purpose grass that has come their way.

Collingsworth county was pleased at John Coleman's success with his new grass last year but the full impact of what sorghum alnum can mean to the county, and to the livestock interests in particular, didn't come until this year.

Three Head Per Acre

Tests have proved it will carry up to 3 head of livestock per acre for a period of several months.

Coleman and Oran Starkey last year formed a partnership to raise 7 acres (only 7 pounds of seed was available) and to set up the Panhandle Seed Company to handle the seed. They had 2,800 pounds of seed to distribute this year and a considerable amount went for test plots. Seed for approximately 800 acres at a pound per acre, went to farmers in Collingsworth county.

It can be seen now in fields along the county roads and highways, with its cane-like stalks and leaves, and heads similar to sudan as it grows, a fresh rich green, along side grain sorghums that are twisted or burned, the cotton that has withered.

"Sorghum alnum is a natural hybrid," Coleman explains. "It is a perennial and stools out enormously, from 10 to 45 stalks from a single seed. This makes it possible to plant only one pound of seed per acre. And besides this, suckers come out at each joint along the stalk. After the first year, the plant comes back from a crown."

This year Coleman and Starkey put their 7-acre plot to the test livestock men wanted to see.

Nineteen Head On 7 Acres

They grazed 19 head of livestock on the 7 acres of sorghum alnum from April 20 to July 30 except for two weeks in June, when rains fell, amounting to three and a half inches. It is not irrigated and it has had no moisture since then.

"The cattle had it pretty well eaten back to stubs, but by around August 5, we could have turned them back in."

That's nearly three cows per acre.

This land isn't considered good either. The cattle had a free choice of blue gramma, buffalo grass, bermuda, Johnson grass, grass burs, Russian thistles, and careless weeds, but they spent most of their time on the sorghum alnum. Even in this dry weather, the plants began to sprout out as soon as the cattle were taken off.

Sorghum alnum has a sweet taste and is tender, so stock eat considerably more of the stalk than they do of most forage.

After frost last year, cattle were turned in the dry stalk field, with a free choice of sorghum alnum, cotton stalks, blue gramma, buffalo grass and maize stalks, and again they stayed on the sorghum alnum almost altogether.

Plant In May Or June

The seed may be planted anywhere from April to June but Coleman and Starkey recommend May or June, with the seed put down in 40-inch rows. On old fields, the stalks begin sprouting out from the crowns within two weeks after the last frost, and sorghum alnum is nearly waist high by the time sudan is planted in this area.

The leaves grow thick on the stalk and sorghum alnum produces more forage than any other grass known.

When Starkey said this spring he had measured growth of two inches per day for the sorghum alnum, some folks were skeptical, but Dr. W. Hubert Seale of Abilene who visited the Coleman plantings and took home several crowns, wrote back a few days later:

"I dug a hole in my yard and stuck the grass in the ground. I watered it the first night, and in six days it had fully 12 inches of growth. I can verify what Oran Starkey says about it growing two inches a day."

All the experiments had been with cattle and horses until Starkey unintentionally conducted one with hogs.

He sold an old sow and four pigs to a neighbor, who took them up to his place. The pigs got out and came back home—as far as the sorghum alnum. They will not leave it and in the dense growth Starkey can't run them out. The damage they have done in loss of seed may amount to around $2,000.

One of the first to recognize the value of Sorghum Alnum was the Soil Conservation Service in Wellington. Fred Squyres, work unit conservationist, worked closely with Coleman, even while sorghum alnum was a backyard test project. Two things, besides its value as a feed hold SCS attention. In addition to the crown, from which the plant comes back each year, there is a massive fibrous root system that dies out each winter, decaying into rich organic matter.

Cut Down Erosion

"We believe sorghum alnum can go a long way toward cutting down erosion, both wind and water," Squyres said. Even after a field is closely grazed, there is enough stalk left along with the roots system, to hold down the soil.

More encouragement has come from County Agent Lefty Thomas.

Sometimes a stock man needs more grazing without much time to grow it.

Andy Bell planted 20 acres in sod land on the side of a hill this spring. The land had a thin stand of native grass and had never been broken out. Bell plowed through it with a lister and planted at the same time. It came up to a good stand and is growing well.

"This makes it look like a good practice to immediately increase the grazing capacity of a pasture where the grass is thin. It has not been cultivated and does not look like it needs any cultivation," Coleman reported.

Plow Once A Year

Ordinarily, Coleman and Starkey recommend plowing at least once a year. The growth is so dense that weeds don't grow in the sorghum alnum.

