When Salt Pork Greased

Paths to High Society To social climbers of the 30's Livingston county, all that was needed was a side of salt pork, and the snootiest of log cabin dwellers would welcome you to his home. Even more, he would unfallingly call upon you at yours, observes a writer in the Detroit Free Press.

But if all your larder boasted was wild turkey, venison, honey, game along the river, was more than three fish, and squab, the social heights were not for you.

This sidelight on the manner in which salt pork greased the ways to social prominence is given by son of pioneer parents, in his record of their early struggles. He writes that in 1837, when pork was quoted at $25 a barrel and the only way to obtain it at that price was by laborious travel to Detroit, the fortunate possessor of pork was certain to find himself inusually popular, with his neighpors casually dropping in at meat

Salt pork was regarded as a delieacy to tempt the most feeble appetites when anyone was ill.

But wild turkey was plebeian waste time and hall and powder in hunting them, one could always be obtained for about two cents a pound or less. One sale is mentioned in which a quart of whisky elling at 25 cents a gallon, was

Fascinating Lost Mines OWNU

THE LOST CABIN MINE SOMEWHERE in the Big Horn mountains is a mine richer than the Comstock lode. It was found in 1863, and lost in 1864, but some day a lucky prospector will find it again, open up its neglected tunnels and build a new cabin where the old one stood. Three men, Allen Hulbert, Cox. and Jones, were the first to discover this bonanza. They had gone out on a prospecting trip from Walla Walla, and some time in the spring of 1863 they found themselves in the wildest part of the United States. They had been going through terrible hardships, floating on a raft down the Big Horn, and traveling at night to avoid hostile Indians. Men in their senses would have recolled at the bare idea of such an adventure, but these men were bewitched by a golden phantom; they kept on prospecting as they went. At last, there in the Big Horns they found a wonderful pay streak, which panned "all the way from five cents to one dollar each trial." This was their rainbow end, and here they planned to stay through the next winter. By the time water froze overnight, each had something like half a bushel of gold. Winter passed all too slowly. As soon as the first spring warmth came to the little valley, they were on the job again. What their plans were, no one can tell. Perhaps they expected to go to Walla Walla that summer, laden with treasure; or they may have decided to stay on until either they or the nuggets were exhaust-But these plans were destined never to be completed, for Indians suddenly fell on Cox and Jones. killed and scalped them, and rifled the cabin. Hulbert who had gone some distance off, saw the horrible sight, but was powerless to help his

As soon as the marauders left. Hulbert hurried down to the cabin. The gold was still there, and he packed a knapsack full, buried the rest, and struck out in the opposite direction taken by the Indians. After 18 days through wild, unknown country, he reached the North Platte river, and found the old traff to California. Here he met up with a large party of gold seekers heading toward the northwest. On hearing his story, part of the enormous crowd decided to return with him to the mine, and more than 500 people, with 140 wagons, accepted him as their leader. How was a man to retrace a trail like his? How could be remember every landmark, every direction of those terrible 18 days of flight? Hulbert thought he could but all summer long he tried in vain to reach that abandoned cable where the bodies of his friends guarded the golden treasure. At last he was forced to admit defeat, and the angry crowd, after even once gathering to lynch their bewildered lead-

Then, dering the Sloux uprising, when the Blg Horn country was alive with Indians, three men made their way to the head of the Little Big Horn, and here they found what must have been the real mother tode of the Lost Cabin gold. It was the largest known body of rich quartz in the world The newcomers built a boat loaded it with gold, and planned to float down the river until they reached a settlement. Here they would outfit and return to where fortune had smiled her golden grin at them. But death lurked down stream; the Sioux camp, stretched miles long, and 6,000 warriors waited and longed for a chance to spill

It was midnight when the awkward boat started past this gigan tic camp. A dog, sniffing the air. barked excitedly. A sentinel peered and listened. The rapids of the Little Big Horn reached for the boat. In haste, the miners grew panickya moment more, and the boat over turned-another, and they were captives of the hostile Sloux.

