Man Saw Pitchfork Kid Weep When He Learned of Relatives' Deaths

When he learned of the deaths of his relatives, the boy's tears rolled down his brawny cheeks," says C. C. Garrison, who made a trip to Kansas City with Pitchfork, accompanying a trainload of cattle. The kid had learned that his relatives were dead.

Garrison's letter is as follows: "I want to be counted as a friend of the late Pitchfork Kid. I knew him only after the turn of the century, but I have stayed in camp with him, worked with him on the range, always found him on duty and true to the clan.

"I first knew him as Billy Parks. In the early turn of the century, Kid and I went to Kansas City with a trainload of Matador cattle. It was on this trip while in Kansas City that the kid met some men who had known his people.

"They told him that his people were dead. I felt very sorry for him as big tears rolled down his brawny cheeks. It was then that he told me that his real name was William E. Partlow (the friends in Kansas City had informed him) and that when he got back to the ranch he would have the records changed to his right name and he did.

"As many will recall, he had a phrase he used a lot in telling a story it was 'Ha Ha As the Negro says'.

"He told me on the trip to Kansas City how he was left an orphan and had an uncle living nearby. His grandfather sent him to his uncle's place to borrow a monkey wrench.

Colton Estimated At Over Half-bale

FARMERS are looking at their crops and crossing their fingers. As of this date the crop outlook is believed to be the best in the county's history. The Tribune has made numerous inquiries and the opinion is almost unanimous. The prospects for both cotton and feed are the best in the county's history. One farmer said the prospects might have been equally as promising in 1924.

Rainfall during the crucial hot July growing season has been "almost as if it was ordered," one farmer said. Insect damage for some unaccountable reason has been at a record minimum, although many farmers have taken precaution with adequate control.

"Rabbits have damaged some cotton near the turn-rows in my field," a farmer declared, "but I don't believe they have eaten any more than on average years."

Sunday afternoon hail from a small cloud destroyed or damaged in the neighborhood of 1,000 acres of crops west of the Flomot community Hall has also damaged crops in that community previously this season. It has been pointed out that hail (Continued on back page)

Poignant Memories Evoked by Visit Of Family to Marelda White's Grave

This lovely Sunday (June 2, 1957) we did a lot of sight-seeing around Anchorage. In the afternoon we called Calvin Franks and asked him to tell us how to identify Marelda's grave as we had not yet bought a marker. He consulted his books and said, "Lot 48, No. 1."

I shuddered. My beloved was only a number in a cemetery.

Such thinking was fleeting, of course, and I was immediately annoyed with myself for I know with a sureness that transcends even the shadow of doubt that she lives.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. White with their children, Marelda, 15, Theretha, 11, and Roger, 8, left by plane from Seattle, Washington, July 26, 1955, for Elm, Alaska. Mrs. White, a former Matador teacher had a two-year contract to teach, and Mr. White had employment with the U. S. Civil Service.

After leaving Matador, the family had resided at Kettle Falls, Wash., for two years.

They were the only white family in the little Alaskan village, which they reached on August 2.

The pleasure they had anticipated in their new home was obliterated in the tragic death of their daughter, Marelda, only 15 days after their arrival when she fell from a cliff near their home, striking her head on jagged rocks at the base.

To have given physical birth to a little form into which God breathed a spirit like unto His own, then to have been privileged to watch that little life grow physically and spiritually for fifteen years is a rare and God-given joy.

To watch that young spirit, at the age of nine, surrender itself to the God who gave it breath is an experience that fills a heart to bursting. But to have that loved one depart this world to inhabit the celestial sphere where she is limited by neither time nor space is the most wonderful experience of all.

I believe in the omnipresence of Christ both because I read it in my Bible and because I have known His presence. I knew that we were to be like Him but that we would have the quality of omnipresence never entered my thinking until I felt Marelda's presence near me.

I cannot mourn over Lot 48, No. 1. I can only strain to envision the glories she already tastes and become excited as I long for the day when this marvelous thing shall happen to me.

The short scripture "Jesus wept," which happened as He stood at the grave of Lazarus was misinterpreted by those witnessing the scene and is still being misinterpreted today. I believe that he wept because he had to call Lazarus back to the severely limited life one lives in this world.

the three days we stayed in Juneau.

The wool whipcord suit R. W. was wearing became too warm in Anchorage, but in Juneau's seventy degrees it was torture.

He went to a department store and purchased some gaberdine slacks. They were sent to the tailor to have the cuffs finished. When they returned he sighed with relief and put them on.

