he told newspaper men after the trial. "The thumping has stopped."

MAJOR GENERAL WINANS, ON LAST TRIP BEFORE RETIREMENT, LANDS HERE ON INSPECTION TRIP TODAY

Making his final trip of inspection as commander of the eighth corps area, Major General Winans of Fort Sam Houston landed at the army always station at Sloan field today, en route to national guard camps and civilian reforestation groups at a number of points northwest.

Lieut. Thad V. Foster piloted the B-2 army biplane which carried the general here from San Antonio in two hours and 25 minutes, over a 315-mile course. The officers landed here at 10:40, having lunch and taking off for Las Vegas, N. M., 330 miles distant by air.

The general will take leave Sept. 1 and will retire from army service Oct. 31. A rugged, virile man for his 40-odd years, General Winans is known as one of the greatest commanders of the army today.

"They don't make 'em any better," said Lieut. Foster in telling Midland friends of his regret at losing the general.

The officers were met at the field by Harvey Sloan, M. C. Ulmer, J. R. Martin, Percy J. Mims and a representative of The Reporter-Telegram. They had lunch with Mr. and Mrs. Sloan, prior to taking off for the northwest. From Las Vegas they will go to Fort Logan, Colo., and Fort Warren at Cheyenne, Wyoming, returning by way of El Paso.

The ship was powered with a new motor. "I don't dare open her up," said Lieut. Foster, who averaged 132 miles per hour here. He was wearing his full uniform instead of the "shorts" in which he was attired on his last visit here, flying solo. He gave credit to the abbreviated costume for thirty pounds he has gained in weight.

The lieutenant got a check on wind velocity, telling Joe Capriota of the local airways force that he wanted to "fly as high as he could go."

At 4,310 feet No. 1 Smith was 1,247 feet below sea level and past the point where production was obtained in Standand Oil & Gas Co.'s No. 2 Dick Cowden, two miles to the northwest.

Standand No. 2 Cowden, in section 34, block 14, township 1 south, T.&P.Ry.Co. survey, has an elevation of 3,095 feet, had pay from 4,120 to 4,217 feet and was completed at 4,302. Refiners' associations of California, Arkansas and Texas jointly protested the 18.5 ratio between gasoline and crude oil prices, suggesting 15 to one between 36 to 36.9, specifically gravelly crude and 68 to 69 motor gasoline as a more satisfactory market stabilization basis.

Wirt Franklin wanted price fixing applied to both crude and refined products.

Reading, left to right, are "Boss" Shannon and his wife, Oleta, of Paradise, Texas. The hearing was held behind locked doors and barred windows on the fifth floor of the Dallas County jail. U. S. Stubbeman Says Race Withdrawal Rumor Is False

Frank Stubbeman, Midland attorney who is a candidate for the unexpired term as representative of the 88th legislative district, for which an election will be held August 26, left today for a trip to towns and counties in the western part of the district.

Stubbeman branded as false certain rumors which were alleged to have been current at Rankin this week that he had withdrawn from the race.

He asked his friends and supporters here not to regard his position lightly and not to cease activity in his behalf.

Stubbeman said his opponent for the race did not make application to have his name printed on the Midland ballot but had done so in other counties and had his name thereon.

"Because mine is the only name on the ballot in Midland county and because of the rumor that I had a clear field, there is danger of Midland county people becoming apathetic about the matter," he said. "I believe we shall win but we must not be cocksure. We want every vote we can muster in Midland county and we hope that Midland county people will carry the cause to their friends over the district. I personally am deeply grateful for the support being accorded me in Midland and throughout the district."

WALLACE GIVES DETAILS OF CORN AND HOG PROGRAM

CHICAGO, Aug. 18. (UP)—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today stressed long time aspects of the corn-hog emergency program in revealing details at a Century of Progress exposition in the farm week celebration.

The department will buy from six hundred to seven hundred million pounds of live pork from the fall and winter market, representing sixteen per cent normal production and expecting to raise hog prices 25 to 30 per cent.

Edible pork will not be marketed but unemployment relief agencies will use the most.

Processing "considerably less than a cent a pound" will be levied on pork to provide $55,000,000 for financing the program.

Secretary Wallace warned that substantial reduction in corn acreage and a decrease in farrowing sows next spring are imperative.

