Grim Ruins Where Longview Hotel Stood

Above is the scene of desolation left after the $300,000 fire at Longview, Texas, which took the lives of two persons and injured 20. Five of them so badly they were not expected to live. One of the dead was Don Safford, 45, Dallas insurance salesman. The other has not yet been identified, so badly was the body burned. Trapped by the flames, Safford leaped from a third-story window. The fire started after a mysterious explosion and trapped many of the guests in their rooms. The fire was unaccounted for when this picture was taken. The men are searching in the ruins for bodies.

KILLING OF 2 OFFICERS SETS UP BIG FURORE

Barrow and His Moll Sighted Near Town Of Alvord

By UNITED PRESS
The brutal slaying of two state highway patrolmen at Grapevine yesterday touched off a storm of protest against the crime wave and outlawry in Texas.

Newspaper editorials urged local and state officers to join hands in the hunt and suggested organization of a state police force.

Meanwhile the search for Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker over the state continued. A man and a woman believed to be the bandit pair were sighted near Alvord. The car in which they were riding fitted the description of the one used at Grapevine.

Federal officers joined local ranks in the search under the direction of Frank J. Blake, department of justice agent in charge of Texas. A couple believed to have been Barrow and Bonnie Parker forest Sweeney Strickland, filling station operator at Blanket, Texas, to fill the gas tank of a car which fitted the description of the one used in the Grapevine slayings.

Golden Miller . . . a Jump Ahead in the Classic Field

The turning point in the classic Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree that more than 250,000 spectators cheered, is strikingly recorded here as Golden Miller (left) overtook Delaneige (right) at the last jump and sprinted home the winner by five lengths. Golden Miller's time for the four and one-half mile course (world's most difficult) was 30:20 2-5, fastest ever made in the almost 100 year history of the Grand National.

PRIZE MONEY IS POSTED BY STATE FOR DESPERADO

Press of State Runs Protest; Hunt Goes on

AUSTIN, April 2. (UP).—Governor Ferguson today offered the state a reward of $500 for the capture, "dead or alive," of Clyde Barrow, Raymond Hamilton or other persons who killed Highway Patrolmen E. B. Wheeler and H. D. Murphy. A reward of $1,000 for Barrow was proposed at the recent special session of the legislature. Opponents branded it as an offer of "legal murder." The governor's reward offer for capture of Barrow stands for six months, it was announced. An additional $1,000 was being collected by L. G. Phares, chief of the highway patrol.

PATROLMEN KILLED AS THEY APPROACHED CAR. The highway patrolmen were shot down as they approached a car, parked on a side road, whose occupants were believed to be Barrow and the cigar-smoking gun moll Bonnie Parker. It is thought by officers that the couple had been there since yesterday evening, awaiting the arrival of Raymond Hamilton, freed recently from a prison farm under a parole thought laid by Barrow and whose latest exploit was the single fatal shooting of a bank in West Saturday.

Highways were being patrolled last night by all officers who could be spared by police and sheriff's forces in Tarrant and Dallas counties. A report that the fugitives' car was seen seven miles west of Lewisville caused a large force of officers to hasten to investigate, while at Grapevine Constable C. C. Coleman was investigating a "tip" that Barrow and his gang have a hide-out in that vicinity, a possibility to which color was lent by the fact that Coleman heard of it only an hour before the fatal shooting and for the further reason that bandits who recently held up the Grand Prairie bank disappeared in the general direction in which Sunday's tragedy occurred.

State Motorcycle Patrol Officer Folk Ivy was riding ahead of Wheeler and Murphy when they saw the black sedan with yellow wire wheels, but thought nothing of it until he glanced back and saw that his fellow officers were not following them. Returning he discovered them lying near their motorcycles at the spot where the automobile had been. Wheeler was dead and Murphy was dying from gunshot wounds. Their pistols still were in their holsters, indicating that, as they drew near the car, the deadly gunfire began pouring. Murphy died after being taken by ambulance to Grapevine.

