Belonging to a fast crowd is not accepted as proof that you are going somewhere.

Lack of funds is like a drift fence that keeps many of us from going so far as to get into an atmosphere which would be hostile to our natures.

Social Security is payment for being old; a sort of dowry to partly relieve the anguish of senility.

Doing business with Russia is like shooting craps by telephone and having your partners tell you what comes up on the dice they are rolling.

There is a charm about any handwriting on the signature line of a valid check made in my favor.

A hardening of the conscience is not relieved by surgery unless it is a spiritual heart transplant.

When we wash our hands of responsibility we may leave dirty elbows of duty and unclean ears that fail to hear the truth.

It would be foolish to think of the tractor as anything less than a great benefactor of mankind, but I miss the plodding of horses' feet on freshly-plowed ground.

The oil companies have become purveyors of all kinds of goods in the highly competitive field of merchandising. So far they have not sought a portion of the bra and girdle business.

Mr. and Mrs. Rattan will continue to reside in Matador with Ward devoting full time to his livestock operation.

"There will be no reduction in service in the Matador office," Hill said, "as Bill L. Glenn, manager of our Spur office, will divide his time between Spur and Matador and Helen Meyer will be in the Matador office daily, Monday through Friday."

Commander Wilson Cook said the party is for everyone, but is especially for the young people. He said a cordial invitation is extended everyone.

Okies Jail Man For Stealing His Own Horse

A horse thief doesn't have a chance in Oklahoma. In fact the law is keeping such a sharp lookout in maintaining horse security that a man may be arrested for stealing his own animal.

It happened to Bill Webb, the Englishman riding horseback from Scottsdale, Arizona to Buckhannon, West Virginia, who passed through Matador in July.

He was arrested and jailed in Hugo, Oklahoma for horse theft, but later released when he proved he was riding his own horse. Word of the jovial rider, who told the Tribune he "loved the United States," was published last week in the Floyd County Hesperian and the Lockney Beacon.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard McLendon of Lockney encountered Webb near Little Rock, Ark., and visited with him. He told them of the Hugo, Okla., incident, and that he was released when he proved ownership of his faithful horse, "Wrangler." He told the Lockneyites he was averaging 30 miles per day and hoped to reach his destination by late October.

The former Judy Carol Gilbert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David M. Gilbert of Flomot, and Mr. Heiskell exchanged vows in a ceremony read at 8:00 o'clock, Saturday evening August 10, in the First Christian Church, Dalhart. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Heiskell of Dalhart.

Minister Cecil Beaver officiated for the ceremony and the program of nuptial music was presented by Miss Glenna Zell, organist and Mrs. Jim Wilson, contralto, who sang, "Whither Thou Goest" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Centering the altar was a large white lace fan banked in front by white and bronze mums and Emerald leaf. On either side were tall candelabra holding gold candles, and other arrangements of greenery.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white satin peau de soie, designed on empire lines, with an oval neckline, long, fitted sleeves and a chapel train which fell from her shoulders. Alencon lace embellished the gown from the waistline down the front. Her chapel veil of silk illusion was held by petals of the French lace, outlined by seed pearls. She carried a crescent bouquet of white feathered mums with satin bow and streamers.

Miss Kathy Gilbert, Flomot, sister of the bride was maid of honor. Her floor-length dress was of gold satin peau de soie, designed with oval neckline and short sleeves. Her headpiece was a matching Dior bow, and she carried a bouquet of gold pompons and green foliage.

Richard Campbell Recovers Favor On Texas Tech Red Raiders Squad

The following article by Burlie Pennit, Lubbock Avalanche sports writer, appeared last week. On the same day the Ft. Worth Star-Telegram ran a similar article in the sports section.

Richard Campbell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Campbell Jr. of Matador.

FROM THE FOOTHILLS of the Quitaque Mountains, where once roamed little traffic other than coyotes, jackrabbits and an occasional cowboy came a lad named Richard Campbell to pursue a life of contrasts.

"Matador is quite a place," Richard explained yesterday to a group of sports writers already intrigued by the many faces of this Motley County spokesman. The face doing the talking was that of a defensive end, possibly one of the Southwest Conference's best.

