WRECK HERE TANGLES PLANS FOR FORT BLISS WEDDING

"Everybody has been so nice to me," she explained but added that she hoped to make the rest of the trip without any more stops.

House Argues Control Of Oil

AUSTIN, March 24. (AP)—The house of representatives voted today, 99 to 40, to take up the hotly contested bill creating a separate oil and gas commission.

The representatives were pursuing what has become almost a fixed policy of engaging in a fierce floor fight on Monday. Speaker Homer Leonard jokingly suggested that the lower branch perhaps should not begin the week's business until Tuesday.

Rep. Houston McMurry of Henrietta, opening the acrid debate on the oil commission bill, said that the demand for the measure was not sectional but was statewide in scope.

Rep. Jimmy Phillips of Angleton, uncompromising foe of the proposal, retorted that "this is a fight between the oil gang and the people of Texas."

Phillips' motion to prevent anyone from leaving the house until after a final vote on the bill was defeated, 81 to 62, and a motion by Rep. J. K. Hillman of Atlanta to postpone floor discussion of the week one week long, 78 to 51.

The bill would remove from the elective state railroad commission the power to regulate oil and gas production and place such regulation in the hands of an appointive commission named by the governor.

"This is the most important measure which will confront the legislature this session," said McMurry. "It was born of a situation that has permeated the state for several years, and which culminated in widespread demand for this bill."

Salvation Army Awards Contract

J. M. Morgan, Big Spring, was announced as low bidder here Monday and was preparing to qualify as contractor for the construction of a $12,000 Salvation Army building.

Brig. Gen. Williams George Gilks, Dallas, announced that the Morgan bid of $12,165 was lowest of six submitted by several hundred dollars. He said, after a conference with Maj. L. W. Canning, in charge of the local post, and the Big Spring advisory committee, that plans were to start work as soon as possible.

The structure, to be located on the northeast corner of the Aylford and W. 4th street intersection, will be a brick and tile affair, embodying a half basement and top floor.

Currently, said Brig. Gen. Gilks, plans are to face the building east so that an officers quarters may be built on the rear of the double lot.

Layout of the building includes a small auditorium space in the basement along with a kitchen, storage rooms, etc. The upper floor will contain the auditorium, offices, and other quarters needed for administration of the Salvation Army affairs here.

Two Big Spring women, Mrs. Dora Roberts and Mrs. Cora Holmes, have made the building possible after two years of planning for it. Brig. Gen. Gilks said that the citadel would be built without incurring any debt and that possibly the officers quarters structure could be added without creating any indebtedness.

head of horses, 90 head of cattle, one sow, six geese, two guineas, 48 ducks, 20 chickens, 20 turkeys—all located at East Laport, N. C.—and a harpoon gun.

Briefly, he conducted farming operations at a loss in North Carolina; entered the lumber business at Del Rio; owned a piece in a Texas loan company; owned oil leases; engaged in gold mining ventures in Arizona; operated radio stations; dabbled in advertising with aircraft organizations; was a stockholder in an international advertising agency; served as technician to an advertising corporation.

OPM Settles Two Strikes In Weekend

Trouble Still Besets Three Defense Plants Of Major Importance

By The Associated Press The office of production management chalked up strike settlements in two plants with vital defense orders today after a week-end of intensive effort, but storm clouds hung over three other defense production fronts.

CIO representatives at the Harvill Aircraft Die Casting Corporation at Los Angeles agreed to halt a ten-day-old strike last night after reaching agreement with the management on demands for union recognition and wage increases.

This strike had caused great concern to the OPM because the company's production was essential to the operation of eight Pacific coast aircraft plants. The walkout had involved 350 of the plant's 425 employees.

Striking CIO workers at the Aluminum Company of America plant in Edgewater, N. J., also agreed to resume work today and continue negotiations over wage increase and overtime pay demands.

On the other side of the defense labor picture were these developments: At Bethlehem, Pa., the CIO Steel Organizing Committee stood ready to walk out of the Bethlehem Steel company plant if officials of the employees' representation tried to conduct a scheduled election today.

The SWOC claims the E. R. P. is a "company union." A representative of the E. R. P. said the election would be conducted anyway. Bethlehem has 18,000 employees and a billion in defense contracts.

At Chicago, 1,385 policemen, nearly a fourth of the city force, were marshaled for the reopening of the McCormick works of the International Harvester company, closed for three weeks by a CIO strike for union recognition, wage increases and other demands.

The plant holds no defense contracts, but makes parts for companies which do. AFL machinists employed by San Francisco firms holding large defense contracts yesterday voted a negotiating committee authority to call a strike April 1 unless employees met demands for a wage increase and other adjustments.

Michael Harris, SWOC regional director, announced he and representatives of the J. E. Brill company of Philadelphia would attempt today to settle a two week strike. The plant has a $400,000 order for army gun mounts.

Ford Motor company officials said at Detroit production at their Lincoln plant was shut down this morning because of a shortage of automobile frames supplied by the strike-bound Midland Steel Products company plant. About 3,300 workers were made idle, but another 800 on maintenance and defense products reported for duty.

Reds, Turks To Declare Friendship--Rumor

SENATOR SAYS O'DANIEL NOT FILLING DUTY

AUSTIN, March 24 (AP)—Suggesting that the legislature might have to strip the chief executive of appointive powers, Senator Joe Hill of Henderson today renewed a charge that Governor W. Lee O'Daniel has ignored constitutional mandates in failing to fill vacancies in certain state boards and commissions.

Hill declared the governor had failed, in violation of clear and unequivocal constitutional provisions, to choose successors for Highway Commissioner Harry Hines, Labor Commissioner Joe Kunschick and four members of the Texas A. & M. college board of regents, whose terms have expired.

He added the governor is required also immediately to submit the name of another person to succeed a nominee who has been rejected by the senate. He referred to rejection 18 days ago of Tom C. King, who had been reappointed state auditor.

The Henderson member asserted he had no right to make on any board or commission member who is continuing in office because a successor has not been named. Hines and Kunschick are still serving.

It was Hill's contention that unless the governor names a highway commissioner to replace Hines before the general session adjourns finally the office might become a subject of court dispute.

He declared he had no idea why Governor O'Daniel had delayed submission of certain appointees for senate confirmation and added he had no intention of opposing any of them who had the essential qualifications of office.

Hill made a similar personal privilege speech last week.

Calves Arrive For Exhibition In Boys' Show

Fat calves, full of bloom, were being unloaded at the county warehouse here Monday as 4-H club and FFA boys from six counties in this area prepared to exhibit the results of six months of feeding at the fourth annual district club boy livestock show here Tuesday and Wednesday.

At noon there had been more than 20 baby heaves unloaded at the warehouse and Bill Satterwhite, who with Fred Keating is general chairman of the show, said that around 70 calves were expected to be on hand by evening.

In addition, around 35 fat wool lambs were due to be trucked in for the occasion along with several barrows and brood sows.

Washracks and clipper stands were busy as club boys hustled to shine their show animals and cut away surplus hair around the heads.

Judging will take place Tuesday at the hands of R. M. Milhollan, San Angelo, with a special judging for Howard county animals during the morning. In district competition prize awards will aggregate around $160.

A special committee has secured pledges of cooperation from more than 40 local business men, individuals and organizations to guarantee a 12-cent price on top calves and proportionately good prices for top lambs. Arrangements have been made to insure top local prices on other calves.

