

Rain Clouds Shadow Old Settlers' Reunion

COME STRANGERS. Low, heavy rain clouds last night shadowed the 28th annual reunion of Matador Old Settlers, scheduled to begin in Roaring Springs at 10 o'clock this morning.

The great tropical storm which has claimed 125 lives in Jamaica in its path across the Gulf of Mexico to the Texas coast, the West Texas weather has turned cool and overcast to break the excessive heat wave.

Rain fell throughout the county early Wednesday. Matador registered 1.70 and the fall to the north was heavier. The precipitation at Roaring Springs until yesterday afternoon was reported at about one-half inch.

Rain fell over a wide area of the South Plains and in spotted areas of the North Plains. Amarillo weather station said the weather would probably be fair and warmer today.

Farmers and ranchers declare the rain worth a "million dollars" to the critical cotton crop and ranges.

Old Settlers Ready
Final arrangements for the Old Settlers reunion were being completed yesterday afternoon following a series of upsets on former plans. Jack Williams who had bid $500 on full concession rights for the reunion, cancelled his bid Monday. The soda pop concession is being handled by the Old Settlers association under the direction of the Paducah Coca-Cola Bottling Company. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Waybourn of Matador will manage the eating concession.

Before Ranch Was Organized

DESTINY'S shuttle was busy weaving a web of strange circumstances immediately preceding the formation of the Matador Land and Cattle Company.

The man named Ballard, for whom Ballard Springs and creek were named, died in New Mexico, about 1916. After Mr. Ballard left the springs (Mr. Collison's letter declares a Jew named Henri Hamburg moved to the dugout, enlarged it and opened a store of hunters' supplies, and also bought buffalo hides.

"I sold my last hides to him in June, 1878," Mr. Collison wrote, "I had killed the buffalo near Bridle Bit to the northeast." Hamburg closed his store in a short time and Joe Browning moved in. Mr. Collison bought out Browning for Henry H. Campbell (sum paid was $600) which was the nucleus of the Matador Land and Cattle Company.

"I was at the springs the night you were born," Mr. Collison wrote, and your father received the "Jingle Bob" cattle the next day after you were born." Mr. Campbell was born May 15, 1881.

Mr. Collison, who was 22, said the Jingle Bobs were driven across the Plains from New Mexico (about 8,000 head) in two herds. The owners were S. R. Coggins and R. K. Willie. Mr. Collison said he was in charge of the first herd, about 4,000 calves and 500 dry cows, while Willie was in charge of the second herd. Most of the cattle who helped bring the cattle from Mexico, returned the letter declared.

Prairie Dogs Died Starvation In Wake Of Dry Years

It has been written of the drought that struck West Texas in 1892-93. It is not possible to record all the suffering and privation which accompanied the two years without rain. Homesteaders left in caravans, some without owners; fields empty. The high and furious winds left tufts of roots protruding from the parched soil. Harry H. Campbell, owner of the Matador Ranch, remembers the first school in 1892. Matador's first school in 1892 had some 25 to 30 students. It included the Cammack, Reinhart, Ross and Morris families. The next spring, 1893 only one boy remained. The boy was Grover Grimmer, relative of Billy Mosley's. The other families had fled away. Clarence Nugent, who had two boys for a time, thought that hopeless spring. Near the present business section of Matador was a prairie where the soil was blown away from the hard-packed clay that walked the dens. The prairie was in a manner, "blown off the ground." Mr. Campbell remembers when they could scramble to escape him, because of weakness, fall their backs and try to defend their lives with their little remaining strength. Mr. Campbell remembers when it was possible after the drought to drive almost in any direction, especially in the country, and quickly there a wagon load of mesquite from which the earth had been blown away. Fences were cut and cattle drifted in search of water. Some Matador boys were found as far south as Fisher county. Thousands died here of starvation.

Tepee City Once "Pleasure Island" In Sea Of Prairie

Music and laughter have been silenced more than 60 years. The prairie country has submerged the small "pleasure island" that was once Tepee City, Texas. For more than half a century Matador Ranch cowboys have tended the best they could the graves of two men left in the wake of the vanished pioneer adventure. Coyotes howl into the silence of empty nights where cowboys drank fiery whiskey and danced with attractive if questionable ladies. The Rath Trail, which started at Dodge City, Kansas and ended at a point near the Double Mountain, passed by Tepee City in 1877. Rath and Reynolds, enterprising businessmen of Dodge City conceived a plan which seemed certain to augment their profits from supplying needs of buffalo hunters and ranchers. The plan, all too remote from respectability, was to supply the buffalo hunter and cowboy with ancient but popular means of diversion. They brought to Tepee City about 1876 approximately 200 yoke of oxen, and several six-mule team wagons, besides pack horses, guns, ammunition, whiskey, girls and supplies. The fame of Tepee City spread rapidly. About 12 miles to the west, one of the nation's greatest cattlemen, Henry H. Campbell, was struggling with the operation of the Matador ranch. He had visions of the country developing into sound, prosperous and respectable section of Texas. The unbridled conduct popular in Tepee City was making his problems more difficult. His cowboys were no longer dependable. If he sent a detachment west to look for strays, they might go by way of Tepee City.

