ALLRED'S TAX MESSAGE

Genuine concern over the tax problems which confront Texas, and widespread interest in Gov. James V. Allred's program for more equitable taxation, is shown by editorial comment in leading Texas newspapers, compiled by the United Press.

Comment varied from unrestrained enthusiasm for the tax program which will "provide a new weapon for the people," to cautious criticism of "revolutionary" measures.

HOUSTON POST: "His (Allred's) suggestions for changes in methods of raising State revenue and for widening the tax base are sufficiently revolutionary to warrant careful study and consideration. 'Tax the rich' is a popular cry, but in the great majority of cases such taxes are passed on in some manner to the eventual consumer or to the man who works. x x x One phase of the governor's message will win general agreement. That is that the legislature should consider some new taxes only as substitutes for the ad valorem tax, to provide relief from an inequitable load now borne by real estate rather than to raise more revenue."

HOUSTON PRESS: "Governor Allred's message x x x was a well-prepared document (containing) many valuable suggestions for the raising of more revenue. x x x If adopted we will get more money for the state, and in a few years wipe out the present deficit. x x x At the same time some measures of state economy might be considered. How to save is more important than how to tax."

DALLAS NEWS: "Governor Allred in his interesting tax message to the legislature is inconsistent though perhaps unconsciously so. He would eliminate the sales tax as an additional revenue raiser, but he urges the Legislature to resubmit tax classification, although the people passed on that question in November when they rejected it conclusively as an outright constitutional amendment."

AUSTIN AMERICAN: "His (Allred's) message came straight from the shoulder. Millions of dollars of additional revenue are needed. There is a large deficit in the treasury. Those who have must pay. x x x The governor took the tax bull by the horns. x x x He suggested the augmentation of state revenue by at least $12,000,000. x x x Now it is for the lawmakers to face the music and provide the additional revenues. x x x"

WICHITA DAILY TIMES: "Whatever the legislature may think of the specific recommendations offered by Governor Allred x x x it should keep three points in mind. x x x It is not practical, even if it were possible, to wipe out the state's deficit in one year, or in two. x x x There is no quick and handy method of repairing the state's finances. x x x A comprehensive view x x x must be taken of the revenue problem."

GALVESTON DAILY NEWS: "Whatever fault may be found with the tax proposals Gov. Allred x x x cannot be accused of going back on his campaign promises. This draws the (tax) issue squarely between the governor and the senate tax survey committee x x x. The governor seemingly has no great faith in the promise of relief for real estate owners he holds out."

DALLAS JOURNAL: "He (Allred) presents a thoughtful survey of the need for more taxes and of the fields from which additional tax revenue may reasonably be taken. x x x He is interested in getting more money out of the chain stores, but it is equally obvious that he wishes to place a burden upon 'foreign' chains for the purpose of discouraging them. The mulct that he urges is more in the nature of an economic fine than in that of a legitimate contribution to the cost of government."

MEXIA DAILY NEWS: "We are making progress in Texas, however slow. The homestead tax exemption will promote home ownership and discourage tenantry."

FORT WORTH PRESS: "In Governor Allred's tax message x x x there is cited a very fine example of the cruelty and inequity of the general sales tax. He cites figures x x x which show how heavily it bears on the poor man as against the rich."

EL PASO HERALD POST: "No doubt sulphur production could stand a heavier rate of taxation; possibly also oil and gas as those industries begin to recover. x x x Certainly a luxury tax, inheritance taxes and a State tax upon incomes would be preferable to a sales tax x x x."

CENTER DAILY NEWS: "His (Allred's) suggestions of a state income tax x x x will be hailed by the masses as the greatest weapon yet brought out to beat the proposed general sales tax into a condition of lifeless surrender. x x x If wholeheartedly supported he (Allred) has the ability, the determination and the power to bring a long-needed series of tax reforms into the hands of the people."

WHY THE "HEART BALM"?

The move to outlaw the "heart balm" lawsuit, initiated in Indiana by an intelligent woman legislator, seems to be spreading. A similar bill is pending in the New York legislature, and Senator McNabe, its sponsor, says that alienation of affection and breach of promise suits "in many instances border on blackmail."

That is a mild and sensible comment. Consider, for instance, the suit recently filed in a middlewestern court by a young woman who wants $100,000 from her former boss for breach of promise.

According to her suit, from 1928 to the end of 1934 the boss promised to marry her. At the end of 1934 he changed his mind.

