Demonstration of Wardrobes Consist 2 Separate Classes

Wardrobe demonstrations consist of keeping records of the expenditure for clothing; making a foundation pattern; using this for designing; providing adequate storage for clothes; planning wardrobe so as to be well-groomed on the amount of money expended; helping others with clothing problems.

Each demonstration club in Midland county has one demonstrator. Other members are co-operators, who do part or all of the demonstration. Goals for them are keeping expenditure of clothing under the heading of outer clothing, dresses, underwear, headwear, footwear and accessories; making a dress for the county clothing contest by a foundation pattern.

There are two classes of wardrobe demonstrators. A woman must be a first year demonstrator before she may become a second year demonstrator. The first year includes only women's clothing while the second year includes clothing for the entire family.

First year demonstrators in this county are Mmes. S. D. Wimberly, Floyd Countess Jr., G. O. Stewart, E. D. Ward and Miss Ruth Norton. Second year demonstrators are Miss Clara Campbell, Mrs. J. E. Wallace and Mrs. S. H. Gwyn.

Midland to Send Princess to Fair

Nominations for a Midland princess and her maid of honor to represent Midland at Dallas Oct. 11 at the crowning of a queen of the Dallas State fair, are desired by the Midland chamber of commerce.

Friends of any Midland young woman may nominate her for this honor and may also nominate the maid of honor, or the princess may choose her own maid of honor.

A pageant of color and jewels in a beautiful setting will be seen at the coronation the night of Oct. 11 in the football stadium on the fair grounds. Many social functions are planned for the visiting girls of the leading society women of Dallas.

Each girl must pay her own personal expenses, as well as transportation, as neither the Dallas fair management nor the Midland chamber of commerce will pay expenses. A number is for girls who would enjoy the social features, the pageantry, and the honor of representing their home town.

He jumped to the wrong conclusion

One of the most surprising letters I have received in a long time came recently. A man wrote to ask why I had "abandoned the low-price field."

We found the writer of that letter. He had used only Ford cars; his present car had served him seven years; he hoped sometime to replace it with a new Ford;—but, as he saw the Ford V-8's grow thicker on the streets, and noted their style and action, he just naturally jumped to the conclusion that these must be expensive cars, and that therefore "Ford had gone out of the low-price field."

Besides that, "did not this new Ford have 8 cylinders?" "Did not that prove that the car was not low-priced—for are not all 8's expensive?"

Hence his letter. He complained that after 30 years of making cars for the low-price field I had deserted my old customers for those who were used to spending more money.

Of course, a price-list soon showed him his mistake.

He was helped to his hasty conclusion by seeing a new class of people riding in Ford cars the last four or five years. It was once believed that no one who could afford a high-priced car would use a low-priced car.

But that has changed. The matter of value now comes first, the matter of price second. America used to buy price-tags, now it demands quality.

That explains why tens of thousands of Americans who can afford to pay higher prices, prefer to buy the Ford at a lower price, because in the Ford V-8 they get the quality, the performance, the comfort, the style which are supposed to be exclusive in very high-priced cars.

To be low-priced, a car is not necessarily cheap. A really cheap or inferior car never could become low-priced. Not enough of them would be bought to make a low price possible.

That means that to keep my prices low I must remain in the high-quality field, for it is impossible to have the price right unless the car is right too.

What I have done is to adapt the expensive V-type 8-cylinder engine to the low-price field, making it simple, and less expensive to own and drive than the 4-cylinder cars were.

There is one thing I would make clear to my friends:—my field is the low-price field and will always remain so.