Authorities first thought that the man in the car was Hamilton, but that theory was destroyed when a farmer, living near the scene of the tragedy, said the car had been there since 10:30 that morning, just an hour after Hamilton had stolen an (See BARROW, page 4)

600 CHILDREN JOIN EGG HUNT

Children, estimated at 600, chased over the J. E. Hill pasture Sunday afternoon, hunting about 1500 eggs, included in which were 200 prize eggs. The occasion marked the fifth annual egg hunt of the Midland Lions club. The high school band, under direction of Russell E. Shrader, played. Merchants today were busily sending out presents to finders of lucky eggs. J. S. Schow was chairman of the hunt committee, assisted by Wade Stevens, Rufus Parks and Herbert King.

Gen. Jackson Statue Has Been Renovated

NEW ORLEANS, (UP)—Over a century after he waged successful warfare without injury, Gen. Andrew Jackson was "decapitated" and suffered other minor "injuries" to himself and his mount. The bronze and iron statue of the warrior and his horse that have reared in the center of Jackson Square, the heart of the historic French Quarter in New Orleans, since 1856, have fallen prey to time. Rust split a front leg of the horse, ate holes in the saddle and nibbled on the legs of Jackson himself. A group of playful youngsters recently sent the head of the proud general tumbling into the dust.

Jackson's head once more, however, gazes over the surrounding scenes and Dr. Robert Glenk, curator of the Louisiana State museum, cleaned the edifice with kerosene, repaired the holes, and gave the bronze and iron likeness a coat of paraffin oil to protect it from further destruction by the elements. General Jackson, after he had already been president, laid the cornerstone for the statue in 1840, 25 years after his celebrated defense in the Battle of New Orleans. Chered by a large crowd, he rode in state in a barouche to the Place d'Armes. In 1851, the name of the plot was changed to Jackson Square and the statue was completed and unveiled Feb. 9, 1856, 11 years after Jackson's death.

Platinum Blonds Are Indebted to Chemist

AUSTIN—Platinum blonds of the twentieth century are indebted for their silver tresses to a discovery made by a chemist more than a hundred years ago, according to a display of famous pharmaceutical discoveries arranged by the University of Texas College of Pharmacy, under the supervision of L. W. Schless, instructor in pharmacy. It was in 1818 that hydrogen peroxide was discovered by Thénard.

Devotees of the coffee cup would be attracted by an exhibit on the process of percolation, introduced by Boullay. A sample of nicotine, discovered in tobacco by Vanqueline, and one of iodine, first found in seaweeds by Courtois, are among the other items in the display.

Only Cat with Bank Account Died Recently

GREENWICH, Conn. (UP)—"Nigger," the only cat known to have had a bank account, is dead.

The feline, orphaned by his alley-cat mother 12 years ago, was "adopted" by Mrs. Albert E. Whitten who closely guarded his health and well-being until his untimely end. The only time "Nigger" ever escaped from the house, he mixed with a ruffian and lost an eye. As a result he contracted pneumonia and not only his mistress, but the ice and milk man were greatly concerned until he recovered. Another time he toppled from a second-story porch and broke his tail. A veterinarian placed the injured member in splints for several weeks.

On still another occasion the cat developed a toothache and the disturbing molar was pulled. During the last two years he was content to enjoy the comforts of his ripe old age. When he began to fail, the butcher furnished several pints of beef blood which was fed to him with an eye-dropper. Finally he refused food and quietly passed away.

"Nigger" left an estate of $10, which was on deposit at the Greenwich Trust company under the name "Nigger J. Catt."

Road Racing Is Coming Back Fast

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Old fashioned road racing will be revived, and Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, famous flying ace, predicted, will become one of the nation's favorite sports.

Rickenbacker, who is chairman of the Contest Board of the American Automobile association, governing body of automobile racing, based his contention on the success of a recent stock-car road race at Mines airport, Los Angeles. "The 78,000 fans, who attended the Los Angeles road race last month spoke for the sports world," said Rickenbacker, himself a champion driver of the old school. "I venture to say," he continued, "that within the year road racing will be a part of the automobile racing schedule in most every section of the United States."

Plans are underway for construction of a road track near metropolitan New York City, the AAA announced. Attempts will be made, it was added, to revive races at Fairmount park, Philadelphia, where many famous drivers gained recognition in the early 1900's.

