Homemaking Notes

by Linda Webb
Home Demonstration Agent

The 4-H girls have been busy this summer on sewing projects. The final results can be seen by the public at the County 4-H Dress Revue, which will be held Friday, July 9, at 8:00 p.m. in the Gruver School Auditorium. Up-to-date fashions, personally constructed by the 4-H girls, will be modeled.

Winners of the dress revue will be announced and awards presented, too. One senior girl will be chosen to represent Hansford County in the district dress revue. The district contest will be held July 20, in Amarillo at the Holiday Inn West.

The high point winner of the Junior Division will model her garment in the district revue, but she will not be judged there as the senior contestant will.

The 4-H girls are scored on the construction of their garment; their posture, poise grooming; how well the dress looks on them (color, line, and accessories are considered); and, their 4-H clothing record. For each girl, there is a possible total of 125 points in score. The winners are based on high score for each division. Junior division is for ages 9-13, and senior division is for ages 14-19.

Everyone is invited to attend the County 4-H Dress Revue, July 9, at 8:00 p.m. in Gruver.

July is the season of freshness in the form of fresh fruits and vegetables. In plentiful supply are plums, peaches, vegetables and watermelons; also, there's plenty of frozen concentrated orange juice, milk and all other dairy products.

A number of 4-H boys and girls have signed up for County 4-H Camp, which will be held in Red River, July 12-15. I will, of course, be camping with them, so I will be out of the office on those days. I'll be back July 16.

The last note: There's one thing we'd like to say for mosquitoes. Unfortunately, its unprintable.

Day by Day

Some people just never learn. For about the fifth time in my life, I stayed under a sun lamp too long again. I always remember I'm not supposed to leave it on very long, but five minutes goes by so fast. It's several hours later when my eyelids begin to 'crisp' that I decide it must have been two minutes that you safely relax under the bright lights.

Well anyway, if you came in the office this week and wondered why I was working in dark glasses, it's because I'm just not prepared to let the world see me looking like Edward G. Robinson.

Even with crisp, swollen eyelids and a lobster complexion, the Fourth of July was wonderful. The weather was just ideal; I know because anytime our flag doesn't blow out of its holder the weather is considered perfect.

The papers and news reports said 30,000 holiday-minded folks visited Lake Meredith on the Fourth of July. The way I figure it, with boats, cars and all—that would make it 10 or 12 deep all around the accessible beach or shoreline. I wondered if there were really that many there and, if so, if everyone got reasonably close to the water when I heard that the P. A. Lyons, Jr. were there and boated over to a deserted little inlet which they said made them feel as if they were on the lake all by themselves.

So, that settles it in my mind. Lake Meredith has already graduated from the tea cup size lake most of us are used to up here.

Now, for some roads that will provide several entrances to the lake and a few refinements like more picnic areas, etc. and we'll have a full-fledged recreation area right under our hats.

But Are We ?

What kind of people inhabit the United States? The standard answer is: "God fearing, hard working, patriotic people who want to live in freedom." This is the standard description used for many years in describing Americans. But, are we really this kind of people?

There is reason for doubt about "God Fearing" when only one out of four or five attend church; when our children become drunken mobs wrecking vacation areas and towns on holidays; and when crime immorality and theft are ignored from the lowest to highest places in the land.

Hard working? Many of our unemployed will not take jobs; unions are working for a 35 hour or less work week, feather-bedding on jobs is widespread; extra long coffee breaks and lunch hours rob employers of thousands of hours of work.

Patriotic? How many hats are lifted when the colors pass? citizens march in protest of our fighting a power determined to destroy us; students raise funds for medical supplies for the enemy; citizens deny other citizens the right to vote; derogatory phone calls are made to survivors of men killed fighting the enemy?

Wanting to live in Freedom? Demands grow every day for more and more government services and accompanying controls; many seek immediate dependance on Washington for funds and solutions to local emergencies and problems; and there is a growing expectation for government to provide for us in sickness, unemployment and old age.

This does not fit the great majority of Americans. It is only fringe groups. But, if allowed, a few loose threads in a fringe can unravel an entire bolt of cloth.

What Other Editors Say

Chipping Away Rights

A great many laws are being passed and a great many administrative decisions are being made these days in the name of "civil rights." It seems to be an obsession in this country that nobody is discriminated against, that everybody gets put upon the same footing.

And in the process of guaranteeing everybody the same rights, some other equally precious rights are being trampled.

The U. S. Commissioner of Education has just stated for the federal government a doctrine that would employ the civil rights act to stop racial discrimination by college fraternities in the selection of their members.

The fraternities and sororities have it straight: Take Negroes into membership or have your doors closed.

The club over the fraternities' head is federal money. Colleges and universities, in the commissioner's view, would be required to compel fraternities to cease such discrimination, by race, or remove their chapters from the campus. If they don't the federal government will halt its grants of funds to the institutions where an offending fraternity has chapters.

Since all universities take federal funds, this means all are included. The universities have orders to straighten out the fraternities or lose their funds.