PROSECUTOR OF KIDNAPERS PLANS URSCHER TRIALS

Possible Escape of Suspects Object Of Vigil

Assistant Federal Attorney General Leslie E. Salter moved from Chicago to Oklahoma City to prepare for the trial of Charles F. Urschel kidnap suspects.

Harvey J. Bailey, held at Dallas, and Albert L. Bates, held at Denver, were expected to be sent to Oklahoma soon.

Two federal agents, on a "life assignment" to solve the Linbergh kidnaping, were in Denver after the arrest of Bates and were reported later to be en route to Dallas.

Denver officers were guarding against an attempt of George Kelly and Vernon Miller to free Bates who nearly saw his way out of jail yesterday.

Kelly's residence was discovered to be at Fort Worth. He was there until two weeks ago.

SAY BAILEY'S GUN KILLED FRANK NASH

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 18. (UP)—Federal District Attorney W. L. Vanderventer said today that a bullet from the machine gun of Harvey Bailey killed Frank Nash, Oklahoma convict, in the union station massacre here June 17.

The former sheriff said that there was no doubt that the kidnapers had marked Guy for their next victim, and had sent members of the gang to Colorado to observe their intended victim's movements. However, the tip from Fort Worth and the arrest of several members of the gang caused their plans to miscarry.

"The gang is broken up and on the run," Wright said. "Guy is all right, and all danger is passed. I heard of the reports and came up here to warn him. I didn't like to write what I heard or what I was told, so I came by train."

Wright said that W. T. Waggoner, father of Guy, who has been ill since last May, and has been occupying his summer home in Colorado Springs, has moved to the Antlers hotel and is doing fine. Mrs. Waggoner is with him.

"The former sheriff said that there was no doubt that the kidnapers had marked Guy for their next victim, and had sent members of the gang to Colorado to observe their intended victim's movements. However, the tip from Fort Worth and the arrest of several members of the gang caused their plans to miscarry."

BARS FOUND SAWED IN BATES' CELL

DENVER, Aug. 18.—Police last Thursday found, sawed through, two bars of the cell holding Albert Bates, held as one of the Urschel kidnapers.

No saws or other instruments were immediately found. The bars were cut through close to the floor.

Police at once began a search of the jail, and strengthened the guard on the tier holding the alleged desperado. Heavy wire netting was placed over strategic windows.

Warned of a possible attempt to deliver Bates, a machine gun has been on constant duty the last three days.

RETURN OF LEGALIZED RACING IS WELCOMED BY CALIFORNIA SPORTSMEN

By PHIL SINNOT
NEA Service Writer
SAN FRANCISCO.—Farmers, horse breeders, genies of the racing fraternity and followers of the sport of kings are seeing nothing but revealing details at a Century of Progress exposition in the farm week celebration.

The department will buy from six hundred to seven hundred million pounds of live pork from the fall and winter market, representing sixteen per cent normal production and expecting to raise hog prices 25 to 30 per cent.

Edible pork will not be marketed but unemployment relief agencies will use the most.

Processing "considerably less than a cent a pound" will be levied on pork to provide $55,000,000 for financing the program.

Secretary Wallace warned that substantial reduction in corn acreage and a decrease in farrowing sows next spring are imperative.

The coming of legalized racing to California culminates a fight by western sportsmen of 13 years.

Twenty-three years ago California brought an end to racing under state supervision because politicians and promoters engaged in a fight for monopoly. In a sweeping blow, California thoroughbred racing was written out of the statutes by the legislature.

The recovery fight began in 1920, and in 1923 the Pacific Coast Jockey club staged a first and belated meeting at Tanforan, with such men as A. E. Spreckles, Thomas Fortune Ryan, Herbert Fleishhacker and others taking the lead.

Betting was revived in a measure at Tanforan, where the optional

A NATION OF AUTOISTS

It is worth noticing that the most recent figures on automobile registrations show that the United States is still far ahead of all other nations in the matter of making the automobile a part of the daily life of the average citizen.

There are in the world today somewhat more than 33,000,000 autos of all types; and of these, more than 24,000,000 are owned and operated in the United States.

Now it is substantially more than 30 years since the auto was made practical. That the United States continues to rank so far ahead of other nations in putting it to work indicates that the much-talked-of "American standard of living" continues to be something that is unequalled overseas.

PLENTY OF GOLD

Anyone who has been disturbed by the fear that the nation's currency was not backed by an adequate supply of gold will be relieved by news that the Federal Reserve banks now hold more of the yellow metal than at any time during the year, and more than at any time during the two prosperous years preceding the 1929 collapse.

