As the county has a population of 8,004, this indicates approximately 1 1/2 books to each inhabitant, not taking into consideration the fact that often several members of a family read the same book. Nor does it make allowance for the small children who cannot read. However, a number of parents or older brothers or sisters are checking out the picture books, fairy stories, and nursery tales the library provides for its youngest patrons.

PSYCHOLOGY OF FARMING

In his speech declaring that government dictation to farmers cannot endure, Owen D. Young touched on one aspect of the farm problem which is not often discussed. "If there is one thing sacred to the farmer," he said, "it is the freedom of action or inaction which no other occupation knows. It is one of his great compensations. He accepts no man as his boss, neither an employer nor an agricultural leader."

How far this may apply to present AAA programs may be open to question; but Mr. Young undoubtedly did put his finger on something of great psychological importance—the fact that the American farmer finds in his occupation not only a means of earning a living, but a way of life.

Farming, that is, has compensations of its own which never show up on the ledger at the end of the year. Any farm plan which is to be of lasting value must make full recognition of the fact.

WITH BEST OF WISHES

Just what luck President Roosevelt's new textile strike mediation board is going to have is something for the seventh son of a seventh son to predict. Certainly the great mass of Americans—including, no doubt, strikers and employers as well as general public—will wish the board all the luck in the world.

In a strike as extensive as this textile walkout, the original issues are inevitably overshadowed by the displacement which the strike itself produces in the fields of business and industry.

When such a strike continues for any length of time, a point is soon reached at which the public's desire to see the strike ended must be dominant.

We are hopefully expecting an autumn revival in business. Continuance of the textile strike cannot fail to have a bad effect on that revival.

It is to be hoped that the new board will find some way of effecting a settlement.

Justice is becoming too deep to fathom. A Jersey City barber who stabbed a crooner was ruled insane, while the crooner escaped with no penalty.

linity or femininity of the man. Many an innocent looking, agreeable acting, Milquetoast man will be a he-wildcat when you get him riled. Don't judge a man's masculinity by the fit of his pants or the gloss of his hair.

Even some of these West Texas deputies can give testimonials in flat connection.

They keep putting off that East-West polo match because of a wet field. If I'm right it's the East which insists on putting it off. They hope to beat the west because of faster and lighter handling mounts, and are laying off of the muddy field, but I believe they have a surprise in store for them. The West mounts may be faster and lighter handling.

In some localities the clothing merchants are rejoicing that the nudist season is practically over.

Some of the local cleaners are anxious for a norther, to get some of these men started to wearing their coats. One proprietor of a cleaning shop remarked that he hadn't seen as many pants in his life as he had seen this summer, but his employees had almost forgotten how to press a coat.

SOCIETY

FEMININE FANCIES

BY KATHLEEN EILAND

Fall days have a way of making a gypsy out of a person who is usually perfectly prim and proper. Perhaps that is why the woody browns and wines and golds of fall dresses are so attractive.

One thing about being a woman is that you don't have to explain your inconsistencies. People expect you to have 'em.

We saw a clever style conceit on a dress in a downtown store. The buttons down the front were of different colors to match the colors in the dress. Not such a bad idea.

We're glad Mrs. Hensarling gave a demonstration on making plum punch the other day. Lots of women will welcome something other than ice tea and lemonade to serve on sweltering days.

In a world that sometimes seems intent on reaching the ultimate in sophistication, the dresses of the high school girls on the first morning of the school term struck a reassuring and refreshing note. They were so simple, so neat, and so right for the occasion.

Speaking of something different in the way of entrees, have you tried using a nice thick slice of ripe tomato with a section of orange and a bit of salad dressing atop it?

There is just one more improvement that should be made in this lady's face powder. My kingdom to the person who invents a powder so home-loving that it won't spill out of the box at every chance.