LOANS OFF. WASHINGTON, Apr. 2. (UP)—Loan commitments of the RFC have fallen $500,000,000 under the president's budget estimate as result of improving economic conditions, Chairman Jones said today.

tered Greek steamer Maitotis, and held by the courts subject to extradition. He was taken to the house of detention to await arrival of American authorities. It was believed that the former utilities magnate would be placed on an early boat for New York.

PICKS FIRST COTTON

ALICE, (P).—J. H. Hoelscher, farmer residing near Alice, claims credit for picking the first cotton of 1934. Hoelscher picked the cotton in Middlemarch from stalks that had been growing in his field all winter. There has not been a month this year in which his cotton field has not bloomed.

Proposes Lease of Army Post to City

EAGLE PASS, (P).—The city commission recently received from Lieut. Col. S. M. Williamson of Fort Sam Houston a proposal for the purchase of the post to be used for a city park. No agreement was reached but it is believed the city's rental offer will be accepted. The city intends to allow the historic Fort Duncan buildings to use and keep in repair. Also it plans to lay out a municipal golf course, a bridal path and other recreational features. The city already owns a large swimming pool and baseball park on land adjacent to the post. Fort Duncan, or Camp Eagle Pass, as it was called during the World war when 17,000 soldiers were quartered here, was abandoned in 1922. Situated close to Eagle Pass' business district, the fertile two hundred acres of rolling land have lain idle for over a decade. At present one soldier is in charge, his only duty being to raise and lower the flag each day and keep a lookout for fires. General Robert E. Lee, General Zachary Taylor and General John Pershing are reputed to have stayed at Fort Duncan which was erected in 1845-48. Eagle Pass' petition to obtain the post land through gift, sale, or lease was taken before congress in 1932 by John N. Garner, who presented it as his first bill after taking oath as speaker of the house.

Sixty Hear Address Of Supervisor Howze

Welfare officials from eight counties are in session at the county court room today in an institute being conducted by Texas Relief commission officers. About 60 men and women are in attendance. The session was opened by J. Howze, field supervisor, with an explanation of the new set-up. He declared work projects "as projects" were a thing of the past. "The only thing the state is interested in now is rehabilitation. People must learn to be self-supporting again, and our whole effort will be to the end of putting people back on their feet," Howze said.

Direct relief work under the new set-up may start April 16, and may not start until May 1. Howze declared. His talk emphasized the necessity for all people on charity or relief to re-double their efforts to find work on farms or to raise their own food. He told welfare workers they can expect soon to be working themselves out of jobs, as people get back to a self-sustaining basis, the office forces will be cut down, he said.

Messrs. Harper and Montgomery auditors from Austin, explained the new bookkeeping methods and distributed the "new manuals." The workers studied those and Monday afternoon were asking questions in round-table discussion.

BEST SELLERS ARE NOT ALWAYS BEST BOOKS

One of the troubles with collecting an elaborate set of statistics is that half of the time you can't figure out what they mean after you've got them collected.

A list of the 65 best sellers in the American book market since 1875 was drawn up recently for the Institute of Arts and Sciences by Edward Weeks. And the longer one scrutinizes this cross-section of the nation's literary tastes the less confident one feels of drawing any deduction from it.

The all-time best seller, to begin with, is the Rev. Charles M. Sheldon's "In His Steps," which has sold 8,000,000 copies. Second, fourth and fifth places are held by Gene Stratton Porter's books, "Freckles," "The Girl of the Limberlost," and "The Harvester."

That old reliable, "Ben Hur," places third. Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer" is sixth, closely followed by Harold Bell Wright's "The Winning of Barbara Worth."

And so it goes. That best of all western romances, Owen Wister's "The Virginian," is well up toward the top; but a book like Mrs. Porter's "Laddie" is ahead of it. Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn," which competent critics have called the greatest of American novels, ranks high with a total sale of a million copies; but it is out-classed, among others by such a book as "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew," by Margaret Sidney.

