MORTALITY FOR INFANTS HIGH DURING SUMMER

AUSTIN—"The lives of thousands of Texas babies are being saved this summer by intelligent parental care during hot weather. However, many more infant deaths could be avoided if parents would have a keen realization of the value of simple common sense precautions," states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.
 Records of the State Health Department's Bureau of Vital Statistics show that 2,506 babies died of diarrhea and dysentery during 1940, many of them occurring during hot weather. The infant death rate for diarrhea and dysentery in Texas is too high, as can be seen from the above mortality figures. Public health officials cannot solve the problem alone; parental cooperation is the real key to its solution.
 The following suggestions, if followed by parents of infants, would go far in further reducing deaths from diarrhea and dysentery:

1. Whenever possible, infants should be breast-fed for the first 6 or 8 months. When bottle milk is used it should be boiled or pasteurized.
2. Drinking water for the baby always should be boiled.
3. Personal cleanliness should be the rule for every member of the household. Those handling milk or food should be particularly careful.
4. Any member of the family or visitors showing symptoms of disease, no matter how slight, should be kept away from the baby. They should not be allowed to handle any of the food intended for him.
5. The house should be screened to protect not only the baby, but all household food, from flies.
6. Every home should be provided with a sanitary or fly-proof toilet or sewage disposal facilities.
7. Every home should have a safe water supply.

While most of the above suggestions are applicable at all seasons of the year, the following precautions are important in hot weather:

1. The baby should be kept as cool as possible; 2. He should be kept clean; 3. Clothing should be reduced to the simplest essentials; 4. He should be protected against insects; 5. He should not be overhanded; 6. He should be kept in the open as much as possible; 7. Water should be increased internally and externally; 8. He should not be overfed; and finally, if there are signs of illness, the family physician should be consulted promptly.

DRYING PEACHES FOR PRESERVATION IS RECOMMENDED

With peach growers, consumers, grocers, and governmental agencies intent on distribution and consumption of Texas' bumper peach crop, homemakers will likely turn their attention to drying as a safe, economical means of preservation.
 Grace I. Neely, specialist in food preservation for the A. and M. College Extension Service, says in one of her publications that most foods, if stored in a cool, dry place, will remain in a good edible condition for a year or more.

There are two methods which may be followed in drying peaches—drying in the sun or in a ventilated glassed-in box. The latter provides a higher temperature and can be made a protection from the rain, while there is little control of temperature in the sun drying method.
 As a rule, the specialist says, sliced peaches dry in three to eight hours; halved fruits in eight to 24 hours; and whole fruit in 18 to 36 hours. Often some pieces will dry before the rest, and in this case the thoroughly dried products should be removed and the remainder left in the dryer to complete the process. Fruit thoroughly dried has a "rubbery" texture.
 When fruit is taken from the drying trays it should be "conditioned"—that is, it should be placed in deep containers and stirred each day for 8 to 10 days. Then before it is stored, the product should be heated for 30 minutes at a temperature from 150 to 180 degrees. All containers for storing dried foods should be sealed or closed tight, the specialist says. Further information about home-drying of foods can be obtained from county home demonstration agents.

Army Chapels Are Erected In Texas

AUSTIN—Erection of 49 regimental chapels in eleven Texas Army Camps, under a program now being carried out by the Constructing Quartermasters, was praised by Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel in a communication today to the Chief of Chaplains of the United States Army, Washington, D. C.
 The chapels, which will be available to Protestants, Catholics, and Jews alike, will cost approximately $1,000,000 when completed, the Governor was advised. Each chapel will have a movable altar, so constructed as to be adaptable for use by the several religious groups. A series of doors and panels in the altars will provide the essential requirements for each kind of service.

 "The religious program as planned by the United States Army to reach every man in the service seems to me to be the highest importance," Gov. O'Daniel said.
 "While no attempt is being made to force religious observance upon any man, it is significant that the tradition of God-fearing American Army is being maintained in sharp contrast to the materialism of the totalitarian states. This activity will doubtless receive the approbation of American citizens generally and will bring great satisfaction to the hearts of the mothers and fathers of our soldiers."

