TRAIL DUST

So long as green mesquite simmers in the coals of camp fires about which tanned-faced men listen to herds of restless cattle...

We walked along a path beside a fern-fringed stream that laughed its way between cork trees and wild geraniums to the sea...

Some men follow paths along the brink of oblivion, looking forward, instead of down until a curve must be negotiated without their cognizance...

Dwarfed by the vast cosmic skyline, the sod shanty at the end of the dim wagon road meandering out of the boundless prairie...

The sun had fallen into a purple lake, splashing bright copper on the prow of a vagabond cloud-ship anchored off the cape of evening...

Listening at the narrow door, the woman heard the night like a restless sea where black-sailed crafts drifted secretly before a sinister wind...

Heat Sets New High

Four thermometers in Matador stood above 110 degrees Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, as the rest of the state brought slight hope of relieving rains for this section.

The chief crop danger, county agents stated, is not the heat itself, but the tendency of hot winds and sunshine to dry the land and wither mature crops.

Prospect For City To Have Street Oiled

Prospects of an oil treatment for Matador's principal thoroughfare loomed Tuesday at the regular meeting of the Matador Chamber of Commerce held at the Motley Hotel...

It was estimated that the cost of applying a light oil to Main street north from Highway 28 to the edge of the business section might be in the neighborhood of $100 per block...

Negro Version Of "Macbeth" To Be Given At Dallas

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 10—The New York WPA Federal Theatre's production of Shakespeare's immortal tragedy Macbeth, with an all-Negro cast of 150 will open in the Amphitheatre on the Texas Centennial grounds August 13 and run through August 23. Macbeth comes direct from a sensational fifteen-week run in New York where it thrilled and amazed more than 100,000 blasé New York theatergoers.

The all-Negro version of the bard of Stratford-on-Avon played at the Lafayette Theatre in Harlem and the Adelphi on Broadway. The company has been literally compelled to tour the country because of the flood of requests.

Tickets scalpers sold tickets for the Broadway Show as high as $50 a pair. The show has been paying to standing room only for weeks. The prices at the Centennial will be forty and sixty-five cents.

Haiti Setting

The play is an authentic presentation. For justifiable reasons the locale of the play is not in drab Scotland but in the colorful island of Haiti during the Napoleonic regime. Negro actors lend themselves easily to the elegance of colors and the change in locale improves the brilliance of the spectacle. The army of 150 actors wear splendid military costumes of the Napoleonic regime play against three major settings—a tropical jungle, a majestic castle and a seashore town. Brilliant lighting effects vividly bring out the magnificent and terrifying beauty of the scenes.

Voodooism Used

Voodooism furnishes one of the most distinctive features of Macbeth. There were three witches in the original script but witches are alien to Haitian tradition so voodoo ceremonies are substituted. The cast includes an authentic voodoo doctor, Abdul Assen. Abdul has devoted a lifetime to the study of voodooism in Africa. He goes into a trance nightly in order to cast the spell on Macbeth—a genuine trance which can only be broken by certain Arabic chants echoed by his fellow practitioners. Abdul says. Abdul will have an opportunity to cast his spell on audiences over a territory of 4,000 miles on the present summer tour the Harlem company is making.

Total purchases of fruits and vegetables under this program were: apples, 1,348,355 bushels; dried beans, 1,200,000 lbs; dried peas, 7,502,040 pounds; citrus fruit, 228,592 boxes; dried prunes, 17,699,600 pounds; late carrots, 2,688,000 pounds; late onions, 5,933,650 pounds; cabbage, 4,369,76 tons; and early and intermediate onions, 26,116,050 pounds, obtained in Alabama, Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Utah, Virginia, Washington and West Virginia. Surplus eggs also were handled under this program in New York, Illinois, Massachusetts, Missouri, Texas and Oklahoma.

Crime Laboratory On Exhibition At Texas Centennial

Dallas, Texas, August 5—Crime doesn't pay.

Neither can crime be perfect. If you think otherwise examine some of the machines and the systems exhibited at the Texas Centennial Exposition which the federal and state governments use in crime detection and solution.