The calves will be auctioned at 1 p. m. Wednesday at the Big Spring Livestock Auction Co., just east of here.

Countries To Issue Statements Today

ISTANBUL, Turkey, March 24. (AP)—An unofficial but reliable source said today that Turkey and Soviet Russia would publish simultaneously at midnight tonight a "common declaration of friendship."

The declaration, it was said, will mean Russian aid for Turkey "by every means short of war" if she is attacked by Germany.

(In London, a Reuters, British news agency, dispatch from Belgrade said large formations of German troops in Bulgaria began a rapid advance yesterday afternoon down the Struma river valley toward the Greek frontier.

(Previous Turkish reports forecasting a Russian-Turkish declaration had said it would reaffirm a non-aggression pact already existing between the Moscow and Ankara governments and would mean the same aid for Turkey—primarily supplies—as Russia has been supplying China.)

The declaration, it was said, will contain these three points: 1. Denial of "rumors spread abroad that if Turkey enters the war, Russia will stab her in the back;"

2. Assurance that if Turkey is obliged to fight, Russia will maintain "benevolent neutrality" toward her;

3. Reciprocal Turkish assurances to the Soviet.

According to this information, it will be based on the Turkish-Russian non-aggression pact of 1923.

Some political sources said it was negotiated by Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov and Atkay Alkaydar, Turkish ambassador to Moscow. They said the declaration would not be limited to a signed agreement and that there were secret clauses specifically mentioning the help to be given Turkey by Russia in case of Turkish conflict with Germany.

SENATE AGREES TO BUY BEEF IN ARGENTINA

WASHINGTON, March 24 (AP)—Reversing a previous vote, the senate approved today a proposal to permit navy purchases of canned corned beef from Argentina.

The proposal, offered as an amendment to the naval supply bill, failed on a tie vote of 32 to 32 last week. Vice President Wallace was entertaining at a luncheon and thus was not present to break the tie.

Without objection, the senate today approved a motion by Senator Barkley (D-Ky), the majority leader, to correct the roll call to make the vote 33 to 32 in favor of the amendment. The amendment then was ordered engrossed as a part of the naval bill.

Barkley made his motion after Senator Russell (D-Ga) had told the senate he had voted for the amendment but that his vote had not been recorded.

Senator McNary (R-Ore), the minority leader, agreed that the roll call and the senate journal "should conform to the truth." McNary said he was satisfied that Russell actually had voted for the amendment.

British Ship Heads For Norfolk Yards?

BALTIMORE, March 24 (AP)—The Baltimore Sun said today that authoritative sources reported a British warship heading toward the Norfolk, Va., navy yards for repairs.

The paper said these sources did not disclose the name of the ship, but classed the vessel as a heavy cruiser drawing too much water to be handled at shipyards here.

One official at the Norfolk yards said, when informed of the report, that he had no confirmation of such arrangements.

AUSTIN, March 24. (AP)—Farmers of Texas intend to plant spring crops on an acreage nearly two per cent greater than last year, the agricultural marketing service of the United States department of agriculture forecast in a report issued today.

The statement, based on an analysis of individual farm reports, covered all major spring sown crops except cotton.

Prospective increases were in corn, barley, rice, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, soybeans, cowpeas and some hay acreage. Slight decreases, however, were seen in oats and flax acreage, while plantings of grain sorghums and peanuts were to remain about the same as 1940.

Frilly Kitchen Clothes Are A Fire Hazard Say Underwriters

(This is the first of a series of articles on fire prevention by the National Board of Fire Underwriters aimed at women and the fire hazards they create. Editor's note.)

A large percentage of American women get breakfast in some kind of a kimono or negligee. They find it impossible to dress completely and prepare breakfast in time for their husbands to get to work and their children to get to school. Any woman will tell you these early morning hours are a rush and every minute counts.

These women may be loving wives and mothers, but they are firetraps. Because their kimonos and negligees are often trimmed with lace or ribbon and are very apt to catch fire as their wearers work over the stove, especially as their sleeves are usually long and flowing. Almost every woman has been guilty, at some time in her life, of setting a coffee pot over a flame with a frilly sleeve dangling not more than an inch from the fire.

Miss Laneau Notes

By MARY WHALEY

We took a laugh at men—nobody in particular—just men and how they went about getting in and out of their overcoats with all the gracefulness of an over-stuffed bruin.

Since then the brickbats have been flying our way and men have beat us upon their vests and scowled "how about the women, they aren't so graceful either when it comes to lots of things."

But their mainest point of contention is the way we femmes go about putting on a pair of gloves. It seems it drives them to some sort of jitters to watch a woman leave a building and begin skinning on a pair of kid gloves.

Regardless of the weather, they say, we walk along the street struggling to get all five fingers in one glove. Then, they complain, when we finally get the glove all smoothed on and look it over critically, we begin on the other.

During this space of time we are supposed to chatter aimlessly, obviously with mind on the glove and not their or our conversation. About half way to where we are going we begin work on the other hand.

By the time we arrive at our destination, we are finally gloved. But then so few people wear gloves indoors, they rave, we begin to take them off.

Well, girls, looks like they've got us there. Maybe we could get one on before they arrive and only spend half the way getting the other one on. We could try, that is if they promise some sort of a deal on the overcoat.

of the aid-to-Britain bill, said in a statement that he would support the appropriation.

Administration leaders, hopeful they could pass the bill without change and dispatch it by plane to President Roosevelt before night-fall, spoke confidently of a three-to-one majority.

Several senators who battled the original lease-lend program to the bitter end indicated they might vote with the majority and Senator Nye (R-Ind.), one of the program's consistent critics, foresaw only a "handful" of opposition votes.

The measure already has been passed by the house and approved unanimously by the senate appropriations committee. If the senate should approve it without change it could be flown to Mr. Roosevelt, who now is cruising in southern waters, for immediate signature.

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.), who led the senate fight against the original legislation authorizing all-out aid to Britain, told reporters he would not fight the $7,000,000,000 appropriation.

Although saying he had not decided finally how he would vote, Wheeler agreed with Nye that "there will be very few senators against it."

Hospital Inmate Found After Car, Supplies Taken

A former inmate of the Big Spring State Hospital was back under the care of doctors there Monday after officers effected recovery of a car and a large quantity of office supplies he thought were his.

O. C. White, negro, was credited with clearing up the case which involved the loss of a salesman's car and supplies. White, who told police he had gone to work for the man in Cisco as chauffeur last Thursday, became uneasy Sunday when his employer had not shown up for three days.

He went to police with his story, and checking with the sheriff's department, it was learned the car was missing. The man, authorities said, had been picked up by a salesman and later labored under the impression the car and its supplies were his.

Promising the negro a nice salary to drive the car, he came westward until he arrived in Big Spring. Then he remembered the hospital, caught the truck going out to it. Monday he was still there with prospects of remaining.

Balkans

neutral, Camp Britain appeared to be making seventh hour efforts to stave off her partnership in the axis. It was reliably reported in Cairo that the British minister to Belgrade had appealed to the government not to "betray" Yugoslavia in the face of rising public opinion.

(British press dispatches from Belgrade declared that Germany, seemingly assured that there would be no flank attack from Yugoslavia, was hitting heavy forces of her army in Bulgaria down the Struma river valley toward the Greek frontier.

(Hundreds of thousands of British troops were in Greece to bolster Greek resistance to any German thrust across the frontier. The start of the battle of the Balkans seemed to be drawing nearer by the hour.)