In the scuffle that ensued one man managed to get away. He had no food, no weapons, and his clothing had been torn until only a few rags covered him. But he had clenched his hand over a couple of nuggets, and these he kept during food. If you were too thrifty to the days when he wandered to search of a settlement. At last he

By James J. Montague

USED to be one of those city men who believed that the farmer is ignorant of his job, and that if he ever learned to adopt modern scientific methods there wouldn't be any farm problem. Touring through the countryside from time to time I had observed farm machinery left out in the fields and going to rust, instead of being carefully housed against the weather in neat sheds. I had seen great fields of garden truck allowed to waste in the field, while at every cross road, gasoline station trucks bearing the names of city markets were unloading tomatoes and potatoes and squashes and beans to be sold to passing motorists as fresh vegetables. It occurred to me that with good management and a farmer, upon whom practically everybody depends for their sustenance, should be rich and happy, and beyond the need of sending members of granges to Washington to plead his cause. That was before I ran, or attempted to run, a farm for myself. The farm which I rented was a small one. I had no experience in farming, but I figured that I could glean from books ten times the knowledge of agriculture that the husbandman gains in a lifetime on the soil, and probably revolutionize the business of supplying food for the teeming millions who have never learned to get along without eating. The winter before I took over my little farm I spent in reading all the books on plowing, reaping, killing insect pests and marketing crops that I could find on the library shelves. I began, as all good farmers should do, at seed time. Having, with the aid of two muscular and unwearying Italians, plowed and harrowed the soil. I sprinkled the seeds of various kinds on it and waited for results. The first result was the arrival of a crow, and a few friends of his who evidently had been sitting about somewhere on a hilltop and congratulating each other on the prospect of a fat year. I discovered them one morning deployed about the lot on which corn had been planted, taking their breakfast. Other crows, apparently having had enough to eat, occupied positions on high trees, and cawed a warning when any human creature was observed approaching. hastened to the center of the field, amid a beating of black wings and a sound of innumerable angry caws and examined the hills in each of which I had dropped fifteen or twenty kernels. One or two of them still contained these kernels; the remainder had been stripped

The next day I hired a neighbor to build me a scarecrow. It was a was completed and set out, an effigy rake held in one flabby cotton stuffed hand. The artist was sitting on a nearby fence, viewing it with pride, and I felt that he was justifled, for not a crow was in sight. But that afternoon, when I returned to the field the destroyers were again gathered together, and feeding fat on what I had hoped to be the foundation of my career as an agriculturist. Having no gun, I merely rushed forward, brandishing a hoe I had brought along with me. The crows looked up, observed that all was not well, and lazily dapped to a grove of pines, where they perched and made comments.

evidently about me to one another. In bed that night I thought this business over and made up my mind that what the average farmer lacks is the intelligence to adop modern methods. So I designed and built a new kind of scarecrow, had the outward semblance of a fe roclous beast, something like a tiser and something like a dinosam and buried under its bosom was radio receiving set which roared forth the loudest programs that could be provided by a high-powlifler. When it was in stalled and ready I turned on the current, and with the aid of a spy glass, observed its effect.

As soon as it got warmed up and went to work in earnest on a duet between a tenor and a mezzo so prano, I felt like Columbus must have felt when he first discovered land on which no white man had, up to that time, ever trod. The crows who had perched on its head and arms rose in a body emitting caws of terror, and did not pause in their flight till they were far down on the horizon. I do not, and never did know what the word eureka meant, but it seemed to be the right thing to say, so I repeated it a number of times. I was convinced that farmers had up to this time never used any intelligence in dealing with crows, and when they found that I not only had solved the crow problem for them, but would give them the benefit of my great reasonable amount of labor, the invention without charging them one cent, they would make me an honorary member of all their many organizations, and probably their next candidate for the presidency of the United States.

All that ony the great stars Broadway, as well as politicians and manufacturers of patent medicines, perfumes and automobiles gave to the world their messages over the air. Now and then from a distance I could hear a few faint caws, but there was in them a note of defeat. I felt that at last

I had won. That evening I had to make a trip into the city, and while there I called upon a manufacturer of africultural implements and talked to him about my invention. He seemed to be interested, but he intimated that I could hardly expect him to back me in manufacturing these electrical scarecrows without some kind of a demonstration. So that evening he drove with me out to my little farm

In the morning, I woke him early and we went together to the field. Passing places belonging to the neighbors we observed multitudes of crows filling their craws with seeds that belonged to others, and apparently quite defiant about It, for they paid no attention to the small stones that I shied at them as I passed. They would merely flap their wings, hop a little way from the ground, and call out in-

had turned on the current before left the house, and was perfectly sure of the results I should be able to show. Long before we rounded the curve on the road that led to my out-door experiment station we could hear an early morning radio announcer introducing a children's hour, and from another part of the field where I had an apparatus tuned in to a different station came the shrill notes of a child prodizy. and her dear teacher.

singing of how she loved her school Saying nothing to my companion, who was already obviously intrigued. I swung sharply from the road through a gate and around my field. At the sound of the approaching car there was a swish of wings and as we approached the scarecrow, at least 300 birds which had been feeding in the fields beside it, rose and departed for their distant or nearby homes.