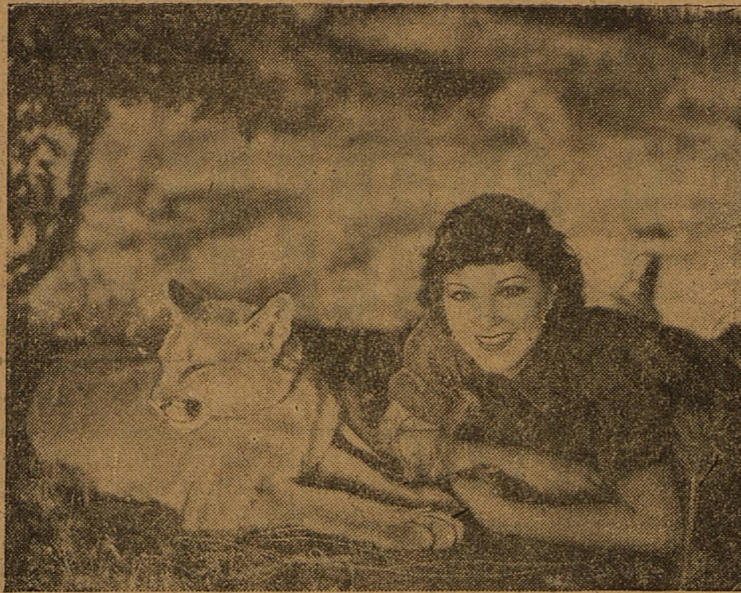

By her own admission, this young woman played along with her boss for close to six years. Any girl intelligent and self-respecting enough to make her own way in the world might have been expected to smell a rat long before the boss broke the bad news.

Offhand, would you say that heavy monetary damages are justified in such a case?

Depression seems to have made the country heartless. No one has offered to take up a collection for the woman who lost $300,000 in jewels in a Florida hotel robbery.

The aviator who crossed the country in 11 1/2 hours needn't boast. It took less than half that time for Abyssinia to cross Mussolini.

Poisoning Causes Ravens to Leave Danger Points

During a half century as the wildlife service of the government, the biological survey has found it desirable to publish instructions for control of only a small list of birds. Those include certain hawks, owls, magpies, phayon jay strainers, English sparrows and ravens, according to S. A. Debnam, County Agent.

Raven damage to sprouting corn may be materially lessened by the judicious use of poisoned bait. Ravens are quick to sense danger, and the killing of a few at points where damage is being done or threatened usually will put a stop to their depredations.

Corn is the bait usually employed for poisoning ravens, and it will kill quickly and its effectiveness will last for a considerable time when the bait is exposed to weather, if made according to the following instructions: Put 2 tablespoonfuls of starch and 1 ounce of powdered strychnine alkaloid in 1 1-2 pints of water and heat to boiling, stirring thoroughly after the starch begins to thicken. Pour this mixture over 20 quarts of corn and stir until every kernel is coated. The grain may then be spread out and dried.

Feeding spots are usually farthest from farm buildings or ordinary routes of travel, so the scattering of a little bait between the rows in these places will frequently give the desired results. Because of the extreme wariness of these birds, wholesale destruction through poisoning operations is difficult, as crows do practically no feeding at the large roosts where thousands gather nightly, and consequently baits placed there are of little use. However, this bait may be used to advantage in fields of ripening corn where crows have started to feed on the ears.

"Within the Gates" Is Symphony in Morbid Minor Key

Editor's Note: The following review of "Within the Gates" by Sean O'Casey was written for the Reporter-Telegram by Mrs. R. W. Hamilton, Jr., who read the play before the play readers club on Wednesday.

By MRS. R. W. HAMILTON, JR.
"Within the Gates" is a symphony in four movements, and written in a morbidly minor key. The scene is a London park. The characters are typical in representation. There is little or no plot, but Mr. O'Casey's brilliant gift for wordage is ever evident, and the lines are at times blazingly beautiful, and at others caustically cruel. They are at no time ordinary. This is a symphony of movement and sound, of passion and poetry and religion and rebellion. The author has taken his molecules of humanity and presented them under a microscope of pagantry, law and lust, and lewdness and love. The Lord all contribute to the theatrical whole. One must admit that Mr. O'Casey is an adept in the art of portraying the confusions and conflict of a human consciousness but his symphony ends on a mournful instead of a triumphant note—unfurnished and unsolved.