Non-fiction titles are fairly well represented. Edward Bellamy's famous "Looking Backward," for instance, has sold 500,000 copies, and Wells' "Outline of History," has sold 684,000; but "Pollyanna" has sold a round million, and "The Rosary" better than 900,000.

Trying to deduce anything from these figures is difficult. Good books are on the list, in profusion; so are unutterably bad books, and a great many that are neither one nor the other.

You could argue that America likes sugary optimism in its books, and support your argument by a citation of titles; but such books as "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "Main Street" are there on the list to refute you.

What does it all mean, then? Nothing much, probably. The American reading public is pretty omnivorous. It devours good books and it devours trash.

About all one can safely say, apparently, is that the best seller lists don't mean a thing.

STILL MENACING

In declaring that the underworld today has more men under arms than the United States army and navy combined, Attorney General Cummings gives us a striking illustration of the extent of the menace presented by our metropolitan gangs.

A fair-minded observer probably would admit that the situation today is better than it was, say, five years ago, when Al Capone was in his hey-day and it was almost an unheard-of thing for a prominent gangster actually to be sent to prison.

Nevertheless, the challenge to organized society which gangland presents has by no means been met fully.

The underworld still supports a larger armed force than the federal government itself supports. That simple statement shows graphically how much remains to be done.

PENALTY AND POVERTY

One reads with a certain sardonic interest that Martin Insull, one-time Chicago utilities magnate, went on a hunger strike shortly after he had been locked in jail at Toronto, where he was being held for extradition to the United States.

The food, it seems, wasn't quite up to a utilities magnate's standards. For breakfast there was porridge, buttermilk bread and sugarless tea; for dinner there was stew and cold water; for supper, rice, bread and tea.

All this is rather plain fare, especially for a man used to the best food that money can buy. It is hard to blame a man for refusing to eat it; and doubtless it is only human perversity that reminds one that it might seem like a feast to some luckless old person who invested, and lost, all his life's savings in Insull securities.

proverbs could apply to me. I think I know that I know and I think people should follow me. But it may be that I am one who knows not and knows not that I know not. How is one to tell?

The biggest fools I have ever known were men who thought they had a monopoly on brains. A fool is not a fool to himself. He thinks he's smart.

All of us should check up on ourselves. We should find out for certain what people think of us. I did this once and boy, oh boy, was I shocked? But who are the fools and who are the wise men these days? Wild in the past few years some of our leaders, men we believed smart and resourceful, have shown themselves to be the biggest fools of all.

A good person to check up on you is your mother-in-law. It's likely she has you sized up pretty near to what you really are.

The New York Times estimates there are about 15,000,000 mothers-in-law in the United States. Fifteen million mothers-in-law couldn't be wrong, could they?

A little Hollywood gossip: It's said that the first aMry Pickford now of Douglas Fairbanks planning to pull out was when she picked up a newspaper and saw an advertisement offering their home for sale. And now it's said that Doug is repentant and wants to make up.

CHAPTER I. Mary had stayed out all night!

It was such astounding news that Sylvia Watts who was suffering from a "morning after" feeling, all too common with her, was completely unnumbered when the maid told her. Mary out all night! And with that Englishman, of course—Lord Rexford.

Sylvia did not approve. It was not that she minded what her sister did or where she went. On the contrary she had always thought Mary a little prudish. She went to parties—and there was one of the gayest young crowds in New York—she danced beautifully, she drank, she was always full of life and high spirits. But she set a limit for herself and she observed it. She never drank too much. Her flirtations never became "affairs." She never allowed her popularity which was outstanding because she was so young and beautiful, so gay and impulsive, to interfere with her efficiency. She had a responsible position as private secretary to an important publisher and no plain, middle-aged woman whose whole life was in her work, could have filled it better.

That Mary should work at all seemed foolish to Sylvia. There was no real need for it. Still if Mary liked it, it was all right with Sylvia, and of course her salary was not unwelcome. Sylvia always spent her allowance before it came in and it was a comfort to know that Mary could be counted on to pay the rent and other necessary but uninteresting expenses. No, she did not mind in the least that Mary was having a "fling." What she did mind was Lord Rexford. If it were one of their own crowd—Tommy Trent, for instance—she could understand it. There was a frown on her face as the door opened and Mary came in. "I knew you didn't come home," she said, "but I supposed you had gone to work!" "Everything may be topsy-turvy," laughed Mary, "but I'd scarcely show up at the office in a dancing frock. I must go and change now."