There is an electrical sorting machine, capable of sorting 24,000 cards per hour, siftings from as many as 760 different combinations, which is used in the larger identification bureaus, among them the United States Department of Justice. Thus investigators may pour through this machine the records cards of thousands of criminals and leave it to the machine to ferret out the type they seek. If the criminal has blue eyes, brown hair, stands five feet nine and limps, the machine will pick out the cards of criminals answering such a description. Then it is but a matter of minutes before the list in a crime is narrowed down to a few suspects.

There's the state's scientific crime detection laboratory which shows the rapid stride of Texas in the past 18 months toward solving

"Take a Load Off Your Feet — Here" Conoco Tells Exposition Visitors

This authentic old Southern Colonial mansion built on the grounds of the Texas Centennial Exposition at Dallas by the Continental Oil Company is for the free use of Exposition visitors seeking a cool haven of rest and relaxation. Air-conditioned, and located just inside the Exposition gates, "Hospitality House" has played host to nearly all comers since the Exposition opened June 6.

DALLAS, Tex.—Among other things, the Texas Centennial Exposition is proving that to a visitor who has walked for hours under a hot sun, looking at exhibits, there is no sweeter music than the invitation: "Come in and take a load off your feet"—especially if the provided chair is in a lush, air-conditioned lounge where all the Texas things conspire to turn the clock back 160 years.

relax and have a draught of water—"Hospitality House" is daily attracting visitors by the thousands. All of them get in as often as they want and stay as long as they want for nothing. It is the oil company's treat.

Here, also, is the most popular meeting place on the grounds. For example, some folks from Maine plan to drive down to the Exposition and join there a party of friends from Florida. But where to meet? The big flag-bedecked mansion is a frequent choice.

HOLLYWOOD By Marshall Fiske

Publisher's note: This column is written especially for the Matador Tribune, an represents accurate information from the world's film capital.

The rich are often mean and avaricious. The miser is, of course, a man of insanity, at least on one subject. A case in point is Miss— a very wealthy actress. While she was studying French, in order to get the entire benefits of a long and very practical conversation in that language, but without paying for it in the coin of the realm, she asked her teacher Mme.— to luncheon. This meal could have been easily duplicated at any restaurant for thirty-five cents. The actress was fully aware too, how extremely in need was her teacher—an elderly lady in her seventies, and all alone in the world with neither kith nor kin.

world mattered. She refuses to pay her bills—always is there a constant procrastination to discharge her indebtedness—trading on the fact that the merchants are afraid to send her dunning letters thinking she will get offended and revoke all her business.

Visitors from out of town are occasionally allowed inside the studio gates, but not on sets when the actual shooting takes place. On the doors of these stages housing such activity, signs plainly state "NO VISITORS ALLOWED."

A group of such people visited the M. G. M. Lot the other day. The guide pointed to a small white cottage with green trimmings and announced this was Wally Berry's dressing room. Just then a group of men and women in make-up were seen sitting on benches outside a stage. The ladies wore voluminous skirts of silks, satins and laces and ribbons—old fashioned evening dress of the 1840 period—their waists were wasp-like and their low shoulders protruded from this gorgeous raiment of other days. "Oh, who are them these people" ungrammatically questioned one of the visitors. The guide thereupon informed her that these were selected types who were working with Miss Garbo on her picture "Camille" and represented the French aristocracy at the Opera in Paris.

ways living the life of an aristocrat, what could he do but just what he was now doing—high class atmosphere to which he lent distinction? Some of the others perhaps had never led particularly glamorous lives, they were mere nobodies to the world at large, but to their loved-ones at home, to their wives and children, to their mothers, they were of the utmost importance, the finest men in the whole world.

At the latter place he owned a fine stable stocked with thoroughbreds. Then the Russian debacle. He lost everything and fled to America. Never having learned a trade, al-

Negro Version Of
"Macbeth" To Be Given At Dallas

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 10—The New York WPA Federal Theatre's production of Shakespeare's immortal tragedy Macbeth, with an all-Negro cast of 150 will open in the Amphitheatre on the Texas Centennial grounds August 13 and run through August 23. Macbeth comes direct from a sensational fifteen-week run in New York where it thrilled and amazed more than 100,000 blasé New York theatergoers.