Holdings have increased during the year by $400,000,000 to reach a total of $3,500,000,000, which is more than the reserve banks have had at any period during their 20 years of operation.

Total gold stocks of the country, which includes amounts held by the treasury, are $4,320,000,000.

It may be puzzling to understand why, with all the gold that is available, the country remains off the gold standard. Whatever the answer is to that question, it is comforting to know that the gold is there.

IL DUCE AND HIS DENTIST

Dr. Arrigo Piperno of Rome has been private dentist for Mussolini for the last eight years; and now, visiting in Chicago, he asserts that Il Duce is the one man who never flinches or wriggles apprehensively while in the dentist's chair.

When the dentist remarks—with that sardonic chuckle reserved for such occasions—"Now, this may hurt a little," Mussolini simply squares his shoulders and says, "I do not fear pain." None of the dentist's gadgets ever bothers him; he even reads books while his teeth are being fixed.

Now this, somehow, strikes us as one story about Il Duce that is a bit hard to believe. Very likely the man does not "fear pain"—but what has that to do with being in the dentist's chair? It isn't exactly pain that a dentist inflicts; it is a weird combination of fright, misery and the kind of buzz-buzz business that puts teeth and nerves on edge. Is any man on earth capable of facing it the way Mussolini is said to face it?

EDITORIAL NOTES

When offered to the people of Vladivostok, whale meat became so immediately popular that efforts are being made to widen its use by having it canned on a large scale. Possibly it may receive the same quick welcome elsewhere, but it will take longer for some of us to accustom ourselves to the idea of whales being packed in tins like sardines.

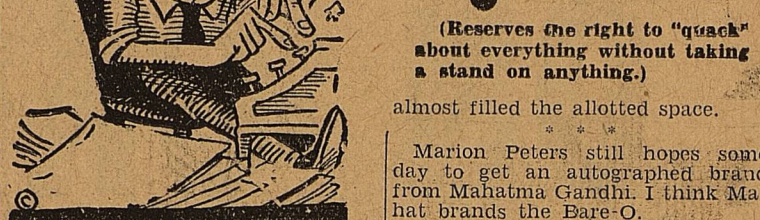

The sketching club formed two years ago by unemployed English miners is not a temporary hobby to be abandoned when the members are called back to work. The initial showing of their paintings and drawings, just concluded at Spennymoor, was labeled "first annual exhibition."

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Abby Fane, beautiful night club singer, and Rodney Deane, son of Franklin Deane, a wealthy banker, are in love. Against the wishes of his family Rod marries Abby. The newspapers get the story and play up the fact that "The Night Club Singer Gets Her Man." This irritates Abby, for she really loves Rod. She is reading the newspaper headlines while on board the huge steamer that is to take them on their honeymoon to Europe—first stop Paris.

CHAPTER III

Soon the huge steamer was in Paris and then came the thrilling honeymoon trip that carried Abby and Rod to gay Deauville and its sunny beach. They were surrounded with its Alps and winter sports; Spain—warm with the rosete colors of romance, tradition and history—its brilliant, gallant toreadors; and country to country they skimmed, enjoying the best that life had to offer—that the Deane money had to offer.

Then, New York again! The thrilling skyline of the great city rose to towering, majestic heights, yet seemed like a Fairyland of gold-tinted buildings, for the bright sun caught and held on window panes a gleam with shimmering glory over the harbor.

Abby, excited and happy, pinched Rod's arm. "Oh Rod, it's good to be home." She laughed as they struck her. "Only we haven't got a home, have we?"

Rod smiled. "We'll have one quicker than you think." "Let's take a small apartment—not too big," Abby was enthusiastic. "It'll be fun to furnish it. I've got lots of ideas about my home. I've been saving them up a long time. Show me." She eyed excitedly down to the pier. "Look! There's Sig and Steve, too. Come on, Rod! She grabbed his arm and they made their way down the gangplank.

Steve reached them first. Abby took his two hands happily. "Steve! Gee, you were swell to come!" Steve grinned and spoke warmly. "How are you, kid?"

Then Sig was there. Rod eagerly pumped his hand. Abby turned, her pretty smile diffusing the group with a happy radiance. "And Sig! It's nice of you to meet us."

Sig looked around. "Now if we can get through the customs before evening—"

"You don't have to worry," said Steve. "That's all taken care of." He beckoned to someone at the customs desk. "Hey, Mack—here's the folks I told you about—get them through, will you?"