"Is it in your scheme of things," demanded Sylvia, "to tell me where and how you spent the night?" "Well," laughed Mary, "if you were't too much 'in the ether', to use one of your favorite expressions, you must know it was almost dawn when the party broke up. It was too late to go to bed—too early to go to work, so we were for a long glorious ride in the country."

"The other part of the 'we' being that stiff, stand off of an Englishman, I suppose. Mary, have you fallen for that high-hat, high brow stuffed shirt?"

"He's not stiff nor snobbish," retorted Mary. "He's not like our set, thank goodness, because he is serious as well as rich and aristocratic. He couldn't be an authority on international relationships and economics, if he weren't."

"Sounds awful."

"Well, it's not. He's an important man and the finest one I ever met. You ask if I've fallen for him, I have, and I'm proud of it."

"You're a little fool," blazed Sylvia. "Mary smiled a little wistfully. 'Probably I am—we won't argue about it. But don't be alarmed. His boat sails this afternoon.'"

"I suppose you're seeing him off."

"And that will be the end of something which has been rarely beautiful to me," said Mary a little sadly. "When his boat goes down the bay, I'll be coming back to the old life—you and the crowd and the 'meet.'"

"Meet me at seven, Sis—same old hang-out. I'll see you get a few laughs this night."

"Right-o, Sylvia. I'll be needing there. Now me for a shower and some day-time clothes."

Mary was thoughtful and her mood was not a gay one as she rode down to the pier. But she was smiling as she greeted Lord Rexford. She had sworn to herself she would hold her breath that day when she would be bright and that his last memory of her would be of a girl who was good fun and a "good sport."

"Only for a little while."

"No—forever."

"Mary," he said, "Will you marry me?" She shook her head. "It's perfect that you should say that. And I want you to know I love you. But I won't marry you. It's just because I love you that I won't."

"Perhaps that's American logic—but I don't get it."

"Perhaps it is and the fact you don't get it," proves my point. You're very different people, you and I. We both speak English—but we don't speak the same language. Our backgrounds, our viewpoints—everything is different."

"That's what you think now. But we're not quite sane now—at least you're not. People romantically in love, never are. But today isn't all of life. There are the tomorrows, and in them, we will be sane. And then—"

"Mary, please, dear," he pleaded. "I must go now," she said firmly. "It has been beautiful—like a dream. Let us part without regrets; let us remember each other without regrets. It has been good to know you. I hope you will always think it was good to know me."

"Not to worry, Phil—not one," she called back—and was gone. She stopped before a window to send a wireless. "Goodbye and good luck. I would do it all over again. I love you. Suddenly a voice in cockney said: 'Wouldn't you like the message delivered personally?'"

Death Chair Now Haunts Designer

OKLAHOMA CITY, (AP)—The grim shadow of a chair J. C. (Iron Jack) Walton designed 20 years ago frequently rises to haunt him, the former governor of Oklahoma has revealed.
 "I've often wished I'd never designed it," said Walton, who has been locomotive engineer, consulting engineer and holder of several offices in his colorful career.
 The chair is in the state penitentiary at McAlester—an electric chair—and some 40-odd men already have gone to death in it. But none went during the designer's term as governor, the office for which he now is staging a "comeback" election campaign.
 Walton planned and designed the electric chair in 1914, under Gov. Lee Cruce, though he never had seen one. At that time, the future governor was consulting engineer on state projects, and was called in.
 "It was easy," he said. "It is the amperage which kills. One-eighth amperage is enough to kill. The main thing is in figuring out your amperage and designing the control units, arranging the rheostats to provide enough resistance and develop the amperage."
 Before Walton was impeached a scant 10 months after taking office as governor, he was forced to intervene to save at least five men from the piece of furniture he had devised.