As the new ministers were being sworn in by orthodox priests, the vice chairman of the Serb peasant party, Milos Tujanjanin, presented a letter to Premier Cvetkovic containing the resignation of six more senators of his party.

Tujanjanin said the instant Yugoslavia signs the three-power pact Milan Gavrilovic, Yugoslavia's first minister to Moscow since the World war, would resign his post. He is expected to return and lead an opposition fight which anti-nazis announced early today would continue no matter what action the government took.

(Obviously any resistance after Yugoslavia becomes an axis partner would have to be directed from outside the country or very surreptitiously within her borders.)

R. O. Plunkett First To Solo

Raymond O. Plunkett, member of the current primary flight instruction group, became the first of his class to solo when he was given the go-ahead signal Sunday by J. D. Phillips, flying instructor at the Big Spring airport.

Phillips said Plunkett went up on his own after completing the minimum of eight hours dual flying as ordered by the CAA.

Nine people remain in the class who have not taken their solo tests, and of these three will likely go up alone for the first time, the latter part of this week if weather permits, Phillips said Monday morning.

Weather conditions have caused a slackening of air training activity at the airfield but flight instructors were expecting to clear the bill in short order with the prospect of more suitable flying days ahead.

Powell Creek Lake Catches Water Supply

City water department employees Monday prepared to shift back to lake water after pumping the municipal water supply from wells for little more than a week.

Reports from Frank Covart, city lake superintendent, Sunday told of four feet of water pouring into the Powell Creek reservoir, adding approximately 100,000,000 gallons to the surface supply.

The water came into the lake basin by way of the diversion channel from Devil's creek. Moss Creek lake received little additional water, hardly enough to measure. The Powell supply resulted from a late Saturday shower.

Meanwhile, reports of heavier rains along the northern county line were received here Monday. Akin Simpson said that fully an inch had fallen there in the space of 30 minutes Saturday, putting draws on a four foot rise. Hall accompanied the rain fall, which was spotted. Ed Brown, who lives in the Hwy area, said about an inch had fallen there.

Moreland Music Company Can Fill All Piano Needs

Music dealers are almost like prophets, finding it difficult at times to convince home folks that stocks are complete and offerings are of just as high quality as can be obtained anywhere in the nation.

John Moreland, owner of the Moreland Music Co., has found this to be a paradox in the operation of his business here—yet as a testimony to his line of merchandise, the city recently contracted for a nine-foot Baldwin concert grand piano.

CCC Observes 8th Anniversary

Civilian Conservation Camps, one of the first and most universal approved of the New Deal institutions, is observing its eighth anniversary from March 29 to April 17 with an "open house" during that period of time.

Mrs. Migonne Crunk, county welfare officer, called attention to the special observance in reminding young men that there still exists the opportunity of enrollment in the CCC.

Age requirements are 17 to 23-1-2 years and application must be to the county welfare office. The county's quota is dependent upon the number of applicants shown in the bi-monthly reports. Applicants do not necessarily have to come from indigent families, but they do have to demonstrate they are of good character.

During the open house period, organizations, officials and individuals are urged to inspect the camps and projects. CCC officials feel this is the surest way of showing the value of the work.

Must needs are readily filled at the Moreland store, for offerings include, among many other things, sheet music, book music for piano and instrumentalists, accordions, records, players, all types of string and band instruments, etc. Moreland also has a trained personnel to demonstrate merchandise.

Although the stocks are complete, if there is anything in a music line which a customer desires that is not on tap, Moreland has connections for getting it in a minimum of time. All recognized lines are available to patrons of the Moreland Music Co.

John Moreland has been in Big Spring for 11 years and for the past eight has been in the music business, operating his store at the corner of Rannels and E. 2nd.

He is steadily showing folks that what they can get here is just as good as can be obtained anywhere, for he is interested in building a local business. "This is our home and we intend to stay here," he said.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By EDDIE BRIEZE
NEW YORK, March 24 (AP)—Hot-temperament manager in the big today is Jimmy Johnston, Broadway's "boy bandit"... In four years, he has ballyhooed two of his meat tickets into three world title shots... And he has one—maybe two—more coming up... Abe Simon, who amazed nearly everyone with his game stand against Joe Louis last week, is assured of a return go... And there is talk that Bob Pastor, who came out of the boxing boneyard to upset Turkey Thompson on the coast, may get his third fling at Louis... If not, he'll get a chance to avenge last June's knockout by Billy Conn, which might draw even more than a Louis bout... Yes, if you know anybody sitting any prettier than the canny Mr. Johnston, we're willing to learn.

Naming race horses for cities and states is getting to be quite the thing... A bay burner named Kansas City has been doing all right in Florida... And one called Kansas was a two-time winner in select company at Santa Anita... Also, you'll recall Omaha and Johnston were red hot... So, if a nag named San Francisco comes through in the Kentucky Derby, don't say George Herrick of the San Diego Tribune-Sun didn't warn you.

The week's week... There is no established pitcher in either big league less than five feet, 11 inches tall... Henry Picard will play in only two golf tournaments this summer—the open and the P. G. A... Milo Theodorescu, who passed up a chance to fiddle in Carnegie Hall to fight Jerome Comforio in New Orleans, was a terrible flop down there... Anytime Ray Keenan, William and Mary pitcher, wants to talk turkey, he can get a $2,000 bonus for signing with the Athletics... Lawson Robertson, Penna track coach, has been invited to referee the Texas relays at Austin next month... Lou Novikoff did a Casey and fanned with the bases loaded the other day... As Sam Baker, his biographer, would say: "It happens once in a life time"... Sam has a swell piece on "The Mad Russian" in Esquire.

Denison Woman Wins Admiration Happiest Moment Contest Prize

Mrs. Tom Shipp, Jr., 805 East Morton street, Denison, winner of first prize of $100 in this week's Admiration Happiness contest and a chance at the $1,000 grand prize really believes there's "Happiness Ahead with Admiration." After being informed of her good fortune, Mrs. Shipp said:

"This was the first time in my life that I'd won a contest."
"Your 'Happiness Prize Certificates' are rightfully named, as they certainly will mean lots of happiness for me and my husband and baby."
"The certificates are creating lots of interest in the Admiration Happiness club. Every merchant I have given them to wants to know all about your contest and how they may enter. This is the best method I've ever seen for further advertising your fine product."
"I received my Happiness Club pin and Happiness Melody last Saturday and sincerely believe that your purpose in spreading happiness and good will is indeed great, as there are so many people in the world today that we can make life brighter for."
"My sincere thanks to you and the Duncan Coffee company for your generous prize and you can be sure that I'll continue to enjoy, as I have for several years, the fine flavor and quality of your Admiration Coffee."
Second prize winner was Mrs. Fred Noake, Uvalde, and third was Mrs. L. C. Fritz, Albuquerque, N. M.

Jameson Shares Honors In Tilt

NEW ORLEANS, March 24 (AP)—Betty Jameson of San Antonio and Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite of Fort Worth came from behind to give a Texas lacing yesterday to Patty Berg of Minneapolis and Mrs. Sam Israel, Jr., of New Orleans, 2 and 1, in an exhibition golf match for British war relief.

Miss Jameson, 1939 and 1940 national champion, dropped in the winning shots before a large gallery at the New Orleans country club after Mrs. Goldthwaite had launched their comeback with a birdie on the 10th hole.