The agriculturist turned to and said, mildly : "I made a mistake about the pature and purpose of your machine,

I fear." "How do you mean?" I inquired uneasily.

"I supposed it was to do away with crows, not to attract them to your fields by the promise of music with their breakfast. Now, if you are a lover of crows, that would be nice of you, but you know it's my business to discourage them from eating their meals on a farm, not o provide them with every facility

In my time it was pretty prevalent, too much so for the happiness of myself and my fellow pupils. But I do not believe it ever did any good.

Today, the teachers' profession, while still not paid as highly as it should be, is the most important calling in any civilized country.

The teachers themselves have been taught scientifically. They know better how to gain and hold the attention of their pupils.

They are more tolerant with dullards, who, from no fault of their own, are slow to learn. School teaching is a highly important business. It is important because it arouses

"50% of all motor wear occurs during the starting period"

... say automotive engineers

Only the oil with the "Hidden Quart" will stay up in your motor and cut down this starting wear!

Here are the facts: Oils not Germ Processed drain back into the crankcase when your motor is idle. Bearings, pistons and cylinders are dry when you start. Even in warm weather your motor makes at least a thousand revolutions before the quickest flowing oil can reach all parts. Bare metal grinds against bare metal-destructive wear occurs.

Conoco Germ Processed Oil cuts down this costly starting wear! The patented Germ Process-adding concentrated oily essence to highly refined oil-makes it penetrate and combine with metal surfaces. That penetrative film, forming the "Hidden Quart", becomes part of the metal itself and never drains away.

Hundreds of dry-crankcase runs have proved the "Hidden Quart" lubricating value. Cars using Germ Processed Oil were driven 15 to 75 miles with the crankcase empty but without motor damage!

Germ Processed Oil protects your motor another way. All cars built since 1931 have greatly increased pressures and must have oil of extra high film strength for safe lubrication. Straight mineral oils have no more film strength than they had 10 years ago-some have less!* Conoco Germ Processed Oil, with 2 to 4 times the film strength of mineral oils, gives modern motors the lubrication they need.

Only Conoco Germ Processed Oil gives full motor protectionwhen you start, while you drive. You will cut motor wear if you

COW THAT STARTED A WAR

SHE was only a skinny, foot-sore old cow, abandoned by a party of emigrants on the Oregon trail, but she was found there by a Miniconjou Sioux Indian. He needed a piece of hide to patch his worn moccasins, so he saw no good reason why he shouldn't kill this forlorn beast to get it. When his act was reported at Fort Laramie, that cow suddenly became very valuable, so her owner declared. The Indians offered to pay him $10. He wanted $25 and the Indians refused to give it.

Then Lieutenant Grattan, young, inexperienced and hot-headed, obtained permission to go into the Miniconjou camp and arrest the Indian who had killed the cow. There was a dispute.

Suddenly the soldiers opened fire and within a few minutes Grattan and all his men were dead-victims of their commander's obstinacy.

Soon afterwards, Col. W. S. Harney was sent with an army to "punish" the "hostiles." Harney surrounded the camp of a Brule chief, Little Thunder, and demanded that the slayers of Grattan be given up. Little Thunder could not comply with the demand for the very good reason that his people had nothing to do with the tragedy.

So Harney attacked and there followed the so-called Battle of Ash Hollow, with its shameful record of 86 friendly Indians slaughtered, among them many women and children, five wounded and about 70 women and children captured. Small wonder that the Sioux learned to hate the white men and to fight them bitterly for the next 20 years. And an old worn-out cow was one of the causes of that war!

. . . BOOMERANG

N 1840 President Martin Van Bu-I ren was the Democratic candidate for re-election. The Whigs, passing by the great Henry Clay, nominated Gen. William Henry Harrison, whose principal claim to distinction was his career as a successful Indian fighter.

