Her Burning Fervor Was Not Religious; to Be Deported

Nila Cram Cook, above, as the "Blue Serpent Goddess," cleaned streets in Mysore to demonstrate her piety as a disciple of the Mahatama Gandhi, but the lure to "live and dance and ride on the wind" obsessed her too strongly, and she is to return to her native Iowa.

"Gandhi's Blue Serpent Goddess" Must Return to America; Too Much for India

By Mary Margaret McBride
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, March 8.—When Nila Cram Cook sailed away from this port seven years ago, she announced solemnly to friends that she was bound for distant shores to learn what life was all about. She was 18 then and convinced that a blighted romance had wrecked her chance for happiness. The only thing left, she sadly soliloquized was the prospect of adventure!

In a few days, the former Davenport, Ia., girl will return from her travels, which included a sojourn in India, perhaps more disillusioned about life than ever and through adventure for the time being, her most recent effort in that direction having turned out badly.

For many months, as a more or less faithful follower of Mahatama Gandhi, the buxom Miss Cook, convert to Brahmanism and wearing a caste mark on her forehead, performed the menial tasks usually undertaken only by India's uneducated. She veneered streets in Mysore with her piety and penitence, but every so often her warm-blooded love of life would assert itself and she would do something that would let her in for a scolding from the Great Teacher.

Yearned For Thrills

Suddenly, after a particularly severe rebuke from Gandhi for conducting a caste mark on her forehead, the Blue Serpent Goddess, as she was called by the faithful, announced that her "heart was leaping for thrills."

"I was speed to fly to dance," she cried and slipped away from the austere seminary in Ahmedabad where she had been sleeping on mats, without blankets for eight months.

When next heard from, she had bought an automobile on approval in New Delhi. A little later she reported she was in a speed which occurred when she was driving at a speed of seventy miles an hour.

Somewhere in the progress of this grand fling, the strapping young woman, big-boned and tall, registered at a hotel under the name of Janet Gaynor, petite motion picture star. Soon after that, she was ordered deported.

For all her thirst for speed and pleasure, Nila objected to being sent back to the land where, as her advisers soothingly told her, speed and pleasure were to be had in greater profusion than anywhere else. She locked herself in a bathroom for hours and refused to come out or open the door, declined to dress herself and finally when she was led to the ship, shut her eyes stubbornly and refused to speak, even to her five-year-old son, Sirius, who was being deported with her.

Turns Shepherdess

Before she conceived the idea of joining Gandhi and rushed from Greece to India to carry it out, the Iowa girl had married a Greek bank-son and gone shepherding on the slopes of classic Mount Parnassos, with a crook, a lyre and real sheep for atmosphere. Sirius is the child of the Greek marriage.

Spectacular daughter of spectacular parents, Nila Cram Cook first manifested histrionic ability in her school days when she acted small parts at the Provincetown theatre founded by her father, George Cram Cook, poet, playwright and theorizer. Her mother, Mollie Price, was a friend of Emma Goldman and other radical leaders.

On both sides, the girl's grandparents were revolutionary, too. Her mother's father nursed a notion that we live on the inside of the world instead of on the outside. Her father's mother, Ma-Mie, as children and grandchildren called her, shocked her Iowa neighbors by going in for the study of mysticism. Out in Davenport to this day, when people hear tell of some new exploit of Nila's, they say that she "takes after her grandma Cook."

Migration to Greece

Her parents were divorced when Miss Cook was a little girl and her father married Susan Gaspell, novelist and playwright. Jig Cook, as his friends called him, had cherished from college days a plan to visit Greece and re-create the simple, glorious life of the country's past.

With Susan Gaspell and Nila, he finally went to Greece. He dressed in the rough clothes of the shepherds, drank and ate and sang with them and at last his restless nature found a sort of peace.

Nila shared her father's love for Greece and soon spoke and read Greek as well as she did English. When Jig Cook died and was buried beside the temple of Apollo at Delphi, she came back to the United States.

JONES TRIAL GOES TO ARGUMENTATIVE STAGES AFTERWARD

District Judge Charles L. Klapproth defined "murder with malice aforethought," shortly after 1:30 this afternoon when he charged the jury trying A. A. Jones, charged by indictment with murder growing out of the fatal shooting here Dec. 22 of Asa Rutland.

He told the jury the penalty for "murder," and explained the legal term "reasonable doubt" with reference to murder charges, going into an explanation of "self defense." In that regard, he recited it is not necessary to be in "actual danger... provided defendant acted on reasonable apprehension of danger, or what appeared to him at the time as danger."

Explains Reasonable Doubt

In reading the charge, he said that if the jury believes from the evidence an attack was made or about to be made, or if the jury has a reasonable doubt on the point, it should acquit the defendant and say by its action "Not guilty."

He asked that the jury place itself in the defendant's place in making its determination.