The all-Negro version of the bard of Stratford-on-Avon played at the Lafayette Theatre in Harlem and the Adelphi on Broadway. The company has been literally compelled to tour the country because of the flood of requests.

Tickets scalpers sold tickets for the Broadway Show as high as $50 a pair. The show has been paying to standing room only for weeks. The prices at the Centennial will be forty and sixty-five cents.

Haiti Setting

The play is an authentic presentation. For justifiable reasons the locale of the play is not in drab Scotland but in the colorful island of Haiti during the Napoleonic regime. Negro actors lend themselves easily to the elegance of colors and the change in locale improves the brilliance of the spectacle. The army of 150 actors wear splendid military costumes of the Napoleonic regime play against three major settings—a tropical jungle, a majestic castle and a seaborne town. Brilliant lighting effects vividly bring out the magnificent and terrifying beauty of the scenes.

Voodooism Used

Voodooism furnishes one of the most distinctive features of Macbeth. There were three witches in the original script but witches are alien to Haitian tradition so voo-do ceremonies are substituted.
The cast includes an authentic voodoo doctor, Abdul Assen. Abdul has devoted a lifetime to the study of voodooism in Africa. He goes into a trance nightly in order to cast the spell on Macbeth—a genuine trance which can only be broken by certain Arabic chants echoed by his fellow practitioners, Abdul says. Abdul will have an opportunity to cast his spell on audiences over a territory of 4,000 miles on the present summer tour the Harlem company is making.

Texas Has Donated Farm Products For
U. S. Relief Work

Texas was one of 36 states of the nation which during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, disposed of burdensome surpluses of agricultural commodities to the Federal Government for distribution for relief purposes.

Purchases in Texas included 11-812,050 pounds of early and intermediate onions. Total purchases of fruits and vegetables under this program were: apples, 1,348,355 bushels; dried beans, 1,200,000 lbs; dried peas, 7,502,040 pounds; citrus fruit, 228,592 boxes; dried prunes, 17,699,600 pounds; late carrots, 2-688,000 pounds; late onions, 5,933-650 pounds; cabbage, 4,369.76 tons; 26,116,050 pounds, obtained in Alabama, Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Utah, Virginia, Washington and West Virginia. Surplus eggs also were handled under this program in New York, Illinois, Massachusetts, Missouri, Texas and Oklahoma.
The purchasing was conducted by the Commodities Purchase Section, Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the purchases financed from funds made available by Congress from customs receipts. Distribution of the commodities was made by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation.

Surplus dry skim milk, evaporated milk, butter, cheese, wheat for flour milling, figs, turnips, grapes and cherries also were handled during the year under other programs.

Care was taken in each instance to distribute these surpluses only to those who could not buy them, thus preventing them from conflicting with like commodities handled in the regular channels of trade.

Crime Laboratory
On Exhibition At Texas Centennial

Dallas, Texas, August 5—Crime doesn't pay.

Neither can crime be perfect. If you think otherwise examine some of the machines and systems exhibited at the Texas Centennial Exposition which the federal and state governments use in crime detection and solution.

There is an electrical sorting machine, capable of sorting 24,000 cards per hour, siftings from as many as 760 different combinations, which is used in the larger identification bureaus, a member of the United States Department of Justice. This investigator may pour through this machine the records cards of thousands of criminals and leave it to the machine to ferret out the type they seek. If the criminal has blue eyes, brown hair, stands five feet nine and limps, the machine will pick out the cards of criminals answering such a description. Then it is but a matter of minutes before the list in a crime is narrowed down to a few suspects.

There's the state's scientific crime detection laboratory which shows the rapid stride of Texas in the past 18 months toward solving its crime problems. The exhibit is in charge of M. T. Gonzauilas, former Texas Ranger, now head of the state's Bureau of Intelligence. In this exhibit are hundreds of guns, ranging from machine guns to tiny pistols, all of which were taken from criminals.

There is a complete file of data on firearms, bullets and fired cartridges, dictaphone sets, ultraviolet lights, fingerprint cameras, enlarging cameras and a nice display of fingerprints.