One of Clay's friends, hearing of "Old Tippecanoe's" nomination, grumpily declared, "Give him a barrel of hard cider, settle a pension of $2,000 a year on him and, my word for it, he will sit for the remainder of his days in his log cabin by the side of a sea-coal fire, studying moral philosophy." The editor of a Democratic paper in Baltimore thought it would be a good joke on the Whigs to publish that statement. But it turned out to be a fine joke on the Democrats!

Other Democratic papers reprinted it. Immediately the Whigs got busy. So General Harrison wasn't fit to be President because he was a poor man and a plain man, eh? Well, he was just as good a man as Martin Van Buren, living in luxury in the White House and spending the taxpayers' money foolishly, etc.,

In vain the Democrats tried to undo the mischief by protesting that they hadn't started this talk. A Whig, one of Mr. Clay's good friends, had done it. But it was no

So Harrison went to the White House, sent there by a small item printed in a Democratic newspaper. It was a sneering item that turned out to be a boomerang against those who used it.

BARBS

FLATTENED out, they wouldn't measure much over an inch in length. They look unimportant and barmless enough, these little pieces of wire, sharpened at each end. But, take enough of them, bend them ta loops and place them at regular intervals along two strands of wire woven together. Then . . . well, ask some World war veteran if he ever had to listen to the agonized cries of a wounded buddy caught in a tangle of barbed wire! Who invented barbed wire? Many have claimed that honor. But whoever it was, he could not have foreseen the course of history on the Great Plains of the West. Time was when thousands and thousands of longhorn cattle ranged over hundre is of square miles of land and were trailed to roaring "cow towns" by reckless crews of daring horsemen. That was in the day of the "open range."

Then barbed wire crossed the Mississippi. The cattle trails were closed by mile after mile of wire -two strands nailed to posts. Next came the "nester" to plow under the buffalo grass on which the longhorns had fed.

The barbs on the wire were the tremendous trifles which ended the cattle era of the old West and sent one of the most picturesque figures in American history, the cowboy, galloping down the trail to oblivion.

Prepared by National Geographic Society. | and Strongest cloth, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service. | Although when livi TF AN imaginative child could be transported from a visit to an American toy shop to the midst of an Australian eucalyptus forest, and there shown for the first time the Australian native bear, or Koala, climbing among the branches and nibbling the leaves, he would be hard to convince that the teddy bears he had been inspecting had not been brought magically to life; for the Koala, with his round rolypoly body, short arms and pointed nose, is the living prototype of the jolly toy bear that helps make Christmas morning merry in many an American nursery.

Koalas are found in eastern and southeastern Australia, but do not occur on any of the neighboring islands or in the western half of the continent. They were probably once the most common animals in the Australian bush, but about 40 hour run of Melbourne, with its years ago a widespread epidemic more than a million inhabitants, to overtook them and they died by thousands.

ly for the sake of their warm, thick fur, and as a result are now extinct in New South Wales. A few hundred are still to be found in Victoria, in carefully protected localities, and a fair number remain in Queensland. Little is known of the nature of the disease that so nearly exterminated them. but study is being given the subject, now, with a view to preserving the remains of this formerly numerous species. The koala is one of the most interesting of Australian animals. He has a thick, grayish-colored fur, a prominent black nose, and stands about two feet high. A good specimen weighs about 30 pounds. He is one of the most inoffensive animals imaginable, doing no harm or damage to anyone or anything.

He Lives in Trees.

Essentially an arboreal and mainly nocturnal animal, he spends his time in the branches of certain species of eucalyptus trees, where he feeds at night upon the tender young leaves. If approached, be will sit and stare at the intruder with a surprised expression, and only if danger threatens he will climb to the topmost branches. He rather inactive, especially in summer, and often sits in the fork of a tree, sleeping the daylight hours away. The adult males are foud of perching themselves on a dead limb at the top of a tall tree. from which they appear to enjoy their survey of the surrounding landscape

They have five toes on each foot, and each toe is armed with a curved, needle-sharp claw. The toes are in groups of twos and threes, the two claws being in the form of a double thumb. They are thus enabled to climb easily and also to grasp the branches of a tree and pull them down for the purpose of feeding on the leaves. Even an iron telegraph post offers no obstacle to their climbing powers, and they have been seen sitting among the wires on top of one, although it is difficult to say what motive took them into such a position. A tall flagstaff seems to present an irresistible temptation, and even in the windlest of days they climb such posts to perch on the top.

