

COURT HOUSE BONDS CARRY WITH 89 MAJORITY

INTEREST IS SLIGHT OVER ENTIRE COUNTY Only 453 Votes Are Polled Saturday As Issue Is Decided

Property owners in Motley county voted a majority in favor of the $80,000 bond issue to build a new court house in Matador through the aid of a PWA grant, according to the official count made by the Commissioners' Court of Saturday's election. Very little interest was shown in the election by the total of only 453 votes registered. The bond issue carried by a majority of 89 votes, there being 271 for the issue and 182 against it.

The two Matador boxes totaled 225 votes, with 201 favoring the bonds. The strongest opposition to the proposed issue was registered in the Flomot box, which polled 2 favoring and 20 against. Altho Flomot is declared to have a voting strength within the neighborhood of 250, only 22 voiced their interest in the election.

Court Counts the Votes
The official tabulations made by the Commissioners' Court is as follows: Matador court house box, 90 for and 9 against; Matador City Hall box, 111 for and 15 against; Fairview, 11 for and 8 against; Union Corner, 1 for and 8 against; Darden Canyon, 6 for and 6 against; Whiteflat, 18 for and 16 against; Flomot, 2 for and 20 against; Northfield, 8 for and 22 against; Roaring Springs, 22 for and 63 against; Folley, 2 for and 15 against; Total 271 for and 182 against.

County officials were surprised at the small interest taken in the election, because of wide publicity which had been given the proposal. Altho no official information has been released, it is believed that the bonds may be expected to receive an immediate market and that the Federal grant of 45 per cent will be made.

Pay On Lint Loans Held Off 16 Days

Cotton Below Loan Standard Involves Near 3,000 Farmers

DICKENS—Cotton farmers of this area, received official promise that sale of approximately 33,000 bales of government loan cotton on which the government had demanded immediate payment of loans, would be postponed until Sept. 26.

The promise was made to Joe M. Rose, Dickens county farm leader, who is head of a committee of farmers asking aid in the situation.

Would Cause Loss
The government, claiming the cotton is below government standard, demanded payment of the notes and sale of the cotton in default of payment. Farmers explained that immediate sale would cause them a loss. The cotton is stored in a warehouse at Jayton.

The promise of postponement of sale came from John D. Goodloe of the Commodity Credit Corporation of Washington. He said the sale of the staple, set for this week and next, would be postponed until Sept. 26 and suggested that farmers send a committee to Washington before that date in efforts to avert the possible loss to the cotton farmers. He said he would welcome a committee.

Result of Calling a Meeting
The promise was the result of a called meeting of farmers of eight counties of this area earlier in the week to take steps to prevent loss of the money an immediate sale would cause. At that

Matadors Win First Game Of New Season Crosbyton Chiefs Fall On Own Field Friday Afternoon

The Matador Matadors made a flying start toward the new season when they brought home the scalps of the Crosbyton Chiefs Friday afternoon, with a score of six to nothing. The Chiefs were just returned from encampment near Post, where they picked the first bale of cotton ginned there and were considered in good condition.

The Matadors started off well in the first quarter by staying in the enemy's territory most of the time. The second quarter was of little interest in the way of threats, both sides playing good defensive ball. Crosbyton's purple and gold rallied in the third quarter to make their only threat of the game. In the fourth quarter the Matadors started off on the goalward drive by a series of off-tackle plays and a pass from Day to Simpson that carried the ball far into Crosbyton's territory. In the second play of the fourth quarter there was a lateral pass from Simpson to Alsup who skirted the end for twenty-five yards for the only touchdown of the game. Simpson and Alsup held the highlights of the backfield; Martin, Cox, and Rattan were the line stars. The Matadors led in first downs, twelve to six.

Quitaque Here Friday
The Matadors will meet Quitaque here Friday for the first game on their own territory and it is hoped that all grid fans will turn out to support the team. The game is called at 3:30.

Buckley, County Agent, in order to explain to ginner and buyers, the duties and responsibilities of the cotton quotas. They received detailed instructions of the records which they are to keep and the reports to be made at the county agent's office.

The cotton quota for a farm is all the cotton that can be produced on the allotted acres. Only cotton grown on acres above the allotment is subject to the penalty. Farmers will be notified within the next few days to secure their marketing cards which all must have in order to market their cotton. Those producing within their allotments will receive a white tag while those who produce in excess to their allotments will receive a red tag. Cool Norther Follows Rain

A cool norther, harbinger of future days, drifted over this section Wednesday morning, following slight showers which fell in the neighborhood of Matador Monday and Tuesday.

