TRAIL DUST

About the most interesting pictures I have ever seen are those being published by a Chicago newspaper from an unenclosed collection of war pictures belonging to Floyd Gibbons. War stripped of its glory. Innocent men dying as bullets pierce their bodies. Helpless little children piled in heaps, the victims of guns and starvation. Wagons piled high with the ghostly remains of what had once been men who laughed, loved and dreamed. Grim, horrific pictures.

These pictures will not be used in text books for school children. The books about the great war will tell of the glory of armies and men and their bravery. Yet there is no place on earth but the school room to hope for an end to war. In the forest of ignorance alone is the timber grown that feeds the blood-splashed mouth of Mars. In youth alone is there hope for an end to the world's greatest crime.

Perhaps because I have not always lived as I should but as I pleased, I have never felt it my duty to moralize to friends except on three or four occasions. In each case it was done in the true spirit of friendship and a sincere desire to be of service. None of them paid any attention to my advice.

The old man was small and his hair was gone. His wrinkled ears looked like dried peaches swinging on his head. He was supposed to be heartless. In his rough fat hands he held a telegram that told him of the elopement of his favorite daughter. His old eyes that had seen so much, swam in their sockets. With a trace of a smile, he said, "I hope she will be happy." With no other word he tore the telegram into small pieces, dropped them in a cuspidor and walked away.

Nothing but the hills remain unchanged. Even they seem different or I can not secure the same perspective that I remember as a youth. But nothing changes more than an old sweetheart who is fat and thirty-odd, suddenly crossing one's path. There is a tension, a metamorphosis, while the heart shudders and struggles to keep the terrible beauty of young love locked away from what the eyes behold. The voice that was once the cadence of a bird's song is now the hollow laughter of a strange fat woman. Inwardly a small voice is saying "How could I?" And on second look at me her lips almost shape the words, "Thank goodness."

NORTHFIELD MAY SEEK PWA AID TO CONSTRUCT NEW SCHOOL BUILDING

Cammack, who was accompanied by Vance Gilbreath, met with the trustees and Principal Robert Fisher of the Northfield school Friday night in discussion of a CWA loan to improve the teacherage and playgrounds and also the possibility of securing a PWA loan to construct a new school building for the community.

The present building which is unsafe and inadequate for the present needs of the community would probably be removed and the new building constructed on the site.

NURSE ADVISES TOXOID DIPHTHERIA PROTECTION

Miss Marguerite Crockett of State Health Department who came here recently as a part of the Motley county CWA health and sanitation project advises the use of toxoid injection as a protection against diphtheria which caused the deaths of 812 children in Texas last year.

According to Miss Crockett: "There is a method of preventing diphtheria which is harmless and of proven worth. It consists of one injection of toxoid. The injection will produce a lasting protection against diphtheria. There are no harmful after effects."

BANQUET OPEN TO ALL

Club Pledges Aid to County Needy to Secure Vaccination Serum

Members of the Matador Lions Club will each be asked to purchase at least four tickets to the Motley County Chamber of Commerce Annual Banquet to be held here next Tuesday evening, Feb. 13th, according to plans formulated at the regular luncheon meeting of the organization held in the basement of the Methodist Church Tuesday. Altho the sale of tickets for the Chamber of Commerce banquet has no restriction whatever and non-members are urgently requested to attend, it is believed that business men purchasing as many as four tickets will invite rural friends who might not otherwise attend and thus better acquaint the entire citizenship of the county with the work being accomplished by the Chamber of Commerce. Business men will ask employees and their families and friends to purchase tickets and attend.

The Matador Lions Club, after a vote which carried unanimously at the Tuesday meeting, pledged to provide vaccine for children of Motley County needy families who were not on CWA relief but could not afford money for the serum, that the entire county might participate in the services of Miss Crockett, the CWA provided nurse.