"Okay, Mr. Walsh." Rod grinned. "This is what it is to have influence."

"Uh—I'll see you later, folks—I—" Steve was going to leave. Abby pouted. "Don't go! I want you to have lunch with us."

"Sure!" Rod agreed. "I'd like to, but I can't. I just came down to say hello. Nice to have you kids back. I'll be seeing you."

"You bet, Steve and, thanks!" Rod pumped his hand.

In a half hour, Abby, Rod and Sig were away from the pier. Twenty-five minutes after that, Sig was showing them through a huge, spacious pent-house apartment fitted beautifully in a quiet elegance that was only accomplished with extravagant spending. A butler, a maid and a cook were waiting when the trio arrived.

"The old homestead, folks. Decorated under my personal supervision." Sig waved his hand airily. He turned to the waiting butler. "Here are the bride and groom, Alfred."

"How are things, Alfred?" Rod smiled. "Nice to see you all again. It seems," said Sig, "the lady wants home in no uncertain terms."

"Cut it, Sig," said Rod quietly.

Alfred bowed. "We're pleased you are back, Mrs. Deane."

"They've been in the family," said Rod, "for years." He turned to the butler. "How'd my mother come to let you go?"

"I think we're sort of a wedding present, sir."

"And now," said Sig, "I'll show you the house that Sig built."

"How's your rheumatism, Alfred? Is it—"

"That," said Sig, "pounding his hand decisively, 'is the thanks we are giving you for your place or her about Alfred's rheumatism?"

"But Alfred has such interesting rheumatism," explained Rod.

Sig nodded toward the immense living room. "In front of you, Mrs. Deane, you see the scene of many merry parties. At least, they'd better be merry—or I won't come."

Rod walked over the richly decorated rugs in the room and cast a cursory glance around. "Nice work, Sig," he said enthusiastically.

"Nice work," he turned to Abby. "Like it, sweetie?"

"Well, it sort of takes my breath away," answered Abby. "I didn't expect to have it already furnished."

"It was darn nice of you, Sig," said Rod. "It would have taken us months to do this."

Sig crossed over to a tall bookcase, then turned to Rod and Abby. "I took liberties with your Harvard Classics—put them in the library. He pressed a button, and bookshelves slid slowly into the wall. "Now," continued Sig, "if the audience will be patient, Chandu will show that there are fairly left, even in America."

By the time he had finished talking, the shelves were completely back and a huge bar was revealed. "Of course," Sig went on, "you won't understand this. Americans have a quaint custom with the glass and the elbow—"

Rod put on a solemn face. "Sig, you're very thoughtful. You've put your heart and soul into this."

And so they went from room to room, exclaiming over the beautiful job that Sig had done.

"Now," said Sig, "that you have passed on, I want to tell you. He looked around for a moment, then in a loud voice yelled "Surprise!"

Immediately the two closet doors in the bedroom opened and some twenty guests, in a twinkling, stepped out, laughing and shouting "Surprise!" They surrounded Rod and Abby, making a joyful group.

"Meet the bride and groom, folks!" shouted Sig above the din.

Greetings echoed and re-echoed around the room. When all was quiet again, Rod answered: "Thank you, good people. I'm so overcome I don't know what to say."

"You can introduce us to your new bar, for one thing," said one of the girls.

In a few minutes the entire happy group was around the bar.

Life for Abby after that was one long Divy Martini—to be figurative. Liqueur, mixed with the never-ceasing sound of frivolity, made a vicious circle for her—a merry-go-round that seemed to have no ending. Home to Rod, apparently, was but a place to hang his toothbrush.

It was during the afternoon that Rod, Abby, Sig and Joan (Joan was Sig's running around companion) were in Steve's Club Biarritz imbibing freely.

Sig turned to the bartender. "Let's have another round, Tony."

Abby raised a protesting hand. "None for me."

"What's the matter, kid?" asked Steve.

"Nothing—"

Steve was concerned. "Don't you see, kid?"

"Sure; I'm just tired. That's all." She turned to Rod. "I want to go home, Rod."

Rod was surprised. "What's the matter?"

"Nothing's the matter," answered Abby irritably.

"All right, then—have a drink."

"Now, Abby," said Sig, "I know what you want. Oh, Tony—"

"I want to go home," said Abby angrily, "that's what I want."

