PRICE SEVEN CENTS

RAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

People everywhere. The seams of the earth are bursting with people, driving automobiles, riding, impatient to cross rivers of private desire. The tempo of life has become so tense that even leisure quickens its pace. We need to capture the lost talent for the return it to the store of human needs.

Other night in New Orleans a National Air Lines plane was several minutes away from the field, turned around and landed again. A passenger scheduled passage had failed to get aboard. His absence escaped the usually thorough check of the passenger. The air lines placed an extra plane on the route and the public is more than willing to pay for the extra service. Air travel is making staggering gains. The terminals are crowded to capacity and passengers stand in line for a ticket and reservations. Hard-pressed railroads are forced to nail boards over windows of depot.

Tampa, the nickname for the city is Georgia ice. Why don't we Texans blacken peas "Benson"?

Trailers are parked by the gross, like cotton or cat-trailers in Texas. They are piled with tons of grapefruit oranges being hauled to the plant. The juice is frozen and placed under refrigeration. The trees are loaded with golden fruit and in all every grove the ground is strewn with windfalls. It seems as much as is decaying as is gathered.

People are friendly and make extra effort to be of service to strangers. Yesterday, the woman manager of the Dunedin Chamber of Commerce called a dealer in another town, and within 40 minutes a new Chevrolet automobile was at the door of her motel. I did not know a person in this town and when I asked to show the dealer my credentials, he waved them aside and asked only to see my Texas drivers license. He wrote my name in a form, asked me to sign it and was gone. I did not pay a cent, make any kind of deposit, even talk to him more than five minutes. I have decided that my face is either honest or that a friendly man knew it would be my friend if I ever tried to escape with his new automobile.

It is fun to fly, but the pleasure departs rapidly when you begin walking under the Florida sun. The new automobile solved a very distressing problem. Within an hour I had become wet more times and gotten on more wrong roads than is possible in Texas in a month.

Some hungry mosquitoes are flying outside my window as green as this is being written. There is something pathetic in the tone of their humming, and I feel somehow that they are not being dealt with fairly. My sympathy, however, does not have sufficient magnitude to cause me to open the screen. Mosquitoes should solve their own problems in their own way — and I fear they will.

SCHOOL BUSES HAVE BUSY YEAR

Matador School buses play an important part in the education of the children of the Matador Independent School District.

During the past school year the buses have traveled over 60,000 miles in transporting an average of 110 children to school each day.

Six thousand-fifty-nine and two-tenths gallons of gasoline were used by the buses at a cost of $1,210.68. Three hundred and twenty-seven quarts of oil were used at a cost of $130.80. Repairs, and other miscellaneous expenses amounted to $1,657.17 and tires cost $329.75. Batteries amounted to $85.40 and salaries of drivers $2,880.00.

School officials have announced plans to purchase two new chassis to replace two of the present chassis. These should be received in August in time to change the bodies of the present buses to the new chassis.

Officials estimated that about $3,000.00 to $3,500.00 could be saved by using the present bodies (which are in good condition) another three or four years. Enough money is available in the School Transportation fund to pay cash for the new chassis and the work involved in changing the bodies.

Officials also pointed out that Matador buses had not been involved in any accidents in the past ten years and credited this to the bus drivers and their interest in the safety of their passengers. Drivers for the past year were Mrs. Pearl Cartwright, W. J. Denham, J. H. Renfro and Mrs. Billie Hopkins.

All bus expenses are paid for by funds received from State Funds, the officials said.

COTTON PLANTING TIME DRAWS NEAR CLOSE FOR AREA

Time limit for cotton planting is rapidly drawing to a close and as yet many farmers to get to dry weather, according to County Agent Bill Palmyer.

In some spotted areas where farmers have planted, insects are taking their toll of the young cotton. There are some thrip, fleahoppers and lice in cotton in the county. Poisoning has begun on many farms and in most cases where farmers are doing their own insect control, they are saving their crops.

One thing about being "dry and hot", what crops are up will cost less to produce since there will be few weeds until it rains. And, if it rains in the near future, farmers with crops up will be able to keep ahead of the weed crop with little effort.

Allotted cotton acres in the county this year totals 34,845 as to last year's allotted cotton acres of 37,644. Last year approximately 12,000 bales of cotton were ginned in the county, while prospects for this year are far short of this amount, unless it rains next week and then it is doubtful if there will be enough time to raise cotton.

According to Tommy Moore, county officer of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation office here, wheat allotments remained at 11,622 acres for this year.