It must be the adventurous spirit of fall but even the whistle of a freight train can make you loathe for the far trails these cool mornings.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT... AS IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN! AFTER THE MONUMENT HAD STOOD UNFINISHED FOR MANY YEARS, MOTIONS WERE MADE THAT IT BE LEFT AT THE HEIGHT OF 150 FEET, AND THAT A FIRE BE KEPT BURNING ATOP THE SHAFT THROUGHOUT THE CENTURIES TO COME.

THE SHORTEST KNOWN WAR IN HISTORY WAS THAT DECLARED BY THE SULTAN OF ZANZIBAR, AGAINST GREAT BRITAIN! IT LASTED BUT FORTY MINUTES.

City Will Have to 'Blow up' Its Dropped Paving

SAN ANGELO—It's a mystery the best engineers in the nation haven't solved. It has caused the city fathers a bit of worry and has irked owners of abutting property and motorists bumped about in their autos even more. This "it" is the settling of the sub-soil under concrete paving in south and west Angelo. There are a half dozen instances of such unexplained settling in the city's streets at this time. Before the maintenance contract of L. E. Whitman & Company ran out, two places where the pavement had settled were "fixed" with new concrete. The pavement looked fine for a while and then it settled again. This settling of the paving is through no definite fault of the contractor as official specifications were complied with and the pavement "fell" nevertheless, according to J. P. Burden, city engineer. The paving usually falls in sections; it does not split or break up. The highway department has "blown up" many miles of concrete highway in this county. The "blowing up" consists of forcing a paste composed of dirt and cement in under the paving, getting the section to "float" and then solidifying the sub-level when the section is at the desired level. The city will have to adopt a like procedure in mending the drops in its concrete paving. Somewhat similar settlements in macadam or other asphalt topped paving have been remedied easily as the sinkings are not in whole sections and a strip of the asphalt-gravel topping usually will get the "raising" done. Whitman's maintenance agreements all have run their course except for that on Pulliam street, according to Burden. Whitman, who had headquarters in Wichita Falls, did most of the concrete paving that has been done in San Angelo. Most of the maintaining consists of caring for the "fines" between the sections of concrete paving. Hot weather "brings out the tar," melting it and causing it to be carried away. All glass used in the manufacture of glass eyes comes from Lauenburg, Germany, and only three descendants of Ludwig Muller-Uhl know the process by which it is made. He discovered the secret in 1835 and it has been kept in the family ever since. Snakes are not afraid to crawl over a rope, as many people believe. Cotton growing in India dates back further than written history.

CONTRACT FOR LIGHTING LACKEY FIELD AWARDED HERE TUESDAY

INSTALLATION PROMISED IN TIME FOR FIRST HOME GAME; SCHEDULE FOR BULLDOGS SLIGHTLY CHANGED

Contract for installation of lights at Lackey field, to make possible the playing of night football games, was awarded late Tuesday by the High School Athletic association to H. N. Phillips, local electrical contractor. With Phillips on the job will be J. M. Connor, head of the Connor Electric company here.

Contract for the equipment was awarded the General Electric Supply company. It was announced this morning that the field will be lighted in time for the first home game, either Sept. 23 or 29, probably with Port Stockton.

The decision to light the field was made because of the belief that gate receipts would be increased sufficiently to defray the cost, officials said, and would make possible the attendance at games of store employees and business men who can attend only a few of the daytime games.

Statistics show that where lighted fields have been installed the receipts have increased by one third or more, according to a member of the athletic committee. It was believed that interest in the game would be increased proportionately here.

On October 5 the Colorado Wolves will be played here instead of Rankin as previously announced. Big Lake will come here for a game October 12.

Oil Company Men At B' Spring Meet

Magnolia Petroleum company representatives from Midland attended the monthly meeting of the Magnolia club at Big Spring Tuesday night. A banquet at the Crawford hotel was the scene of a program and business session.

In the group from here were Rufus Parks, secretary of the club, Fred Wemple, Art Fonder, Buster Howard, Herbert King, Calvin Manning and Oscar Watlington, and Gene Parks of Stanton.