The program following the enjoyable repast prepared by the Methodist ladies, included a reading by Mrs. J. R. Whitworth, expression teacher of the Matador schools, and also a reading by little Miss Mary Elizabeth Bryan who is a pupil of Mrs. Whitworth's. Both of which were greatly appreciated by the Lions.

Howard Hamilton was welcomed into the club as a new member.

At the regular meeting of Fleming Post American Legion held here Monday night, the organization voted to aid needy children of the county in securing vaccine serum and also to sponsor the securing of trees for parks, cemetery and highways.

The Guns of the Holy Trinity

BY HENRY C. ROWLAND

SYNOPSIS

Tom Jordan, young New England newspaper reporter, in love with Jessica Poole, has a hope of wealth from the salvage of a long-sunken French corvette. The comte De Corlay and his son Robert claim that an ancestor of theirs commanded the Fourquet (the corvette) when she sank, and any salvage is their property. A sailor, Sebastian, also is seeking a form of partnership is arranged between Tom and the De Corlays to prosecute the search. Jessica informs her guardian, Doctor White, that she has located the Fourquet, and by making a line fast to the hull can establish a legal claim to salvage.

"Well, you can scramble a bad egg, if you can stand the smell. Some of these very laws of ours can be used to serve the ends of pirates. I learned tonight that this yawl-rigger cruiser we're going to give the up-and-down is a Nova Scotia vessel that came in here leaking badly; and that they've put her on the beach to calk and piece her planking around the rudder post. They said her motor quit on her running around Sable Island to Digby in that hard nor'easter about a week ago, and as their sails were rotten they ran for it, not being sure about their position until they picked up Moshegan. That all might be."

"I told you he was an artful beggar, Tom."

"You told the truth, if that's the bird. There's no flaw to be found in the story, because this is about where he would fetch up running off before a nor'easter, and his first act was to go on the crib and rip the old caulking out of her seams and cut away the planking under the counter. As they are not hauled out and just float at high water they can work for only a couple of hours a day. The rest of the time they can go piloting round hunting for the corvette. They can't be fired out with their tub wide open, and she can't be sent to bottom as long as she's already there."

Robert nodded. "He's a downy bird, Sebastian. No ordinary gull-mot. To be on the safe side, papa and I talked English that day. But I learned later that Sebastian speaks it as well as I do." He was silent for a moment, then said slowly, "Look here, Tom, all this at- tending our relations a good bit, I think I'd better tell you that papa and I know just about where that wreck lies—and so must Sebastian."

"The deuce you do," said Tom, considerably startled.

"Yes, her position was exactly marked in the old boy's diary, and we've verified it."

Tom drew a deep breath. Here was an armor-piercing shell. Tom could see his immediate hopes and ambitions mounting to the zenith on the top of a detonated charge of trinitrotoluol.

"Just why are you telling me this, Bob?"

"Because it's no more than fair, my dear Tom. In all honor I can't let you go ahead and risk getting yourself into a pack of trouble only to blink you of your share of the proceeds. That would not be according to the traditions of my service."

"Viva la France," Tom said, "and likewise, noblesse oblige. I understand that thing a little better, now."

"Well then, Tom, I've learned a lot more about Yankee nerve and resource and your curious slant on things. Can't we come to an agreement about this business?"

"Unless there's some error, which I can't see, I should say you hold all the trumps, Bob."

"There is no error at all, Tom. I've thumped a dippy lead on the bottom of the old bark."

"Right. She's lying bottom up. But we haven't all the trumps, because Sebastian holds a few."

"Then why hasn't he gone to it, Bob?"

"I think that boat of his did really open up, and he thought he'd better get her tight before he had his go. He mayn't have thought there was such a devilish rush. But there is, you see."

"Have you got her buoyed?" Tom asked.

"No need. You can almost see her old carcass at ebb tide. I doubt you ever could guess where she is, Tom. But before we go any further, you might tell me what you feel your claim amounts to."

"What I said this afternoon can stand, Bob. All I ever counted on was her guns; but if she's bottom up, like you say, it would be some job to get them out from under her. Scarcely pay the shot, or shot, because we'd have to dynamite her, and she's probably petrified by now."

