Two authors elected to WWA

Barbara Ketcham, election chairman of the Western Writers of America, recently announced the election of two Texas authors, John Erickson of Perryton and Jim Jennings of Amarillo, to the organization's executive board.

WWA is the largest organization of western writers in the U.S. and includes members from Norway, Finland, France, Germany, and England, as well as best-selling authors Louis L'Amour, Elmer Kelton, Janet Dailey and J.T. Edson.

WWA members are involved in all types of writing about the American West: fiction, nonfiction, historical, romance, movies, and television. Each year, WWA gives a Spur Award to the author whose work is judged the best in one of the eight writing categories.

Erickson and Jennings were two of four WWA members nominated for positions on the executive board and were elected by a vote of the membership. As members of the board, they will help formulate WWA policy in 1984-85.

Erickson, a native of the Panhandle town of Perryton, joined the organization in 1978. He has published ten books and hundreds of articles, and is the owner of his own publishing company, Maverick Books of Perryton.

His eleventh book, a biography of nationally-known cartoonist Ace Reid, will be released in September.

He is also a member of the Texas Institute of Letters and the Philosophical Society of Texas, and on April 19 he will receive a Cultural Achievement Award from the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in Ft. Worth.

Jennings, a native of Sweetwater, Texas, studied agricultural journalism at Texas A&M University, and worked with The Cattleman magazine before joining American Quarter Horse Journal in 1971 where he now serves as assistant editor and editorial director.

Last June, when the Western Writers held their national convention in Amarillo, Jennings was the convention chairman. He is also co-editor of Why We Write, a book on professional rodeo which was brought out last fall by Corriente Press of Amarillo.

Erickson and Jennings will assume their duties as board members at the next national convention, to be held in Branson, Missouri, in June.

Range seeding saves soil

Re-establishing deteriorated rangeland or old abandoned cropland fields by means of range seeding will increase the productivity of the land. Range seeding, the establishment of adapted native plants, is used to cut down on excessive soil loss and increase forage production for livestock.

Several considerations should be looked at before starting the seeding operation. First, when is range seeding necessary? Range seeding is used when the present vegetation is inadequate to prevent erosion or to furnish desirable forage for grazing. Secondly, the area to be seeded should be looked at closely. It is very important to examine the soil of the area. The species selected to be seeded must be adapted to the soil and the climate. Also, a very important part is the management of the seeded area to allow for establishment and maintenance of the grass stand after establishment.

Sarpalius defends vocational training program

AUSTIN--State Senator Bill Sarpalius of Amarillo, himself a product of the state public school vocational training program, joined business executives from across the state for a news conference in Austin to defend the vocational training of students in the state's educational system.

The news conference was in response to recommendations of the Select Committee on Public Education regarding funding, high school graduation requirements, and curriculum that imply that only academic subjects--most of which are designed for college bound students--are worthy of state tax dollars.

Sarpalius said, "The Select Committee believes vocational education should have little or no visibility in the Texas public schools. Such a move would sentence thousands of our youth to certain unemployment when they finish high school."

It was pointed out that nearly one half of all 16-19 year-olds enter the Texas labor force upon or soon after they leave high school. The overall unemployment rate in Texas among 16-19 year-olds in February 1984 was 19.4 percent. Historically, the unemployment rate in Texas among vocational education graduates is less than one-half that rate. Students who take vocational education are less likely to become unemployed.

It has been estimated by Texas state officials that between $100 and $250 million in state dollars could be saved by scaling back or eliminating state support for vocational education.

Sarpalius said, "Any elimination or scaling back would place the burden of financing vocational programs at the local level. Local school districts are already over taxed to the point that vocational programs would have to be cut drastically."

He added, "The taxpayers of Texas must decide what is to be the role of their state dollars. Academic subjects are not enough preparation for most jobs in our economy."

It was noted that there are 428,000 annual job openings in Texas. The Texas State Plan for Vocational Education projects that 290,000 job openings this next year in Texas will require vocational-technical type skills.

Sarpalius said he agreed that academic achievement levels of students must be raised, but said that the emphasis should come at the lower grades where basic instruction will decide how well students will fare in more advanced courses.

"The high school must be the level where students are provided options to prepare for work, to prepare for college, or to do both. Students have different interests, aptitudes and abilities. The select committee wants to remove all options except for college preparation. They want all students to take the same courses, regardless of interests and abilities.

"The course of action being considered would cause the death of the vocational training program and cause an increased number of dropouts, a decrease in the Texas job-ready labor force, and an overload of students at the community college level," Sarpalius concluded.

Farm bill hearings set

Washington, D.C.--Congressman Jack Hightower announced today that two days of hearings will be held in the 13th Congressional District to give the public an opportunity to comment on the development of the 1985 Farm Bill now being planned by congressional committee.