"It seems," said Sig, "the lady wants home in no uncertain terms."

"Cut it, Sig," said Rod quietly.

NEGRO GOT SENTENCE

GONZALES, Tex. (UP)—Six years in the penitentiary is the "price" Robert Jones, negro, must pay for stealing 86 cents. As the negro was led away to jail he mumbled, "I reckon it's because of that there inflation."

Then, to Abby. "All right, darling. If you don't go, come on." "You don't have to take me—I know the way," Abby was sarcastic. "Don't be silly. Come on!" Rod turned to the others. "Sorry, folks. So long, Steve."

There was a strange expression on Steve's face. "So long—"

In a few moments Rod and Abby were in their roadster and on the way to the stable to take me.

"Well, what's there to do at home?" Rod asked.

"We'll rest," said Abby, sarcastically, "an hour or two so we can go some place else."

"What do you mean?" "That's what home means to you, doesn't it?"

"Well, gosh—four o'clock in the afternoon!" Rod gasped.

Abby's tone was packed with meaning. "Yes! That's the time other men are at work."

"So long, Steve."

Dutch to Try Raising Fortune

PARIS. (UP).—Forthcoming efforts by a Dutch syndicate to raise the British flagship "La Lutine," entombed 134 years in North Sea shallows off the island of Ter Schelling, have revived French interests in its treasure, reputedly $800,000 in gold ingots.

In 1867 the French made a futile and costly attempt to raise the sand-buried ship, and in that abortive venture $2,000,000 in small savings of thousands of Frenchmen were lost. Subsequently British and German divers struggled valiantly over the ship's tomb, lured by the gold sealed in her bulkheads.

It was in October, 1799, when the flagship was carrying 1,200,000 pounds from the Bank of England to failing Hamburg banks, that "La Lutine" went down in a memorable storm. Only one of the crew was washed ashore alive.

For five decades the topmasts of the frigate were visible at low tide thus marking her grave. But when the French and later the British sought to raise the treasure, tedious dragging operations in heavy seas were required to locate the wreck.

The costs of the Dutch expedition have been defrayed by popular subscription, as were the French and German efforts; the British attempt, on the other hand, was undertaken by the navy. Technically, the Dutch project revolves around an immense submersible steel cone, 60 feet in diameter at the base, an invention by a Dr. Becker, and constructed with great secrecy at Amsterdam.

The plan in general provides for the lowering of this cone immediately over or beside the wreck, which already has been located by magnetic means. The cone will contain a number of divers, electric drills, searchlights, and other underwater apparatus. An outlet, similar in principle to the escape-chambers with which modern submarines are equipped, will permit divers to leave and enter at will.

If divers determine that buoy-cables cannot be swung under the frigate to raise her to the surface, they will strive to blast away the shifting sands to the treasure.

LAYS CAPTURE TO "MOLL" AND "RAT" DENVER, Colo., Aug. 18.—Albert Bates, held as one of the kidnapers of wealthy Charles Urschel of Oklahoma City, cursed the "red-headed Moll" and the "double-crossing rat" he blames for his capture.

"A woman put me here," said Bates to Captain of Detectives William Armstrong. "And a dirty rat I thought was my friend when we both were in the Colorado penitentiary tipped off police I was in Denver."

Armstrong said he had learned that George Kelly, one of the alleged Urschel kidnapers, and his wife, Katherine Kelly, came here early this month and arranged for Bates to follow them.

Armstrong said he believed Kelly then was planning to mobilize his men to attempt the kidnaping of millionaire, John H. Colorado Springs summer home.

What Chorus Girls In "Gold Diggers" Did, Not on Parade

You've heard of chorus girls "on parade." But what do chorus girls do when they're "off parade?"

A big chorus, rehearsing, doesn't dance all the time. There are long pauses when they simply have nothing at all to do but rest. What do they do then?

The chorus which Busby Berkeley directed in its elaborate numbers for Warner Bros. new big musical picture, "Gold Diggers of 1933," coming Sunday and Monday, with preview Saturday night, at the Yucca theatre, did a number of things in odd moments that one would hardly suspect chorus girls of doing.

Part of it, fats. Some of it crochets. Other parts of it merely loud about the stage, practicing dance steps, doing difficult exercises, learning songs, rehearsing a line dance. But none of it, contrary to all expert opinion, reads a novel, or eats a box of candy.