The rainfall during the two days registered a total of .50 inch here in town according to J. H. Sample's rain gauge. However, Mr. Sample declared that it was only a "city rain" and did not reach much of the agricultural district where farmers say their crops are suffering from lack of moisture.

The rainfall of the past month has been very scattered and both feed and cotton in many sections will be affected. However, it is believed that the cooler weather will benefit the situation to some extent.

American Women Make Movie Stars, Says Expert

It is the women who make motion picture stars. They are responsible for the star system, and they are the dyed-in-the-wool fans who idealize certain players enough to patronize pictures without questioning the picture. Star worship of that kind is the motion picture industry's best insurance policy, for Hollywood grinds out more than five hundred feature-length pictures a year and it is not possible to find that many good stories.

In a sensational frank article in the August Pictorial Review, the August Pictorial Review, Fidler, Hollywood reporter, tears the mask from the make-believe capital of movieland. How the stars live and work and play is described by Mr. Fidler who for many years has been an intimate friend of the film industry's great and near great.

Norma Shearer is the greatest woman's star of them all, according to Fidler. "On the screen she is always perfectly poised, sophisticated, witty, and graceful in love," Mr. Fidler writes. "Her pictures with their sets and ultra-romantic plots show the kind of life that women dream of living."

Arleen Whelan... These Are The Comers... Tito Guizar

Norma Shearer reached stardom portraying daring roles, by being conventions which most men obey, but, judging by the men they wrote her, secretly revere.

But Greta Garbo, on the other hand, is the personification of mystery, glamour, and exotic romance," the noted radio commentator writes. "In any mixed gathering you will find her listed as a favorite by almost every woman omitted entirely by nine-tenths of the men. Most of her

Vast Energy Is Secret Of Dewey's Success Says N. Y. Newspaperman

In an ancient building adjoining New York's famed criminal courts and a stone's throw from Tombs Prison and the Bridge of Sighs is the office of Thomas E. Dewey, New York's racket-smashing district attorney.

On last election day the young man from Owosso, Michigan, severely louted invincible Tammany Hall to win the district attorney-ship of fabulous New York County and simultaneously started a drive on crime that is unequalled in the history of the nation.

In the September issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine, Hickman Powell, well known New York newspaper man, has told the story of the rise of Dewey.

"Late one Saturday afternoon during the heat of the campaign he was persuaded to go home and get some rest," says Mr. Powell. "He drove to his summer home at Tuxedo Park, danced at a party until three o'clock in the morning, sailed a boat all afternoon, and on Sunday evening joined several of us in the city at a job that had to be finished before we quit."

"It was a hard night, with many points to be argued and decided, and at five o'clock one of our number keeled over in his chair and went to sleep. Dewey seemed amazed, even disgusted. 'He can't take it!' exclaimed Dewey. And he never had much use for the weakling after that."

"The man has an almost fanatical meticulous neatness. He will ring for his secretary to file a single paper, to get it out of his way. On the broad polished expanse of his desk top the only objects are a blotter pad, a pen rack decorated with a silver yacht model, an ash tray and a pack of cigarettes. Now and then he takes a cigarette. Then he tucks and folds the tin foil back precisely at the end of the pack and puts the pack back in its place."

So it has been with racketeers during his two years as Manhattan's special prosecutor. The criminals were neatly catalogued, wrapped up and tucked away, each in his proper cell.

Dewey started out by asking that newspapers refrain from giving him premature publicity and worked long months in secrecy. Then he produced his cases. Criminals began confessing at an unprecedented rate. Dewey convicted 72 out of 73 men tried with a precision that sent stark terror surging through the hitherto immune underworld.

At thirty-six, Dewey has sent to jail a score of the nation's most powerful gangsters and terrorists. Racketeering in the city of New York has practically disappeared. Unsolved murders are being brought to light and huge illegal and gang-controlled rackets are and beauty produced in our minds a sense of over-whelming grandeur akin to something sublime. It was the climax of all that was impressively beautiful on a trip replete with scenic beauty.

The train passed through a series of short tunnels, all lined with soft, waving greenery that undulated as the train swept thru its arches of cool, damp greenness. Here nature had embellished the work of man.