 Walton's use of the power of pardon was criticized bitterly during his short term as governor, some charging he had turned loose dozens and scores of hardened criminals on society.
 "I'd like to be shown an executive whose confidence and trust was never violated," he asserted in his defense.
 Walton refused to reveal what his attitude would be toward the sinister piece of furniture he devised, should his comeback campaign prove successful, and after 11 years of trying political strife, he is elevated once more to the Oklahoma governorship. "My record speaks on that," he said, indicating he would prefer again to save men from the machine of his own design.
 Walton also served as general construction engineer and locomotive engineer and conductor on Mexican trains. He is now a member of the state corporation commission.

Trench Soils

Trenches are usually dug from seven to 10 feet deep. In most soils the sides should be sloped so that the top of the trench will be about four feet wider than the bottom, giving a wall slope of about one foot to each four feet of depth. Probably the best plan is to make the walls as near vertical as they will stand when the trench is first dug. After the trench has been filled with silage and emptied, then smooth down the walls if they have caved, giving them whatever slope is necessary to reduce caving.

Experience indicates that the trench should not be made too wide. A width of five or six feet at the bottom of the trench is suggested, for a silo for a small dairy herd. This will be increased slightly from year to year as the walls are smoothed down if the trench is not walled.

Make the cross section of the trench proportionate to the size of the herd of cattle that will be fed. A suggested cross section would be a top width of seven feet, a bottom width of five feet, and a depth of six or seven feet.

The length may be whatever is necessary to get the required capacity. In figuring the capacity of the trench, experience shows that a cubic foot weighs about 25 pounds after settling.

After a week's work on crop loans, the agent's office was agreeably surprised to receive a check Saturday morning. This is very quick service. These crop loans will be available until the last day of April.

Peppers Prevent Infection—Pimiento and bell peppers contain vitamin A which is credited with being anti-infection in its action. Our grandmothers may not have been so far wrong after all when giving pepper tea for colds. A popular coughdrop advertises that it contains vitamin A. But why buy coughdrops when you can eat a pepper!

Cool as a Cucumber—The temperature of a cucumber is usually one degree lower than the surrounding atmosphere, hence the phrase.

Watch the Water Supply—Scientists have agreed that to produce one pound of dry matter in vegetables, 300 pounds or more of water is required. Most vegetables contain about 80 per cent water and 20 per cent dry matter. We cannot have vegetables of high quality without having rotting, mildew, leaf mold, or some other similar spongy, water holding material to the soil each year.

Vegetables to Plant Now—Beans, peaches and plums, Detroit red, lettuce, iceberg, radish, scarlet globe, cabbage, Jersey wakefield and Copenhagen market; onions, Bermuda; Swiss chard and mustard, southern curled.

Two hours have been saved in making each dress by using an individually fitted pattern, according to Mrs. B. Foreman, Lenora club, Martin county, can now make a dress, sew it and it fits, where in the past each one has had to be fitted. An individually fitted pattern is a part of the wardrobe demonstration carried on by women's clubs of Martin and Midland counties.

From 45 tomato plants, Mrs. F. C. Tate, home demonstration club member of Overton, Howard county, last year, added 100 cans of tomatoes to her pantry which is now supplying a part of vitamin C in the diet.

According to "Rose in Feeding the Family," page 29-30, vitamin C is not stored in the body in any considerable degree, hence daily supplies are needed to maintain the best health. In the absence of vitamin C, the characteristic disease develops, scurvy. This is a disorder affecting many parts of the body, the ribs may exhibit beading similar to that in rickets. Acute joint pains in the joints are sometimes attributed to other causes when in reality are due to scurvy. Other foods besides tomatoes that are high in vitamin C content are: lemon, orange and grapefruit juice, green peppers, fresh strawberries, cabbage and lettuce.

A clothes closet 2 1/2 feet by 4 1/2 feet with shelves in each end and a rod run lengthwise for hanging was built in March for Mrs. S. P. Myrick, wardrobe demonstrator for the Courtney Home Demonstration club, Martin county. A high lengthwise shelf was for additional storage and for clothing not often used.

Another closet was improved by adding shelves along one end, and lowering the hanging rod.