Late Millionaire Jim Murray Was Fond Of Framing Bets, Made Many Millions

BY BRON E. COONEY BILLINGS, Mont.—No man who amassed a large fortune in Montana loved to win a bet like Jim Murray, Montana pioneer and one time Butte banker. Not only that, but Murray would stop at nothing to outwit his contender whether the amount was the price of the drinks or hundreds of dollars. It was not avarice on Murray's part, because among his associates he was charitable. Towards the close of his life when he was in Butte he used to love to spend an hour around Jim McGovern's saloon playing cards with his cronies. Nothing pleased Murray better than to deal himself an ace off the bottom when he was playing with McGovern. After he won the bet McGovern would refuse to take a drink, saying he couldn't afford to because he lost. As a matter of fact, McGovern didn't drink at all. Murray didn't drink because the doctor told him not to, so he would take a check. Sometimes they would play for the drinks all afternoon. Murray would have a pocket full of checks and neither would have taken a drink. Then he would give handouts of checks to the down-and-outs. Barney Lavalls, city jailor, was a particular friend of Murray's. Once a handsaw they cut an inch off each leg and the next day Murray began speculating about the length of the table legs. Pat Jack had only $183, so the saloon man went in with him for $311. After the table legs were discussed some time Murray allowed he could guess their length closer than Jack. Jack led him on until a $500 bet was arranged and the money posted. Of course Murray lost. "I must be getting old," said Murray. "I thought they were 34 inches when I measured them yesterday, but I guess my eyesight is getting bad." "So you cleaned Jim Murray on a cinch bet?" I remarked admiringly when Jack told me the story. "You bet I did," said Jack proudly, "and it took him a whole week to win it back from me with a marked deck." When Murray died he left an estate of approximately $10,000,000 to be divided among his heirs. In justice to him it must be said his desire to get the best of a card game or a casual bet was more frankness than actual avarice. When he owned Boulder and Hunter Hills Springs, many of his former associates, out of luck, were his guests for unlimited lengths of time without ever paying a cent. He had Pat Jack's note for $1900 and gave it back to him for hauling him up from the N. P. depot. "I don't want that note," grumbled Jack. "It's on good to me—what I want is my 50 cents." When the gang around Jim McGovern's saloon—his only loafing place in recent years—accused him of dealing seconds, switching or otherwise "turning up a hand," the old man's vanity was apparent. He used to laugh and say, "There isn't any honest money in the world. I've got $10,000,000 and if I had an honest dollar in the bank roll I'd throw it away." Among other peculiarities Murray would not eat where there was a colored waiter or cook. As a result when he traveled on the train he carried his lunch. This gave him the reputation of being penurious, whereas he lived in rather princely style. He always traveled in a stateroom with a hamper of sandwiches and "splits" or champagne and ate his meals in solitary grandeur. After a paralytic stroke, he withdrew from public life and lived quietly for 10 years in California.

LEVINSKY'S WAY OF MAKING HAY

A glove comes swishing up out of nowhere, Jack Sharkey takes it on the chin! That's Kingfish Levinsky's way of making hay while the stars shine. The picture shows the Chicago fish peddler pounding away at the ex-champ against the ropes in their recent fight, which Levinsky won.

"Lady for a Day," Showing at Yucca, Has 10-Star Cast; Great Production

"Lady For A Day," the first picture on the Columbia Pictures schedule for the new year is now showing at the Yucca theatre. It has been heralded by all who have seen it as one of the best talkies made. Story, adaptation, cast and direction were all of the finest quality. Extra efforts were put forward by all hands, and the result is said to amply justify the pride the Columbia studio is taking in the finished product.

"Lady For A Day" appeared in the Cosmopolitan magazine a few months ago under the title of "Madam La Gimp." It was written by Damon Runyon, who has been called the "O'Henry of 1933," because of his humorous and dramatic tales of Broadway night life and its "dames and guys." There are plenty of both in this picture although it revolves mainly about "Apple Annie," a haggard, old, fruit-shot gambler, straight, likeable and picturesque. That grand old veteran of stage and screen, May Robson, plays "Apple Annie," and as a result of her excellent portrayal of this colorful character has achieved stardom. Others in the cast are Guy Kibbee, Glenda Farrell, Jean Parker, Barry Norton, Walter Connolly, Ned Sparks and Hobart Bosworth.
