TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

Unemployment is doomed and it is possible this country may find it necessary to import additional labor. The government's question forms will absorb full time for this country's unemployed, in addition to schools and other agencies seeking information as to how you became self-supporting and why you continue. In addition to the usual "run of the mill" requests which a newspaper receives, someone has told college students to write newspapers for data that would require weeks of work to collect. The questionnaire has solved our unemployment problem.

A preacher has declared that when he sees a mist in the eyes of a member of his audience, he is immediately convinced that someone has a cold or shoes which are uncomfortable.

The silence of falling snow creates a "presence", which might be like the Grace of God.

The image of poverty is usually associated with hunger, but the impact of its tragedy is manifest in the eyes of those who have failed in the courtesy of friendship.

Years have dripped off the eaves of time like a recurring dew, until only the familiar hills remain unchanged. In the record book of the past is written the failures and the conquests; the fears and the joys, but before each of us is that blank page of services to others which we might have rendered.

It would be easier to keep myself in higher personal esteem if I could claim wise decisions, instead of sharing the glory with accident.

Vanity has never been purchased at a greater sacrifice than by the man who buys his boots too small.

Beef Production Short Course is Scheduled Here

A beef production short course in Matador is scheduled to begin March 11, at 7:30 p.m. in the Vocational Agriculture building, it was announced this week by Bill Moss, Vo-Ag instructor.

Other meetings in the series of four will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights. Instructor will be Frank C. Litterst, beef specialist. He will also be available to assist cattlemen with individual problems and to provide on-the-farm instructions, Moss said.

An entry fee of $2.00 will be charged for the short course. Beef Production short course certificates will be presented to each person who attends all the training sessions.

The course is being sponsored by Texas Public Schools, Texas A&M University and Texas Educational Agency.

Looks To The Future
Mr. Litterst states that the field of beef cattle production "must take a close look at efficiency of production in the future."

"With land prices, feed, and taxes rising, the producer is meeting more and more competition for the consumer's dollar at the meat counter," he declared. "From the economic view of the beef cattle business, there is every indication that in comparing the producer of yesterday and the producer of tomorrow, beef must be produced to sell cheaper in order to be a profit-making business."

The cooperative program for holding short courses in beef production is designed to make the services of specialists available under the supervision of public schools, it was explained. Such a program will enable teachers of vocational agriculture to provide improved educational services to farm people.

Mr. and Mrs. Sim Reeves of Memphis, visited briefly Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pohl. They were here for the funeral of his cousin, Dr. Robert Reeves.

LITTLE GIRL AND LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR Preston Smith. During his brief visit here yesterday the candidate for Texas Governorship stopped to speak to Cindy Johnson, 5. Preston Smith Says He Was Not Drafted

FIRST ANNOUNCED candidate for the Governorship of Texas, Preston Smith of Lubbock, made a brief visit here yesterday. A group of Motley County residents met with Lt. Governor Smith at El Matador Restaurant. Despite the drizzle and the fact that the candidate had made but limited advance announcement of his visit here, a crowd of approximately 30 persons was on hand. He was introduced by a long-time friend, D. E. Pitts.

"I was not drafted to become a candidate," the Lt. Governor declared, "nor did I receive thousands of letters soliciting me to enter the race. It was a decision made by my wife and myself."

"I have served six years in the Senate and six years as Lieutenant Governor. I have also served as Governor 235 days since I have held my present office. I felt that my experience would be of value in the office of governor, and that if I was to try for the place, I would announce early."

"The ballot is a great leveler," Smith said, "because one man's or woman's vote is worth as much as another. The vote of a citizen is sacred because it is his voice in government.

"You have a right to know the kind of a man who is your candidate because the governorship is a great office of honor and trust. I feel that the people of Texas have a right to a full accounting of tax money, and the State of Texas is the biggest business in Texas (more than $2 billion dollars.)"

"As a background, I was one of a family of 13 children. I worked my way through college, (Texas Tech, 1934). I have made my home in Lubbock, and have two children, both married.

"I seek your support because you believe in me and because you feel that I am qualified to fill the office."

During a brief period in the visit open to questions, one of the two questions asked, was: "Do you oppose the sale of liquor by the drink?" His answer was: "I certainly am opposed and will vote against it, if given the opportunity."

