That ever interesting and provocative writer, E. Rasmus Tack (nee Howe) of the Amarillo Globe News, while on one of his perennial "vacation" trips this time to Yellowstone, has raised the question of which is the better man, the one who gets up at 6 o'clock to spend several hours ruminating about it, or the one who sleeps until 11 o'clock undisturbed. Mr. Tack admires more than words can tell such country fellows as newspaperman Douglas Meador at Matador who sleeps late. Mr. Tack and

Mr. Meador are among those of bright mind who have unlimited night hours to think and ponder and study up things for those of us who get up early and carry in the wood and water and do other chores before daylight. Mr. Tack says frankly the late sleeper is the better, more useful man. With such insane thinking this newspaper writer takes positive issue. It is true perhaps the man who gets up early does not do a lot of thinking. He sees a lovely sunrise and does not appreciate its soul-stirring beauty. He hears the meadow lark sing and does not let the beauty of the roundelay flow through his stolid bosom. But he does carry in the wood. He does churn the butter, that will satisfy the cravings of these thinkers. What we have to say, in short, is that we cannot do without eggs and butter, we must have a fire to warm one's body. But mankind has done without the thinkers. In any large number at least, for a time that is beyond the memory of man. Mr. Tack and Mr. Meador and their ilk, would be in a bad state at an 11 o'clock rising hour to lace their shoes, should the housewife cry out there is no milk, no butter, no kindling wood to start a fire, had the stolid ones not gotten up and tumbled about for hours and hours ahead. Which is the better man, we ask, the one who puts new ideas in your mind and ulcers in your stomach or the one who satisfies the cravings of your body so that you may do your day's work? The logical answer is plain. It's the early riser, of course, the one who comes mudding in early from the fields with sustenance for the thinkers' breakfast.

The old sandy sow, was one whom he would not name. He is anonymously The Thinker. Why do you suppose Rodin did it that way? The fact is he didn't want the thinkers' people to be disgraced in the community where he had lived. Harvest hands going by in the early morning may have rotten egged the thinker as rightly they should. He should have been helping instead of thinking. All the rest of the family were good, honest, hard working people. They didn't think. They snapped into the business of getting some wheat to make bread. Thus we dispose of Mr. E. R. Tack and Mr. Douglas Meador. Thinkers, that's all. Just thinkers.—Floyd County Hesperian.

This business of getting along with the thinkers has many problems for the proletariat. Us proletariats has got to stick together against them, you know. About the time we have gathered in things to hope we have them appressed they begin thinking. No telling which way these better minds will take. You get set and you hope. But you lose. They think too fast while the thinking spell is on. Next morning you've lost and you know that the eggs and milk and fresh fruit and vegetables you brought in are not sufficient. The thinker has thought up something that plays you a scurvy trick. Please note, however, the thinker is without honor in his country as history records. There were not more than half a dozen of these in the old days. And the only one that Rodin thought up, after he finished with milking the cows and bringing in the eggs and killing

FARMERS GAIN IN GRASSHOPPER WAR

Slight gains on several fronts are reported by county agent "General" Emmons leading the Motley county grasshopper war. He said last week that a total of 92,300 pounds of grasshopper poison bran were prepared last month. Improvement in the situation is indicated by a relief in demand. Only 21 batches have been mixed since Saturday. A total of 196 farmers have procured poison during the past month. Most users have reported good results.

O. D. Calvert of Flomot declared his results were better this year than ever before. After removing a Russian thistle he counted 31 dead grasshoppers in a radius of 30 inches.

Unless the demand increases, the mixing station will be closed of mornings, Mr. Emmons declared. Farmers needing poison should contact the county agent's office one day previous to day when delivery is wanted. Enough poison bran is on hand for 30 batches. Farmers expecting to need more poison should secure it immediately.

Legion Auxiliary Elects Officers

American Legion Auxiliary elected officers at a regular meeting held last Thursday night in the legion hut, and created a new office to provide a title for one of the members who volunteered her service in a new and unique capacity.

Mrs. Marvin Patton, charter member of the organization and one of its most staunch and loyal supporters during when it was and war years would be named the auxiliary, declined to accept an active office, since she has served in practically every post from president to sergeant-at-arms, but did commit herself by offering to keep the kitchen free of mice, and by unanimous vote became the first "Rodent Exterminator" of the organization.

New officers named were as follows: Mrs. W. W. Clements, president; Mrs. A. J. Perkins, 1st vice-president; Mrs. Ethel Loyd Latimer, 2nd vice-president; and Miss Mary Keith, historian, with the following re-elected: Mrs. H. H. Watson and Mrs. Ben Keltz, with devotion by Mrs. J. A. Groves. The program was held following a covered dish supper. Picnic To Climax Youth Club Work

A picnic, in which it is hoped that all parents will join their children, will climax the program of boys and girls club activities which have been in progress since the close of school and which will end next Friday, July 29.