Peach Utilization Urged By Governor

Danger of great financial loss to growers of Texas peaches and the further danger of the loss of a much needed fruit product was recognized by Governor W. Lee O'Daniel this week when he issued a proclamation urging the further utilization of this fruit.
 The 1941 peach crop now matured will be the largest in thirty years, with 1,000,000 bushels above average, the Governor said. Proclaiming the period of July 24-30, as peach week Number One and August 7-14, as peach week Number Two, the Governor called upon all mayors, county judges, and other city, county and state officials to use such measures as are in their power to further the consumption of Texas peaches during his period.

 He invited newspapers, merchants, chambers of commerce, civic clubs, and the citizenship generally to stimulate the use of peaches and to cooperate with Texas growers, distributors, the Texas Extension Service, the home demonstration agents, and all educational agencies in their present campaign to promote the utilization and conservation of the current peach crop.
 Cooperation with the surplus marketing administration in their present campaign for diverting peaches into channels other than commercial lines was also urged in the proclamation.
 A new field office of Priorities Director Stettinius has been opened in Dallas. There are now 10 in the United States.

Canning Of Fruits And Vegetables Urged As Aid To National Defense

Pointers Are Given For Satisfactory Food Preservation

This year—with all America defense minded—both home and commercial canning are taking on new importance.

To help stock the Nation's pantry for emergency needs, commercial canneries are planning to increase their output of certain nourishing canned vegetables. The U. S. Department of Agriculture this year initiated a program intended to expand production of tomatoes grown for canning to more than half again what it was last year.

"What makes good sense for the Nation's pantry often makes good sense for the family pantry also," says Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Home Economics. "Certainly millions of quarts of good food stored away in home pantries are important to both family and national preparedness."

"With a home canning program dovetailed into a carefully planned home-production program, many families can assure themselves of a year round diet that is better balanced and more varied than one they could afford to buy entirely at the store. And when food prices rise, the woman with plenty of canned food in the pantry can count herself doubly provident."

Home canning, of course, is most economical on farms or in villages where families have the land to grow their own garden stuff. Usually it is only when fresh fruits and vegetables are available cheap from nearby that it is economical for city families to buy food to can.

Sugar, an important material for fruit canners, is an item that some home-makers have been wondering about. However, according to the Sugar Division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, there are ample reserves of sugar either here in the United States or on nearby islands for all needs.

The homemaker who plans to "can as usual" this season will want to check her equipment and supplies before she gets into the full swing of the busy summer season. Here are some of the main points she'll need to check according to Miss Allie M. Tipps, local home management supervisor.

CANNING BUDGET—If you live on a farm, your canning budget will fit into your garden plans. In making a budget, figure how much food the family needs for a year. And take into consideration how long fresh foods are out of season. Canning budgets vary considerably from one section of the country to another. Circular C-108, "Food Preservation Plan," issued by the Extension Service, Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas, will be of much help in making this plan for canning.

THE CANNER—If you plan to can non-acid vegetables, you'll need a steam pressure canner. For only in such a canner is it possible to get temperatures above boiling. These high temperatures are needed to kill the organisms that cause spoilage in practically all vegetables except tomatoes.

Steam pressure canners need to be re-checked each year to see that the pressure gauge registers correctly. If these gauges are taken off and sent into the factory where they were made, manufacturers will check and adjust them. Also, Allie M. Tipps, Home Management Supervisor of the FSA of Motley County will help check pressure gauges.

For processing acid foods—fruits and tomatoes—it is best to use a water bath canner. There is little that needs to be checked on such a canner except to see that all the parts are together. There needs to be a tight-fitting lid and a rack for the bottom to set cans or jars on. A wash boiler or a bucket makes a good water-bath canner if it is high enough to permit covering the cans or jars with one to two inches of water.

Not highly recommended by home economists, but possible ways of canning certain fruits and tomatoes are steamers, oven, and the open kettle method. Tin cans should never be used for open canning. Nor should peaches, pears, or apricots be processed in the oven, because they develop a brownish discoloration.

CANS OR JARS—Always buy new rubber rings for glass jars. Good rubber rings stretch to Hughes, all of Spur; Mrs. M. B. Thomas of Navasota; Mrs. Riley Wooten of McAdoo; Mrs. D. I. W. Birnie; and Misses Ann Hughes and Lucille Lucas of Spur.

Mrs. Thomas received high score, and Mrs. Giddings held second high.

Farewell Dinner For Green Family Is Given Saturday

A covered dish supper was held Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Green of Roaring Springs, who are leaving for Los Angeles, Calif., to make their future home. The family has lived in Roaring Springs for more than 24 years and have a host of friends who wish them success in their new home.