"Then why not fix on a money compensation, Tom? That, of course, provided that we can give friend Sebastian the slip some way."

Tom pondered this a little. They were by this time off Moshegan point, beginning to round that formidable bastion of the coast that can be so fearful to the landers alike under thick and stormy conditions of weather. Even now, still as it was, a great ground swell was bumping up disturbingly as its long skirts caught and were impeded by the shoaling bottom.

Robert's trained eyes, better far than Tom's, because they had not been frequently tormented by a typewriting machine, immediately picked up the dark blotch on the smooth surface about a furlong ahead and the same distance inshore of them. He perceived also something that Tom had missed against the opaque background of rocks and trees.

"I say, Tom, that boat is yawl rigged."

Tom was able to see then, as the boat came aboard, that Robert was right. The fact was significant, as except for yachts and the larger sailing vessels, sail had become a relic of the past for the small craft of that coast. Even when used, the rig preferred was almost always that of sloop or schooner. But the Canadiana had stuck to their time-honored jaws and ketches.

If the passing boat, that was running under auxiliary motor power, had been a small yacht, she most probably would have been painted white and have shown sailing lights. As neither of these details was in evidence, Tom's suspicions became aroused immediately. It was more than possible that Sebastian, terracing of the De Corlays' arrival on the scene, had decided that no more time was to be lost, and was now on his way to the Corrette ledge to begin his diving operations.

"By golly, Bob, that's our bird," said Tom.

"I believe you," Robert answered quietly.

Tom slowed the motor of the launch, then turned the spokes until the heavy boat described a wide arc and fell into a following position about a quarter of a mile astern of the cruiser, and directly in her wake.

CHAPTER V

FAIRLY convinced that Jessica was right about the wreck of the Fourquet, Doctor White did not allow the branches to form upon his motionless heel. He ate a hurried supper, then jumped aboard his launch and ran over to the village to take counsel of that local oracle and information bureau which is the general storekeeper.

"There's a diver right now over to Friendship," said the store keeper. "David MacFarlane. He lives there. Trades up and down whenever there's a job at Bath or Boothbay or Rockland. Dave's getting pretty old to go down himself, and I heard the other day that he's been laid up with sciatica. But he's got a 'Goon' working for him that he has trained, and they say he's a first rate hand."

Here summed the constellations in their proper places for a venture. The storekeeper went upstairs to his private apartment over the store and getting Dave MacFarlane on the telephone made strong and urgent representations. The name of Doctor White was, as has been stated, one to conjure by, which was well, as no man whose name is honorably prefixed with a Mac is apt to undertake in haste what may prove to be a fool's errand.

But such was the esteem in which Doctor White was held that the master diver promised to despatch his understudy within the hour, that he might make the twenty mile run around Moshegan point to White Island while the weather was clear and the sea smooth. Such a flat calm was apt to be followed by thick fog toward morning; and the rocks were many and varied.

Doctor White returned to his domestic jubilation, and in a state of suppressed excitement. Halfway up the big natural stone steps laid down on the path to the house stood Jessica.

He told her about the diver.

"Then that's all right," said Jessica. "What a luck, Geady!"

"Perhaps. But this obviates the necessity of your being a mudkark. You don't need to go overboard to-morrow morning."

"To-morrow morning?"

"To-morrow morning."

"To-morrow morning?"

"To-morrow morning?"

"To-morrow morning?"

Hollywood

By MARSHALL FISKE (Special Hollywood Correspondent To The Tribune)

When "Only Yesterday" comes your way, see it, but take your hanky along. John Boles plays the handsome male lead, while a newcomer to the screen, Margaret Sullivan, plays opposite him. The newcomer, Miss Sullivan, has made a big dent in the public consciousness through her work in this picture. I am sure you will like her and pity her.