Most of the crescendo and more rousing moments are reached by Lillian Gish as the light-seeking prostitute, and Bramwell Fletcher as the poet. But the underlying theme is the chain of the down-and-outers, and life is not a pretty thing "Within the Gates!"

This play opened at the National Theatre in New York City in October, staged by Melvyn Douglas, and presented by George Bush and John Tuerk.

The entire production is on an experimental plane, and is remarkably impressive. The London Times says: "It emerges as a work of art more significant in its attainment and in its promise of dramatic literature than any play written since Strindberg moved away from naturalism!"

Swallows Hunt Wool
PERRY, N. Y. (UP)—Wool thieves in the persons of swallows have made their appearance here. Noticing several of his sheep with bald spots on their backs, Charles Nestor, farmer, kept a close watch to discover the cause. He saw a flock of swallows swoop down on the sheep, land on their backs, and fly away with a beak full of wool, apparently to line their nests for the cold winter.

HEALTH

HASH Cooked by MRS. ADDISON YOUNG

Texas Department of Education is making a study through 16 different school systems in the state on causes of absence from school. Midland city school system is one of the 16. Our public health service is looking forward with interest to see the final result of this study.

In a report published by the United States Public Health Service (Public Health Bulletin No. 200) in 1931, which gave a similar study of school children, absenteeism among about 4,000 school children amounted to 15 days per child per school year. Fifty-seven per cent of the days lost was due to sickness and the other 43 per cent to causes other than sickness.

Time lost from school on account of sickness was greater for younger than for older children. Time lost on account of causes other than sickness was some what less for younger than for older children.

The six disorders that were most important in terms of cases of illness were colds, headache, digestive disorders, tonsillitis and sore throat, toothache, and influenza and grippe. The six causes of sickness that were most important in terms of days lost per child per year were colds, influenza, tonsillitis and sore throat, measles, mumps, and digestive disorders.

The case rate of illness was 8 per cent higher for girls than for boys.

EARLY HISTORY OF INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE DISTRICT HERE IS RECOUNTED

History of the local interscholastic league district was recounted in The Interscholastic Leagueur, weekly publication at Austin, for March. The story came about through the election of W. W. Lackey to serve his thirtieth year as superintendent of the Midland public schools.

Recounting the early days of the district, the Leagueur said: "When the Interscholastic League established a district center in Midland in 1916, the superintendent, W. W. Lackey, undertook the directorship of the district. The district was continued for seven years, during which time Mr. Lackey directed the work in a very efficient manner. However, that was before the discovery of oil in that region, and the number of schools dwindled and the district was encroached upon by other districts until it was thought desirable to discontinue the district and merge it with other contiguous districts.

"But in 1933, when the League reorganized its districts, increasing the number and installing regional organizations, the League still found Superintendent Lackey doing business at the same old stand. One would hardly recognize the stand, however. Oil and other prosperous businesses had invaded the Midland region; Midland itself had tripled in population, modern school buildings and splendid school facilities had replaced the rather pioneer set-up of the old days, and it was decided to reestablish the Midland center. Superintendent Lackey was again made director general of the Stanton Saturday.

Mrs. W. C. Price of Pennwell was in Midland Friday.

Guy Eiland of the Eiland Motor company was in town Friday.

CENTURY OLD TRADITIONS GO AS NAZIS ALTER UNIVERSITY SYSTEM

By PAUL KECSKEMETI, United Press Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, U.P.—Recent Nazi decrees, sweeping aside century-old traditions of German academic life, have modified the standing of university teachers beyond recognition. For hundreds of years universities were known as autonomous bodies, choosing their own teachers. This prerogative of German universities exists no more. A law enacted by the government on December 13, 1934, empowers the government to transfer professors from one university to another for reasons of political expediency.

Shortly after the enactment of this law a decree was issued extending government control over a body of scientific workers, hitherto known as "Privatdozenten."

These "Privatdozenten" were in the past selected by the universities themselves; they were allowed to deliver lectures on their own field of study; however, they received no salary. Scientific achievement alone was considered in deciding about their appointment.

Title Abolished

The Nazi government's decree abolished the title of "Privatdozent," furthermore, it foresaw that all lecturers be appointed by the minister of education. Thus, the universities no longer have the right to decide who will be allowed to deliver lectures. Professors and universities acknowledged these reforms without protest. This is quite natural; there can be no question of public protest against a government measure in present-day Germany.