The Barranca de Metlac—
 Rocky walls rose on one side of us in their perpendicular impressiveness, while on the other, yawning abysses revealed deep, green valleys. Then we saw small cataracts rushing, leaping over their rocky obstructions, and mountain streams as they sang and danced their way over their pebbly beds on their way to the sea, to throw themselves into the arms of their mother. The train crossed a bridge and we were negotiating a curve. All about high towering rocky sides covered here and there with lush vegetation all enclosing a magnificent ravine, the famous Barranca de Metlac, in whose depths perched the mountain streams rushing ever onward. Here we left behind us the prosaic world, with all its barter and strife, like Promethians unbound, our souls were released from their chains of tawdry life, to soar henceforth in glorious emancipation.

In time we arrived in the lowlands—the tropics. On both sides of the steel rails the lush vegetation threatened to engulf us. Hedges, miles long, paralleled the tracks. These miles of greenery were spotted with color, crimson and gold for the most part. The crimson of the glowing hibiscus while many flowers in bright yellow were seen in many places. Beyond were vast stretches of banana trees and coffee plantations, pineapples, sugar cane to mention only a few. Vines, undergrowth, bushes, trees; a tropical jungle. Here and there amongst a wild sea of greenery one saw the primitive dwellings of the Mexican peons—huts of bamboo with their thatched roofs. It surcharged the whole scene with an exotic, far-away feeling. It might have been the jungles on the Amazon or the depths of Darkest Africa, so foreign it seemed. As we passed the railway stations that had been, turned into improvised market-places, one saw the peons disperse with their wares to be swallowed by the surrounding jungle.

Alone in a Rainy Twilight—
 With the coming of twilight, which was so short, a slight rain fell. My companions of the afternoon, the newly-weds, had turned in and left me seated alone on the observation platform. The spell of the tropics cast a peculiar mood over me, the strange scenes, lush vegetation, the primitive habitations of the Peons. I seemed to have been transported to another world, a primitive world, a world as it existed many thousands of years ago, before the advent of man on this globe when nature sat enthroned unmolested, and through it all I heard the gentle patter of the rain when the train halted for a few moments. After a time I got up and went into the lighted car. The yellowish lights made me blink at first; we had reached the outskirts of Vera Cruz, my destination for the night.

The Rich City of the True Cross—
 It was on Good Friday in the year 1519 that Cortez first touched the shore of what later became Vera Cruz. This means True Cross and is all that remains of the original title that Cortez bestowed upon the Indian village he found here, which translated meant 'The Rich City of the True Cross'.

The principal 'sight' of Vera Cruz is the ancient fortress and prison of San Juan de Ulua. Here much human misery prevailed for many centuries. The prisoners would either go insane or else die of their exposures when the waters of the Gulf would envelop them leaving only their mouth and nose exposed. Although there is in Vera Cruz a paucity of so-called sights, and every guide book merely refers to it as a place for embarking or disembarking, still I found it of interest for at least two things; fish and people.

I'll put the fish first. The huachinango is a Gulf fish and the manner in which they prepare it in Vera Cruz makes it a piscatorial, gastronomic treat for the most fastidious gourmet. When thus served it appears on the Menu as 'Huachinango a la Veracruzana.' On my arrival at Vera Cruz, after putting up at the Grand Hotel des Diligencias, I went to another hotel, the Colon, which specialized in this fish among others. Never have I enjoyed fish more, and only twice have I seen it equalled—pampano as served at Antoine's in New Orleans, and pescado blanco from Lake Chapala that I had in a restaurant on the shores of this great lake. So with this dish of heavenly fish before me washed down with some good wine, I felt I had not merely eaten but that I had dined.

I retired about mid-night as I had to catch a train early the next morning for the airport, Tejeria, where I was to board a plane and fly to Merida, the Capital of Yucatan, on my way to Chichen Itza and Uxmal—the famous ruined Maya cities in the jungles beyond.

"If you could spend an hour with me in the accident ward of the large hospital where I am stationed, you would understand why I don't see anything smart about speeding."

Figures released by The Travelers Insurance Company indicate that nearly 27 per cent of all fatal accidents are caused by exceeding the speed limit. My experience has taught me something that these figures do not indicate—that the worst accidents, those involving almost hopeless injuries, nearly always, result from accidents where high speed was a factor.

The farmer was asked, "Does your cow voluntarily give much milk?" "Well," replied the farmer, "I can't just say how voluntary it is. If we can get her headed into a corner and tie her there while an active able-bodied man gets hold of her, she'll yield up considerable."