CHICK SEXING IS NO FAD, MYSTERY

THE WINDS THE PARTY WALL

Plan May Be Costly to Most Flock Owners.

By H. H. Alp. Poultry Specialist, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.— WNU Service.

"Sexing" baby chicks, the latest innovation in modern poultry raising, is no longer a fad or a mystery, but it may be of limited value to the general run of farm flock owners. Interest in the question is at the peak when the baby chick season is at its height.

Buying sexed chickens so as to get only pullets and no cockerels may be justified in certain instances. On the other hand the flock owner should weigh the increased initial cost of the chicks. the heavier losses from mortality as a result of the higher cost of the chicks and the loss of income from the sale of cockerels.

How cockerels help reduce the cost of raising pullets is shown in the 1934 records from 37 Illinois poultry flocks whose owners kept Although when living in the bush records in co-operation with the colthey take no liquid, in captivity lege. Most of these flocks were Leghorn. For every pullet placed in the laying flock in the fall, there was an income of 40 cents from the of their undoing, for if given such sale of cockerels. Thus the cockthings in mistaken kindness they erels on these farms reduce the cost soon begin to lose condition and in of raising each pullet 40 cents.

Mortality loss is another factor which weighs heavily in deciding whether or not to buy sexed chicks. In many instances chick mortality runs as high as 20 per cent. In a cockerel-pullet flock this is not extremely serious. However, a 20 per cent death loss in a flock composed entirely of pullets would be much more serious because pullets usually are valued higher than cockerels.

There is no mystery or secret about chick sexing. It is merely the turning out of the vent of newly hatched chicks for the purpose of looking for a small prominence smaller than the head of an ordinary pin which is located at the see the Koala in his native gum edge of the vent. Any well-defined trees, and it is hoped, through the prominence is a fairly accurate sign of a male chick. But Stockport, though it may claim to possess the oldest Sunday school still functioning today, wasn't quite the first in the field. That honor belongs to Gloucester, where, three or four years before the Stockport venture was launched, the first modern Sunday school was inaugurated by Robert Raikes, a printer, and Rev. Thomas Stock. Reading and writing were taught along with the Bible in the early years of the

Morning ... Headaches

OR YEARS I've suffered sick headaches in the morning. I didn't realize until the doctor told me how many women are bothered with too much acid, and he recommended Milnesia Wafers. Since I've been using Milnesia I've felt like a new person. Haven't had a cold either, because when you get rid of the acids you don't get colds. . . .

MILNESIA Wafers neutralize the excess acids that cause indigestion, heartburn and sick headaches. Each wafer is a full adult dose, children-one-quarter to one-half. Pleasant to take.

WHAT

When you make A DEPOSIT?

SOMEBODY once said: "There are three American institutions upon which the stability of the nation depends-the Government, the Insurance Companies and the Banks"

Depositing money in a sound bank like the First State is, indeed, similar in many ways to buying a treasury bond or an insurance policy. For in each case the money you turn over is SAFELY reinvested-in public works, in industries, in homes, in commercial enterprise. In a word, the instant you deposit them your funds become a part of the great river of credit that turns the mill wheels of the

As far as I have been able to gather from authoritative quarters in Washington, there is nothing left to do but perform the funeral ceremonies for the ill-fated bird and the so-called national plan which it represented. The reports of Presidential conferences, of meetings of statesmen and executives of the administration, of this plan and that plan and statements and expressions of opinion respecting the future course, mean absolutely nothing. When the Supreme court said that the congress had unlawfully delegated to the President power to

Even the Brain Trust the Federal Constitution making such laws as NRA proper cannot win country-wide support.

Enough indications already have become visible to warrant a stateprice cutting and ness practices going on and that these will be disastrous to countless business interests. The congress will strive in a half-hearted fashion to offset the loss of strength and prestige suffered by the New Deal at the hands of the Supreme court. But the effort plainly will be only half-hearted. So it is made to appear that the country must submit for several months at least to a had condition. After that, if the opinions of experienced men are worth while, there ought to be a substantial change for the better Careful surveys, close examinations of the problems at hand and candid thinking has brought to unblased observers the conclusion that there is more hope for the future now as regards the economic situation than there was while the Blue Eagle continued to soar and ballyhoo artists continued to preach about its powers to restore prosperity. I believe this statement which is the consensus ought to be tempered with one suggestion. There is likely to be a restoration of confidence generally if the administration turns aside from Brain Trust theories and employs the practical instead of the theoretical method of government.