In the irrigated section of the South Plains, cotton crops are held in better than they have been in the past few years, however, the past few years in these most dry land farms in these areas are in bad shape.

Tribune Wins First At TPA's Convention

Matador Tribune took a sweepstakes honor to capture a trophy, and first in news pictures to get a plaque, at the annual Newspaper Contest last Saturday during the annual convention of the Texas Press Association held in Amarillo. Elbert Reeves, state representative of Matador, stood to receive the award in absence of Editor Douglas Meador, who is in Miami, Florida.

Other awards that the Tribune received are Ribbon of Achievement for 3rd place in News Writing; Ribbon of Achievement for 4th place in General Excellence; Certificate of Achievement and a Ribbon of Appearance.

Forty-nine Texas newspapers that won in 1956 Texas Newspaper Contest were honored at the morning session of the TPA convention. Top newspapers in the state were judged by divisions based on population of the towns where they are located.

Sweepstakes winners were determined on a point-score basis, with five places in each division going to the newspapers which accumulated the most points in the six contests. The Tribune was in Division VI for weekly newspapers published in towns of 2,500 population or less. There were 15 newspapers entered in this division.

The Sweepstakes Trophy was awarded by the Dallas Morning News and the News Picturing Service by Harper Standard Engraving Company. Each year different businesses related to the newspaper work furnished the trophies and plaques.

Several years ago, Mrs. Deen ran a series of articles on "Great Women of the Bible" in her newspaper column. The unexpectedly huge response launched her on the research which emanated in the book.

"All of the Women of the Bible" was published last year by Harper & Brothers and met with immediate success. Copies may be obtained from Cokesbury Book Stores (Tribune has one copy for sale).

Conservation Measures Urged

Although Matador is suffering from severe dry weather the water situation looks good as far as city officials can determine at present.

For the first 25 days in June of this year the average number of gallons used per day totaled 344,328. This topped last year's average of the same period by almost 200,000 gallons per day. During the first 25 days in June last year the daily average was 144,932 gallons.

Reason for the big difference in daily number of gallons used is that last year at this time Matador had recorded five and twelve-one-hundredth inches of rain, while this year dating back to October, 1955, there have been only 2.31-inches of moisture.

Largest amount of moisture in any 24-hour period since last October was thirty-eight one-hundredth inches, according to Lee Burns, city water superintendent.

There is no immediate danger of water shortage at present, but persons in the city should not waste water and use all conservation measures possible in homes," Burns said.

During June last year there was not near so much water being used on lawns, gardens, etc., as this year.

Half Million Dollar State Project Begins

State engineers are at work on an approximate half-million dollar project to improve the last "bottle-neck" on State Highway 70, according to Algie Groves, chief inspector.

About three months of engineering work will be needed before work gets underway on State Highway 70 from Matador to Dickens. State engineers will do this work and the state will contract a company to build the new two lane road.

The road will be similar in size to the one running east of Matador. Bridges will be built higher and stronger and many of the dangerous curves will be taken out of the present road.

"When this bottle-neck is fixed, persons traveling over State Highway 70 can drive approximately 400 miles on a good road all the way," Groves said.

Other state employees are working with mowers and blades to rid the highways of hazardous weeds that could cause fires. About 18 men are in the midst of this annual project.

SOCIAL SECURITY PAYMENTS UP 30% IN PLAINS AREA

Social Security payments totaling $292,811 went to 7145 people in the South Plains Area in the month of December 1955, according to John G. Hutton, Manager of the Lubbock Social Security Office. This was an increase of over 30% over payments at the end of 1954.

In making this announcement today, Hutton said that many persons think of the old-age and survivors insurance program as providing protection only for older men and women. He made it clear that it is also a program benefiting youngsters. At the end of 1955, nationwide, about 1,275,000 children under age 18 were receiving monthly benefit payments under the social security law. Of these, 120,000 were being paid monthly dependent's benefits because of the retirement of an aged parent; the others were receiving survivors benefits as children of a deceased parent. Hutton pointed out that about four times as many orphaned children are receiving benefits under the old-age and survivors insurance program as are being helped under the Federal-State program for aid to dependent children. Nationwide, almost 300,000 mothers of children under age 18 were receiving monthly survivors insurance benefits under social security at the end of 1955.

As a further illustration of the protection Federal Survivors insurance now provides for the young people of the country, Hutton pointed out that the mother and children in 9 out of 10 American families can receive monthly survivors insurance benefits, if death should

The Diary of Mary White

May 4, 1956, Friday

Repeatedly I have emphasized to my classes all the year that if they are going to speak English they should develop their skill in its use and increase the number of words in their vocabulary. Some of the older ones have been so bold as to inform me that they could use the English language. To capture their interest more than to test their knowledge, this morning bright and early I wrote this sentence on the blackboard.