Novels are too long. They'd barely get interested in one, when the next call to go on would come. And the candy is absolutely verboten. Candy puts weight where it shouldn't be on a chorus girl.

There's one other thing a chorus girl does when she's off parade. She eats.

"Gold Diggers of 1933" in addition to a chorus of 200 beauties, has a great cast of stars, headed by Warren William, Joan Blondell, Dick Powell, Aline MacMahon, Ginger Rogers, Guy Kibbee, Ned Sparks and others. The picture was directed by Mervyn LeRoy, and the music was especially written for the production by Harry Warren and Al Dubin, who wrote the music for "42nd Street."

No Pay Until Sheep Sheared, New Idea

SAN ANGELO.—An old Mexican custom has gone its way. It is the reguacho, the custom of paying Mexican sheep and goat shearers advance money before the shearing time begins.

As a result, at this time of year, the warehouses of the state have paid out sums often as high as $4000 for the larger concerns.

The stringency of money has put the reguacho among the good old days. The shearers get paid when they do the work.

Artists Dispute Capitol Portraits

AUSTIN, (UP)—The dispute in Texas art colony over the perfection of portraits hung in the state capitol is expected to break out anew when another picture of Sam Houston is presented during the proposed special session of the legislature.

The portrait, painted by T. J. Donnellan, depicts the noted Texas statesman at the height of his fame as United States senator. . . . One portrait of Sam Houston owned by the state shows him in the evening of life. He wears a beaver hat and a blanket about his shoulders. Artists have been generous in their praise of the portrait, particularly for the perfection of Houston's hands.

The hands of former Governor James Stephen Hogg as shown in his portrait hanging in the hall of the house of representatives, are criticized from the standpoint of execution. The hands are too small for a man his size, many artists declare. Critics also find fault with the house painting of Stephen F. Austin with a dog and rifle. The picture makes Austin appear to be a careless hunter. He has a finger over the muzzle of his long rifle.

The size of his head also has provoked arguments. State portraits show that the founder of the Texas colony had an unusually large head. The sculpture by Elizabeth Ney, shows him with a small head.

A large painting of the battle of San Jacinto was purchased a number of years ago by the state and now hangs in the senate chamber. The painter, McArdle, spent years collecting photographs of participants in the battle and descriptions of their clothing and weapons.

Details of the uniforms of Mexican troops and the relative position of different organizations were taken from official records. The picture's reputation for accuracy suffered somewhat when the flag carried through the smoke of the historic battle was presented to the Texas house of representatives. It differed considerably from its

Substitute Crops For Cotton Show

DALLAS, (UP)—Crops that may replace cotton on Texas farms will feature agricultural exhibits at the 47th Texas State Fair here Oct. 7 to 22, according to Otto Herold, the president of the exposition.

The display of "replacement crops" is to be prepared by county agricultural agents under the direction of Texas A. & M. college, Herold said. A pigeon show of 2,500 birds also will provide a new feature for this year's fair which is expected to attract more than a million persons. According to present plans, the fair will provide at least 11 major departments in which exhibitors may compete for cash prizes. They are livestock, agriculture, boys' and girls' 4-H club work, future farmers' work, horticulture, fine arts, culinary, home demonstration work, stamp collections, newspaper work and apiculture.

Repairs to exposition buildings and construction of new facilities to care for sight-seeing throngs already are under way. The manufacturers' building is being remodeled to accommodate 300 exhibitors. The building used for the past four years for poultry shows is to become a dormitory for members of 4-H clubs. . . .

Wm. Powell Comes To Ritz Sunday in Exciting Drama

"Private Detective 62," a fast action melodrama with tasty love episodes, by Warner Bros. comes to the Ritz, preview Sat. night, Sun. & Mon., with William Powell in the stellar role.

The plot concerns a love racket in which a private detective deals with the methods used by an unscrupulous private detective agency to obtain or manufacture evidence for the divorce courts, at the instigation of jealous husbands and wives. . . .

Margaret Lindsay, former stage favorite who made a sensational hit on the screen in "Cavalcade," plays the leading feminine role opposite Powell and is said to give a most striking performance. There is an unusually strong supporting cast, which includes Arthur Byron, Ruth Donnelly, Gordon Westcott, Sheila Terry, Arthur Hohl, Natalie Moorhead and James Bell. All are well known on both stage and screen.