Then, after a period of ten years, the islands would be granted complete independence. During the ten years, exports and the number of Philippine immigrants to the United States would be restricted. After that the islands were to be outside the American tariff wall.

The Philippines are not, as many folks in the metropolitan centers of the states might believe, a nation of elevator operators, bus boys and professional ping-pong players. They raise great quantities of rice, sugar cane, hemp, manila, coconut, corn, tobacco and maguey. Their forestry, fishing and mining is important. They manufacture sugar, cocoa, coconut oil, cigars and cigarettes, chocolate and coffee.

former mayor of Detroit. The new Philippine constitution, which now becomes effective as soon as the existing government is terminated by a proclamation of President Roosevelt, is much like our own Constitution, with the following important differences:

The president may serve only one term, six years. He can veto any part of any bill. The legislature, with two minor exceptions. cannot appropriate more money than his budget calls for. The vice president is a member of the cabinet, and cabinet members may speak before the legislature.

Although the plebiscite on May 14 was a landslide in favor of the new constitution, it was held in the wake of an uprising which was the bloodiest the islands had seen in 15 years. There were several actual battles. Constabulary officers ultimately quelled the uprising, but not until 61 rebels were dead and 54 rebels and 10 constabularies wounded. A congressional committee head ed by Senator Millard F. The bill calls for a conference on that subject one year before the commonwealth period expires, but it is probable that this will take place at an earlier date.

The final outcome, it is thought will result in one of the following

(1) Complete independence, exactly as proposed, which will involve (according to most authorities) economic ruin and probable absorption of the Philippines by "an Oriental power." (2) Independence, exchanging tar attached to them. The islands are determined to have independence, complete and at any cost, according to Quezon, who has fought for it in diplomatic circles in this country for many years, served as president of the sland senate since 1916, and will in all likelihood be its first presi-

I. Warning Against Forgetting God (Deut. 8:11-18).

God is forgotten. 1. Through plenty (vv. 12, 13). It is always true that in time of prosperity the people forget God. 2. Through pride (vv. 13, 14).

The natural tendency of the human heart when visited with abundance is to be lifted up with pride. 3. Through self-confidence (vv. 15-18). The inevitable result of pride is self-confidence. The children of Israel arrogated to themselves the power to get wealth. It is ever so that material prosperity turns the natural heart away from God as the source of blessing. II. The Sin of Robbing God (Mal. 3:7-12). One of the sins of Israel which brought upon them the chastening hand of the Lord was that of withholding the tithe. The prophet assures the people that their bringing into the storehouse their tithes and offerings would be responded to by God in sending them abundance. III. Talents Are to Be Used for God (Matt. 25:14-30).

1. The distribution of talents (vv. 14, 15). This distribution was a sovereign act, giving to each one of his own servants his own money.

2. The employment of the talents (vv. 16-18). Two put to use the talents given them, resulting in doubling their value. One hid his talent.

3. The accounting for the taldemanded an accounting from each one of the servants. The ones who had been faithful were not only praised but promoted, while the one who hid his talent was not only reproached but also suffered the loss of the talent given him.

IV. Giving Should Be Systematic (I. Cor. 16:2). This instruction concerning giving is based upon the glorious doctrine of the resurrection of Christ. The one who has come under the power of the resurrection of Christ will be both systematic and liberal in his benevolences. The standard for Christian giving is not the

They gave from the depths of their poverty (v. 2), and their unstinted gifts thus became richer in meaning. c. Their willingness surpassed their ability (v. 3). God reckons gifts by the degree of willingness, not by the amount given. d. They were insistent on being allowed the privilege of giving (v. 4). Christians ought to be taught that giving of their means is a high privilege. e. They first gave themselves to the Lord (v. 5). The only method needed of raising money which has God's sanction is a consecrated hand in its own pocket. 2. Emulation in giving urged (II Cor. 8:6-15). Paul used the generosity of the Macedonian church as a means of stimulating liberality with the Corinthians. a. Not as a command (v. 8). Giving which has God's sanction must be not only spontaneous, but liberal, b. As a proof of the sincerity of love (v. 8). Love is benevolent action toward the one loved. c. As the completion of their harmony of Christian character (v. 7). The Corinthian church abounded in spiritual gifts, but needed the grace of liberality for the harmonizing of their lives. d. Christ an example of self-sacrifice (v. 9). Christ was rich, but for their sakes he became poor, e. Gifts to be accept able with God must be from a willing mind (vv. 10-12). Every Christian should give something (vv. 13-15). 3. Encouragement to give (II Cor. 9:6, 7).