The affair is planned as a community "family picnic" to be held at the Roaring Springs swimming pool on the 29th, at 6 p. m. Watermelon will be furnished by the club, and it is suggested that each family bring a picnic supper.

An informal program will be presented by the children, demonstrating what they have learned during the summer program.

Those who have attended the club meetings have learned to swim, dive, folk dance, sing, play in rhythm band, and how to make leather articles.

After the program, the parents will be challenged to a "swimming meet", so moms and pops are urged to bring their swimming suits and give the youngsters some keen competition.

Leaders and instructors in the summer club program have been Dennis Bryant, Mrs. John Hamilton and Mrs. Frank Pohl, who wish to express appreciation to Mrs. Bill Waybourn for her assistance, and to Paul Enloe for the splendid cooperation which he has extended them at the Roaring Springs swimming pool.

"Uncle Jay" Reads Tribune On The Air

Early morning radio listeners here were surprised Tuesday morning of last week when they heard most of last week's Tribune read over the air by "Uncle Jay" Lynn of Amarillo station KGNC, a favorite in this area.

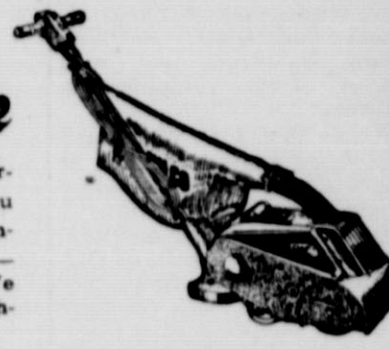

"Uncle Jay" commented favorably on the Tribune (editor Meador was unfortunately still asleep) and declared that county agent J. R. Emmons must have some kind of influence with the weekly newspaper because of the amount of publicity he receives.

At least 20 listeners reported hearing the program in which "Uncle Jay" expressed his desire to be invited to visit "The Capitol city of the Cattle country." This is a public and official invitation to "Uncle Jay" to visit us, sanctioned by the city and county officials, including the sheriff, the Lions club and the people. The latch string on Meador Manor is on the outside, "Uncle Jay." You ain't met no friendly people until you have been to Matador.

BURTON-LINGO COMPANY

Statement To Our Customers

DEFINITE FACTS

Over 25 years ago the management of this firm entered the hardware, implement and home-furnishing business in Matador. It was our aim then to give this territory our best—and expand our business in order to better serve our customers. At present this firm is providing a livelihood for 46 persons, which includes our employees and their dependents. Our customers have made this growth possible and we are grateful.

The original policy continues to be our aim, hence the remodeling of our store. When the work is completed we hope to give this territory one of the finest stores in all of West Texas.

APOLOGY

During the past few crucial years it has not been possible to give our customers the type of service we feel they deserve. Most of our efforts have been centered on securing merchandise rather than selling it. In some instances employees have not shown proper courtesy and concern to our customers. For these conditions, beyond our control, we offer our apologies.

THE PICTURE IS CHANGED. Conditions are different. We are re-modeling our store but the greatest remodeling is yet to come. We are going to offer still better merchandise and lower prices—and—most of all, better-trained and more efficient employees.

Basis On Which We Ask Your Business

Certainly we appreciate as much as any firm can appreciate, the patronage you have given us because of your good will. We certainly hope you will continue. But the basis on which we are going to seek to deserve your patronage in the future, is based on offering you nationally advertised and leading brands of merchandise, which are the best in the world. Our prices will be in line with legitimate competition everywhere. When we sell you a GE refrigerator, Kelvinator refrigerator, Zenith radio, and many, many other items, you buy them just as cheaply, and frequently cheaper, than in any other trading center in West Texas.

TRADING AT HOME

Just a word. It is impossible to trade in Matador without helping yourself. You can't call your home doctor, use your home lawyer, buy at your home dry goods, drug store, grocery or other home firms without helping your schools, churches—the city and county of which you are a part. You will always pay more away from home. You will pay $3 away from home for a shot that will cost one dollar from your home doctor. Have your car "tuned-up" elsewhere and it will cost $25 or $30 for the same job that would cost $6 to $10 at home. You have often seen a chair priced at $79.50 away from home that you would not consider too great a bargain in your home store at $59.50. It is the same in all lines. Whatever merchandise or service you need, you can save money at home.

CONFIDENCE

WE CAN ASSURE YOU that we will carry the best brands of merchandise made, and at prices that are suggested by the manufacturers. YOU CAN BUY WITH CONFIDENCE. You can send a seven-year-old child to our store and buy a refrigerator or air-conditioner with the same confidence and assurance of full value an adult person would expect.

FORMAL OPENING

Some time later we expect to announce the formal opening of our remodeled store. Until then we extend a sincere welcome to visit us—and see the best brands of merchandise in the world on display.

Shivers For Jester

The untimely death, early Monday of Beauford Jester does more than place a new figure in the governor's chair. It changes, radically, the political picture as it applies to the governor's race in 1950.