A feeling of bitterness over encroachments upon the freedom of scientific teaching, however, is common among professors as well as students. Some outstanding scholars recently took the defense of the liberty of scientific thought in cautious form and were rebuked by the Nazi press.

Spartan Training

Sparta, not Athens, is the model of the present-day German university.

A considerable part of the students' time is taken up by voluntary labor service, by work in the stormtroops, and similar tasks. That means hard work aiming exclusively at physical training and development of the sense of discipline. Scientific work is not allowed to interfere with such training.

A recent decree, issued on February 5, specifies that all students under 25 must serve six months in the "labor squads" to be exempted having studied for seven semesters or more are exempted.

Moreover, all students are expected to join one of the other Nazi semi-military organizations such as the S. A., the S. S., or Goering's "Air League."

Kept From Study

Although duties in these organizations are somewhat less onerous than they used to be, they often keep students from learning. Total freedom from exercise is granted only for a short period during examinations.

It is difficult to say what students think about this transformation of academic life. There are many who resent it, others rather like the new "atmosphere of comradeship" in the S. A. and related organizations. Voluntary labor on the whole is unpopular. Many students request to be exempted from it, but these requests are very seldom granted. The decree mentioned above foresees, however, that students having achieved a certain amount of education are not altogether popular even among Nazi students.

Dislike Intellectuals

Physical training and drill are intended to prevent German students from becoming out-and-out "intellectuals." The "intellectual" is a type disliked and mistrusted by Nazi leaders.

People with university degrees, according to their Nazi critics, in the past used to regard themselves as a body separated from ordinary people. Students wore ribbons and pillbox caps in order to distinguish themselves from the crowd; they exhibited woundmarks received in duels for the same purpose. This class pride is hated by many influential Nazis of the younger generation.

This attitude of younger Nazis led to a vehement crusade against the traditional students' corporations; but the fight has not ended, because the corporations also found defenders among the older

Stories in STAMPS

The Discovery of the ST. LAWRENCE

AS heroic a figure as Columbus, in the history of Canadian exploration, is the Frenchman, Jacques Cartier who, on May 10, 1534, landed with a crew of 61 men on the shore of Newfoundland and was first to explore the St. Lawrence river. Later he sailed up the river to the Huron village of Hochelaga, which became the city of Montreal.

Last year, on the 100th anniversary of the landing of Cartier, Canada issued a three-cent deep blue stamp showing Cartier and some of his men aboard his ship sighting land.

NEXT: What is the world's costliest stamp?

"Weltanschauung," a philosophy of life, implying a definite scientific outlook. Thus, Nazism has profoundly affected scientific teaching on various subjects. The race theory, for instance, has gained prominence on philosophical faculties.

There is, however, thus far only one branch of knowledge which Nazism set out to revolutionize in the core. This branch of knowledge is jurisprudence.

In a decree issued on January 19, Minister of Education Bernhard Rust declared: "The German science of law must become National Socialist."

After having remarked that German jurisprudence still followed lines of thought peculiar to Roman law, he added: "Our fight is being waged against this system of Pandects."

The decree then introduces a number of reforms aiming to promote the development of a specific German science of law.

Obligatory lectures are abolished, and the students are given complete freedom in choosing the subjects they want to study.

Simultaneously, however, a curriculum of so-called "principal lectures" is established which must be delivered at every university in the same order and must be sufficient for passing examinations.

BOY SCOUT FUND DRIVE IS MOVED TO TUESDAY MORNING

Opening of the Boy Scout finance drive, originally scheduled for Monday, was postponed until Tuesday morning on account of the absence from the city of some of the officials. It was announced Saturday by A. C. Williamson, area executive who is here to aid in the campaign.

The workers will meet at 7:30 for a breakfast at Hotel Scharbauer's private dining room, going from there immediately to work at soliciting new members.

The budget of the entire Buffalo Trails council, of which Midland's district is one of six, is $5,790 for the year. Williamson said Saturday that Midland always has been one of the principal points both in scouting and in financial support.

Permanent sustaining members are enrolled and Midland now has in force a number of such memberships. However, the changes in place of residence and other causes bring about the loss of some members each year and others are needed to carry on the work effectively. The large number of new citizens here was expected to account for a number of new memberships.

W. G. Riddle, district manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company is general chairman of the drive, being chairman of the scout finance committee here. He is aided in directing the drive by the Rev. Winston P. Borum, district chairman, Claude Crane, commissioner, and a group of twenty workers.