Patty was brilliant with a 26 on the outgoing nine to give her team a one-up lead, but took 41 strokes on the home stretch while Miss Jameson needed only 37.

Fem Cager Campaigns For 8th All-America

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 24 (AP)—Mazel Crutcher Walker, star forward for the defending champion Little Rock, Ark., Flyers today begins her personal campaign to become an all-America basketball player for the eighth time.

A 24-hour program opens the 1941 National AAU women's tournament. The 15-game marathon being halted long enough to permit J. Lyman Bingham, executive AAU secretary of Chicago, to lead a parade of the athletic title.

The Flyers are seeded No. 1 in the five-day meet and are rated even stronger than last year. Lettie Jackson, a former all-America player who competed with the Galveston Anchos a year ago, now is with the second seeded Nashville, Tenn., six.

La. State Eleven On Fordham Card

BATON ROUGE, La., March 24 (AP)—Louisiana State will meet Fordham university at football in 1942 in New York City and again in 1943 either at Baton Rouge or in the east.

Athletic Director T. P. Heard, noting that the Tigers will play mighty Texas A. and M. also in those years, said additional games to be announced later would make the schedules the strongest in L. S. U. history. The 1942 game with Fordham will be played Nov. 6 in New York.

Fisk Boy Not To Have Face Painted Over

Reports to the contrary, the famous Fisk "Time-to-Retire" boy will not have his face lifted. The little fellow, known in more than 100 countries around the world, is 25 years old this year.

His new daddy, the United States Rubber company, who adopted him last year, noticed that time and various retouchers had left their marks on him and thought it might be a good idea to have a 1941 version created.

A number of artists of national repute were consulted but could not successfully capture the charm of the original.

The Fisk boy was created in 1907 by Burr Gibson, an 18-year-old advertising artist, who is now in the photographic business in New York.

Cleveland Indians Are Ready --

Feller And Colleagues To Be Team To Beat

PORT MYERS, Fla., March 24 (AP)—Roger Peckinpaugh's task may be hard enough anyway. So don't tell Cleveland fans that Roger said the Indians should be stronger than last year.

Tall Roger, brave enough to take another turn in the rough-riding Indian saddle (he fell out of it seven years ago), admits that winter trades have strengthened the Tribe. But after this burst of optimism he shifts to caution, perhaps realism, and asks:

"But what about the Yankees?"

"Everyone said the Yankees were lousy last year, that everything fell apart, but where did they finish? Yeah, third, just one game behind us and two behind the Detroit winners," he said.

"Well, where does that put us? Does that make us look like a great ball club, to be able to beat the lousy Yankees by a single game?"

"I believe we're better this year, more good players and improved spirit, but maybe those Yankees are going to be better, too."

Look Like Aces

On paper and off their record last year the Indians are the team to beat. Not many experts can see Detroit repeating and few rank the Red Sox or White Sox as serious contenders. The Yankees are a maybe team. But the Indians are primed.

They have pretty close to the best infield in baseball. Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack were sensations as freshmen last year and should be even better defensively. It is possible that their hitting may fall off for both slugged at a pace quite a bit better than their best minor league performances.

Keltner is a whiz at third and his bickery mark should improve. Hal Trosky is a fixture at first.

The outfield is improved. Gerald Walker, from Washington, should add some power. He knocked in 96 runs last year—more than anyone on the Tribe except Boudreau. Stocky little Roy Weatherly will be in centerfield with Roy Hall or Jeff Heath filling out the garden. Both Bell and Heath are capable of hitting much better than they did last year.

Gene Desautels, from Boston, will give Rollie Hemaley a hand with the catching.

Good Pitching

The Indians may have the best pitching staff in the league, headed by the top flinger of the majors, Bob Feller. Feller won 37 last year and may reach his predicted 50-mark in 1941. Al Milnar, the lanky left-hander who won 18, is being counted on for around that number. The veteran Mal Harder, 32-11 last year, is in better shape this spring than in several years and Peckinpaugh looks for him to have a great year.

Another lefty, Al Smith, copped 15 games a year ago and may do it again, although some figure he may wind up with half a dozen less triumphs.

Trades brought the Indians Joe Heving and Jim Bagby from Boston and big Clint Brown from the White Sox. Some regard Bagby as a good omen, for it was his father, the Old Sargeant, who pitched the Indians to their last pennant 21 years ago. "He's in marvelous shape," Peckinpaugh says. "He'll win a lot of games for us." Brown and Heving are slated for relief work.

Southpaw Harry Eisenstat will serve as a reliever. The status of the other pitchers still is in doubt. Joe Krakauskas, from Washington, has been wild this spring. Mike Nymick, from Wilkes-Barre, has a wrenched wrist. Other carry-overs from last season—Bill Zuber and Nate Andrews—haven't stood out in the early drills.

The best looking rookie is Dewey Adkins, a 6-foot-2, 190-pounder from Oklahoma City. He started pro ball last year, won 15 and lost eight for Pine Bluff and then won seven of eight for Rogers Hornsby's Oklahoma City club.

Temperatures are calm down here and the club spirit seems to be quite an improvement over last season's.

It is very likely that the Indians will go to the post as the American league favorites.

Dodgers Have Pennant Fever At Early Date

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 24 (AP)—Tanned by the Cuban sun and in great physical shape, the Brooklyn Dodgers right now are about the best looking outfit training in Florida—a lot better looking than the champion Cincinnati Reds.

It was to be expected that the MacPhail circus would get a head start, as it pitched its tent at Havana early and enjoyed much warmer weather than its rivals around here. But it is something more than that that the Dodgers have contracted pennant fever in the worst way, and they are almost swaggering in their confidence.

Paul Waner, staging a determined comeback, is in the best shape he has seen for many a season. He gained several pounds in Havana and is powdering the ball. He has clinched the right-field spot, and with Harold Reiser in center and Joe Medwick in left the Club has an outfield that commands respect.

"We'll win it if nothing happens to us in the way of serious injuries," declares Medwick.

"All we need to beat Cincinnati is for Luke Hamlin and Leo Casey to have as good seasons as they had last year," says Coach Chuck Dressen. "White Wyatt is pitching better than I even saw him. That knee of his is completely healed and I won't be surprised if he and Kirby Hirbe each wins 30 games."

President Larry MacPhail, determined that there shall be no mishap like last year's "beating" of Medwick to spoil his team's chances at the flag, has made it compulsory for his men to wear the new protective helmets at all times, and there is a $100 fine attached.

There is one faint cloud on the Brooklyn horizon; the illness of Catcher Babe Phelps. He still is at home with a case of sinus, despite the fact that doctors employed by MacPhail to examine him could not locate the difficulty.

Lamesa To Start Spring Training

April 1; Manager Scaling Says

Four Pre-Season Games Booked

LAMESA, March 24—Sam Scaling, manager of the Lamesa Lobos, is scheduled to return here Tuesday to swing into final preparations for opening of the baseball club's short spring training season on April 1. Scaling has been on a sweep through Texas league camps since last Tuesday with the idea of picking up material.

Before he left on his jaunt Tuesday, Scaling announced that he had lined up four exhibition matches and expected to get four more on the book before regular West Texas-New Mexico league affairs get under way. Lamesa will invade Clovis, N. M., April 6, and hold a return tussle April 13.

Big Spring Bombers and the Lobos will resume their annual battles April 9 in the Big Spring park and on April 15 the affair is slated to be continued on the Lamesa home grounds.