Those who brought covered dishes and gifts were Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Green, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Green, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Garlin Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Smith, Mr. and Mrs. D. Holt; Mesdames J. R. Meason, K. Jones, W. A. Lewis, Walter Keahey, A. B. Nichols, John Smith; and Marion Alice Mitchell, Joe Jimmy Keahey, Kelly Ann and Gaines Green, Lu-Neil, Mitchell, and Kay Lewis.

twice their length. Discard any jars or caps that show cracks, chips, or dents. Procelain-lined metal lids should be thrown away if the lining is the least bit loose. If wire clamps on lightning type jars are loose, tighten them by bending the wire down in the middle on top, and inward at the sides.

If you use tin cans, you'll want to make sure that you have the right kind of tin for the kind of food included in your canning budget. You'll need C-enamel lined cans for corn, lima beans, kidney beans, and succotash. C-enamel cans have a dull finish and light gold color. You'll need the deeper gold, brighter R-enamel for meats, all kinds of berries, cherries, cranberries, plums, pumpkin, and squash. Plain tin is satisfactory for all other kinds of fruits and vegetables.

WATER SUPPLY—Water that is suitable for drinking is usually all right for canning purposes. But very hard water may cause the tissues of vegetables to become tough and make the sirups to look cloudy. If you have no other water to use but hard water, you can soften it by boiling, then straining it through several thicknesses of muslin. Or boil the water, allow it to stand until a fine precipitate settles to the bottom of the pan. Then pour off the water from the "settling;" and use it.

THE CANNER—If you plan to can non-acid vegetables, you'll need a steam pressure canner. For only in such a canner is it possible to get temperatures above boiling. These high temperatures are needed to kill the organisms that cause spoilage in practically all vegetables except tomatoes.

Steam pressure canners need to be re-checked each year to see that the pressure gauge registers correctly. ### RECENT BRIDE IS HONOREE FRIDAY AT SHOWER IN SIMPSON HOME HERE

Pied 'Piniors BY MRS. M.

Most impressive picture of the month is the cartoon in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post, of an army unit led by a tank, passing a sign on the highway, reading, "Drive Carefully; Save a Life"; most cunning and attractive is the blue-eyed youngster pictured on the cover of the homemaking department in McCall's magazine; most absurd, is the advertisement of the cowboy drinking a "coke" out on the desert, with no visible means of its source, and with clothes on that would shame even a drug-store cowboy; most graphic and horrible scene, is that of bodies of Chinese dumped on the steps of a building after they had suffocated in an air-raid shelter in Chungking, shown in Life magazine.

"The desert of the desert" is the motto advertising ice cream which greets travelers in a drug store in a small town on the eastern edge of Death Valley, after a weary crossing.

EVANGELINE WILLIAMS IS WED IN SANTA FE JULY 20

Marriage rites uniting Miss Evangeline Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Williams, and Cass E. Goodner of Albuquerque, N. M., were performed Sunday afternoon, July 20, in Santa Fe by the Rev. I. L. Morgan at the Methodist parsonage.

Attendants to the couple were Mr. and Mrs. Don C. Taylor of Albuquerque. Mrs. Taylor wore a navy blue frock with a corsage of Talisman rosebuds.

The bride was attired in a navy blue suit with white accessories and wore a corsage of deep red sweetheart rosebuds. Mr. Taylor and the groom wore buttonieres of corresponding rosebuds.

Now in Lubbock, the couple will leave soon for a wedding trip thru the eastern states and the Great Lakes region, visiting Matador enroute. Later they will be at home at the Santo Espirito, in Santa Grant, near Albuquerque.

Mrs. Goodner was reared here and is a graduate of Matador High School, after which she attended Texas State College for Women, Denton. For the past two years she has resided in Albuquerque, where she was, for a time, supervisor and instructor at the State Welfare Home for Girls, and a student of painting and illustrating at the University of New Mexico.

In 1940 she won the annual New Mexico Art League scholarship for a summer study course in Taos. Her art work was exhibited with the Plains Artist show at the Texas Tech Museum in Lubbock in 1939; at the Coronado Art Show, New Mexico University, 1940; and at the State Museum, Santa Fe, 1940.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Goodman, who reside on a ranch near Estancia, N. M., attended a Catholic school in Santa Fe, and has lived in that city and in Albuquerque for the past ten years. He is a United States Forest and Range Administrator.