Directing Youths

Directing youth's activities to keep him away from crime is another feature to be found in this connection at the Centennial Exposition. The Civilian Conservation Corps and the Boy Scouts, both of which have exhibits at the Exposition, are examples. In each organization the activities of the youth are directed to make better citizens of the youths in their ranks.

The Centennial Exposition's free exhibits explaining the ceaseless warfare on crime are worth a separate trip to the Exposition in themselves.

91 NATURAL RESOURCES

Revelation that Texas had 91 natural resources, capable of commercial production came at a recent meeting of railroad and manufacturing executives at the Texas Centennial Exposition. The natural resources exhibit will be made permanent.

This authentic old Southern Colonial mansion built on the grounds of the Texas Centennial Exposition at Dallas by the Continental Oil Company is for the free use of Exposition visitors seeking a cool haven of rest and relaxation. Air-conditioned, and located just inside the Exposition gates, "Hospitality House" has played host to nearly all comers since the Exposition opened June 6.

DALLAS, Tex. — Among other things, the Texas Centennial Exposition is proving that to a visitor who has walked for hours under a hot sun, looking at exhibits, there is no sweeter music than the invitation: "Come in and take a load off your feet"—especially if the proffered chair is in a bushed, air-conditioned lounge where all the turnshirts conspire to turn the clock back 100 years.

At least this is the claim of many here, with the Exposition well along into its second month, Continental Oil Company's "Hospitality House" continues to be one of the chief meccas on the grounds. Offering no entertainment—offering nothing, in fact, but a cool place to

cracy at the Opera in Paris. And when the lady who did all the talking heard about Greta Garbo she became greatly excited "Oh, kin I see Greta Garbo, I'm just crazy about her". But when she was informed that she would not be permitted to see her, her face looked so crestfallen, so disappointed. Then she beheld a group of men, attired in evening clothes of this same period—ruffled shirts, tight trousers, short-tailed coats, curled wigs, etc. "Are them there fellers sitting around just extras? They ain't of any importance are they?" The talkative, ordinary woman was informed that they, like the ladies, were selected high class atmosphere.

To the general public—the movie public—who are avid for big names, these people were wholly unknown. Yet many of these men were truly refined, highly-educated and traveled. One of them, Count—before the Russian revolution, had moved in the highest society with Grand Dukes and the Russian Royal Family. He owned several magnificent estates. To save his life he came to America penniless. Not to be an object of charity he resorted to this means of obtaining a living. Russia had robbed him of all except those finer qualities of the mind and character which would always be his. Another gentleman belonging to this group was a fine Shakespearean scholar. For years he had given lectures and readings from the Immortal Bard to groups of cultured people. His memory was really phenomenal. He could quote long speeches from Shakespeare's plays, not to mention the poetry of Byron, Shelley and Keats. Another man had formerly divided his time between Russia and Paris. At the latter place he owned a fine stable stocked with thoroughbreds. Then the Russian debacle. He lost everything and fled to America. Never having learned a trade, always living the life of an aristocrat, what could he do but just what he was now doing—high-class atmosphere to which he lent distinction? Some of the others perhaps had never led particularly glamorous lives, they were mere nobodies to the world at large, but to their loved-ones at home, to their wives and children, to their mothers, they were of the utmost importance, the finest men in the whole world.

world mattered. She refuses to pay her bills—always is there a constant procrastination to discharge her indebtedness—trading on the fact that the merchants are afraid to send her dunning letters thinking she will get offended and revoke all her business.

In money matter there are two fools—one, who idolizes it and wants nothing else out of life, the other, the impractical dreamer who dispises it. Between these two extremes lies the golden mean.

period—their waists were wasp-like and their low shoulders protruded from this gorgeous raiment of other days. "Oh, who are them there people" ungrammatically questioned one of the visitors. The guide thereupon informed her that these were selected types who were working with Miss Garbo on her picture "Camille" and represented the French aristocracy.

ation offices located at border points and maintained by the State Highway Department.

It is estimated that one car in every seven stops at one of the 13 highway information huts for assistance and an average of 1,600 cars stop weekly at the border line stations according to reports from the station attendants.