Scaling has had a minimum of holdout trouble but has yet to come to terms with Pitcher Carl Foree.

although a bit of dickering has been done.

Al Berndt, youthful Lobo catcher in 1941, is due to return to the lineup after being put out of operation last year because of injuries.

The club's plant is undergoing a fence-lifting job with the hope of increasing gate receipts—a strip of burlap is to be attached to the fence, thus adding five or six feet to the height of the knothole must scale.

Not Just Shenanigans—

Major Clubs' Spring Sessions Bring Rewards

(Associated Press)

There is a fairly common belief that baseball's annual spring training shenanigans are just a sham to ballyhoo the new season and that they serve no useful purpose so far as actually getting the clubs ready for competition.

It certainly is true that the training camps train the spotlight of public attention on the sport well in advance of the schedule opening, but the happenings in the sunshine some these days show beyond all doubt that the exhibition games are of great value.

What would happen if all the clubs started from scratch in the National and American leagues next month instead of getting steam up in the grapefruit circuit is ludicrous to imagine.

For instance the Philadelphia Athletics, cellar club of the American league, might scoot out in front like they have in the exhibition hilleries and the pennant-winning Detroit Tigers might start in the cellar, where they are at the moment.

The A's have won 15 out of 16 games against all the baseball talent concentrated in southern California and thus have a narrow advantage over the New York Yankees, who have won 15 out of 16 in Florida.

Already the grapefruit games have been worth their weight in gate receipts to the clubs.

They have shown that the Brooklyn Dodgers aren't as strong as they thought they were and sent President Larry MacPhail scurrying westward this very day, from Florida to California, to attempt to swing a deal with the Chicago Cubs for second baseman Billy Hertzman. The Dodgers went wild in winning their first four exhibitions, but since then have split even in a dozen games.

They have exposed the mad Russian, Lou Novikoff, as a rival of Dixie Dean as a circus sideshow with no main tent. He was the slugger who was going to lead the Cubs into championship contention again, but yesterday he couldn't hit the ball out of the infield, the day before he struck out with the bases loaded in the ninth and in most of his previous games he followed a similar script.

The Washington Senators were saved from establishing George Archie as their regular first baseman; the myth of Dick West as a possible first string catcher for Cincinnati's world champions was exploded; the New York Giants were given an opportunity to experiment with Hank Danning and to find out the true condition of Billy Jurges; the Yankees had time to train Joe Gordon in a first base dance routine; the Cardinals discovered pitcher John Grodzicki.

Spring Resume Rates Wolves' Gridders High

COLORADO CITY, March 24 (Sp)—Things were looking up for the Colorado City Wolves this week as far as their 1941 football season, which will be their first in AAA, is concerned.

Roy Allen, who starred at fullback on the Wolf team last season as they fought through to the regional single A championship, has decided to remain in high school another year, it was announced Saturday. Allen is a senior this year, but is eligible for another season in AA football. His home is at China Grove.

This brings to four the number of first-team lettermen who are due to play for Colorado City high next season, according to Coach John L. Dibrell. Two of the other three, James Paul Cooper and Harry Webber, are seniors who will be eligible for another season. Cooper played guard during the 1940 season, and Webber played right guard.

Halfback Royce Smith, the fourth returning first-team man, is eligible for three more years in AA football, although he will be a senior next year.

Three other lettermen will be returning, according to Dibrell, making a total of seven out of seven-teen who lettered during the season. The other three are Junior Sadler, Phynus Shurtieff and Chas. Seiler. Sadler played substitute fullback and Seiler played substitute tackle and center during the 1940 season, while Shurtieff played at halfback.

Guldahl Plays Here April 15

Definite plans for the match to be put on by Ralph Guldahl, one time national open golf champion, have been formulated by the Big Spring golf association.

According to the setup as now arranged, Guldahl will compete in a foursome at the Municipal course April 15. Harold Akey, Muny professional, and Shirley Robbins, manager of the Country Club plant, plus a player yet to be determined are scheduled to fill out the divotting quartet.

Before coming to Big Spring, Guldahl will display his wares in Greensboro and Asheville, N. C., and in Augusta, Ga., master events.

Oldsters Win Spotlight In AAU Meet

DENVER, March 24 (AP)—The youngsters enjoyed a fine fling in this year's National A. A. U. cage tournament, even though it took a trio of oldtimers who have played on two continents to show them how to win the championship.

The veteran triumvirate of Frank Lubin, Carl Knowles and Art Moliner robbed the younger set of practically a clean sweep by bringing in their Hollywood Twentieth Century team a 47-34 victor over San Francisco Olympic club captained by Angelo (Hank) Luisetti, in Saturday's championship game. Lubin, Knowles and Moliner played on the United States cage team at the Berlin Olympics in 1936.

Otherwise, young players stole most of the spotlight in the week-long marathon of 49 teams from 26 states.

The most astounding overthrow of the tournament was perpetrated by the Southern Methodist Mustangs, playing here as the Dallas Wilsons, who upset the twice-champion Denver A. A. U. club in the third round and became the youngest team to reach the quarterfinals.

The torrid goal shooting of two young players—Charley Boseman of Louisiana State and Guff Pattison—led the Shreveport, La., team to the quarterfinals, farther than any previous Dixie team had progressed in the seven years the meet has been here.

In beating the defending champion Phillips 66 Oilers in the semifinals, the Hollywood titholders relied on the accurate eye of their 21-year-old forward, Lester O'Gara.

Local Keglers Take 2nd Place In Lions Meet

Big Spring Lions club bowlers were enroute home today from Houston where they socked up second place in the organization's state bowling tournament.

In addition to team honors, Jake Douglass had been made vice-president of the State Lions Bowling association and Jack Smith had been placed on the board of directors.

"Big Spring has been assured virtually of the next state Lions bowling tournament," wired Douglass. Both previous tournaments were held at Houston.

On the local team are Douglass, Smith, Pete Howze, Ray Ogden, J. O. Vineyard and Gordon Steels.

County Needs Road Engineer

Whatever good effect the recent wet spell may have had on crops and ranges, it has had an immediate reverse effect upon the lateral road system of the county.

They were, in a couple of words, almost impassable and impossible. Of course, they will lend themselves easily to dragging and can be whipped back into shape; but rains and wind can always make trouble for dirt roads.

With the resources Howard county possesses, it ought to be planning on a system of paved key laterals so that no farmer or rancher would have to be more than a very few miles from a paved artery. The commissioners court has been looking in this direction, and it is to be hoped that such a program can be minimum of delay.

Since the first of the year the county has invested a considerable amount of funds in new road machinery—two heavy duty tractors and three new auto patrols or maintainers. These implements can be used handily in a permanent road building program as well as for maintaining dirt roads and accomplishing untold good in treading work.

Probably there will be several miles of paving undertaken by the court this year. Purchases of equipment may make necessary the delaying of some contemplated projects for financial reasons, but in the long run this should expedite the program of building.

To our mind, one of the greatest boons that could be found to increase the rate of operation on an efficient and economical basis would be the hiring of a county road engineer. Competent supervision is needed for such a major program, therefore it is to be hoped that the court soon will seriously consider the appointment of a trained man to fill this vacancy.