And that's where one of the most drastic contrasts fits in.

CAMPBELL, SINCE coming to Tech as a freshman in 1965, has been almost everything but mediocre. In his youthful flings at show biz, he's been fantastic. There was the recording group, of which he was vocalist; there was the title role in a local theater group's production of L'il Abner; there was another top billing in urbane, saucy Dallas, where he starred as Julius Caesar in Six Flags presentation of T.V. B.C.

He even worked in a little football. As a sophomore, Richard stood out at defensive end and was greatly instrumental in Tech's upset victory over Arkansas. His true junior season, however, he became entangled in his many varied activities and tripped over the grade barrier.

Last spring, while Raider coaches awaited patiently his return to starring duty, Richard showed up with an added feature. But it wasn't a popular one. In fact, young Campbell probably wonders even today who ever created the ol' bromide about everybody loving a fat man.

By the time spring drills ended, Richard practically had been written off as a prospect for gridiron stardom. He had ballooned upward past 250 pounds, and his once-admired agility and endurance had gone in payment for what he now describes as "six wonderful meals a day."

There were those who believed when he auditioned for - and won over a field of 2,500 aspirants - the role of Caesar that Campbell was through. Theatians, it figures, don't strain sufficiently those muscles restricting obesity.

And while Richard was pleasing tens of thousands with his work on the spoof-job of TV and Shakespeare, he also was drawing from a seemingly limitless deposit of Campbell Characteristics. You spell this one determination.

"Each day after the final performance I would head out for Arlington High and run, run, run," Campbell said, continuing his story to the writers gathered to hear a weight-reducing testimonial you might expect to find only on the back cover of a pulp magazine.

"I cut my food intake, but only by reducing to three the number of meals I ate. But mostly, I just ran."

Motivation took two different forms. One was the needling he'd received by coaches whose patience about his weight problem had worn thin.

"And also, every time I would get so tired I thought I couldn't stand, I'd remember last spring. I didn't want to go through that again. It was tough enough carrying all that weight in spring training, what would it have been during two-a-days."

FORTUNATELY, he never had to learn—fortunately, both for Campbell and Tech.

When Richard reported back late last month, he weighed in at 215! Celebrations were in order, but Campbell passed. Instead, he kept working—and losing. Yesterday he was at 212, fast and strong.

"This, to me, is the sign of a young man who wants very badly to play football," said J. T. King, relieved greatly after a long, hot summer wondering what he'd do for defensive ends if George Cox wasn't well and Richard couldn't perform up to par. "I am very, very proud of him and what he's done."

FOOTBALL, FOR Richard comes as easy and natural as warbling a tune or remaining poised in an awkward situation. Like once this summer.

"My Caesar costume was real long and snapped all the way up the back," Campbell was saying. "Well, I made a quick move and every single snap came undone! I didn't know what to do, so I just walked around, never turning my face or chest away from the audience. But if I looked goofy doing that, they should have seen otherwise!"

Adjustments have always come easily for the personable lad, even though he insists football has changed drastically since his days of "playing against Turkey High and Estelline and teams like that."

One thing remains unchanged: He stars now as he did then.

"He is an unusually talented young man," stated J. T. King. Richard Campbell just won another audition. And Football, 1968, may be his biggest show ever.

Car Inspection For 1969 Started

AUSTIN — The 1969 vehicle inspection period began Sept. 1, in Texas according to Colonel Wilson E. (Pat) Speir, acting director of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"More than six-million vehicles are expected to receive the compulsory inspection prior to the April 15, 1969 deadline," Speir said. Inspections may be performed at any of the almost 5,500 vehicle inspection stations in Texas, each of which displays the official vehicle inspection station sign.

Texas law requires inspection of the brakes, lighting equipment, horns and warning devices, mirrors, windshield wipers, front seat belts in vehicles where seat belt anchorages were part of the manufacturer's original equipment on the vehicle, steering (including power steering) and wheels and rims (not to include removal of the wheel from the vehicle) on all motor vehicles registered in the state.

Special inspection provisions apply to trailers, semi-trailers, pole trailers or mobile homes having a loaded gross weight in excess of 4,000 pounds.