"This morning I feel the urge to be a taskmaster. If you wish to labor manually I will compensate you with filthy lures in infinitesimal quantities. The tasks are to fill containers with partially disintegrated rock and muscally elevate it up the incline to a final interment in a community project."

Turning to face the room I asked, "Now, will you? I'd like to have your names, please, if you will raise your hands."

Not a single hand was raised. I saw several slink in the direction of the dictionaries. I teased for a full thirty minutes while they strove to decide whether or not they could decide whether or not to raise their hands. I finally told the primary children that I wanted them to bring beach sand and put it on our garden. They went up and down the cliff all morning like little bees and earned nearly fifteen dollars altogether. Every little child had pockets that jingled. The tragedy was that there was not one stick of gum or one piece of candy in the store. Now, for a little guy with a pocket full of nickles that is a thoroughly disgusting situation!

Did get to see the new baby tonight. He is named Alvin for the baby that died in my arms back in March. Now the village is happy for Alvin has come back to them—so the old belief was. This baby's mother is very modern and does not believe such but it was respect for grandmother's feelings that caused the keeping of the old custom.

May 5, 1956, Saturday

There is a new baby in the White family tonight. It's name is Evinrude 15hp. We have borrowed a wooden cradle to rock it in at sea and now the ice just must break up for Papa White just can't be patient. In his imagination he has already followed every river in Alaska to its source.

Mamma White got her baby (the laundry) out in the fresh air today. The ground is free of snow under the line this time but is it ever boggy! Anyway, linens will smell fresh for they are flapping in the Artic breeze.

No mail. A team went to Moses Point but the plane had not been there. I think this is the change over period from skis to wheels so we may have no mail for some time. Guess we are just 'sissies'. We can hardly stand it when we get no letters.

May 6, 1956, Sunday

A gray drizzling rain has fallen most of the day. It didn't seem to dampen the spirits of the children or anyone but mine. The children have played and romped all day. Theretha and several of the older girls went on a picnic as soon as they could pack a lunch after church. It didn't seem to matter that they waded snow drifts over their boot tops to get to the top of the cliff where the ground was bare and where sticks of wood and bits of grass could be found. They built a fire, dried their socks, brewed their coffee and had a wonderful time until about four o'clock. The sun did graciously put in its appearance for a few minutes about two o'clock giving them a brief semblance of picnic weather.

Roger managed to lose all his sack of marbles. He just could not resist playing keeps with the bigger boys. About five this afternoon he stood around in the house with a forlorn look. He couldn't join the game outside because he had no marbles. Later I noticed him right in the middle of a hot and noisy game again. As he was going to bed I asked how he managed. For a quarter he had bought twenty-five marbles off one of the bigger boys. He has about three dollars of his own that he has earned at various times. Maybe it will keep him in marbles until he gains a little skill in shooting. I have no luck when I try to coach him to play with boys his size. It seems that anyone can join a game and some of the big boys always join them.

I took my exercise pushing a crochet needle around this afternoon. Went to church tonight and chatted in the rain with my neighbors after it was over.

May 7, 1956, Monday

Two things happened today to make me feel like a statesider even while living on this stretch of tundra. A dog team came from Moses Point about ten last evening. It brought us the groceries we had ordered from Nome about a month ago. It also brought a passenger, another T.B. patient returning from the hospital. We had fresh eggs and slab bacon for breakfast. (Truthfully though we've eaten canned bacon and powdered eggs so much that the fresh ones were a bit tasteless.) This afternoon I looked out my office window and saw a man with a dress coat and a hat on. I was startled by such strange sights in our village. All coats here are parkas and caps are worn but never hats. After inquiring, I found it was our returned patient. During his two years stay in southeastern Alaska he had picked up these articles of clothing. I suppose I must don my bit of a hat, my toothless, heelless shoes and some nylon hose when I go to Mt. Edgecumbe. They are going to feel a bit strange though for I certainly have not had them on in sometime. I'm not going to relish the feel of powder and lipstick for I've enjoyed my days with a clean face but I suppose in order to look civilized and intelligent I must put on some false nose.