Aloop And Kintner—American Ports Will Become British Ships' Home Bases

WASHINGTON, March 24—In the days before he left for his vacation, the president gave every available minute to studying how best to meet the German air and submarine threat to Britain's shipping life-lines, conferring repeatedly about it with Lord Halifax, Harry L. Hopkins and the chairman of the Maritime Commission, Admiral Emory S. Land. He took with him aboard his cruiser a thick pile of memoranda on the subject. And on his return, when he will have had time to make up his mind, there will be important developments in the shipping situation.

Meanwhile, at least one big step has already been resolved on. Plans have been made to extend to merchant shipping the principle in the lease-lend bill, under which damaged British war vessels are to be received in American naval shipyards. New York, Baltimore and perhaps other suitable Atlantic coast cities are to be transformed into great marine depots for Britain, where the battered freighters of the convoys may be repaired, re-fitted, fueled and generally put in shape again for their dangerous task.

Insofar as possible, all the work on the British ships that would normally be done at home will now be done on this side of the Atlantic. The major home ports of the British merchant marine will soon be in the United States.

Expanding Incinerators

The reason for this is to be found in the deep concern of the authorities here over the problem of Britain's west coast ports, which has lately worried our strategists even more than the problem of the Balkans. If the Germans win a victory in the Balkans, it will be bad. But if the Germans succeed in closing Glasgow, Liverpool, Bristol, Cardiff and Swansea, it will be disastrous.

For with the North Sea and Channel now too dangerous for Britain's convoys, the five ports on the west coast are the problem through which Britain gets supplies from the outside world, and sends supplies to her armies in the Mediterranean.

In the past ten days, the west coast ports have been the most threatened objectives of the intensified German air attack that marks the beginning of the new war crisis. The raids on them are the first, and perhaps the most dangerous phase of the German effort to cut off Britain from this country and the empire. And the raids have been terrible.

They have been carried out by the new German four-engine heavy bombers, the Focke-Wulf Curriers, production of which in quantity is now believed to have the purpose of the German air factory re-tooling in November and December. The Focke-Wulfs have far longer range and much greater bomb-carrying capacity than the Dorniers, Junkers and other medium bombers chiefly used by the Germans last summer.

Because of their range, they can take off from their bases on the French coast, circle out beyond the British Isles, and thus in from the far west over the sea, even at Glasgow in the far north. Thus interception is much more difficult.

With their greater bomb-carrying capacity, using the new German incendiary which also explodes and so hampers civilian fire-fighting, they do worse damage. Finally, they are able to fly at an altitude beyond the reach of the British anti-aircraft guns.

The Turn-Around

The news reports have told part of the story of the destruction wrought by the raids. The bombing has been so serious that in one case, temporary evacuation of more than 100,000 people was necessary. Fortunately, however, even after the grim experience of the last days, most American and British experts are convinced that the west coast ports cannot be wholly closed.

The main thing, therefore, is to reduce the strain on the ports as much as possible; and this is the purpose of the president's plan-outlined above. A port's usefulness is measured by the number of ships it can handle in a given time. The time required for the "turn-around" of a ship is quite as important as the number of docks, since a port can handle three times as many ships if the average freighter takes a week to come in, be unloaded, and prepare to put out to sea again, than if it takes three weeks.

Using New York and Baltimore as home ports, the British convoys need only unload and re-load at Liverpool and Glasgow, saving the long time normally required for the work that will now be done here, and thus making the "turn-around" far quicker.

In order to speed up the truncated "turn-around" still further, British Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin has recently mobilized the British dockworkers to improve unloading and re-loading methods. Then too, the west coast ports are to be permanently relieved of all superfluous civilian population, and inland transport is being re-planned so that goods pass through the ports more rapidly, and run less risk of destruction in the dock warehouses. Finally, the British night fighter force, to which the Focke-Wulfs are not invulnerable, is constantly being increased, and the bottleneck of personnel to work the secret night pursuit device is on the way to be removed.

In short the problem of the west coast ports, like most other major war problems, seems to be proving insoluble but not insurmountable. Copyright, 1941, N Y Tribune, Inc.

Hollywood—Newest Latin American Show Is Entertaining

HOLLYWOOD—"That Night in Rio." Screenplay by George Seaton, Best Meredith and Hal Long, additional dialogue by Samuel Hoffenstein, from play by Rudolph Lothar and Hans Adler. Directed by Irving Cummings. Principals: Alice Fay, Don Ameche, Carmen Miranda, S. Z. Sakall, J. Carroll Nash, Curt Bois, Leonid Kinsley, Carmen Miranda's orchestra.

Tuneful, gaudily brilliant in color, longer on plot than its predecessors in the bidding for South American favor, "That Night in Rio" looks like a winner north and south of the Equator.

Unlike "Down Argentine Way," which offended its locale in several respects, the new film seems to be free of diplomatic faux pas—unless Brazilians are taking offense nowadays at the suggestion that Latins are NOT lousy lovers.

The plot is reminiscent of the old 20th Century film, "Folies Bergere," done with Maurice Chevalier and Constance Bennett, but has implications of the Lunt-Fontanne piece, "The Guardsman," though decidedly without the latter's subtlety.

Ameche plays a dual role—the North American entertainer and the suave Brazilian socialite he impersonates. The entertainer is married to explosive Miranda, the socialite to Alice Fay. When a big business deal involving the Brazilian's oilfields arises, the case singer is pressed into service to impersonate him for an evening with the usual mistaken identity complications extending into the private lives of all—and going as far as the movie code allows. Not very far, but far enough.

Miranda, singing, dancing and playing the tempestuous hell-cat, has enough liveliness and tropical allure to imbue the proceedings with vigor even if Ameche, Fay and the others were slack, which they aren't. Ameche, in fact, is excellent in both his roles, and Miss Fay, singing again, is a treat in color.

The emphasis is mostly on music, dancing and comedy, making the film passing fair in the light entertainment division.

"Rage in Heaven." Screenplay by Christopher Isherwood and Robert Theoren from the novel by James Hilton. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke II. Principals: Robert Montgomery, Ingrid Bergman, George Sanders, Lucile Watson, Oscar Homolka, Philip Merivale.

Unless you'd prefer to skip insanity in your dramatic fare, here's a corker from Montgomery's growing screen album of psychopaths—"Night Must Fall" and "The Earl of Chicago."

He plays here a paranoiac—a "normal" appearing fellow who behaves pleasantly until jealousy loosens his mental screws.

What sets him off is his imagined fear that his best friend (Bergman) is stealing the love of his wife (Montgomery). Complicating his condition is his failure to cope with business life, leading him to imagine that the whole world is against him.

In jealousy he does away with the kitten cherished by his wife, a present from his imagined rival; he schemes constantly to throw friend and wife together in order to confirm his suspicions; he attempts to murder his friend and then his wife; finally he carries out a diabolical scheme for revenge.

Up to this point, thanks to the interesting characterization of the star and the persuasive work of Bergman and Sanders, "Rage in Heaven" is an engrossing though morbid study. The rest, involving a sort of call-the-martins chase to save Sanders from the death penalty, is anti-climactic.

Chapter 25

Lovely was charmed and fascinated by Getta as the baby was called. She was a sweet and beautiful miracle for the girl to whom life had suddenly turned such a kind and generous face. Lovely was, in many ways a surprisingly good mother. Her new position seemed to bring to life within her even greater tenderness for helping and less creatures. Respect and love for her grew like a well rooted tree in the Cosgrove family.