His trousers have little call to criticize the girdle-tuggers of the opposite sex.

Most church members fail to realize the unfavorable impression they leave when they complain of a task performed for the brotherhood, because they "felt it their duty" to do so; or attend the church services solely from a sense of obligation, rather than worship. This attitude recently brought forth the observation from a non-member that as far as he was concerned, he had as soon accept his ultimate reward of eternal damnation, as to go to church just because he felt he had to.

When Senator O'Daniel gets to Washington he will be separated from the rank and file of common people, but his interests will probably be focused on the rank and file of a nation.

Manhattan's Glamour Is Partly a Myth

By Katharine Brasch (From Angel's Good News)

WHEN people from all places declare that life is more or less right about it, for the reasons they think it the noise, and it isn't the little things.

It's the cozy elevator ride your apartment house, squaring between the Joneses' baby and the Smiths' Great Dane, the window-washers suddenly peering on your window sill, you're not dressed for the fact when you're not dressed for Full stop.

It's the breakneck speed of New York's revolving doors, whirling. It's that thing of nearly decapitated at the every time anybody squeezes you in a row behind. It's the on the subway stairs, and the end traffic leaving town, and business of trying to find a doctor who won't just send you to another doctor.

So that's New York, as I saying. It isn't the carbon monoxide and the lack of trees or loneliness in the midst of No. It's those second degree you get on the bathroom. It's other people's alarm of waking you at seven, from the court. It's the air in the booths. It's catching your heels in those round manhole covers on the street.

It's Little Old Manhattan, right. It's Glamorous Gotham, none other. It's running for life out of the path of fire engines. It's learning how to talk into telephones at once. It's New York. It's the town that out-of-town wouldn't live in if you gave them. Neither would New York as far as that goes. Not GAVE it to them. What they're paying and paying. That's all.

More brains are needed today than ever before, although perhaps they are not needed in the same places as before.

The welfare of the nation is squarely up to us as individuals. That is where it should be; that is where it is safest.

Every important advance begins in a small way—and with the individual.

Diversity of outlet, of use and of financial emblement are the strongest defenses we can have against economic emergencies.

Everything is possible.

In spite of the great masses of men, the difficulty is not to find men who will advance but men who are willing to be advanced.

Roosevelt's Message to Congress Asking Extension of Military Service

The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress on extending military service for selectees, national guardsmen and reservists, follows:

To the Congress of the United States: Last year the Congress of the United States, recognizing the gravity of the world situation...

The action taken last year was appropriate to the international situation at that time. It took into consideration the small size and underdeveloped state of our armed forces.

which they formed the bulk of these forces, had to be seasoned; its technical training and general efficiency greatly improved.

In effect, two steps were taken for the security of the Nation. First, the selective service act initiated annual military training as a prime duty of citizenship.

I need scarcely emphasize the fact that if and when an organized and integrated company, battalion, regiment or division is compelled to send two-thirds of its members home...

state of readiness. Small as it is in comparison with other armies, it should not suffer any form of disorganization or disintegration.

Therefore, we would be taking a grave national risk unless the Congress were to make it possible for us to maintain our present full effective strength and during the coming year give training to as many additional Americans as we can...

Occasional individuals, basing their opinions on unsupported evidence or on no evidence at all, may with honest intent assert that the United States need fear no attack on its own territory...

Nevertheless, it is the well-nigh unanimous opinion of those who are daily cognizant, as military and naval officers and as Government servants in the field of international relations...

against Austria to the present campaign against Russia.

Every move up and down and across Europe, and into Asia, and into Africa has been conducted according to a time schedule utilizing in every case an overwhelming superiority not only in material but in trained men as well.

Each elimination of a victim has brought the issue of Nazi domination closer to this hemisphere, while month by month their intrigues of propaganda and conspiracy have sought to weaken every link in the community of interests that should bind the Americas into a great western family.

I do not think that any branch of the Government of the United States will be willing to let America risk the fate which has destroyed the independence of other nations.

We Americans can not afford to speculate with the security of America.

Furthermore, we have a definite responsibility to every country in the Western Hemisphere—to aid each and every one of them against attack from without the hemisphere. I do not believe that any branch of the American Government would desire today to abrogate our Pan-American pacts of to discard a policy which we have maintained for nearly a century and a quarter.