May 8, 1956, Tuesday

Witnessed an old style seal catch today. Some energetic seal made a hole in the ice and came up to sun himself and sleep for a while. He was only about a mile from the village so he was spotted with a telescope by Clarence Saccheus. Clarence put on a snow white parka and walked close enough to shoot him with a twenty-two. I couldn't see the seal and lost Clarence as he moved slowly and silently over the ice. I could see him again after his shot and his movements became rapid. This is the way seals were caught on the ice in the old days when the hunter had to get close enough to use a spear. The hunter of old wore a white fur parka, fur mittens, and fur knee pads. Getting on his stomach he would patiently crawl the last hundred yards, being careful not to move when the seal raised his head to take a look around as was his custom between each little nap. Nowadays they hunt in the open water in their kayaks. They just wait until one comes up for air. One shot will send him scurrying back but after two or three such the seal is so in need of breathing that he will come to the surface and stay thus giving the hunter a good shot.

Oogruks go to the bed of the ocean which isn't over twenty or thirty feet around here and make a funny grunting noise. The Eskimo carries a long stick. By putting one end in the water and the other to his ear an oogruk miles away can be located. Silently the hunters row their kayaks into that area and wait. When the oogruk emerges for air two or three Eskimo boats are strategically located and waiting for him. They usually get their oogruk. That night there may be a feast on oogruk liver broiled over an open fire. It is a real delicacy. I even like it.

These are the animals that provide the village with its supply of muktuk. A three or four inch layer of fat is between the skin and the meat. This is peeled off in strips and then boiled. It amounts to no more than boiled fat meat which many people in the states are fond of if it is peeled from a pig or a beef. Some of them eat it frozen and sliced raw but the majority cook it. In this cold climate, although I've never eaten any, it is easy for me to see how eyes can brighten and mouths water at the thought of such.

State Certificates Issued In Courses On Public Health

AUSTIN—Almost 4000 Texas foodhandlers so far this year have won certification for having "satisfactorily completed the public health course in sanitary preparation and handling of food as prescribed by this department," the State Department of Health has announced.

Of the 3864 embossed certificates handed out by the department's three public health instructors, 463 went to owners and managers of food establishments who attended and completed the 3-day course of instruction covering all phases of sanitary food production, preparation, and service.

"We feel the accomplishment is significant," State Health Commissioner Henry A. Holle said, "since some 31 different diseases can be spread through improperly handled food and drink."

The free courses have been part of the department's health education curriculum since 1938. Most health departments over the nation conduct similar schools, but the movement originated in Texas.

Dr. Holle said school lunch room workers, who annually serve 114 million lunches to Texas school children, "are always among the most faithful patrons of the courses."

Sanitary Foodhandling Instructors, working out of the Division of Health Education, are assigned to specific cities or towns on request of local health officials. Working in concert with county sanitarians, they cover the whole range of sanitary foodhandling.

Instruction, said the department, "is tailored to interest anyone engaged in any way with food—from housewives and dairymen to candy wrappers and barbecue chefs."

Consisting of five 2-hour sessions of lectures, demonstrations and films, the schools cover:

First day—bacteriology, second day—food contamination, day—methods of disease spreaders, fourth day governing the operation of handling establishments, day—personal hygiene.

Students who successfully complete the classes are awarded "certificates of competency" and when 80 percent of the players of a given food establishment win certificates, the establishment is presented a "plaque of approval."

Of the 29 schools held this year, four have been held exclusively by kitchen dining room personnel in hospitals; the department

WESTERN HATS ON PARADE

Hats have always played an important part in a woman's life. They have been the source of fun, jesting, envy—and a very high mortality rate on bank accounts. Occasionally some woman, just to be different, will buy a hat for comfort. However, the chapeau as known to Milady is usually a bit of frill and meringue.

Now the truth is out! Men wear all kinds of hats, too, even among the tall, rawboned Westerners you see at the Texas Cowboy Reunion. Some favor the straw, claiming coolness, light weight, and a new one every year. Other have very little use for this type, referring to it as the farmer's style.

The big, high crowned, black hat of yesteryears is still treasured by some cowboys and ranchers. Its claim to fame is its utility. It will ward off mesquite limbs, serve as a drinking vessel, a fan, and will even smother a fire. Its usual fatigued, beaten look makes it impervious to moths. After 15 or 20 years service, it becomes a part of the wearer. It is seldom changed during a life time.

Then there is the round-head style, circular, crushed down on top, with a wide brim making a good sun shade, low wind resistance, and having some claim to a romantic Western background.

The sombrero (sometimes worn with a bolero) has several advantages. Its color appeals to children and the fair sex. The chin strap may be used to hang the wearer, and it brings to mind vast Pampas, rich senoras, and beautiful senoritas.

Among the younger generation the rakish, curled brim, dented in the sides and low head lines make the Western curl a very popular number around Rodeo time.