Heavenly days! He measures 34 inches. They had been cut and hemmed at 24. Entirely too much shank was exposed. Fate is just "agin" him.

Here is news for purple people. No longer need you fear the Pigeon-toed, rock n' roll, flying purple people eaters. Polka-dotted polly whumples have come to the rescue. Chapeaux bas!

Every column should have a comforting thought for the day. Mission accomplished, I will move on to the finer things.

Since I have told nearly everyone I know, this won't come as much of a surprise, but my reading public has increased to five.

Thanks so much Mrs. Harlan and Mrs. Archer for the nice notes of encouragement, but you really should know better than to compliment a writer, even a fifth-martini one. The results are about the same as when clapping for a hillbilly band's performance.

Mrs. Joe Harlan of Amarillo will be remembered here as Doris Mullins, one who also typed, swept, and swore at the Trib. . . for journalistic experience! We differ in our aims because I am working for money. I about have this office work "whupped", Mrs. H. except for phone answering. Everytime the telephone rings I answer with trembling voice and knees for fear that somebody's visiting relatives was left out of the "locals."

Mrs. Lizzie Archer of Lubbock, and I are kindred spirits. She wrote that she always felt that she was the only person who didn't manage to Old Settle in August. She has invited me to visit her on the big reunion day. It isn't that I have anything against reunions exactly, it is just that I always feel that I am going to be stepped on.

Now that elections are over I think that winners and losers alike should be congratulated. There must be something super-

The Nation's first forest conservation postage stamp goes on sale October 27 at Tucson, Arizona during the annual meeting of the American Forestry Association. The issue was designed by the Post Office Department to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt, one of this country's earliest forest conservationists, and to salute the many private and public agencies whose cooperation has helped make possible the progress in forest conservation.

Deryl King Finds World is Small

Deryl D. King, formerly of Roaring Springs, now employed by a construction company at Coral Gables, Florida has decided it is a small world after all.

In a recent letter to Tribune editor, Douglas Meador, he tells of an unusual experience which he had on his vacation this summer. His letter, which was also an order for a copy of Harry Campbell's "Early History of Motley County," said in part: "I am most anxious to receive this book as it tells of the country that I know and love so well."

"Very recently I had a most unusual experience. I took a vacation trip to the Island of St. Helena and on the return trip aboard an English boat I became engaged in conversation with an Englishman. He asked where I was from and when I replied "Texas," he immediately asked if I knew where Matador was.

"This was quite a surprise and then I realized why he had asked. He told me that for many years he was a stockholder in the old Scotch company called "Dundee." I knew of course that he was thinking of the Matador Land and Cattle Company. He was quite surprised when I told him I had spent many hours on the ranch."

A supply of the books is still available at the Tribune, and will be mailed any place in the United States, postpaid despite the increase in postal rates. Price of the book is $5.

Sales have been steady, with many former residents, now living in other states, writing home for copies.

Sailor In Alaska Enjoy Tribune

From Kodiak, Alaska comes the following note of appreciation from former Roaring Springs resident Lester A. Mullins, SK3, of the U. S. Navy, whose wife Joyce, lives here:

"I wish to express my full appreciation for receiving the Matador Tribune for the past two years. I really have enjoyed being able to pick up the paper and read of the happenings there at home. No matter where I am, I can always count on the Tribune to keep me in close contact with the news there in Motley County.

"I wish again to express appreciation and extend my thanks to you for forwarding to me an outstanding issue of an outstanding paper. Lester A. Mullins SK3, Box 18, Kodiak, Alaska, August 23, 1958."

What sort of world for them?

With mingled pride and wonder you watch them—absorbed in their play. How sure the young builder's touch... how graceful the deft girl-gestures. You treasure each promise for the future that shows in their choice of toys and activities.

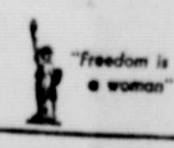

And always in your heart is the prayer that they will grow up to a world as happy as the one you've made for them. A world full of opportunity, where each may choose the life work most satisfying and fulfilling.

There's one way to help make your dreams for them come true! Be on the watch for ideas that could deprive them of their right to free and independent action.

The idea, for instance, that "government should run such and such a business, an institution, a service." Yet experience has shown that the more things government controls, the less freedom there is for the individual.

Use your "woman-power" to refute this idea that "government should run things." Remind those who are for such a theory that the loss of anybody's independence is a threat to everybody's freedom.

Very much aware of this danger are the independent electric light and power companies, because government already runs part of the electric business. And powerful people are pressing to take over more.