The candidate was given an enthusiastic hand of applause at the conclusion of his address.

Dale Rector Heads Distributive Education Clubs in Albuquerque

A former Matador schools student, Allen Dale Rector, now a senior at Sandia High School in Albuquerque, N.M., was featured in a recent article in The Albuquerque Tribune by staff writer Wayne Gregory, as being a leader in the organization DECA.

Under the heading, "The DECA GOAL: Future Marketing Leaders..." Gregory explains, "Simply defined, Distributive Education means developing future leaders for marketing and distribution."

"But there is more involved than just words. Time, effort, study, instruction, eagerness, interest and - work."

"Sandia High School is one of five Albuquerque schools applying the program that involves a total of 635 students in the five schools and seven teachers."

"In addition to the usual courses in history, science and math, the 65 Sandia students in the DE program attend classes taught by Leonard J. Voelker, coordinator who says, 'I wouldn't teach if I couldn't teach Distributive Education.'

Two-Year Program

"His classes - part of a two-year program for juniors and seniors - cover a variety of subjects relating to marketing, merchandising and management."

"Some of the areas are personal appearance, applying for a job, filling out job applications, job attitude, fundamentals of selling and salesmanship, the importance of product knowledge, how to handle customers, business math, advertising and layout, management, sales techniques, marketing economics and sales promotion to name a few."

"DE also includes on-the-job training. Mr. Voelker said students in the program are required to work 15 hours a week, or a minimum of 450 hours a year, in local business places."

"One such student is Allen (Dale) Rector, 18, who is employed at Montgomery Wards in Winrock Center. These students, who are paid a salary by the firms, work after school and on week ends.

"Rector also is president of the Sandia Distributive Education Clubs of America and vice president of the state organization. Students in the DE program are members of DECA, which is associated closely with the class-work."

Program Presented

"Rector and four other members of the Sandia DECA presented the program at the Thursday luncheon meeting of Los Altos Civitan Club at Wyatt's Cafeteria, Coronado Center."

He told Civitan members and guests that DECA, nationwide organization of 90,000 members, is the only club to promote getting youths closer to the marketing field and the retail field. The club emphasizes the competitive American free enterprise system.

A photograph accompanying the article featured Dale receiving a check for $1,500 from E. H. Gostley, manager of Sears Coronado, as vice president of and in behalf of the New Mexico DECA.

Sidesaddle Once Traded for Stove, Returned to Family After 58 Years

by Bill Salter
Floyd County Hesperian

After an absence of 58 years, a sidesaddle belonging to the late Mrs. Myrtle (Bethany) Rucker has returned to the family.

Now in the proud possession of Ralph Rucker, Floydada businessman and a son of Mrs. Rucker, the saddle (quite an oddity, especially to the younger generation) was purchased new in 1906 by Mrs. Rucker's father, the late W. M. Bethany.

Bethany, a farmer and rancher, and his family lived in the Northfield community about 30 miles northeast of Matador and the saddle was purchased for his daughter, then 13, to ride to school.

Three years later, Myrtle Bethany married Erve Rucker, trading the saddle to the late Ben Simpson, well-known rancher, for a cookstove.

Simpson traded for the saddle for his daughter, Ruth, (now Mrs. Claude McDonald of Northfield) to use, also in riding to school.

Since 1909 when the saddle was traded, members of the Rucker family had no idea of its whereabouts, but Rucker heard last summer that Mrs. McDonald still owned it.

Later, upon checking with Mrs. McDonald, he found that she had given it to Ed D. Smith, Matador antique collector, about five years earlier. During the years since she used the saddle, it had been hanging in their barn at Northfield.

Upon contacting Smith and explaining the story behind the saddle, the Matador man gave it to Rucker in November of 1967, and it is on display in a glass showcase at Rucker's business, OK Rubber Welders.

Markings on the saddle indicate that it was made by R. T. Frazier of Pueblo, Colo., and is a "Model 122."

Rucker has since tried to learn somewhat of the history behind the saddle, when it was made, the cost, etc., but Frazier is no longer in business and efforts have proven fruitless.

Everything about the saddle is in the original state excepting the girth strap which evidently has been replaced. It is constructed of cowhide and originally had a green velvet covering over the seat, portions of which are still around the edges.