It was Getta's first Thanksgiving that Aunt Amalia claimed. She had lost her heart to the child.

"I want her Thanksgivings," Amalia said. "Surely you can grant me that much."

And so it was to be a big family dinner at Amalia's that first Thanksgiving of little Getta's life. A strangely assorted family, Marcia and Kar, Roger, the two women who loved him and the daughter one had given him.

And it was that Thanksgiving Katie chose for her wedding to Bill Stark.

Katie wrote: "It's to be a quiet wedding. Just the families—mine, that is, because Bill hasn't any. But you're 'family,' Lovely. I won't feel married if you and Roger aren't with us."

"Oh, Roger, we must do something grand for them!" Lovely looked up to say.

"We surely will. Anything you want darling."

"I'll go down and shop today and we'll take it along with us."

Roger looked at her doubtfully. "You can give Katie anything you want, dear, but I don't see how we can go. We've already accepted Aunt Amalia's invitation."

"But she's only family. Can't you tell her what this is?"

"I'm afraid that wouldn't do," Roger smiled whimsically. He had a vision of proper little Aunt Amalia trying to understand such lack of social responsibility.

Lovely started at him. "But Roger, it's a wedding, the thing you do only once in a life time. And Katie is my best friend, has been for years."

"Yes, darling, but Aunt Amalia is our aunt and elderly and she's honored us with an invitation to an important dinner. All of her dinners are important, you know. She never does things by halves. And we've accepted and she's gone on with her plans. And those plans are chiefly for and because of our little daughter."

"Oh, Roger, you're being stuffy!"

"I don't mean to be, honey, but I don't see how we can let Aunt Amalia down. We can write Katie, and send her the loveliest gift we can find."

"But Roger, I want to be there!"

Impetuously.

"I wish we could but I don't see

With Basic Training Period Near End—36th Division Begins Advanced Drills

CAMP BOWIE, March 22. (AP)—Driving their trucks and guns into mountainous spots a self-respecting goat would avoid and deliberately maneuvering into mudholes is a part of the rigorous training artillerymen of the 36th division are getting these days.

The idea is not only to drive in, but to drive out with a minimum delay.

The 131st, 132nd and 133rd field artillery regiments have completed the first phase of their firing practice on the 25,000-acre range and are now in the midst of what the army calls "service practice."

Meanwhile, it's school days for all the officers and men of the 36th, with troops learning the business of war in detail. The schedule includes everything from close order drill to taking aerial photographs and repairing precision instruments.

To a soldier at Camp Bowie school doesn't mean sitting in a classroom listening to the theory of his particular arm or service. There's some classroom work, but school also means getting out and drilling, marching, firing guns, and building bridges.

The 36th is deep into its 13-week basic mobilization training program. Practically all of the instruction in this program is by smaller units—squads and platoons. Training by larger units, regiments, brigades, even by the entire division, will come during the next phase of training, the combined arms training program.

The four infantry regiments of the 36th have completed firing on the rifle, machine gun and automatic pistol ranges—known in the army as the "known distance ranges"—and are moving on to the 8,000-acre infantry combat range south of the camp.

On the known distance target ranges the soldiers fire at regulation targets at fixed distances. In the combat area they simulate shooting under enemy fire, seeking cover and firing from it. Targets in the shape of the silhouettes of a man's head and shoulders are scattered over the range, and there are surprise targets which may be raised suddenly by range officers.

The 11th engineers, 11th quartermaster regiment and 11th cavalry have been getting practice with 30 caliber rifles, 45 caliber automatic pistols, light and heavy machine guns, and 50 caliber machine guns.

Engineers are troops and in addition to fighters for their own protection, may be called upon to fight as infantry reserves. Quartermaster soldiers may be required to defend their own columns, hence their combat practice.

The basic training of the 11th engineers has included construction of bridges—and their destruction by use of high explosives—hasty entrenchments, camouflage work, road maintenance and other activities.

The 11th quartermaster regiment hasn't had to go to school to learn what it's supposed to do. Already the quartermaster regiment has conveyed the 36th division to Camp Bowie when the division was mobilized, and it played an important part in the movement of the 45th division from Fort Sill, Okla., to Camp Barkeley.

Special troops of the division—military police, the 36th ordnance company, 36th signal company, and 36th headquarters company—daily get practice in their particular activity.

The military police company is engaged in police work, controlling traffic inside the reservation, taking care of lawbreakers, and cooperating with Brownwood and Brown county law enforcement officers.

Among other work the 36th signal company is engaged in ground liaison, message center operation, installation of field and other telephone lines.

The ordnance company is actively engaged in the repair of the arms of the division. Experts in this company repair every type weapon from 155-millimeter howitzers to pistols. The mobile repair shop of the ordnance unit follows troops to the firing ranges for prompt repair of the weapons of the 36th.

The 11th Iowa cavalry is well along in its thirteen-week basic training program. Cavalrymen, now on the known distance target ranges, have made several overnight bivouacs into the Camp Bowie maneuver area. They are also attending motor maintenance, communications, and other schools.

At the Brownwood municipal airport the 11th observation squadron is continuing training work started while the squadron was stationed at Houston. Their work includes photographic and reconnaissance flights, low-target work, classes in photography, communications, and motor repair work.

Manhattan—New York Shop Has Fascinating Display Of Arms

NEW YORK—It was good "duck" weather in Manhattan, with little sun and low, fast-flying clouds skimming the skyscraper spires, just the day for the sort of excursion I had in mind. So I got into a cab and went down to 501 Broadway, and for the next two or three hours I wandered through a maze of ancient, fascinating firearms—each with a history and a story to tell if it could only talk.

This is the dark-facaded, dimly lit, dusty establishment of Francis Bannerman Sons—dealers in military goods since 1865. After wars they buy up at auctions left-over guns, sabres, pistols, uniforms, and the trampled, discarded baggage of battle.

I saw a pair of German fulminating duelling pistols in a case, priced at $465. There were British flintlock pieces, ancient cross-bows such as were at Hastings, flintlock rampart guns; long, black muzzle-loading rifles used at Green Mountain; Civil war cannon, saddles, sabres, six-shooters (cap and ball), bridles, canteens, cartridge belts.

I bought a cracked blackened (with ash and dirt) holster for a Colt-44 for $1.50. "You're not buying a holster," the man who waited on me said. "You're buying a relic."

If you know anything about guns, or merely if you like guns, you cannot imagine the satisfaction that comes with actually picking up and handling those ancient flintlock rifles that were shot off clouds of black smoke as well as shot and which played their parts in the desperate birth of this country.

In one corner were "30 pounders"—Parrot muzzle-loading rifle cannon used by the U. S. navy 75 years ago. . . . There was 8-inch smooth bore from the U. S. Frigate Walbach. These 8-inch cannon weigh 6,500 pounds and were used in blockading southern ports during the Civil War.

There were bows and arrows from the savage tribes of the Congo, Turkish daggers, Oriental blades and weapons of every description, and one tiny little hand-pistol, found in China and perhaps one of the first pistols ever made, with

Story

York City. And Roger went to Amalia's dinner.

"Well," Amalia said drily, as he stood for a moment with her before the others arrived, "she's your wife." And Roger was reminded of the time she had said: "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

Roger had Getta with him. When Emily arrived with his mother and father she took charge of the little girl. Getta took to Emily just as all of the rest of the Cosgraves had. And Emily adored the child.