The next meeting will be held at Odessa. The club was organized a month ago at Sweetwater. A. Glenn and A. L. Rogers of Sweetwater are present and vice president of the club.

STAPLE REPORT FOR WEEK

The report released by the United States department of agriculture at Austin, Texas, giving the quality of cotton ginned in Louisiana this week shows a sharp reduction in the proportion of extra white good middling grades as compared with last week's report on same grades. The same statement might be made about extra white strict middling grades. The greatest change in grades was a shifting of percentage of extra white grades to white grades with about 30 per cent middling and above. The percentage of spotted cotton was not greatly changed. The changes in grades seemed to be general over the state. There were only two noticeable changes in the percentages of staple length this week from last week for the state. First, about one-fourth of the cotton classed this week is 7/8 inch. Second there is only about 11 per cent of the cotton classed which is 1-1/16 and 1-3/32 inch long. An improvement in staple lengths this week is noticeable in sandy coastal plains. The first report issued on the quality of the cotton produced in Louisiana east of the Mississippi river shows about one-half to be 7/8 inch long and one-fifth to be 15/16 inch. The total tenderable cotton this week in Louisiana is about 88.9 per cent.

LAMESA GETS LIGHTED GRID

LAMESA, Sept. 18. (P)—Playing their first game under the bright lights the Golden Tornadoes will meet the Snyder Tigers here Friday night at 7:45 in a dedication of the football field which local athletic association has just completed. The season opens with this game.

The Tigers in a hard game Friday took the Slaton boys into camp and will thus have the advantage over the locals by having played a strong outfit and by having one game ahead for the season.

The Tornadoes have lost some of their strong men from last year and will face the Tigers here Friday night with an almost green outfit. Coach J. T. McCollum has been busy with 40 candidates the past week.

Among those who are best to this year's team are: Fleshy Wilkes, half; Slim Britt, end; Red Grisham, center; Judge Smith, tackle; Jim Smith and Ralph Jordan, guards.

At least 1500 people are expected to witness the game Friday night on the new field. A large number of fans from Snyder are expected.

Paris and of being enticed by gossamer creations in spending more than she could afford, added to her confusion. Then came the bitter realization that her supply of money was almost gone; but she was immensely happy, and determined to obtain a musical education at any cost.

Lilly, city of true Bohemians, operatic capitol of the world. Without creating a ripple in the calm of that beautiful cosmopolitan city, Mary drifted along, following her three-storied, creaky-built house that she soon called home. Approached by a quaint cobblestoned courtyard, "Villa Frappazini" was the abode of many impoverished vocal and instrumental musical students who practiced from dawn to dusk. The dirge of conglomeration notes drove all but she initiated away from its environs.

Standing by the open window, Mary softly rehearsed a difficult aria from "Traviata" while Muriel, her roommate, painted on a partly completed canvas. Irritated by the noise, Muriel flung her brush aside and called to Mary, "For Pete's sake, close that window!"

"You said you wanted some air," Mary replied. "Suffocating's a pleasure compared with that babble of noise! Can't you do something about it?"

Mary grinned at her roommate's question and decided to experiment. Leaning out of the window, she started to sing the aria in a full, rich soprano with sweeping operatic cadences. A young man, who was the first floor peered up at her smilingly and started the accompaniment of the aria. An amused harpist, who was sitting at the piano, entered the ensemble and soon the entire group united in providing an orchestral accompaniment.

Maestro Galuppi, Mary's voice teacher, came puffing into the room and listened admiringly as the song concluded. The musicians demonstrated their approval by applauding loudly and the violinist tossed her a bunch of carrots with a grand flourish while Mary leaned out of the window, courtesying with mock grandeur.

"Ah, you are magnificent and I have heard great news," excitedly declared Galuppi, embracing Mary. "I have got for you a place in the chorus of La Scala!"

"Dear mad old fellow," Mary exclaimed, "I have just been told that I am to be given in a few minutes to a young man named Mr. Barrett, Tennessee, had to offer, finished her song and nervously stepped away from the microphone. Her voice was beautiful, but marred by inexperience in its proper use. She had not yet learned to sing without apparent effort.