Elmo Caudle of Hale Center has one of the most luxuriant growths of sorghum alnum Coleman knows of. Over a 40-acre block, sorghum alnum stands 14 feet tall more than twice as high as a tall man. A livestock man, Caudle is keenly interested in any forage crop, and he is very pleased with his experiences with this grass so far. He estimates now he will harvest 1,000 pounds of seed per acre on his 45-acre tract.

Members Report Summer Activities At First Gamma Eta Chapter Fall Meeting

Members of Gamma Eta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, an honorary educational society for women teachers, gave reports on their summer activities at the first meeting in September which was held at the First Christian Church in Roaring Springs, Texas. Of special interest were reports about their tour of six European countries this past summer.

Mrs. Jessie Thomas of Paducah gave reports of interest to those concerned with education. These included a report on the benefit of the Texas tidelands to schools, the Ford Foundation Fund for advancement of Education which will grant a fund during the next three years for use in teacher recruitment and education by television, and some facts in regard to amendment No. 4 which will be voted on in November. Facts used as a basis for the support of amendment No. 4 were: recruit additional teachers, hold teachers in service, bring up to date a retirement program enacted in 1937 during the depression, permit teachers to contribute more to improve their own retirement program, provide disability, death and survivors benefits comparable to those available in industry and governmental service, provide reciprocity to attract out-of-state teachers, provide sound, efficient administration, provide a more adequate benefit for teachers now retired, and clarify and reenact much of old retirement law.

All former 1926'ers, living elsewhere, please write her.

The HOMECOMING fever is spreading, and one hears discussions on every corner. After all, there aren't too many weeks between now and October 26.

We're going to look terribly old-fashioned this year in our old 1945 to 1955 wearing apparel. For one thing, we don't like these new 1912 styles...

they don't do a flattering thing for us. It seems a paradox that women are urged to look glamorous, only to have the designers and manufacturers bring out some atrocious thing that you wouldn't want to be caught dead in (preposition period).

And have you noticed the slouched stance of models in the current style magazines? This certainly isn't achieved by balancing a book on one's head, which, we understand, is one of the most stressed pointers in attaining good posture.

One of the greatest favors automobile manufacturers could do for women would be to design cars with pull-out drawers under both front and back seat. Think what a boon this would be to women shoppers who need to hide their purchases until they have the opportunity to sneak in the packages!

FHA Expands Credit Facilities To Aid Farmers, Stock-Raisers In Drouth Areas

Recent changes in the laws governing Farmers Home Administration will enable the agency to serve the credit needs of a larger number of farm families, according to a press release dated August 31.

Types of loans which can now be made include:

1. Operating loans to full-time farmers. Initial operating loans may be made in amounts up to $10,000 to one borrower, with subsequent loans authorized as needed so long as the total amount of indebtedness does not exceed $20,000. Operating loans are used for the purchase of equipment, livestock, or to refinance debts owned on equipment and livestock, and for fertilizer, seed and other farm and home operating expenses needed to carry out efficient farming operations on family-type farms. Interest is at the rate of five per cent, and these loans are repayable over periods up to seven years. The new law increased from $7,000 to $10,000 the amount of initial loan; from $10,000 to $20,000 the limitation on the indebtedness; and increased from 7 to 10 years the period during which additional credit can be extended in hardship cases when the inability of the borrower to repay his indebtedness within 7 years was due to causes beyond his control. Under the former law no new credit could be extended to borrowers who have been indebted continuously for 7 years.
2. Farm Ownership loans. These loans are made for the purchase, enlargement, or development of family-type farms, and to refinance existing debts for farmers who have adequate real estate security but who are unable to meet present credit obligations and need credit on more favorable terms. Payments are scheduled according to the ability of the borrower to repay, up to 40 years. Insured loans are made from funds provided by private lenders. The loans bear 3 1/2 percent interest, plus a one percent insurance charge. In the past, the agency has only refinanced existing real estate debts, and then only when the refinancing was incidental to the making of a real estate loan for purchase or improvement of family-type farms.
3. Farm Housing loans. These are made for the construction and repair of farm houses and other farm buildings, including farmstead water supplies. Interest is four percent on the outstanding principal, and repayments may be scheduled over periods up to 33 years, with the loan secured by a deed of trust on the borrower's farm. This loan program was reactivated in May of this year.
4. Soil and Water Conservation loans. Made to carry out measures for soil conservation, water development, conservation and use, and farm drainage. Individuals can borrow up to $25,000 for these purposes. Interest and insurance charges are 4 1/2 percent with repayments scheduled according to the borrower's ability to pay, up to 20 years.
5. Small Farm Operation. These are designed to help farmers in areas designated for the Rural Development program, who are unable to obtain enough land resources to develop full-time farms. Loans may be made for operating and developing less than family-type farms, if applicants are established bonafide farmers who have historically resided on farms and depend on farm income for their livelihood, and who are conducting substantial farming operations and spending a major portion of their time farming. Such operators must have dependable sources of outside income. When such loans are made for operating expense, they bear interest over periods up to seven years. Loans for real estate development bear interest of 4 1/2 percent and are repayable over periods of up to forty years.
6. Special Livestock loans. Initial loans of this type will be available until July 14, 1957, and loans to indebted borrowers can be made until July 14, 1959. Such loans are made to help established producers of cattle, sheep and goats maintain their normal operations. Loans are made for replacement livestock and for purchase and production of feed and for other operating moment of his death. He came to the Roaring Springs area as a tenant farmer and in two score years became affluent. A strict individualist, he was best known for his bearded countenance.