Allan Shivers, who, under the Constitution, stepped from the lieutenant governorship into the governor's office upon death of Mr. Jester, now becomes a major candidate in the 1950 elections. He might even be described as the major candidate, because of the advantage accruing to the holder of any office in seeking election to it.

Mr. Shivers, a former member of the state senate, ran for lieutenant governor in 1946 with the governorship in mind—and made no bones about it. He hoped to serve two terms as second man in Austin, then springboard into the governorship after Mr. Jester's second term. But somehow or another, he couldn't get his kite up to sufficient height to be accepted as a strong candidate. As a matter of record, he recently has lost ground as a political figure. But now the picture has changed. The Act of God which vacated the governorship Monday morning has projected Mr. Shivers from a far rear position in the 1950 governor's race by giving him an opportunity to get into and stay in the limelight. More important, it has given him a campaign plea often successful under similar conditions: "Give the man a term of his own."

Whether or not Governor Shivers will be able to get himself elected to a term of his own is not, of course, a foregone conclusion. He hasn't shown himself to be a strong man. He may fall victim to political error between now and next Summer. He may alienate, or fail to pick up powerful support essential to election. He will, certainly, have tough competition in the personages of such able campaigners as Olin Culberson, Price Daniel and other hopefuls. But in his succession to the governorship, he "has a leg up" on 1950 and a considerable advantage over his rivals at least at the moment.

Governor Shivers is a very rich young man, so he can afford to play at politics. He is handsome. He is personable. Thus far, he hasn't shown unusual aptitude in politics, as his gratuitous and unnecessary slap at West Texas in the late University Building amendment campaign proved. But perhaps he has grown wiser as he has grown older, will learn more as he goes along.

At any rate, he is governor now. If he fails to get the office on his own next year he'll have no one to blame but himself.

The Morning Avalanche, as all readers know, frequently expressed disagreement with the administration of Gov. Beauford Jester.

Mr. Jester was well aware of

COOL COFFEE CUES

When the weather's hot, nothing's more refreshing than tall, frosty glasses of iced coffee topped with snowy whipped cream. the fact. He knew, too, that our attitude was as much an expression of public opinion in West Texas as it was an expression of our own opinion.

In truth, we carried on a feud with Mr. Jester, and he with us, over almost three long years. It is a matter of record that the late governor disagreed with us heatedly as we disagreed with him—and on about as many different occasions.

But our disagreements with Mr. Jester were, throughout, based upon policies and administrative actions. They were not personal, nor were they personally pitched. We choose to believe—and we hope we are right in the belief—that Mr. Jester's disagreements with us were just as impersonal. We have an idea that if either of us had come across the other, stuck in a mud hole, either would have pulled the other out, regardless of effort or discomfort involved, and probably with some good natured rally thrown in.

There was a time, as thousands will remember, when we had an editorial arm across the shoulders of Beauford Jester. That was in his last-ditch political battle with Homer Rainey, which ended in Mr. Jester's first election as governor. There was a time, when Mr. Jester, as governor-elect, made a speech to open the 1947 Panhandle-South Plains fair—standing before the grandstand with his arm across our shoulder. These occasions were happy ones—for us and for Mr. Jester. We are only sorry that they could not, or did not, continue.

But regardless of happy days and unhappy ones, of political alliances and of political feuds, we regret the passing of Beauford Jester. We are sincerely sorry that his life-span ran out and our sympathy for his loved ones in their loss is heartfelt.

After all, Mr. Jester was the governor of Texas and we are a Texan.

The feeling is one which all Texans will understand even if, like ourselves, they are at a loss to put it in words.—Charlie Guy in The Lubbock Avalanche.

His picture covers two-thirds of page eight and shows him holding a microphone, with a cigar in his mouth. Cutlines for the picture are as follows: "The Honorable Andrew J. Rogers, law student from Childress, cigar is his trademark. His corduroy jacket is typical of the 'new look' college men have brought to the Legislature. And his serious outlook is also typical of most of them. Honest Andy's big interest is soil, water and gas conservation."

Heading of the article declares at the last election Texas voters chose 42 college students as members of their house of Representative, and that the results have pleased nearly everybody.

lunchroom division of the state department of education.

An increase in insurance has been ordered on both school buildings from $30,000 to $50,000 each.

Agreement was reached to cooperate with Roaring Springs school board and the county board in employing a special teacher for the term as authorized under the Gilmer-Aken law.

Twenty teachers must be employed before a special teacher is authorized, but two schools may combine in bringing the number to 20, and divide the services of the teacher between the two systems. Librarians, school nurses, school physicians, visiting teachers and itinerant teachers are classified as special teachers. It is probable the two schools will employ a school nurse, Ezzell declared.

Next regular meeting of the board is scheduled for August 9th, at the Stanley Clinic-Hospital waiting room, beginning at 8:15 p. m. A public hearing on the school budget will be held at the meeting and anyone interested in revenue and expenditures for the year 1949-50, is invited to attend.