In case the defendant is found guilty of murder with malice aforethought, three alternatives of penalty will face the jury, the judge said—death, confinement in the penitentiary for life, confinement for any term of years, or—if the defendant is found guilty of murder without malice aforethought—a penalty of five years imprisonment.

Other Killing Linked

Testimony linking the unsolved murder of Mrs. Lillie Mae Buckalew, which occurred in June 1931, with the case in which A. A. Jones was being tried for murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Asa Rutland formed the basis of the case in which A. A. Jones and defense attorneys Wednesday afternoon and this morning in district court.

George W. Dunaway, attorney for Jones, who testified at yesterday afternoon's session in his efforts to show that Jones had been threatened by Rutland on account of investigation being made by Jones into the case in which A. A. Jones and defense attorneys Wednesday afternoon and this morning in district court.

Jurors on the regular panel for this week were called to report for duty on the case.

Stevens was indicted in the last grand jury session, the charges growing out of a recent attack alleged to have been made on his wife.

At an examining trial held in justice court recently, Mrs. Stevens testified her husband stabbed her with a knife after breaking into the place where she was living following her leaving him. She said she refused to reconcile herself to living with him and that the alleged assault followed.

She testified she was forced to receive hospital attention following the asserted assault.

Another contested point was whether or not Rutland was in Midland during July or August, the approximate time when Clifford and Jones were making threats against Jones.

Mrs. Noel Everett of Big Lake and Floyd Everett of that city testified that they had heard Clifford and Jones make threats against Jones.

Testimony was brought out, however, from Jim Cooper and from Sheriff Francis that they believed they had been here along in the fall, or during those months.

Threat Testified To

Alfred Parr testified this morning that he had heard Clifford and Jones make threats against Jones, some time after the last of June, say in a crowd in the Black Cat billiard hall, "there goes Jones—'I'm going to come off,' as Jones walked by." He said he told Jones of the threat that day. Clifford Parr had made similar testimony about another conversation with Rutland, at the Wednesday afternoon session, and efforts were made by state attorneys to show that his testimony conflicted in date with that given by the witness at the grand jury hearing when Jones was indicted.

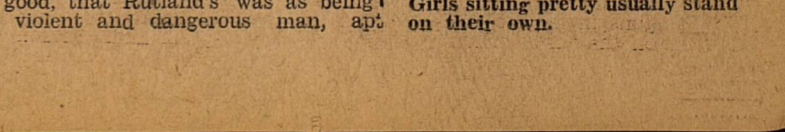

Homicide Described

Testimony of L. E. Cook, state witness, and Gilbert Brunson, defendant, collected as to details of the shooting. Both said they were in the Black Cat billiard parlor on the night of December 22, were back of the partition at a table with Jones and Claude Rokan. Upon cross examination, Brunson said he was on the Jones bond.

Rutland, they said, came back through the partition door, walked past the crowd with his right hand in his trousers pocket, then turned to face Jones, his right hand inside the left side of his coat. The shooting followed immediately, Jones firing four times; it was testified.

Nevnie Ellis, undertaker, testified concerning locations of the wounds and that he believed they were responsible for Rutland's death. Testimony of Lee Haynes, police chief, said there was no gun found on Rutland's person when he arrived at a few seconds later.

Clifford Parr, Sheriff A. C. Francis, the defendant and Deputy Fisher Pollard were other witnesses on the stand at the afternoon session. Francis and Pollard testified that Jones' reputation as peaceable and law abiding citizen here was good, that Rutland was as being violent and dangerous man, apt

'Requests' to Be Used as a Basis For Bap. Service

The radios do it, why can't the pulpit.

Probably for the first time the scheme has been tried, the service Sunday night, March 18, of the First Baptist church, will be made up entirely of "request" numbers—including the sermon, prayers and songs.

The Rev. Winston T. Borum, pastor, said the sermon will be built on interpretation of Scriptural stanzas specified by the public, which also will select songs, who will sing them—or whether the singing will be done by individuals, choir or congregation. The public also will name those who pronounce the invocations.

Only request that the public either write me or tell me personally its requests before Sunday evening, March 11," the minister said. "I ask this so I may have the request time next week for arranging the program."

GOVERNOR URGED TO VETO MEASURE

AUSTIN, March 8. (UP)—Veto of the bill permitting inspection of oil refinery records and properties was urged today by the governor on the claim that approval would throw 15,000 persons out of a livelihood. It would also permit discrimination against independent refiners, it was urged.

"The bill becomes a law, it will cause complete shutdown of East Texas independents," said Jules Constantine, president of the Independent Refiners Association of East Texas, as 250 refinery workers nodded their heads.

Big Spring Hopes For a Big Crowd

BIG SPRING—Local committees are rounding out plans for the entertainment of the Oil Belt Education association convention which convenes in Big Spring Friday, March 16, for two days.

Advanced publicity work has been conducted by Howard county teachers and through the offices of the association, and an excellent representation from the educators of the district is expected to be in attendance.