This is a case in point where the federal government is stretching the civil rights act way out of line in order to compel integration of the races.

There are areas where discrimination is legal, where it is practiced, and where it is logical.

Fraternity membership is just such an area. A fraternity is by its nature a discriminatory organization and its right to select its membership is basic to its existence.

A college administration has the right to bar fraternities, and to exercise some control over their activities, but it does not have a right to dictate their membership policies.

This doctrine of the U. S. Commissioner of Education can probably be enforced, since the federal government is all powerful and money exercises a powerful medicine these days. But it is wrong.

A college fraternity is a private club, and it is no less one because its members are students. A fraternity has the right to invite members on any basis they choose. There is no such thing as a "right" to fraternity membership as a lot of white students have found out when they didn't make the fraternity of their choice following rush week.

We suppose that the next step, or maybe this step is already with us, is that the Masonic Lodge will receive orders to take in some Negro members, or female members, or other groups not now admitted to membership.

We suppose that the government can make the Lions Club, the Rotary Club and the Kiwanis Club admit members on standards set up by the government instead of the clubs themselves.

And what about the Negro that the government wants to include in fraternity membership? Will a Negro feel comfortable as a member of an organization that did not invite him, does not want him? Will the government compel him to join whether he wants to or not? Who pays his dues? There are a lot of problems that can arise from a public policy as announced by the U. S. Commissioner of Education.

Private clubs are discriminatory. To declare them anything else is to destroy them. --Ochiltree County Herald

Our first view of Hansford hill was a big surprise, we had covered a stock show in Clayton, N.M., the same day and was driving about 85 mph trying to get to Spearman before the stock show slae started.

We did not know there was a hill in the entire Panhandle like Hansford when we dropped into it. We almost lost control of our car before we recovered from the surprise.

Writing the story this week about the dress revue brought back some old memories. We got our first real introduction to Hansford County and Hansford County folks at the County Dress Revue.

No, we were not in the revue. We were doing the same thing the man from KGNC will do tomorrow night, narrating the show.

We hope he has better luck than we did. Not knowing a hemline from a neckline, we made a rather sorry mess of the narration.

Even though we did such a poor job, the people working with the revue, Barbara Fain, then home dem agent, and others, were so nice to us we decided we like this area.

It does not seem like it has been seven or eight years since we came up here with the KGNC mike to interview Farm Bureau queens, dress revue winners and stock show winners.

THE VALUE OF SOLITUDE

In today's fast moving world where problems seem to pile up faster than man can cope with them, there is a great need each day for a few minutes of solitude and meditation by individuals.

The value of being alone for thinking and individual meditation was demonstrated many times by Jesus during his ministry. The writers of the New Testament related many times in their writings how Jesus would withdraw from the crowds to a quiet place. Sometimes they tell us He went to pray and other times they relate only that He withdrew to a lonely place, apart.

It is amazing how problems that are knotty and difficult when viewed in the press of noisy activity, become simple when thought out in some quiet place. Every person should set aside some time during each day for totaling up his problems and his blessings, then balancing the ledger of his life.

Berrys Return From Alliance

The Rev. and Mrs. Luther M. Berry of First Baptist Church, Spearman participated in the 11th Baptist World Alliance in Miami. Over 17,000 Baptists from nations all over the world have been in attendance.

The Berrys visited the Logos Corporation display at the Alliance Exhibition Hall and discussed with Producer Gregory Walcott plans for the forthcoming production of "Bill Wallace of China." The motion picture will be based on Jesse Fletcher's biography of the Tennessee medical missionary who served in China during seventeen of the most turbulent years of the ancient kingdom's history. His medical skill and Christian witness became a legend among the people of South China. In 1951, he died, a martyr, in a Communist prison cell.

Walcott, former Vice President of the Southern Baptist Convention, will enact the title role. The public is familiar with the actor as Detective Havilland on NBC's "87th Precinct" T.V. series.

The color wide-screen film is scheduled for production in October on location at Ridgecrest, Knoxville, Memphis and Hong Kong with a budget of $1,600,000. World wide theatrical release is tentatively set for early summer 1966.

Pain functions as the body's early warning system. When an external injury occurs, the brain receives the pain "alarm". Blood is routed to the main internal organs. This happens at once, but pain often lingers on. Because of this, modern medicine is continuing its fight against prolonging pain.

THE WAY I SEE IT

Robert Cordes, Pastor
Oslo Lutheran Church
Faith Lutheran Church

Last week we told about God's Law awakening us to our sinful helplessness and how God calls us to seek Christ. Now we discuss regeneration or being born again. It is brought about by God's Word, alone, or through Word united with Water in baptism.

When God leads a man to turn from sin to God is called New Birth. Simultaneously with the change within, there is a change of relationship between the sinner and God. The repentant sinner becomes a saved sinner. It is brought about by faith that looks to Jesus as its only hope.

Salvation is the giving of divine grace. It is God declaring the individual free, looks upon the sinner through His Son, and accepts the believing sinner into sonship with Himself. The sinner is now a child of God. It is entirely God's Work...done because He loves.