With the Texas Centennial by far the outstanding attraction, every state in the Union has been represented by tourists entering Texas.

J. B. Early, maintenance engineer, said that practically every visitor who stopped for information indicated his intention to visit other parts of the state as well as the

Confidence
The National Administration on numerous occasions called McDonald to Washington in conference with National agricultural leaders to aid in formulating measures to aid Texas farmers.

Against Farm Relief
He consistently opposed farm relief measures of the National Government.

CIVIC CLUB IN MEETING TUES.

Chamber Commerce Attendance Small

The Matador Chamber of Commerce held its third regular meeting in the dining room of the Motley Hotel Tuesday with one of the shortest attendances ever to go in the minutes of a civic club here. The curtailed response of members was attributed mainly to an oversight by the attendance committee which resulted in many failing to be notified of the meeting. Despite the short attendance the business of the club was transacted in the designed manner so far as possible. President Elmer Stearns appointed a highway committee consisting of Henry Pipkin, George Springer and Judge C. L. Glenn, with instructions to bring to immediate termination a satisfactory agreement with the Highway Department for the purchase of lots on which to maintain the local warehouse. It was his opinion that with the work already done in this connection that satisfactory terms could be reached with little effort. WPA Enrollment A committee was also appointed to carry the cause of the county as far as possible in securing the enrollment of the quota for WPA work. Other discussions included oil treatment for principal business streets of the town, drought relief, attendance and a re-newed drive for membership. All members present expressed their enjoyment of the splendid chicken dinner prepared for the meeting by the hotel.

LOCAL SCOUTS TAKE HONORS IN SWIM MEETING

Three Matador Boy Scouts, representing Troop 62, who carried off intermediate honors at the Eastern District Swimming Meet at Spur Tuesday will enter the South Plains Council Swimming Meet at Lubbock, Friday, Aug. 21. The boys are Jack Robinson, Jr., Buddy Davis and B. F. Tunnell, Jr., who were accompanied to Spur by Mr. and Mrs. Tunnell and Billy Tunnell. B. F. won two first places, the 30-yard free stroke and the distance plunge, and second place in the 30-yard back stroke. Buddy took second place in diving. The three boys won second in the relay contest, in which B. F. swam two of the four laps.

Twenty-Four Enter

About 24 boys were entered in the intermediate class, and about 100 attended the meet, representing Idalou, Lorenzo, Ralls, Crosbyton, Wake School, Spur and Matador. Boyd Willett will probably enter the Lubbock meet with the three who went to Spur, B. F. Tunnell Jr., placed in every event he entered. Between 150 and 200 scouts are expected to participate in the meet at Lubbock. They will include the winners of first, second and third places in the six district meets and scouts who qualify on the basis of minimum time requirements. The requirements in the intermediate division are as follows: back stroke, 30 yards in 38 seconds; breast stroke, 30 yards in 35 seconds; free stroke, 40 yards in 45 seconds; distance plunge, 25 feet; and the 10 pound weight carry, 35 seconds. Diving and relay events are open and ribbons will be given to all first, second and third place winners.

ONLY ONE NEW LEAGUE RULE

AUSTIN—Only one new rule goes into effect in the Interscholastic League this year, that establishing a 19-year age limitation for all contestants in any league events, whether literary or athletic, according to Roy B. Henderson, athletic director for the university of Texas Bureau of Public School Interests. This bureau serves as the state office for the league. This new rule, replacing the former one setting the age limit at 20 years, decrees that any contestant who becomes 19 years of age on or before September 1 is throughout the entire school year. Applications are now being received on the 1936-37 league football schedule. Mr. Henderson said September 15 is the deadline for registering for this sport. Re-districting has been placed in effect, so that more district and regional honors are afforded for League football teams. Districts in Class A, in which a state championship is determined, have been reorganized somewhat; one new region, embracing four new districts, has been created in Class B, making 11 regions in which regional championships are determined; and three new districts, making a total of 15, have been set up in Class C. Class C competition is carried only to the district tournament. It should be pointed out that district races in all league events are in the complete control of the district committee, elected by the schools themselves, Mr. Henderson said.

INELIGIBLE FOR ALL LEAGUE CONTESTS