"Very nice," the announcer whispered reassuringly as he escorted her to the ante room. "Just wait out here. The judges' decision will be given in a few minutes."

Mary gazed about the room and became conscious of a swarming sea of glaring faces about her. Objects started to become hazy when through the mist there suddenly appeared the comforting form of Mother Barrett.

"Everybody said so, didn't they, Dad?"

Mr. Barrett, floundering in her wake, nodded his head approvingly in corroboration of Mother Barrett's statement. "Terrific!" exclaimed Mary, silencing the mother's chatter. "My throat felt so tight, I thought I'd never be able to finish."

Almost in tears, Mrs. Barrett interrupted the mother's chatter. "My throat felt so tight, I thought I'd never be able to finish."

"Do you really think I've won?" Mrs. Barrett's reply was hushed by cracks from the loudspeaker. A dull silence spread over the room. Tense listeners waited for the final decision.

"Five thousand dollars and two years' study under Maestro Giulio Monteverdi is awarded to Miss Carlotta of Bridgeport, Connecticut!"

Sadly, Mrs. Barrett shook her head and interrupted the whispered gossip. "I was so sure that Mary would win."

"For a girl like Mary there's no better career than staying home, marrying some nice fellow and raising a family," Mr. Barrett sagely counseled. Gently he took his daughter's hand. "Come on, Mary, we'd better go."

"I'm not going home!" was the quiet, but astonishing reply. "What?" gasped her parents in chorus.

Looking steadily at her parents, Mary calmly continued, "I've got five hundred dollars of my own and I'm taking the next boat to Italy. I'm going to haunt every opera house in Europe until I make good."

Mr. Barrett's jaw dropped and Mrs. Barrett floundered. "But, Mary, there's an opera house right here in New York..."

"Yes," exclaimed Mary. "I know, the Metropolitan. Yesterday I inspected the place thoroughly. It's beautiful. I don't care what those judges said, I'm leaving for Italy on the next boat."

The Die Is Cast Hectic details of arranging the trip and saying farewell to protesting parents left Mary in a bewildered state of mind. The trans-Atlantic voyage on the palatial steamer, two days in Paris, and the journey through Italy to Milan seemed some sort of dream. Fantastic memories of shopping in

F.D.R.'S 'RUBBER STAMP' WINNER

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 18. (P)—Wisconsin democrats rallied behind their 73-year old leader, Gov. A. G. Schmedeman, in Tuesday's primary election, and on the strength of early returns led by President Roosevelt, swept aside two opponents on the basis of the partial count.

The vote in 516 precincts out of 2,916, Schmedeman led 150,000 to 140,000. B. Rubin 47,179; Richard Lehmann 1,595.

On the republican ticket 521 precincts gave Green 1,000; former Governor Fred R. Zimmerman 9,972; James N. Tittemore 1,636.

The new progressive party, organized by the LaFollette brothers and their followers, trailed in the showing of party strength in its first bid for support as a separate political camp.

The progressive vote in 367 precincts for governor was: Philip LaFollette 5,600; Henry O. Meisel 487. U. S. Senator Robert M. LaFollette Jr. was unopposed for the new party's first senatorial nomination.

As far as the incomplete returns measured the comparative voting strength in the four party scramble between democrats, republicans, progressives and socialists, the two old parties appeared to have the edge. Returns did not come in so fast on the latter two, however, because of the lack of contests.

In contrast with Schmedeman's commanding lead in the governorship race, five prominent democrats were staging a close fight for the senatorial nomination.

The senatorial vote in 295 precincts gave: John M. Callahan 5,595; Francis E. McGovern 2,217; Mrs. Gertrude Bowler 3,686; State Senator W. D. Carroll 3,185; Charles E. Hammersley 4,474.

The "new deal" while not a direct issue in the primary, played an important role in the campaign. It will become a direct issue in the general election in November.