The other day I talked with a girl who can scream beautifully. She often screams for some of the stars to make the scene more harrowing and realistic. But she has her troubles, too. "What do you think," she said to me, "the critics did not think so much of Miss—'s acting, but they said when she started to scream they knew right then and there what a great artist she was—it came right from the depths of her very soul. And to think I did all the screaming for her. Oh, it just makes me sick, the stars get all the credit."

Yes, and that is not all. Some unknowns have their hands photographed purporting to be the star's and some their legs, and some their beautiful backs, and thus it goes on and on while the ones that deserve it go unsung.

In conclusion, I am going to tell you about Marion Davies' Christmas Party. Whenever you witness a good and noble deed I think you should broadcast it. On many it may make no more impression than the proverbial water on the duck's back, but who knows, the effects of a noble deed may lodge in fertile soil and engender a crop of good deeds.

A few days before Christmas I witnessed a very noble deed so I shall tell you about it. I went to the N. G. M. studios very early that day, about seven o'clock. I was very much surprised when I saw many people on the streets at that hour all headed for the same studio. Men, women and many, many small children. Most of them were in a happy mood, a look of anticipation on their faces. And why shouldn't they look happy?

Were they not all headed for Miss Davies' Christmas party?

A huge stage had been set aside solely for their entertainment. Many famous men and women had volunteered to contribute their artistic services so that these poor people might be entertained, so that a little ray of happiness might filter through the murk of their drab lives. Several hours were consumed in this manner. Then the thousands (it was estimated there were more than five thousand) were more than five thousand repaired to another building where baskets were given to the heads of families. These baskets contained among other things, a ten pound turkey, potatoes, celery, onions, bread, cranberries, oranges and apples. All these were the fixings for their Christmas dinner. But the best of all was reserved to the last, a fruit of the preceding year's Christmas. The toys and candies for the children. As the children filed past a number of men handed them their gifts. For the little girls Sandy had left huge dolls, not little cheap dinky ones, a siren, but great big ones, in some cases almost as large as the little girls themselves. For the little boys, red-wheeled scooters were provided, not to mention hand ball bats and catcher's gloves. Every child, regardless of sex, was given a box of candy, a bag of roller skates and a bag of assorted nuts. The streets nearby to the studio was littered with children lugging their dolls and other gifts, and parents loaded with their baskets of edibles, a homeward bound, tired but happy, and perhaps inarticulate in their gratitude, but I think a unframed prayer hung on the mute lips, "God Bless Marion Davies."

Employee Loses Sight of Eye, Struck By Mesquite Thorn

Foreman of Road Work Totally Blind in One Eye From Accident

Clarence Cargile of Roaring Springs, foreman of CWA road work in Motley county was rendered totally blind in one eye when his eye-ball was pierced by a flying mesquite thorn some week or ten days ago.

Mr. Cargile, while in the pursuit of his duties, dropped a mesquite pole, which in some manner struck a mesquite twig causing it to fly into his face when the thorn penetrated his eye-ball. Although he was blinded almost immediately, Mr. Cargile did not realize the extent of his injury until the small thorn was removed by Dr. J. F. Hughes and an examination made.

Methodist W. M. S.

The ladies of the W. M. S. met in regular monthly business program Feb. 6 at the church.

The theme of the lesson was "World Friendship Among the Children."

The leaflet lesson was discussed by the following: Mesdames A. Freeman, Marvin McBrayer, A. J. Hodges, W. A. Campbell, C. B. Cargile, M. E. Keahey and Guy Braselton.

We are happy to report two new members, Mesdames J. R. Yandell and Huelan Cargile.

We had as a visitor Mrs. Ed Hudson. We are always glad to have visitors. Come again.

A large number are planning on attending the zone meeting Thursday, Feb. 8, at Jayton.

Come to our Bible lesson Tuesday, Feb. 13. You will be interested in these questions.

We were dismissed with prayer by Mrs. A. J. Hodges.