"She should be yours, Emily," Aunt Amalia said tartly, pausing beside them for a moment. "That she isn't, is one of the saddest ironies life could offer."

"I'm sure Roger is happy, Aunt Amalia, happier than I could ever have made him," Emily said quietly, but she didn't look up at the older woman and Amalia knew why.

Dinner was pleasant; it seemed to Roger his family had never been so much a unit since his wedding. And Emily rode home with him, holding the sleeping Getta in her arms. They went to the nursery together and put the child to bed.

"I'll take you to the station now," Roger said to Emily. He looked at her with peculiar intensity. It didn't seem right that gentle fragile Emily should be starting back to New York at such an hour. Her back was to the nursery door. She turned sharply and then looked back at him smiling.

"Better let me call a taxi," she said.

"Why?" Roger asked.

"Lovely might come and find you were not here."

"It would be too bad if my love for my wife could make a weakness of me."

Lovely was not in the house when Roger and Emily arrived but when he went to their room a moment before starting with Emily she was sitting there, a book in her hand.

Roger paused. "Lovely! I didn't know you were here!" A glad note was in his voice, a sudden warmth in his heart.

"You and Emily were busy with Getta. I didn't want to disturb you."

"I'm taking Emily to the train," Roger said, rather awkwardly. It was a difficult situation somehow, though nothing had been said that might indicate it.

"Was Lovely home?" Emily asked as they rode down the hill through the deep tranquility of the night.

"Yes, but why did you ask. How did you know?"

"I felt—" Emily started to say. "I thought once while we were in Getta's room I felt her looking at us. When I turned there was no one. But I just had the feeling—"

She did not finish, and they rode the rest of the way in silence.

But, Roger thought, Lovely was like that. You could feel her. There was something electric about her. Roger remembered it the first time he had ever looked at her. It had reached out to him then.

Unfair Competition

"You came right back," Lovely said when he re-entered their room.

"Yes," he said quietly. He was thinking.

"What do you mean?" Turning to her quickly, his tie in his hand.

"Emily's all right."

"Yes, that's just the trouble. She's too much all right. Emily's perfect, that's what she is."

"I don't understand!"

"Well," Lovely spoke thoughtfully. "She's unfair competition. I mean she's so good and so square you can't do anything about her. Now if it had been me tonight and I got that kind of a chance at you, loving you the way she does, you'd never have gotten back from me so quickly—if ever at all. Then I could fight with you about her when you did come. See what I mean?"

"Perhaps I do." Roger was sitting down, quietly taking off his shoes. He thought he did understand what Lovely was trying to get at.

"And as it is there's just nothing I can do. She's so fair and so right all the time I can't even hate her and call her names for being the other woman in your life. And Roger," she paused and looked at him long. "I am horribly jealous of her. Horribly." Her voice was low and tender.

"You, Lovely? Jealous of Emily?" As if he was startled that such an idea could ever have occurred to her.

"Oh, Roger!" She was up swiftly and across the room on her knees in front of him, in his arms held close against his heart.

"Lovely! Lovely!" His cheek against her bright hair; his voice weighted with emotion. "I was miserable today without you! Miserable!"

"And I, darling! She clung to him with something like madness in her arms and lips. "I should have known. Katie and Bill had each other. There wasn't a reason in the world for my being there. I should have gone with you. A woman always belongs with her man. Oh, Roger, I love you! Love you! Love you!" He realized only then how lonely he had been all afternoon and evening.

Winter was throwing its chill, dull gray mantle over the hills of Westchester. The Hudson was cold and dark between its banks and planes were silhouetted against the sky above it. And Roger, always interested in flying, turned to it seriously. But Sunday remained a day of reunion for the Cosgraves family.

And on this afternoon Win Ramsey was in the kennels working with the dogs he hoped would star at the big February show in Madison Square Garden. Lovely was there with him. When she came back to the house at dusk Roger smelled liquor on her breath, as she bent over Getta in the room Marela had fitted as a nursery.

"Well, what's wrong with that?" she asked. "You were in here with Win. I was out there with Win. So what, darling?"

"Emily isn't in this, Lovely," Roger said quietly.

"Oh, she isn't!" with irony. "Emily isn't in it!"

There was a faint gasp, a sound as of surprise and then for the first time Lovely was aware of a third grown-up in the room. Emily got up quietly and faced Lovely.

"I'm sorry," Emily said. "I'm sorry. I haven't thought—"

These three pilots are symbols of our three spheres of air-service—Army, Navy and Air Lines . . . All three are vital auxiliaries of one another . . . Each service needs pilots, planes and equipment . . . Each is being strengthened to the limit.

The Army

The Navy

The Air Lines

National Defense and The Air Lines

NATIONAL DEFENSE overshadows all other responsibilities. All else may be futile without the attainment of that objective.

The welfare of the individual citizen or the individual business is not dissoluble from the welfare of the nation.

We must have combat airpower. You recognize the need for that. But victory cannot come from supremacy at the military front alone.

Right here, in the arsenal of democracy, an important battle is being waged—the battle of the home front: production. Men, metals and machinery are of urgent importance. But more important is TIME.

The tempo of national defense is attuned to the speed of the airplane. An increasing number of persons engaged in national defense undertakings must schedule their work according to the time-saving advantages of air transportation.

It is self-evident that the importance of air transportation increases in ratio to the need for it. Men must travel by air;—delivery of materiel must be expedited by air express;—communication must be accelerated by air mail.

It follows logically that the air lines will receive the aid of the government—in personnel, aircraft and materiel—not only to maintain the high standards of yesterday but actually to exceed them.

The effective operation of the air lines is a "must" in our government today. Resources have been charted, requirements of the Army, the Navy and the air lines have been weighed and proper allocation is being provided for the balance necessary for maximum effectiveness in this period of crisis.

ALL THREE WILL BE MAINTAINED AT TOP NOTCH EFFICIENCY.

With personal pride you look upon the Army and the Navy as your Army and your Navy. Now it's your air lines, too!

By the same token, your air lines have the compelling necessity to deserve an even greater public confidence.

There will be a world after the war and there will be generations after our own. We cannot plan for today alone.

Priceless as combat planes are for defense, they protect but do not create national wealth.

But the transport planes of the air lines do aid in the creation of national wealth, by expediting modern commerce between cities and between nations.

The accelerated tempo of today will be carried over to the period which will follow. Military warfare will be replaced by economic rivalry.

The airplane is dominating the military effort of today; it will dominate the economic effort of tomorrow. The "old days" of slower tempo have gone over the horizon . . . and they will not come back to us.

The pressure of war has hastened immeasurably the design of more effective aircraft. Production has been increased manifold. Pilots, mechanics and other skilled technicians are being trained by increasing thousands.

We shall not want, after the war is over, to close the doors of our engine and airplane factories, nor to lose the experience of those men skilled in the design, construction and operation of aircraft. These things we have worked for, bought and paid for. We have the requirement that they continue to be utilized in the national interest.

The world of tomorrow will be a world of the airplane. Distances have forever lost their old meanings. Africa will be our next-door neighbor. Europe will be but hours away.

First things first. National defense overshadows all other requirements now. But in our responsibility to concentrate upon the requirements of today, let us permit some measure of time for the plans of tomorrow.

After the war is over, the air lines of the United States must continue to lead the world in utility and effectiveness and the American flag must fly over the oceans of the earth.

It is largely to aviation that we must look for our security and our leadership in world affairs FROM NOW ON.