The screen play by Brian James is based on an original story by Raoul Whitfield. "Private Detective 62" is said to be filled with exciting and thrilling episodes, in addition to the somewhat daring romantic sequences.

Michael Curtiz, the director noted for his mystery dramas, has made the most of the plot to produce a novel and unique picture with plenty of suspense.

tion. These men, as appointed by the governor, were William P. Roth, John A. McNaughton and Carleton Burke.

To California's agriculturalists, legalized betting is already bringing results, with farm lands being purchased for breeding ranches and an increase in the value of hay, oats, straw and wheat.

The Santa Clara Valley, Soнома Valley, Ventura, Contra Costa and Monterey counties and other localities have sold large acreages, and the consumption of foodstuffs by breeding ranches and tracks is estimated to be increased by $1,800,000.

With the return of racing, many of the famous old ranches will again spring up. The Rancho del Paso, near Sacramento, owned by James B. Haggin, sectioned nearly 500 horses annually to markets over the world. The ranch of A. K. Macomber, at San Jose, that of Senator Leland Stanford, of Leland Stanford University, and the A. B. Spruells ranch at Napa were also famous.

Construction of racing plants will call for an expenditure of a large amount of money. The Los Angeles Jockey club, headed by Joseph Smock, is planning to spend nearly $2,000,000 in the construction of two plants. The Oakland Jockey club has ordered construction of a $700,000 plant near Oakland, to be ready by Thanksgiving.

These construction plans, together with those of William P. Kyrle, in Contra Costa county, James W. Coffroth's tentative course at San Diego, and improvements on the old Del Monte track and Tanforan, will run into money—money which will help relieve tax burdens and aid in the solution of the unemployment problem in the state.

Orphan Island Grows in Size

MARINE-ON-ST. CROIX, Minn. (UP)—An island in the St. Croix river, which has grown to sizeable proportions from annual deposits washed down in the last 50 years, is held to be an "orphan."

The island was not in existence, or at least maps fail to show it, when Minnesota and Wisconsin were admitted to statehood. Herbert L. Dunn, attorney for the United States engineers' office, holds further that it is a part of neither state and has no owner.

"Private individuals may have acquired rights to the island," Dunn declared. "But that is neither for the state or federal government to determine. Such rights must be determined by the courts of law."

In the meantime, Dunn said, the authority of federal or state governments is limited to use of the island for improvement of navigation or for protection.

The question arose when John Rosell, of Marine-on-St. Croix, sought for an owner from whom he could lease the island for a village bathing beach and other recreational purposes and couldn't find anybody to accept rent.

Drowning Caused by Water in Ears, Says

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (UP)—Water in the ears may be the cause of many drownings, according to Dr. Franklin W. Bock, of the board of education.

The small canals within the ear control man's bodily balance. Bock pointed out if water interferes with the normal working of these canals, the swimmer may become dizzy and drown before the equilibrium can be recovered.

New 'New Deal' Song Born in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (UP)—NRA enthusiasm has sprouted musical wings here in the form of a song "The Blue Eagle March," written by Walt Burgess, of Darby, Pa. The song has been published by a Philadelphia company, and copies have been sent to President Roosevelt by the author.

The chorus of Burgess' song is: "Our hearts are true, The sky is blue, We praise the Lord that rules on high. Away with fear! Join in a cheer! We see the bluebird in the sky! The Deal is new. And we must do Our part until the very end! Strike up the band And hand in hand We all can help our President!"

STONE KILLED SQUIRREL

KILLEEN, Tex. (UP)—When W. E. Wells, 34-year-old rancher, was a little boy he could throw rocks "pretty good." The other day he decided to try his marksmanship again. A squirrel ran up a tree. Wells heaved his rock, struck the animal squarely on its head.

Indians Willing to Trade Gold Cheaply

MONROE, La. (UP)—Three young Monroe adventurers have a sure-fire recipe for how to "get rich quick."

Returning recently from a sojourn in Mexico in quest of placer gold deposits, the trio, Anthony Gibbon, Frank Morgan, and Robert Stowell, said that, in the State of Sinaloa, Indians who had "washed out" gold nuggets were willing to barter them for $15 an ounce.

With a little capital one could buy the nuggets from the Indians at $15 an ounce, return to Uncle Sam's mints, and receive $21 an ounce, the current price for gold. The only drawback, they said, was because of the presence of bandits in the section.

They declared they planned to return to "do a little business with the Indians," when the rainy season, with its accompanying fevers, is over.