By moving a wardrobe from a storage room to a bedroom, Lois Parker, bedroom demonstrator of the Stokes 4-H Girls club, and her sister, Eula Jean, have provided adequate storage this month for hanging and storing clothing.

The chair was good for 15 more years, according to Mrs. A. I. Stewart of Pleasant Valley. The chair was repaired and refinished by her daughter, Helen Lee Stewart, who is bedroom demonstrator for the Pleasant Valley girls club.

After removing the old finish with the solution and going over the wood with strong vinegar, the chair was sandedpaper until smooth. A dark walnut aniline dye stain, dissolved in denatured alcohol was applied evenly. This was followed by three coats of clear varnish. The first and second coats of varnish was smoothed with No. 1 sandpaper. The third coat was rubbed with furniture wax to give a more dull finish. This is an improvement made during the county bedroom demonstration contest that ends in May.

With an expenditure of $3 the living room was papered, woodwork painted, two tables and three chairs refinished, one chair re-seated by Sybil and Edith Bizzell, cooperators in the home improvement demonstration of the Valley View girls club.

By dyeing heavy cotton material a dull green and starching heavily, window shades were made. Soft muslin curtains dyed gold, and hung, gave a warm atmosphere to the room which is located on the northwest. The following Valley View club girls visited the room recently: Dorothy Caffrey, Sarah Ann Stewart, Zella Heidelberg, Omera and Elbe Hobbs, Ethel Wil-

SON, Dorothy Brunson and Mrs. T. C. Fleming, teacher of Valley View.

Cantor Picture Planned Several Seasons in Past

The idea of Eddie Cantor cavorting about ancient Rome, which is developed in "Roman Scandals," the comedian's fourth annual musical screen extravaganza currently showing at the Yucca theatre, was in Samuel Goldwyn's mind when he arrived in New York in the winter of 1932.

Two writers in Hollywood were working on a treatment of "Andros and the Lion" Cantor, having finished barnstorming tour of one-night stands to a fabulous business, had gone to Florida for a week's rest. From his New York apartment, Goldwyn phoned Eddie.

"Eddie, I think we have it. Come home quick!" That was enough, in a few days the pop-eyed comedian and his producer were in a huddle. Conversations and discussions went on for hours at countless cups of coffee grew cold—went on for days and weeks as the winter gave way to spring. One thing came out of it—they kept Rome, but threw out Andros and his lion.

Eddie worked until May with authors George S. Kaufman and Robert Sherwood. As soon as a scene was finished, it would be read to Eddie. And Eddie, sitting on the chenille carpeting of Goldwyn's New York apartment, would read it to the producer. When the outline of the yarn was well on its way, Goldwyn hurried off to Europe for the opening of "The Kid from Spain." He returned to find Eddie and the Messrs. Kaufman and Sherwood in the same huddle. But oil by bit, Eddie's character was being realized more or less in terms of flesh and blood, the story was beginning to take shape.

Ponselle, Martini and Stueckgold to Sing Popular American Songs in Series

LETTERS to the EDITOR

Dear Sir:
This is a special invitation, urging Midland people to be present on the occasion of Saturday, April 28, at the dedication of our new Outdoor Theatre with an Historical Pageant of the Big Bend honoring the Pioneers of West Texas.

We are anxious to have Midland people in order to lend prestige to the occasion, with the hope that you will enjoy the pageant, and in the belief that you will be surprised how well equipped your own college is and how adequately it is serving the educational interest of this section.

We are all West Texans. We have a community of interests, and we are ambitious to see our material, educational, and spiritual advantages develop in keeping with the highest welfare of our own boys and girls. You may be interested to know that the senior classes in the high schools of West Texas from Eagle Pass to El Paso, from El Paso to San Angelo, from San Angelo to Sabinal, are all participating in the ceremonies at the crowning of the Sul Ross Queen, representing Progress.

Moreover, we are glad of the opportunity to pay tribute to the Pioneers of West Texas who endured the hardships of the early days and made possible the benefits we now enjoy. Join us, and let's make this a Great Day for West Texas.