If we do not reverse this historic policy, then it is our duty to maintain it. To weaken our army at this particular time would be, in my judgment, an act of bad faith toward our neighbors.

I realize that personal sacrifices are involved in extending the period of service for selectees, the National Guard and other reserve components of our army. I believe that provisions now can and will be made in such an extension to relieve individual cases of undue hardship...

That is why I must refer again to the sequence of conquests—German conquests or attacks—which have continued unintermittently throughout several years—all the way from the coup

"National Emergency"

Nevertheless, I am confident that the men now in the ranks of the army realize far better than does the general public, the disastrous effect which would result from permitting the present army, only now approaching an acceptable state of efficiency, to melt away and set us back at least six months while new units are being reconstructed from the bottom up and from the top down with new drafts or officers and men.

The legislation of last year provided definitely that if national danger later existed, the one year period of training could be extended by action of the Congress.

I do not believe that the danger to American safety is less than it was one year ago when, so far as the army was concerned, the United States was in a woefully weak position. I do not believe that the danger to our national safety is only about the same as it was a year ago.

I do believe—I know—that the danger today is infinitely greater. I do believe—I know—that in all truth we are in the midst of a national emergency.

I am not asking the Congress for specific language in a specific bill. But I can say frankly that I hope the Congress will acknowledge this national emergency either for a specific period or until revocation by the Congress or the President.

All-Important Issue

The objective is, of course, the all-important issue. It is to authorize continuance in service of selectees, National Guard and reserve components of the army and the retired personnel of the regular army, with the understanding that, should the exigencies of the situation permit, early return to civil pursuits will follow in due course.

Because of the swiftness of modern events, I think the Congress should also remove the restrictions in regard to the numbers of selectees inducted each year for training and service.

And, in order to reduce individual hardships to a minimum, I urge that the Congress provide that employers be asked to continue to keep jobs open for their employees who have been held in the army. For my part, I will direct the return to civil life of officers and men whose retention on active duty would impose undue hardship and that selectees and enlisted men of the National Guard, who have reached the age of 28, be transferred from active service to a reserve component as rapidly as possible.

"Time Counts" At great cost to the Nation, and at increasing dislocation of private buying, we are accepting the material burdens necessary for our security. In such matters we accept the fact of a crisis in our history.

It is true that in modern war men without machines are of little value. It is equally true that machines without men are of no value at all. Let us consolidate the whole of our defense—the whole of our preparation against attack by those enemies of democracy who are the enemies of all that we hold dear.

One final word: Time counts. Within two months disintegration, which would follow failure to take congressional action, will commence in the armies of the United States. Time counts. The responsibility rests solely with the Congress.

SEVEN YOUTHS LEARN MUCH ABOUT PRIVATE LIFE OF GOVERNOR IN CONDUCTING WAREHOUSE ROBBERY

FORT WORTH—Seven youths, all under 20—know more about the private life of Texas Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel, the state's sin-chasing, new junior senator, than his opponents and newspapermen have learned in three years.

The governor has been extremely hostile to newspapermen. He charged that newspapers were mere "tools" of the "professional politicians," and thus reporters knew little of the private life of the former flour salesman who parlayed a hillbilly band and a "pass the biscuits, pappy" catch slogan into the governor's chair.

But the seven youths learned— They learned that the governor slept on pillows which bore his name—"W. Lee O'Daniel"—embroidered in green thread. They even knew what kind of soap the governor used, and they strongly suspected that the radio-minded chief executive practiced his speeches before a home microphone set.

These seven seers were youths, ranging in age from 13 to 19, who robbed the warehouse where the governor moved his household belongings when he left his home here for the mansion across the street from the state capitol in Austin.

That the governor had a high regard for protection of personal property, they also learned. The governor, upon learning of the robbery Saturday, dispatched two Texas Rangers from Dallas to aid in cracking the crime.

The Rangers from Dallas, however, arrived too late. Six city defectives, working with a lone Texas Ranger stationed here, solved the crime 48 hours after the youths had rifled the warehouse.

The robbery came to light when an embarrassed father called police to report that bed linen bearing the green-embroidered name of "W. Lee O'Daniel" had been found in his home. He said it was "nice" to have the governor's linen, but he couldn't figure out how it came to be at his home.