METHODIST CHURCH

The pastor and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Vaughan and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dunlap, Sr., attended the Bi-Conference Kingdom Extension meeting at Sweetwater last Monday. The meeting was largely attended by an interested crowd. Three Bishops of our church were there and spoke. Bishop Arthur J. Moore was the main speaker of the day. His message was great. Those who heard him were inspired and helped by this godly man.

This pastor and church welcome into our town, Rev. Cooley, the pastor of the Baptist church. We trust our relation together will be both pleasant and helpful.

Last Sunday was a good day. Sunday school off slightly. No preaching service at the evening hour.

The truck from the Methodist Orphan's Home at Waco was here Tuesday and picked up some produce for the home. He will load the truck in the Stamford District. The pastor wishes to thank each one who donated anything to this worthy cause.

All visitors are welcome to our services. Any who do not have a church house are invited to attend. Those who do not belong elsewhere are urged to attend all our services.

We had visitors in our last Sunday's services. Come again. "The Friendly Church."

League Union Rally

The Caprock League Union met in its fourth regular rally with the Forman's Chapel Methodist church, Thursday night, Feb. 1. There were one hundred and eight members and visitors present. We are all happy to see our attendance increasing at each successive rally. The Forman's Chapel Leaguers know how to entertain well. They rendered an interesting program followed by some clever recreational stunts, then they served a hobo supper to the entire group. We all feel that we want to visit them again soon.

The Spur Epworth League joined our union at this meeting and we accepted their invitation to meet with them in our next rally, Thursday night, March 1.

MELLOWED
100 MILLION YEARS

Made 100% from the oldest
PENNSYLVANIA grade crude

Don't get the idea that just because a motor oil is labeled "Pennsylvania" it is necessarily a fine oil. Some Pennsylvania oils are among the shoddiest oils that come out of the ground. Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil is refined 100% from the famous Bradford-Allegheny crude of the Pennsylvania field. This crude is the costliest of all Pennsylvania grade crude. It has mellowed for 100 million years. Furthermore, Sinclair Pennsylvania is free from non-lubricating petroleum jelly—a refining process which requires chilling the oil down to as low as 60° F. below zero. Try it. A single crankcaseful will prove that Sinclair Pennsylvania stands up better and lasts longer than any oil you ever used before.

MOVIE CHATTER
By a Rogue

Listen, I want to tell you something about this DELUGE picture we have coming up Friday and Saturday. This is one that is going to be different from anything ever on this screen. It's story of the world's coming to an end, caused by a giant tidal wave. It seems as tho the people know that the world is destined to be destroyed at a certain hour, and all about it, but of course there's nothing they can do to prevent it. Well, it comes, you see New York City destroyed, the statue of Liberty completely engulfed in a swirling maelstrom of water, buildings tumble and fall, crushing the life out of the millions—then, the elements clear, a new, bright day comes and there are only about fifty men and ten women left on the earth, to start all over again—ten men to every woman and no law except that of lust and desire. Of course it's a trick photography, and miniature buildings, et cetera, but nevertheless it makes a show you will like; it's the most fantastic thing that's been made lately.

Sunday and Monday we have story coming up that's very new to the people of Matador; "Golden Harvest," a story of the plains wheat country, the depression, etc. and it is carried by three real stars: Richard Arden, Chester Morris and Genevieve Tobin. It also deals with another side of the question, that the Chicago grain pit, where the brothers go to match hands against the mob. Realistic a good clean, sweet picture at the whole family will enjoy.

It will pay you to shop in Matador Saturday.

Deputy Sheriff Jack Robinson Joins Race for County Clerk Office

Present Peace Officer Is Well Known In County.

The Tribune is authorized to announce the name of Jack Robinson, Deputy Sheriff, as candidate for the office of district and county clerk of Motley county, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary, July 28, 1934.

Mr. Robinson is well known throughout the county where he has made his home for a number of years. He was employed as Star Route mail carrier between Turkey and Matador for several years and later became connected with the Phillips Petroleum Co. as local agent. Later he became connected with the sheriff's department and was made deputy sheriff under Sheriff J. E. Skinner, in which capacity he is still serving.