The minimum fee is $1.75. This does not include the cost of repairs or adjustments necessary to enable the vehicle to pass inspection.

Speir said the new vehicle inspection sticker will be a two and one-half inch square replica of a DPS patrolman's badge with red background. Motorists are urged to have the 1969 inspection performed as soon as possible to insure that their vehicles are mechanically safe for fall and winter driving.

COUNTY AGENT PALLEYER SAYS:

According to information from the Texas Tech research farm, weeds are costing grain sorghum farmers a fantastic amount. A grain sorghum field free of weeds made 4900 pounds an acre but only one weed in 32 feet of row reduced the yield 150 pounds an acre. With milt bringing $1.70 this cost the farmer $2.55 per acre.

Even worse was where there were 4 weeds in each 32 feet of row (1 every 8 feet). Here the loss meant $10.20 an acre to the farmer.

Safety is the most important factor to remember in the upcoming hunting season. Nearly all hunting accidents could be prevented if gun safety rules are followed.

It's the "over-anxious" hunter who endangers the lives of fellow hunters and causes needless damage to wildlife. Approximately two-thirds of all hunting accidents are caused by humans in the line of fire, humans mistaken for animals and hunters not using the safety catch on their guns.

Hunting only in season and respecting the bag limits are rules of good hunting sportsmanship. Also never throw away a lighted cigarette or leave a burning campfire, since either can start a destructive grass or forest fire.

CROP PROFIT NOTEBOOK

New Combination Insecticide For Weevil, Worm Control

Introduction this year of a new cotton insecticide under various brand names offers growers a new weapon for boll weevil and bollworm control.

The insecticide combines the outstanding effectiveness of Malathion ULV Concentrate and DDT in controlling weevils and worms.

Used extensively throughout the cotton belt in 1967 under state registrations, Malathion ULV Concentrate-DDT 2-4 provided such effective control of these pests that it has now received a Federal registration.

Growers apply this formulation at the economical rate of only one to two quarts per acre, depending on the degree of insect infestation. Specially-equipped aerial and ground equipment is used for this purpose. A five-day interval between applications is recommended.

Although as little as one quart per acre is applied by this ultra-low-volume technique, the fine particle size of the spray penetrates even rank cotton for effective control. Because water is not added to this concentrate, it will resist evaporation and weathering.

The never-ending war on insects continues, and cotton producers now have another weapon in their arsenal in the form of Malathion ULV Concentrate-DDT combination insecticides.

Another good rule to remember is to respect the rights of others and to obtain permission before going onto another's property. Treat all property as if it were your own and don't litter the country side.

One of the most important rules, but one that is often neglected, is to handle every gun as if it were loaded. Never carry a loaded weapon in an automobile and be sure the action and barrel are clear of any restriction.

In conclusion, always be sure of your target as you would want your fellow hunter to be.

Rogue or off-type grain sorghum plants can lower overall production somewhat since they compete for water, nutrients and sunlight just like weeds and should be removed if possible.

These weedy sorghum plants are either volunteer (carried over in the soil from previous years) or spring up from seed mixed in with the present year's planting seed.

Now is a good time to remove these "weeds", as this will avoid seed carryover for next year. Ideally, these tall, weedy plants should be removed within 10 days after flowering to prevent reduction of germinable seed, especially those plants that shatter easily. Careful removal of these plants before harvest will still help reduce the volunteer problem the following year through.

Another control method is to rotate heavily infested fields with cotton and use herbicides recommended for controlling grasses in these crops.

The off-type plants originate from pollen of undesirable plants growing near hybrid seed production fields or crossing blocks. These plants are called "outcrosses".

If the "outcrosses" are in the planting seed, the individual off-type plants will be uniformly distributed over the entire field. However, if they are volunteer, these plants will appear in large circular patches and will normally be concentrated in certain areas of the field in which smaller patches were located the previous year.

Seed already in the soil may produce volunteer plants for several years. Consequently, one or two years out of grain sorghum may not completely control all volunteer sorghum. Weather conditions greatly influence the growth of these volunteer plants.