Customary with the oil, cattle and politician class is the "twin eight fantasy". It has a straight, dignified appearance made of soft, rich material and color. It is strictly a race horse and disdains hot, sweaty, dirty overalls.

A really fine number is the convertible type that can be worn by father, son and daughter who all have about the same head size.

year now you can expect to see a group of open-minded cowhands gathered around a man in a high silk top hat.

Twenty-Eight Scouts To Make Annual Trip

Boy Scout Troop 60 has been busy the last few days making final checks for the annual summer camping trip to begin July 1st, on the bus, for Midwestern University in Wichita Falls where they will attend a cheer-leading school for one week.

The cheerleaders are Betty Neighbors, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Neighbors; Raynita Dunning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Dunning and Joanne Darsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Darsey.

For the Scouts and Explorers, there will be fishing, hiking, camping and miles of beautiful scenery—but no swimming will be in store for the youngsters, according to Scoutmaster Algie Groves.

Swimming is out because of the cold mountain water, Groves said. However, there is a complete program and camp routine of cooking, dish washing and other chores will keep most of the boys busy.

Cost of the entire round trip will only be $16.00 per boy, and this includes eats, transportation and insurance. They will ride in the two busses owned by the Scout Troop.

Troop 60 is sponsored by the Matador Lions Club and Groves has made the annual trip for the past three years. Others who are assistant scoutmasters and will make the annual trip are: Freddie Welling, D. E. Pitts, Jr., and Otis Hines.

On such outings, Boy Scouts learn to live safely out in the open. Study of plants, wildlife, and nature in general will be taught at the camp. All trips are organized to keep a program moving each day and boys who have made the annual trips, are eager to go again.

Groves stated that the trip would last from a week up to 10 days.

SUCCESSFUL GRASS PLANTING

Conservationist James Priddy says "Grasses, like all crops to be successful, must have the seed bed properly prepared."

Now is the time to be getting ready to prepare the land on which you plan to plant sown native grasses next spring, especially on sandy land.

The most ideal seed bed for such grasses as switch, Indian or love grasses is a drilled cover of dead sorghum or millet.

In the event of our next rains, that permit planting, we should make ready to drill sorghums or millet to assure a good dead cover in which to seed our grasses in early 1957.

Several district cooperators who plan on participating in the acreage reserve part of the soil bank have said they plan on drilling this land in sorghum for soil protection as soon as moisture permits.

There is no better way to protect these acres and at the same time add much needed organic matter and store up late fall and early spring moisture for next years crop.

We can make this cover crop somewhat more beneficial by the addition of a few pounds on such summer legumes as cowpeas or sesbania.

COUNTY AGENT PALLMEYER SAYS:

GOOD RANGE PRACTICES PAY OFF

Proper use and stocking of range land has proven to be profitable from pounds of livestock produced as well as from conservation of soil and water to withstand droughts.

Range management practices are tools of range management.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Tribune has been authorized to present the names of the following candidates for office, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, Saturday, July 28, 1956.

Court of Civil Appeals (7th Judicial District): Alton B. Chapman

For Representative 88th District: Elbert Reeves (re-election); William L. Ehrle

For District Attorney, 110th Judicial District: John B. Stapleton (re-election); H. A. C. Brummett

For Sheriff, Tax Assessor and Collector: Jinks Wilson; J. D. Spray

For County Commissioner, Precinct No. 1: Clyde Gilbert; Raby Webb; John Stotts; J. E. (Doc) Taylor (re-election)

For County Commissioner, Precinct 3: T. B. (Boone) Simpson (re-election)

Each individual should choose the range tool that will help him maintain a long lasting, profitable ranching business. These range land practices are: proper use and stocking; deferred and rotation grazing; brush control; reseeding, crossfencing, salt and water distribution.

Ranchers should graze only their own grass for, with stocking rates figured on using half and leaving half of the current year's growth. Another good practice is deferred grazing. The deferred pastures can be mightily important as a feed reserve during winter. By rotating pastures, one pasture can be deferred while grazing others.

By controlling brush, water ordinarily sapped from the ground by trees is left for grass. Brush control should always be followed by deferred grazing. Cross fencing should be planned where each area has the same grazing potential. This means an acre of bottomland may graze as many livestock as 5 acres of upland.

When it is not profitable to fence, then proper salt and water distribution can give a rancher a chance to use grasses in the upgrazed corner. Livestock do not need water and salt together as once thought. Livestock will find salt when it is moved into ungrazed areas if they need it.

Practice of these conservation methods will assure a more profitable business in the future.