Well educated, he kept abreast of politics and national affairs, yet changed his mode of simple living but little from the days of his early struggles.

Ollie Scott loved the land and growing things. Denying himself the "modern" necessities of life, he gave liberally in food and clothing to the poor, but made his gifts anonymously. A gruff appearing exterior was but a mask for a generous heart which frequently overflowed in good-natured chuckles. Alone with his thoughts, Ollie Scott was almost home Tuesday evening when death relaxed his tired hands.

He said Senator Lyndon Johnson could have been nominated for vice president, but was advised against it. He said that much of the "show" at a convention is done "for the benefit of the folks back home" and has no real bearing on the purposes of political leaders. He paid high tribute to Speaker Sam Rayburn, who is 74. He said the political veteran was up every night until midnight or later, and sometimes until five a. m., working, talking, marshalling his forces.

He said the convention paid little attention to Harry Truman and that his influence faded almost completely away by the time the convention was over. He said Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt, whom he described as a gracious and brilliant woman, received a great ovation.

Musical Numbers

Invocation Monday night was by Post Chaplain Knox Jameson, followed by a song, "America", led by J. R. Whitworth. Popular high school trio, composed of Raynita Dunning, Kay Norman and Charlotte Campbell, sang for the group, accompanied by the 1956 instructor, Mrs. Lalar Wilkerson. A piano solo by Jimmy Graham concluded the musical portion of the program.

Commander James Priddy concluded his second administration in the highest local office of the veteran's organization with the Monday night meeting. Members have acclaimed his leadership as outstanding.

Riding on the passing of Charley Renfro and the receiving of Simpson, Cartwright, Green and Pipkin, the Matadors marched 80 yards to the shade of the Spur goal line only to be stopped on the one-yard marker.

FORMAL FOR FAIR

This white organdy formal decorated with pink roses is one of the 89 winners in the Texas Fashion Roundup competition which will be modeled in daily free style shows at the 1956 State Fair of Texas, Oct. 6-21. The Blue Ribbon Fashions were selected from over 200 entries submitted by Texas ready-to-wear manufacturers. The annual fashion event is sponsored by the State Fair and Dallas Fashion Arts, Inc.

Pipkin intercepted a Bulldog pass and ran it back up field. The Matadors were attempting a field goal when the game ended.

Statistically speaking the game was even. Spur had 10 first downs to Matadors nine. The Matadors made four penetrations to three for the Bulldogs. The Matadors gained a little less yardage on the ground than their opponents, but passed for 94 yards to none for the Bulldogs.

expense. Interest is five percent and loans are repayable in one to three years. They are not made to pay existing debts.

For Normal Operations
7. Emergency Loans. These are made to enable farmers to continue normal operations but not to refinance existing indebtedness. They bear interest at the rate of three percent. Ordinarily loans secured by liens on chattel property are scheduled for repayment within one to five years. Loans for crop production are due when the crop is harvested.

8. Great Plains Loan. These loans are available only in the 57 West Texas designated counties under the Great Plains Special Credit Program of which this county is one. They are made in the same manner and for all purposes authorized for the making of Operating loans, except that under these loans the operator may be conducting farming operations on larger than a family-type farm.

Eligibility for all types of loan assistance available is determined by a three-man county Farmers Home Administration committee.