Hightower, who will chair the hearings, has scheduled them for Monday, April 23, at 2:00 p.m. in Amarillo; and Tuesday, April 24, at 10:00 a.m. in Vernon. Both meetings will be held at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center in those communities. Farmers, ranchers, agribusiness and all other interested representatives of farm concerns are invited to attend and testify, as is the general public.

"I want to give food producers and others in our part of Texas a chance to tell Washington exactly what they believe should be done to make our farm programs work better," Hightower said. "I will be taking the actual transcripts of everyone's testimony back to the full House Agriculture Committee, and it will become part of the record for the committee members to review as they develop the 1985 Farm Bill."

"It's very difficult if not impossible for most people to take time to go to Washington, so I thought we should try another approach," Hightower said.

Individuals interested in testifying should provide a written copy of their testimony if possible. An official stenographer will also record testimony for eventual presentation to the House Agriculture Committee by Hightower. Those wishing to testify should contact the nearest Hightower District Office in: Amarillo-

806/376-2381, Vernon-817/553-4321, Wichita Falls-817/767-0541. The number of people wishing to speak will be limited by the time available.

Comments should be limited to no longer than ten minutes per person as much as possible.

Faye's Daze

First off, I need to correct some mistakes we made in the Thursday's paper.

The Spring Extravaganza fashion show will be at SACRED HEART PARISH HALL, Tuesday evening, April 17, not at the Methodist Fellowship Hall.

Second, in Alma Remy's column from the Golden Spread Center, we gave Jettie Davis credit for helping with the broadcast and it was Jessie Davis, who has read poems, etc. for the radiothon many times in the past as well as this year.

I hope this is all, at least this is what has been brought to my attention. Sorry folks!

I'm sure you have seen the Easter Bunny or fascimile thereof in stores etc. this season, but as I was coming to work the other day and nearing the Baptist Church, I was startled to see a jackrabbit speeding down the cross street. I don't know what the speed limit is for bunny's but this one was exceeding it I'm sure. That is the first time in a long time I have seen a jackrabbit in town. We used to have a cottontail rabbit that stayed around the neighborhood and in the park, but I didn't notice any last year.

I guess it is getting close to garden planting time. By the way, I couldn't convince myself that the dandelions in my yard were just pretty flowers, so have made arrangements to get them sprayed. If you are planning a garden and haven't already put it in, you might find these Southern superstitions of value.

1. Slips of plants should be stolen. Only stolen ones will grow.
2. Plants should be kept in the bedroom at night and the living room during the daytime.
3. In planting, it's bad luck not to finish a row.
4. If you are working the garden with someone and your hoes strike together, you will hoe together at the same time next year.
5. Plant beans on Good Friday.
6. Place cornbread crumbs around your cucumber plants. They will attract ants. The ants will destroy cucumber insects.
7. If you blow all the fluffy seeds off a dandelion ball in two blows, you will get a new dress.
8. If a farmer has the brim of his hat turned up in front, he has corn for sale.
9. Plant watermelons one week after apple blossom time.
10. If you count fruit on a tree before it is ripe, it will fall off.
11. Plant corn when the dogwood blooms.
12. If you want hot peppers to grow, plant them when you are angry.
13. If you plant a weeping willow tree, you'll be an old maid.
14. If you can break an apple in half with your hands, you will be your own boss.
15. It is bad luck to burn grape vines.

Twentieth Century Club

The 20th Century Club met April 12 in the home of Mrs. D.K. Hergert with Mrs. John Brown co-hostess.

The roll call was a description of hat from the kitchen, worn to club. Many interesting and unique hats were worn and pictures made.

Mrs. Coy Palmer gave a report of the District Meeting held recently in Amarillo. She reported the Girls Town Endowment Fund was a total of $17,344.78 as of this month. The interest from this fund is all that is allowed to be used. The workshop for next year will be held at Girlstown in Borger.

An interesting skit was presented by Mrs. J.R. Stump and Mrs. Cecil Biggers on "hats".

The next meeting will be a home tour of an energy efficient home in Perryton April 26. Everyone is to meet at the library at 11:00.

Lovely refreshments were served to: Mmes. L.L. Anthony, Cecil Biggers, John Bishop, John Brown, Frank Hefner, D.K. Hergert, Fred Holt, O.C. Holt, Woodville Jarvis, Jane Meek, Coy Palmer, C.U. Pope, J.R. Stump and John Trindle.

Youth Group plans bake sale

The Youth Group of the Assembly of God Church in Spearman will hold a Bake Sale.

The date will be Saturday, April 14th at Thriftway starting at 8:30 a.m. and at Gordon's Drug starting at 7:30 a.m.

The proceeds will go to the youth attending Church Camp.

A little confidence in a person can often produce great results.

Free advice, regardless of its origin, is almost worthless.

Spring Extravaganza is planned

A Spring Extravaganza will be held Tuesday, April 17, 1984 at 7 p.m. in Sacred Heart Parish Hall. Models will be showing new spring fashions from Boyd's Shoes, TG&Y, Lady Fair, Bunkhouse, Trudy's, J.G.'s, Jan's Fashion, all of Spearman and Main Street in Gruver.