In connection with his announcement, Mr. Robinson said: "I want every voter in the county to know that I will appreciate their vote and influence and promise, in event I am elected, to fill the office to the very best of my ability."

Corn-Hog Meetings Scheduled For Motley County

The long-heralded corn-hog reduction contract is now ready for the signature of Motley county farmers. The essentials of the plan were given in last week's issue of the paper.

A series of educational meetings has been scheduled this week at which the county agent and committeemen will explain the contract in detail, and will give out the forms and instruct producers how to fill them in.

It will take some time for producers to collect the evidence of production and other figures required for the contract. It is important, therefore that every corn or hog producer attend one of these meetings, so that they may get their blanks and instructions and get started gathering the data to fill them in.

The schedule of educational meetings is given as follows: Roaring Springs schoolhouse, Monday, Feb. 12, 3:30 p. m. Matador courthouse, Monday, Feb. 12, 7:30 p. m. Northfield church, Tuesday, Feb. 13, 2:30 p. m.

Whiteflat, Methodist church, Wednesday, Feb. 14, 2:30 p. m. Flomot Schoolhouse, Wednesday, Feb. 14, 7:30 p. m.

Feb. 28 has been set as sign-up day, when producers in each community will meet with their committeemen and sign the original contract. All the information that goes into the contract must be had by that time.

The driver and passengers in the new 1934 Chevrolet ride like the glide of an airplane. One of the main reasons for this is the "Knee-Action" front wheels, which are independently sprung front wheels, to use the technical term.

By relieving the front springs of the task of carrying wheels and axle, therefore, it became possible to make the front springs as "soft" as the rear springs.

TO THE PEOPLE OF MOTLEY COUNTY

In announcing my candidacy for District Judge of the 110th Judicial District, composed of Briscoe, Dickens, Motley and Floyd counties, I do so fully realizing the great responsibilities of that office.

As your District Attorney I have tried to conduct the affairs of that office in a manner that would command the respect of the people. I have tried to make you a District Attorney of whom you would not be ashamed and for whom you would not have to apologize.

With the experience I have had as a private practitioner and as your public servant I believe that I am qualified to be your District Judge. I am not going to say that I deserve a promotion, for that is for you to say, but I will say that I desire a promotion and if you elevate me to such a honor as the office of District Judge commands, I promise again to be faithful to your trust.

I will do my best to see you before the election and present my candidacy in person and in the meantime I earnestly solicit your help, your vote and your influence in my campaign for District Judge.

Cotton Sign-Up Pleases District Agent

John R. Edmonds, district agent of the A & M Extension Service heartily congratulated the committees and producers of Motley county on the record set during the present Cotton Acreage Reduction sign-up campaign, when he stopped in Matador Monday.

He stated that district one, which comprises the Panhandle counties and includes Motley, was leading the state in percentage of acreage contracted, but he was agreeably surprised at the outstanding record of this county, which had 95 percent of its total acreage signed by Jan. 31.

New Cotton Program Expands 1933 Gains

The value of the 1933 cotton crop to growers of the South amounted in round figures to $856,776,000, including both lint and seed. This includes rental payments of $111,600,000 and option payments of $48,000,000 and is based on a production of 18,177,000 bales for the season.

The value of the 1932 cotton crop, including lint and seed, was only $425,488,000 and is based on a production of 13,200,000 bales in that year.

"Comparing these two sets of figures we see that there was about the same production of cotton in each year, yet the crop of 1933 brought to the farmers about twice as much as the crop of 1932," says Cully A. Cobb, head of the cotton section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

As a result of the better prices prevailing in the south in the fall of 1933, and by reason of the benefit checks distributed, many farmers reduced their outstanding indebtedness, paid back taxes, repaid Government seed loans and bought needed work stock and implements.

lands of their own. It was common during the fall to see cotton growers and their families crowding into the stores buying family supplies and purchasing luxuries that had been denied them for several years.