a. The volume of reaping is based upon the sowing (v. 6), b There should be a heart purpose (v. 7). c. Giving should not be of necessity (v. 7). God loves a cheerful giver (v. 7).

Fruits and Vegetables Play Important Part.

By EDITH M. BARBER

RECENTLY I read of an account of a talk given to a group of college students where the speaker indicted severely the present American diet. The speaker stated that generally the food eaten in this country was "unbalanced." In my opinion the dietary habits of the people of the United States are better than those of any other nation. They have improved enormously in the last 20 years, for two reasons.

The first reason is the availability and the high quality of a great variety of fruits and vegetables which in our cities have practically no It is possible even in the smallest town to purchase a large variety of canned products instead of merely tomatoes and corn, the staples of a bygone day.

The second reason is the increased knowledge of the importance of a plentiful amount of fruits and vegetables and of milk and eggs. The discovery of the vitamins and their sources and further knowledge of the need of certain mineral salts and the general dissemination of these facts by newspapers and magazines have made the men and women of today diet conscious.

Children generally are being fed in such a way that not only are they in better condition than once was the case, but at the same time they are being trained to like foods throughout life. Again I say that the foundation of good nutrition is plenty of milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables, some meat, some fat, some sugars and some cereals.

IMPROVISED furniture is just the the sort to have when an essen tial article cannot be bought at the present moment. The cost is reduced to a minimum, the labor is not great, and the utility is assured. Also some of this type of furniture is very attractive and decorative. For the summer shacks the sturdy sort, minus frills, suits the architecture-if one can use so pronounced a word for such a simple dwelling place. The improvised furniture is also well-suited to cottages, and it may be used effectively in city and country houses. There is no definite decorative style to improvised furniture. It may be constructed for lawn, or inside-the-house, or porch furnishings. I have enjoyed a comfortable seat in a hammock made from the staves of a barrel. Two holes were drilled near the ends of each stave. Through them clothesline was run, and knotted between staves. The shape was in accord with the contour of the staves and was further accented by giving the hammock an upward turn at the ends, for added

It is a far cry from this piece of lawn or porch *furniture to the dainty boudoir dresser contrived from three boxes. Each box is stood on its side, the center one with the width toward the front, while at ends the boxes have the width at the sides which makes them project at side front. All boxes are on a line at the back, and are secured together with screws. Pieces of boards resting on screw eyes form shelves. This is the construction. Now for the dainty

Use small brass rods, fastened inside the boxes just under their top boards, on which to run curtains, which extend to the floor. Edges of box tops and curtains may have borders or be finished with a ruching made of narrow contrasting colored chintz in double box pleats. Or the entire dressing table may be covered with net over the textile. The sides of boxes are finished as described, but the slightly fulled material is brass tacked or invisibly tacked along top edges.

With a mirror above this dressing table, the furniture is a genuine addition to chamber furnishings. Frequently such a dresser is made to order by a cabinet maker for a special room, being done by a decora-

This record is an outstanding demonstration of tire efficiency. To go 500 miles in less than five hours on this rough and bumpy 26-year-old brick track, without tire trouble of any kind, demonstrates the strength and blowout protection that Firestone builds into their Gum-Dipped Tires.

AB JENKINS ALSO RECENTLY demonstrated the stamina, efficiency, and blowout protection built into Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. He drove his 5000 pound car over the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, 3000 miles in 231/2 hours. This was an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, and although temperatures were as high as 120°, he had no blowouts or tire trouble of any kind.

These records are made possible by special construction features built into Firestone Tires.

Take no chances—protect your life and the lives of others by letting us equip your car with Firestone Tires and give you the Safety and Blowout Protection that race drivers demand.

Before you buy new tires ask yourself these three questions 1-"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"