Law officers charged his 19-year-old son with burglary. The other six youths were turned over to county juvenile officers. Mrs. O'Daniel came here to check the list of goods which had been recovered and returned to the warehouse.

Recovered items included playing cards, cocktail spoons, 22 bars of Life Buoy soap, a microphone set, a dinner gong, embroidered bed linen, and a miscellaneous group of other household furnishings.

USE OF WHEAT CARDS URGED

Since some buyers are deducting the wheat marketing penalty from the purchase price of a wheat mixture because it is not identified by a wheat marketing card, W. I. Rushing, Chairman of the Motley County A. A. A. Committee suggests that farmers who show a mixture of this kind and who intend selling it on the open market obtain a wheat marketing card from the local A. A. A. office.

As a convenience to producers and grain dealers, the wheat marketing quota regulations have been modified so that wheat marketing cards might be delivered to producers of a farm from which a wheat mixture is harvested and which has been classified as wheat mixture under the Agricultural Mixture Program.

The wheat marketing card will not change the classification of the wheat mixture but is being given for the purpose of convenience to the producer and buyer.

The procedure for delivering the wheat mixture cards will be the same as for regular marketing cards except they will be issued only upon request by the producer affected and as a matter of reference the word "mixture" will be entered on the office records, Mr. Rushing said.

Ford Sees Peace Era Business

DETROIT—Henry Ford, who was 78 years old on Wednesday, believes that out of the chaos affecting most of the world's peoples will come an era "filled with opportunity for everybody who can stop looking backward, face about and go forward."

He said he had no fear of a depression following the completion of the national defense program—"if competition remains active."

Ford, who never ceases to look forward himself, observed the birthday anniversary aboard one of his freighters en route with Mrs. Ford to their Northern Michigan lodge.

Still carrying his years lightly, he continues to be the active head, without title, of the far flung Ford enterprises. Usually up before 6 o'clock in the morning, he gets in a few hours of outdoor exercise, either walking or bicycling about his estate and occasionally doing a bit of wood-chopping before taking up the day's conferences or visiting the various plants of the Ford group.

The noted industrialist, who is completing a giant aviation engine factory and a new bomber plant as part of his effort in the national defense, reiterated his hatred of war, but added:

"He predicted a turning of industry, in its search for materials "from the forest and the mine to the farm," and asserted that a new plastic industry and a tremendous expansion of aviation, will give employment to millions of persons in the new world he visualizes.

Asked whether the new world would be tolerant of the Jews, Ford replied:

"Yes, there's a need for the Jew in the world and its bound to be recognized. Among the Jews are some of our ablest financiers and greatest merchants. They understand trade. They know that all prosperity is based on the ability of the farmer to buy. And they know the value and function of competition."

FARMERS MAY INSURE COTTON NEXT SEASON

Under the 1942 cotton crop insurance program, Motley County cotton farmers will be able to insure 50 per cent or 75 per cent of their average yield, W. I. Rushing, announces.

Details of the Department of Agriculture crop insurance program are being perfected in Washington now and growers will be able to insure their next year's crop before seeding, he continued. The insurance will protect them from all unavoidable hazards, such as droughts, insects, including boll weevils, flood, plant diseases, wind, fire and hail.

Premiums and guaranteed yields will be figured in terms of pounds of lint cotton, and the premium will be based on the crop-loss history of individual farms adjusted to reflect the crop-loss history of the county. Yields and crop-loss averages will be figured on the basis of historical or appraised productivity over a period of years.

Premiums for individual cotton growers, the A. A. A. official continued, will be figured on a lint cotton basis. Payment of premiums will be made with a commodity note which each grower will be required to sign guaranteeing payment of the premium on or before maturity date. The maturity date is at about the time cotton is picked or about the time indemnities are usually paid.

In paying the note, Rushing continued, it may be paid either in cotton or in cash equivalent. In the event the note is not paid when it matures, the cash amount of the premium will be deducted from the indemnity paid the grower, or from the first government payment he receives. These payments include cotton loan, parity payments and A. A. A. payments.

Approximately 566,000 bales of cotton of 500 pounds each will have been used in the cotton mattress and comfort programs when the second program is completed, the USDA announces. This represents the raw cotton for stuffing and the amount used in manufacture of ticking and comfort-covering fabrics.