Cancer Victim May Receive Much Aid By Early Diagnosis

Deaths from cancer in Texas reached a total of 4305 during the past year, indicating that a warning against cancer quacks and so-called cancer cures is justified by the State Health Department. Early diagnosis and competent treatment could have prevented many of these deaths, states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer.

"While newspapers, as a rule, do not carry advertising of this type, there are many other ways by which misinformation can reach the public. Undoubtedly there are many persons who, being thus deluded from seeking proper medical advice, unnecessarily become cancer victims, while others not having cancer, are fleeced out of much money for a so-called cure," Dr. Cox added.

"There are but two ways of treating cancer. First, by surgery or X-ray. Treatment must be started early and in the hands of a competent surgeon. Surgery is relied upon to remove cancerous tumors and is used in nearly two-thirds of the cases. X-ray or radium is used to advantage for the remaining group. Frequently the two methods are combined. Self-medication, serums, colored lights, pastes, salves, and diets are valueless.

"The great protection against cancer is early diagnosis. Every case is an emergency and it is unfortunate that the majority of those with cancer do not seek medical advice early in the first stages of the disease. No hope should be placed in fake cancer cures or treatments. Rather, the annual physical examination and an immediate reporting to your physician of any symptoms which may be suspected to be the beginning of cancer should be relied upon. These symptoms are: any unusual bleeding from any bad opening, any lump in the breast or other part of the body, any persistent sore, particularly on the face or mouth, and chronic indigestion. These conditions may not be cancer but sometimes they are forerunners of the more common types of this disease. Where cancer is suspected, do not delay, but consult your physician at once.

A fact not generally known is that most of the Bibles sold in this country are printed in Belgium. Partly on this account printing is to be displayed in historic fashion in the Belgian Building at the New York World's Fair 1939. Art binding, particularly in leather, is a fine craft in Belgium, so many examples of it are to be shown.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

POINT OF VIEW

Low viewpoint, as here, gives a picture one aspect. High viewpoint produces a different picture. Try both.

MANY things go into the making of an artistic, appealing picture—and not the least important is the point of view.

In fact, the viewpoint determines the type of picture you get. Consider a picture of a person out of doors. Stand back thirty feet to take the picture, and you get a landscape view with a figure in the foreground. Stand only a few feet from the subject, and you get an informal portrait with the minimum of background. In other words, if you want to feature the person—get close to your subject. If it's the landscape you want—stand back.

Angle shots are unusual and attract attention. Shoot from an elevation, and you get a "bird's-eye" view of your subject. Shoot from below and you get a "worm's-eye" view. The resulting pictures of the same subject from the low and high viewpoints will be quite different and they will lend variety to your snapshot collection.

For example, the picture above was snapped from the beach below the diving board. If the snapshot had been perched aloft in the diving tower, with his camera pointed downward toward the pair on the springboard, his picture would have been quite different—entirely because of the difference in viewpoint.

In this picture, a K-2 filter was used on the camera lens to darken the sky and emphasize the clouds. Ordinarily, the filter would have necessitated increased exposure, but here the beach reflected so much light that 1/50 second at f8 was correct. Had the picture been taken from a high viewpoint, with camera pointed down toward the water, no filter would have been used, because the water photographs dark without it.

Next time you're taking pictures—and today is as good a time as any—try snapping the same subject from several viewpoints, high, low, close-up, and distant. Then compare the pictures. You'll readily see how viewpoint helps you to control the arrangement of your pictures. You can simplify backgrounds, eliminate undesirable parts of a scene, make all sorts of changes—all by moving left or right, forward or backward.

This is one sure road to better pictures—study different viewpoints; choose the best one to tell your story—then shoot.

plus of vegetables to can, Mrs. Butler said.

The garden on the Samuel J. Moore farm in this county is planned for production every month of the year. They plant a fall garden, a frame garden for winter and early spring garden then a later spring garden is planted after sand storms are over.

Better vegetables can be grown in cool months, so surplus produced for canning is raised from fall to early spring.

One great advantage in fall and winter gardening is that insects are fewer then, weeds grow less profusely and more time is available for garden work.

Information on all phases of gardening may be obtained from the Home Supervisor of the Farm Security Administration or from the County Home Demonstration Agent or Extension Service at A. and M. College.