Sincerely yours,
H. W. Morelock, President.

Rosa Ponselle, world-famous soprano; Nino Martini, noted radio tenor; and Grete Stueckgold, popular concert singer, will sing the best-loved American songs of yesterday and today in a new series of broadcasts to be heard three times weekly over the Columbia network, beginning this evening at 8 o'clock. A forty-piece orchestra and a chorus of sixteen voices, directed by the nationally-known CBS conductor Andre Kostelanetz, will accompany the vocalists and present unusual arrangements of modern dance tunes and ballads.

Presented under the auspices of Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, in behalf of Chesterfield Cigarettes, the programs will be broadcast from 9:00 to 9:30 p. m., EST, every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. Miss Ponselle will hold the spotlight on Mondays; Martini will be presented in the Wednesday night period; and Grete Stueckgold will be the Saturday evening star. For the first week only, Grete Stueckgold will be heard on Wednesday, with Martini taking the Saturday position.

Every program will be broadcast from the Columbia Radio Playhouse in New York, where the most modern technical equipment, including wide-range, high-fidelity microphones, will transmit the voices and the music with an unparalleled richness of tone.

The three great singers will bring their unusual vocal talents to the presentation of many familiar and well-loved American songs, such as "Kiss Me Again," "Just a Song at Twilight," and "At the Bend of the River." Songs of more recent composition will also be included in the vocal programs.

Familiar arias from the most famous of operatic productions will form another portion of the vocal selection featured on each of the programs. Miss Ponselle, Martini, and Grete Stueckgold will sing numbers which have been associated with their names throughout their public careers.

The orchestral and choral interludes will be unique as performances of present-day popular music. Kostelanetz, whose scintillating arrangements of current tunes rank high in the favor of radio listeners throughout the country, has prepared special versions of many familiar melodies to be played in smooth, rhythmic style. An extraordinary feature of his orchestra will be the use of twenty-three string instruments out of the total of forty. This unusual set-up will provide Kostelanetz with the opportunity of obtaining freshness and variation in every number. The gentle rhythms of the waltz will be given a premier position in each program with a special waltz melody included in every broadcast.

The programs have been designed to flow calmly from opening to closing in the manner Kostelanetz made popular, when he first presented a complete program without the usual announcements of numbers interrupting the musical continuity.

In the forthcoming series, both Miss Ponselle and Grete Stueckgold are taking part in a regular radio series for the first time.

The Sports Horn

The "Go west, young man," theory doesn't always work in baseball, representatives found when they attempted to complete organization of a U. S. Highway 80 league at Midland Sunday.

They were met with explanations that Odessa, hitherto counted in as the western terminus of the league territory, had reverted to its status of Permian Basin Baseball league member; and that Midland likely will tell Permian directors Wednesday night at Crane that this city may be counted in another year.

It was then that Spike Henninger of Big Spring addressed the chair and said, "We'd better go east, young men." He and Leroy Gressett of Westbrook suggested that invitation be extended to Sweetwater, Roscoe, Lorraine, Snyder, Trent and Merkel, these to be invited to join Big Spring, Colorado and Coahoma, the three clubs left to the organization.

Joe Pyron explained Midland's likelihood of remaining in the Permian league, and his position was evidently appreciated by other directors.

A practice session at 3:30 Sunday afternoon in Midland will be played with Big Spring, Lefty Babers, Big Spring, pitcher, is probably the most dangerous hitter in this area. He is likely the only pitcher in this section who bats in regular cleanup position.

The Midland baseball club will practice each afternoon as soon after 5 o'clock as possible, announced Manager Joe Pyron this morning. "Be at the grounds just west of El Campo at 5 if you can. The earlier you get there the earlier we can get started," he said. "We need some more players, too."

Joe believes Midland will have a better ball club than it had last year. In practices held to date, the boys are getting their eyes on the ball nicely and hammering it to the far corners. As might be expected, however, it will take the practice game scheduled for Sunday to shake up the club to the degree where it will settle down seriously to training ground.

The proposed airway across the Atlantic, if found to be practical, will cost $30,000,000 and provide employment to 10,000 men for two years.