Judging from the saddle's appearance, it has had much use, but is still in remarkably good condition and probably could be used.

Rucker has no idea of the sidesaddle's worth, but it is "not for sale at any price," he says emphatically.

To use a sidesaddle, women of that day sat just as the name implies, sideways in the saddle with right leg up and around the saddle horn and the left leg in the single stirrup.

Ungainly as the position sounds, an expert horsewoman could ride a "bucking bronc" in one of the saddles, Rucker has been told.

Ironically, Rucker also has a picture of his mother on a horse with the saddle, the photo recently given him by Tom Moore, Floyd County ASCS office manager, whose parents lived on the adjoining farm to Rucker's mother near Northfield.

In addition to the 62-year-old saddle, Rucker also has an antique "Apache Squaw Indian saddle" made of wood and covered with rawhide, along with other artifacts of the pioneer era including stirrups, a hay knife, bridle and bits, ox chain, and an antique "Home" stove which heats the front of the local business.

COUNTY AGENT PALLMEYER SAYS:

Sale of livestock represent slightly less than 50% of the income in Motley County, therefore the following beef cattle outlook for 1968 prepared by John McHaney, Extension Economist, should be of interest to many.

Total cattle numbers in the United States declined in 1967 for the third consecutive year, but this decline was in dairy cattle because beef cattle numbers increased slightly in 1966 and probably in 1967. The total number of cattle rose from a recent low of 91.2 million head on Jan. 1, 1958 to a record of 109 million on Jan. 1, 1965. Since then, cattle numbers have declined slightly and on Jan. 1, 1968, were probably down to about 108 million head. Final figures on 1967 numbers are not yet available.

Beef cow numbers in the United States have increased. These amounted to about 24.2 million head on Jan. 1, 1958, compared to 34.6 million head on Jan. 1, 1967, a 43% increase in nine years. They were probably up a little on Jan. 1, 1968.

The economist said that feed gain prices will more than likely be on the low side for the first part of 1968, and with more favorable livestock-feed price ration in prospect, feeding per animal unit may be heavier. Fed Cattle marketings in 1968 are expected to rise and market weights are likely to be heavier.

Other meat will continue to give beef competition, but livestock producers are expected to produce a little more red meat in 1968 than 1967. He predicted that during the winter (Jan., Feb., and March) of 1968, cattle feeders will more than likely market a few more fed cattle than during the same months of 1967. With strong consumer demand, however, fed cattle and feeder calf prices during the first three months of 1968 will probably average near prices received the last three months of 1967.

Pasture and range conditions at the present time indicate favorable prospects for winter grazing. This will help to hold some feeder calves off the market and out of the feed lots. When range conditions become poor, larger marketings are encouraged.

Some price weakness could develop late in the winter of 1968 and in the spring of 1968. On Oct. 1, 1967, there were considerably more cattle on feed than a year earlier in the weight groups that will supply a large part of the fed cattle marketings in the late winter and spring of 1968. The number on feed on Nov. 1, 1967 and Dec. 1, 1967, were also up from a year earlier. Because of these trends, we will more than likely see prices of both feeders and fed cattle slide down in the late winter and spring of 1968 to levels probably lower than during the same months of 1967.

McHaney predicted that during the last half of 1968, marketings of fed cattle will remain at a high level and will more than likely be a little larger than in the last half of 1967. He also expects prices received for both fed cattle and feeders to be down a little from the last half of 1967.

Manganese is the third micronutrient, and is also needed in a very limited amount, and like most micronutrients, may become toxic to plants when present in large quantities.

Manganese is not mobile and is not translocated to any extent from older to younger regions of the plant where a deficiency occurs. From this, it is easy to see that deficiency symptoms appear first on the younger leaves. Intervene chlorosis is noted, and several cases may become entirely yellow with brown dead spots appearing on leaves, followed by death of the plant. This element is necessary for oxidative enzyme systems and in the functioning of the arginase and carboxylase enzyme systems.

Pats, wheat, peas, peanuts, cotton and vegetables, along with fruit and nut trees are the most susceptible crops to manganese deficiencies. For correction, foliar sprays of ground applications can be made, but, make sure there is a need for the element before adding.