Color will be by Annette McCloy and Glamour from Mary Kay Consultants, Jan Dunn and Robbie Reid.

There will be door prizes and everyone is invited to attend and see the latest in fashions, accessories, color and make-up for spring.

Candidate Hangovers

The cost of running for office in the U.S. has escalated to such an extent, even with federal financial aid, losing candidates are left with serious money hangovers.

A staffer of a now-defunct Democratic presidential campaign told this newspaper in Washington in recent days he knew of a presidential candidate of some years back still paying off debts.

Among recent dropouts in the presidential race, the largest debt seems to be that of John Glenn. One estimate is that it totals $2.7 million. Where is a loser to get this kind of money?

In Glenn's case, the situation is not as bad as it sounds, because he was pledged a large sum by a group of backers—who must now fulfill their pledges. Alan Cranston is said to owe about $1.2 million.

One dropout not very much in debt is Ernest Hollings. His debt is something over $50,000.

The former head of the Senate Budget Committee, who has offered several pay-as-you go plans to reduce the federal deficit, never went too heavily in debt. Of course, that may be one reason he couldn't attract more support.

Shultz On Congress

Secretary of State George Shultz, well-liked on Capitol Hill though he has enjoyed little success in directing Middle East policy, candidly criticized Congress in a recent appearance before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee.

Shultz told members of that subcommittee Congress in recent years has constantly undercut

U.S. foreign policy, infringed on the constitutional authority of the president.

He urged that the War Powers Act of 1973—passed in the dark days of Vietnam dilemma and Watergate scandal—be modified. One thing Shultz feels a mistake is a provision denying the president the right to deploy U.S. troops in combat situations for more than ninety days unless Congress approves.

This is taken by many in Congress to bar the president from even the most minor actions, involving very few troops.

The president is, under the Constitution, the commander-in-chief of the armed services, Shultz notes, and can't hope to be effective when five hundred politicians always get into the act.

Shultz is correct in this assessment. He is also on target in seeking a bipartisan spirit in Congress to support U.S. foreign policy, generally speaking.

In recent years the House particularly has taken upon itself to publicly second-guess almost every step in U.S. foreign policy. Much of this is politics, aimed at votes and at discrediting the administration. It does, without doubt, undercut U.S. foreign policy.

The place for partisan politics is not in the field of foreign policy. Obstruction of any U.S. administration's foreign policy, systematically, finally leads to weakness and worldwide doubt about resolve—a loss of respect all over the world.

Southern Republicans

Representative Andy Ireland, for years one of Florida's Democrat members of the House, recently announced he was switching parties.

In this year's election, Ireland will run as a Republican. He follows the example of Phil Gramm of Texas and others who have changed parties. They say the national party no longer contains a meaningful conservative input.

Herein lies the slim hope of the Republican Party to gain control of the lower House of Congress, if there's a Reagan sweep in November.

If this happens, and a few more switches occur, membership in the House might be so closely divided that Republicans and conservative Democrats would become a majority. That was the situation in 1981 and 1982.

Congressman Ireland called upon other conservative Democrats to admit that within today's national Democrat Party there's no conservative influence.

Many southern Democrats often vote with Republicans. Some remain Democrats solely because of the one-party heritage of Reconstruction, fearful a switch will cost them their seat.

In many districts, that fear is well-founded. Gramm changed parties and won. Ireland is favored in Florida's 10th District this November. One has to admit any veteran member who changes parties exhibits political courage.

And the race in Florida's 10th district this fall therefore takes on added interest.

$2.50 An Hour?

Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan is asking Congress again this year to approve of a lower wage for youth in summer. Instead of paying them the minimum adult wage of $3.35 an hour, he suggests $2.50.

Donovan calls this wage a "summer youth opportunity" wage. He thinks it would translate into many jobs for the young this summer. He doesn't think it would displace regular workers.

Donovan says the minimum wage should not be raised at the present time. Those who would suffer most, he says, are those at the bottom of the wage-scale ladder.

President Reagan's labor secretary faces an uphill congressional fight to win approval of his youth wage program. He lost the same battle in 1983. The same Democrat majority still rules the House.

One will not know with any degree of certainty how such a program would work until it's tried. The proposal seems to deserve a trial of one or two years, after which results could be carefully analyzed.

If millions of young people are helped, and regular workers aren't displaced as a result, summer minimum wages might become a permanent feature of the U.S. economic system. It could also help bring prices down and make some U.S. products more competitive.

Old-timers used to rely on this mill. This mill used to depend on the right wind. Despite man's most valiant efforts the wheel was frequently at a standstill. What then? Waiting, waiting, waiting! What patience they must have learned—only faith sustained them. The wind would blow again.

The patient life also requires a foundation of faith. It can come early or late, slowly or fast.

If you lack the necessary faith to fulfill your life's needs, turn to the Church. The wind will blow again.