The Howard county Teachers association is the teaching of the Big Spring schools, and the Big Spring chamber of commerce are working together to offer visitors as wide a variety of free entertainment as the limited amount of time the program allows to recreation will permit.

The social program will begin at 9 o'clock Friday evening following the banquet which will be held in the floor of the Settles hotel, convention headquarters, will be at the disposal of guests. Free entertainment designed to suit the tastes of all comprises bridge, billiards, forty-two, a reception where friends can meet and converse at leisure, and a dance to the music of Thomas Brooks and his Zenith Kings, well known colored orchestra. A de luxe floor show will be presented in connection with the dance.

Big Spring golf clubs are offering free guest cards during the convention, and courtesy cars will be ready at all times to carry guests to any part of the city.

Houston Regatta Held on April 29

HOUSTON. (UP)—The second annual Houston regatta will be held on the shore of Old River bay near here April 29. It is sponsored by the Texas Boat Racing club.

WHISTLER PAINTING BACK

PARIS. (UP)—After a visit of a year in the United States, James McNeil Whistler's famous "Mother" will return here during the summer. Announcement of the painting's return has been made by the Louvre museum. Last year the picture was borrowed from France so that it might be taken on a tour of America's principal cities. It will return in time to figure in the Paris ceremonies incident to the 100th anniversary of Whistler's birth.

LESS SPEED, MORE SAFETY

The wisecrackers probably will get a good deal of fun out of the fact that the Northern Federation of Civic Organizations, in California, has adopted a resolution urging legislation forbidding the production of autos which can exceed a speed of 45 miles an hour.

But when you stop to think about it, this resolution isn't nearly as ridiculous as it might seem on first glance. Excessive speed is a contributing factor in the majority of fatal auto accidents. We pass elaborate traffic laws and hire whole battalions of traffic policemen to see that speed is curbed—but we go right ahead making cars which can travel at speeds that are genuinely safe nowhere but on regular speedways.

On the whole, we don't seem to have sense enough to handle these high-speed cars properly; it is not in the least surprising if some people are beginning to suspect that more radical restrictions are necessary.

Two Members of House Back Bill

AUSTIN (AP)—The confusion attending house consideration of a bill to appropriate state funds to pay preliminary expenses of planning the Texas centennial might have spread with disastrous results to the bill had it not been for the vigorous efforts of two members who have made the state their adopted home.

Some native Texas members of the house not only opposed the bill

BRECKENRIDGE, (AP)—A husband's advertising to the merchandising public that he will not be responsible for his wife's bill, is no modern idea.

Triple-Barrel Comedy Cast In Laugh Film

"Six of a Kind" might be a swell poker hand, but in this particular case "Six of a Kind" is the title of an hilarious screen comedy credited to the Ritz theatre Sunday and Monday.

Laughs from slow, simple grins to rowdy, guffaws are furnished by a triple-barreled comedy combination consisting of Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland, W. C. Fields, Alison Skipworth and George Burns and Gracie Allen.

The picture was directed by Leo McCarey, one of Hollywood's outstanding comedy directors from an original story written by Keene Thompson and Douglas MacLean. Walker DeLeon and Harry Ruskin are credited with the screen play.

There is a running story to the picture, but it's laughs from start to finish. Briefly it tells the troubles of a happily married family, Ruggles and Mary Boland, who attempt to take a second honeymoon in a cross-country auto-trip. But things begin to happen the moment they take Burns and Allen on as passengers, and, by the time they get to W. C. Fields and Alison Skipworth, they're all "nutty" and the audience is in a laughing fit.

Joyce and Marie Beauchamp will be seen in a sister act to be danced in waltz clog and Charles Christian of Odessa will sing and dance "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf." Rose Kincaid will also dance.

Former Instructor At Texas Author

AUSTIN—"So Red the Rose" is the title of a novel by Stark Young, former associate professor of English in the University of Texas, which has recently been announced for spring publication. This story, like Young's earlier books, "Heaven Trees" and "River House," deals primarily with old Southern families and plantations along the Mississippi. The scenes are laid around Natchez during Civil war times. Dr. L. W. Payne Jr., professor of English at the University, upon receiving a letter from Young about the title of his work, said that he was pleased over the one that the author found. The phrase "so red the rose" is embodied in two lines of poetry which Dr. Payne's students in second-year English are required to trace to the origin.

"Current opinion among the critics indicates that the time is ripe for Young to produce a novel that will take the public by storm and yet will have sufficient artistic qualities to secure the writer a place of performance," Dr. Payne said. Mr. Young, who received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Mississippi and his master of arts degree from Columbia university, was a member of the English department in the University of Texas from 1907 until 1914. He originated the department of general literature, which has since been abolished. Young organized the Curtain club, and created an interest among students in little theatre productions. He has written poetry, travel books, critical and personal essays, short stories, drama, and novels, and at present is dramatic critic for the New Republic, a New York weekly magazine.