Salvation is received by faith. Faith is essentially trust, confidence, full reliance upon the grace of God, receptivity. Permitting God to work in faith.

The man dead in trespasses and sin could not by his own powers assist in his conversion. But when he quit opposing God's call, when he stopped refusing God's gracious invitation, then God could save him. However, as soon as a man has thus experienced God's saving grace, he is enabled to work together with God's Spirit in his own development.

So God alone works salvation in you through His Word and sacrament. But now you can together with the Spirits help, grow and walk as a child of God. Saved by faith, we respond with works of love.

Why are we so slow to allow God to work salvation in us and to respond with love? So much of the world still does not know peace of heart with God. Christians, we rejoice because Christ has saved us. But let us not rest until all know salvation in Christ, being cleansed by Him who died and rose for us all.

Feeding Cattle Soon To Have Second Pedigree on Performance

That breeder beef cattle will soon be studying pedigrees instead of the usual trend in Texas is to supplement the standard family tree with a production performance pedigree that accurately describes the animal's real breeding value. Pedigrees are production based on actual performance.

A. Maddox, Extension animal husbandman at Texas A&M University Science Department, said the practice to be common in the near

"Ten years from now, very few breeder sales will operate without this information for buyers," he predicted. "With this kind of data, the buyer can come nearer evaluating what a young bull, for example, is capable of than ever before. It's better than relying on an ancestor pedigree."

Several major sales in Texas have used the system in the past few years, the most notable recent one being the Nine-Bar Santa Gertrudis sale at Cypress. Thirty head averaged $7,963. Ten bulls averaged $18,210, with the top bull going to the King Ranch for $58,000.

Maddox said the usual information in a production pedigree includes weaning weights of sire, dam and calves; gaining ability of sire and calves, complete fertility data on dams, and carcass information from a random sample of a bull's calves.

He added that breeders can gather such records on their herds in several basic ways:

- (1) All major breed associations have their own performance testing programs.
- (2) The Performance Registry International of Denver, Colo. This is the oldest organization which has accumulated production records for breeders. It was established in Texas in 1954 at a time when breed associations were hesitant about value of production records.
- (3) The Texas Agricultural Extension Service offers help through local county agents. Agents have been working with breeders for the past 12 years.
- (4) Some private consulting firms offer the service.

Artificial Recharge Puts Water Back Underground

The Plains of Texas has over 37,000 playa (buffalo) lakes which collect approximately 1.4 to 2.5 million feet of run-off water annually. Over 90 percent of all this water could evaporate if left in the lake.

During a time when rain is falling and the lakes are full, this "waste" water can be economically and effectively stored and put to use at the time when it is needed.

The High Plains Research Foundation at Halfway, Texas has pioneered in what is known as "artificial recharge". This practice is putting the lake water back underground either through gravity flow or by pumping.

James Valliant, Water Engineer for the Foundation, states: "We have recharged the equivalent of 28 percent of the total amount of irrigation water used at the Foundation for the past six years into the underground formation. This modified well can also be used as a lake pump if it is needed. Several farmers are able to farm land previously unusable due to the lake."

With over 52,000 irrigation wells on the Plains of Texas pumping an estimated 5 million acre-feet of water each year, the rapid depletion of the underground water supply could be cut, and the life of our water could be extended by putting what has been a waste back underground through artificial recharge.

In the Underground strata found on the Plains, there is very little lateral (side) movement of recharge water. During the hot dry summer when more water is needed, the recharge water will still be in the area of influence of the multiple-purpose well for irrigation.

Valliant states he does not know of any properly installed and properly maintained multiple-purpose well that has been clogged or filled.

The average rainfall for the Plains of Texas is 20 inches per year. With this little rain it will take 10 years to put one inch of water back underground by natural means. It takes 20 inches to put 1/10 of an inch into the underground formation.

The Foundation has developed successful methods of installation and maintenance of multiple-purpose wells and now a program is underway to develop a better method of clearing water for artificial recharge. The Foundation is testing grasses that can be planted in the bottom of the lakes to serve as a filter and also for grazing of cattle.

Rainfall is not the only water that can be used in a recharge program. Many farmers are using their tailwater to recharge. This program can also take care of the neighbor who lets his tailwater run across a farmer's field.

Several farmers have planned, with the Foundation's help, a tailwater return system to bring all of their own tailwater back to where the multiple-purpose well is located thus not wasting any of the water.

In most cases where a farmer has put in a multiple-purpose well, the lake bottom was modified for drainage. In this method, much of the land that had been in the lake bottom can be used to grow crops.

For further information in regard to artificial recharge, contact the High Plains Research Foundation, Post Office Drawer 2200, Plainview, Texas.

Crybaby Bandit Carts Off $1,600

DES MOINES, Iowa — A crybaby bandit held up the Globe Loan Co. Friday and escaped with $1,600 in cash.

Employees said the young gunman broke into tears at one point and said, "I don't want to go to jail."

He had been in the loan office twice earlier before he apparently got up enough nerve to pull a gun.
