National Salvage Will Open Tuesday

After a wet beginning, National Auto Salvage, Inc., on the Gruver Highway will have its opening Tuesday.

Jack Moran, manager, said the building has been redone, all the flood damage cleaned up and the firm is now ready for business.

The opening of the firm was delayed when in the recent flood water from Horse creek got into the building and eroded the yard around the building.

Assisting Moran with the operation of the business will be Bill McBride who will handle part sales, and Preston Byrd, who will work in the shop and yard.

The manager said all parts sold from the business will be guaranteed. All engines will be pre-run and checked against a specification sheet.

Moran said all parts will be indexed in a card catalogue and he plans to soon be a part of a telephone hook-up with other association dealers over the country to make it easier to find hard to locate parts.

Moran operated Excel Body Shop until he sold it recently.

We had a nice letter from Enoch Estep this week telling he was glad to hear about the great job the choir did with its Spring Concert.

Enoch said they had a successful year in Plainfield, Ill., where he is teaching.

He sent us some clipping of the comments in the Plainfield paper about the choir there.

One was an ad sponsored by several organizations.

It said the audience stood, cheered and stopped the show when the Plainfield Massed Choir performed in the "great old Rialto theater in Kimbar, Ill." The massed choir had to repeat the Battle Hymn finale.

In the Plainfield paper the writer said the audience rose to its feet with a standing ovation for the Battle Hymn finale when the choir performed in Plainfield.

The writer said it was "one whale of a show."

Use the best parts of discarded plastic shower curtains as backing for aprons to wear when you give baby a bath or as backing for terry cloth bibs for baby. Cut the plastic the same size as the article. Baste together, then bind the two with bias tape binding.

Sixteen County 4-H'ers At State Roundup

Sixteen Hansford County 4-H members will join the men and white wave which engulf Texas A&M University campus this week. Some 2,000 4-H members, leaders, county extension agents and friends of 4-H will assemble on the campus for the annual Texas 4-H Club Roundup. It begins June 1. Winners for 30 judging and demonstration contests will be named Wednesday, June 2, and honored at the banquet that evening. A division, Quarter Horse judging, has been added this year. Those participating in contests have already won county and district honors and have been training for many weeks.

To be eligible to participate in the state finals, the team or individual must have ranked first or second in the district eliminations. Competition will be stiff, since more than 1,300 individual 4-H Club members will participate. Many will be trying for a chance to represent Texas in the national finals later in the year.

The second annual 4-H Career Opportunity Fair will open Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. It will include exhibits of career choices offered through Texas A&M.

4-H Club work is conducted in the counties under the supervision of the county Extension agents with assistance from local voluntary leaders and friends of 4-H. 4-H'ers have been visiting the A&M campus annually for more than half a century.

The Texas 4-H Youth Development Foundation will recognize individuals and business concerns throughout the state for their outstanding contributions to the 4-H Club program. The Foundation also sponsors a "Chuck Wagon Barbecue" on the evening of June 1. The first general assembly of the Roundup will follow the barbecue.

The Roundup will officially end with breakfast the morning of June 3.

4-H members attending from Hansford County are Patricia Henderson and Susan Graves, Safety; Evelyn Kelly Money Management; Rebecca Hutchison, Favorite Foods; Bill and Allen McCloy, Beef Cattle Business; Roy Scribner and Doug McCloy, Farm and Ranch Management; Mike Johnson, Bob Womble, Alva Henderson and Phillip Fleming, Rifle Team; David Johnson, Gerald Scribner, Delbert McCloy and Alan Dixon, Soil Evaluation. The group will be accompanied by the Extension Agents, Robert Adamson and Linda Webb, and adult leaders.

America's Agriculture Problems Are Primarily Problems Of Plenty

America's agricultural problems are problems, in the main, of plenty--of a magnificent ability possessed by our farmers to produce food and give beyond the needs of our own people and beyond the requirements of our export markets. In much of the rest of the world, the "farm problem" is a problem of finding the means to produce and distribute a minimum level of food to stave off the mass starvation of the population. In Communist countries, the problem is compounded by multiple inefficiencies imposed on agriculture by a totalitarian political system.

North Vietnam's drive for conquest in the south is spurred by its failure in stimulating agricultural development. For ten years, the Red rulers of North Vietnam have failed repeatedly in attempts to force production above levels existing before World War II. Now, rice, meat, animal fat, and sugar are rationed in North Vietnam, and supplies available fluctuate markedly. The caloric intake of the average North Vietnamese is well under 2,000 calories a day. Eighty percent of the country's labor force is engaged in scratching this bare living from the land, but farmers must depend on other sources for a large part of their income. As in most other Communist countries, agriculture is the lagging sector of the economy; in North Vietnam, the value of agricultural production increased only 3 percent from 1959 to 1963.

Latest information available indicates the North Vietnamese peasants, those who must carry the nation's economic burden, are not sympathetic to the regime, and the harsh methods of the police state are used to maintain discipline. This fact is testimony to the failure of the initial step taken to socialize North Vietnamese agriculture: land reform. By 1956, the Communists had virtually eliminated landlords as a class and had redistributed the land. The landlords who were not liquidated, particularly those who had assisted the regime in its long war against the French, were allowed to retain a portion of their land equal in size to the smallest area given the poorest peasant. As practiced by the Communists, the socialization of agriculture involves transferring the agricultural economy from a system of private ownership and individual enterprise to one of public ownership. This, by Communist lights, permits the operation of agricultural enterprises to be controlled and directed as are other nationalized industries. The formation of collective farms followed redistribution of land to the peasants. All of the peasant's belongings, except his personal effects and his house, became the property of the collective, either as part or full payment of the entrance fee. Compensation from the collective came only in return for a member's labor. A small plot of land was provided for the peasant's use and part of the collective's land was set aside for raising livestock. But collectivized farming has flopped in North Vietnam; the peasants have proven uncooperative, the farm administrators incompetent. Private enterprise persists despite all attempts to smash it. Official statistics of the North Vietnamese regime show that four years ago more than half of the income of households on collective farms came from supplementary activities--from using private land plots to produce food or to raise pigs, chickens, and ducks for consumption or sale, making and selling handicrafts outside the organization, planting and cultivating trees, and raising fish in small ponds.

Even in long-subjugated, impoverished, and poorly educated peoples, the will for freedom dies hard. Collectivization of agriculture has failed, and the failures seem destined to mount as the North Vietnamese economy continues under the strain of increasing population and an increasing urban, industrial labor force which consumes but does not produce food. The tyranny of the regime in North Vietnam is aimed not only at neighboring South Vietnam but also at its own tormented citizenry. This is the pattern of Communist regimes everywhere, and nowhere is the tragedy of Communist rule and ruin better illustrated than in agriculture.

Thank God for the blessing He has bestowed upon America and our people.