Facilities for attending to every medical emergency, from a finger-scratch to childbirth, will be provided at the New York World's Fair 1939. There are to be 10 first aid stations on the grounds, a large corps of physicians and surgeons, nearly 100 nurses, 10 motor ambulances and a mobile X-ray truck to speed to the scene of any accident.

Surveys indicate that visitors to the New York World's Fair 1939 will be able to obtain desirable accommodation in any price range. There are 133,334 hotel rooms in the city; hostleries in suburban communities have 50,000 rooms; Y. M. C. A. club-houses and similar semi-public institutions provide 40,000 and those in apartments and rooming houses add 120,000 more. Thus, the total transient accommodation is 343,334 rooms.

Dr. McKenzie was a friendly man, brilliant and capable. He derived a serene joy from life through the association of friends and the benefits he could render those less fortunate than himself. Pay On Loans . . .

meeting of approximately 500 farmers each having cotton stored in the Jayton warehouse, Congressman George Mahon of Colorado spoke and offered his services.

The farmers appointed a committee with Rose as chairman and the committee and Mahon communicated with Washington authorities immediately asking relief from the order of payment of the notes.

The cotton was placed in the warehouse last fall and winter under provisions of the 1937 loan program; but since the government is claiming the cotton is below standard all notes issued against the 33,000 bales are being called for payment.

Belongs to 3,000 Farmers. The cotton stored belongs to approximately 3,000 farmers from Stonewall, King, Dickens, Kent, Crosby, Motley, Floyd, Lubbock, Hale and Garza counties according to Marshall Farmby, Dickens county judge who presided at the called meeting of farmers.

Farm leaders estimated the loss caused by immediate sale of cotton would be from $100,000 to $300,000 to its owners.

Rose, his committee of 16 farmers, Congressman Mahon of the 19th district of Texas, and other agricultural leaders are continuing their efforts to find a solution of the problem satisfactory to both the farmers and the government.

Rose said Cliff Day of Plainview, president of the Texas Agricultural association, pledged his support of the movement and promised to communicate with Washington authorities Rose communicated with Day today.

West Texas farmers consider the situation "extremely serious" since they will suffer a tremendous loss if cotton is sold now. It is almost $5 a bale cheaper now than when placed in the loan program. Washington officials have been warned that if the farmers suffer that loss, the government may lose much of the confidence of farmers of this section in the farm program.

Rose today wired a request to Goodloe asking that a representative of the Commodity Credit corporation be sent to Lubbock to meet with the committee of West Texas farmers, Formby said.

Lubbock Fair To Offer Greater Exhibitions

LUBBOCK — With only ten days to go before the opening of the 25th Panhandle South Plains Fair and Silver Jubilee, officials are making final arrangements for the six-day celebration.

In the exhibition buildings, the livestock centers, and the industrial display buildings, will be seen the prize products of the South Plains fertile farming lands and ranches, of its busy manufacturing plants and places of business—the greatest educational exhibitions ever brought together in this area. Handicrafts, home canning, needle work and products of other household arts will attest the skill of South Plains housewives.

Midway attractions will be many and varied, as the Mighty Sheesley Midway will be on hand to provide rides, games, freaks, and tons of fun for the young and old.

A rodeo program for each evening has been planned to provide the utmost in thrills with top hands of the nation and the meanest broncs, the spookiest calves, the toughest steers, and the most spectacular performer of the entire Southwest, matching strength and wits.

On the standard half mile race track each afternoon racing thoroughbreds from some of the major circuits will meet, many of them appearing in Lubbock for the first time. Famous stables from the entire Southwest will match for liberal purses.

Fair visitors will find at the Fair Grounds this year a vastly improved plant, on which thousands of dollars have been spent to make accommodations comfortable, displays attractive, and facilities the best obtainable.

Streamlining the Pedestrian

The Process The Product

One out of every four pedestrians killed last year was crossing the street between intersections, according to latest figures released by The Travelers Insurance Company. More than 4,800 pedestrians met death in this manner and nearly 89,000 were more or less seriously injured. It was the greatest single cause of pedestrian deaths.

Of the 40,300 persons killed in traffic accidents in 1937, the records show, 17,410 were pedestrians.

The 1938 automobile is a marvel of speed, power and safety, but the pedestrian is the individual he has developed from a mere steed of years ago. He has no steel body; nor has nature streamlined him so he can move faster in this age of speed.

He has one advantage, however, if he will use it. He can keep up for his slow feet by his wits.