In the opposite direction. Good men were spending their wages as rapidly as they earned them.

Tepee City was flourishing but it had engaged the wrath of a strong-willed man. Henry H. Campbell had sold the Matador to a Scotch syndicate in 1883 but until 1891. About 1885 he bought Tepee City. The stores, saloons, and girls were forced to get off Matador land, concluding a brief, colorful chapter in the pioneer history of Motley county. The episode is not a conclusive history of the pioneer community of which dim traces barely remain in the crawling sand and encroaching mesquites, but reflects an interlude in the interesting record of the cattle country.

IN APPRECIATION

I wish to take this means of expressing my sincere gratitude to the people of Motley and Dickens counties, for the many cards, letters, flowers and other tokens of friendship tendered during my illness in Quannah and Fort Worth hospitals. Mrs. George McMahan.

GARRISON ASKS PRESS FOR AID AGAINST RUMORS

HELENE, July 31—Homer Garrison, Jr., Director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, today announced his intention of calling upon the editors of newspapers and radio stations to assist his Department in the fight against the "damper" on the Texas Motor Vehicle Responsibility Law. Garrison emphasized that the Department will conduct a thorough educational program in November and December to acquaint the public accurately and adequately with the purposes and provisions of the law which becomes effective next January 1st.

At the same time, Director Garrison warned the public not to believe statements that the statute is now in effect or that it is a compulsory insurance law. He emphatically pointed out that the law will have no effect upon motor vehicle owners and operators until January 1st and declared that under no condition of circumstances will it compel motorists to carry automobile liability insurance.

According to Garrison, the new regulations bear no resemblance to a compulsory insurance law. He pointed further to the fact that only one state has such a law but that Texas became the 35th state to enact a security-type Safety Responsibility Law. It is true, according to Garrison, that beginning January 1st a motor vehicle owner or operator who is involved in an accident resulting in death or injury, or property damage exceeding $100, must furnish proof of his ability to meet claims up to $15,000 or have his motoring privileges suspended until he does. Proper insurance may be accepted as sufficient proof of such financial responsibility but the law also offers several other choices of furnishing such proof. Among these are the posting of a bond with the Texas Department of Public Safety or the depositing of satisfactory security with the Department. Also, under certain conditions, individuals or firms may qualify as self-insurers under the terms of the law.

The alternatives will be clearly set forth by the Safety Department as a part of the education beginning in November. All such information released by the State will be clearly identified as such, and it will be official, according to Garrison.

In calling upon the press and radio for assistance, Garrison stated: "I am asking the public-spirited newspapers and radio stations of Texas to cooperate with the Department of Public Safety, on behalf of the State, in a plan to give our people all the true facts. I am confident that they will do so. This educational program will begin November 1st, two months before the law becomes effective. In the meantime, I hope the people of Texas will not permit themselves to be misled again about this new law, which was enacted for their greater safety and financial protection."

Tribune, Matador, Matley County, Texas, Thursday, August 23, 1951

and farms, and the question is, what are you going to do about it? Our advice in the premises is to reap the benefits of a condition of affairs that your own courage and fortitude has brought about, secure a body of this rich land that is attracting the attention of the world and that is so rapidly enhancing in value, and next invade the home of these good settlers for whom you have prepared the way, capture his daughter for a companion and trot in double harness down the rest of the pathway of life—in other words, settle down and be happy. The best of the domain is being rapidly absorbed, and unless you act promptly in the matter, the opportunity will be gone. You are on the ground, and are familiar with the country, and can make a living in any one can. If benefits are to accrue from the settling of the country, you are certainly entitled to reap them, and now is your opportunity and it won't last long. Understand me, I am not advising you to leave the employ of the Company; but your remaining so employed will not prevent your taking a section of land. I hope you will remain in the employ of the Company and be faithful and true to them in the future as in the past, and use your earnings to improve your land that is to be your future home. And when there is no longer employment for you on the ranch, settle down amid the scenes of your early hardships and show to the world what a useful, thrifty and honorable citizen a cowboy can be.

I have before remarked that this is our last annual reunion as co-workers for the Matador. We have had many difficulties to overcome and many rough roads to travel. Heat and cold, hunger and privation have each and often assailed the citadel of our manhood. Under these trying ordeals it is but natural that little asperities should be aroused and hot and hasty words be spoken, but I am proud to know that through it all the milk of human kindness has run, and the wounds inflicted in moments of passion have been more than healed in days and hours of magnanimity and manly reparation, and mutual forgiveness and forgetfulness.

It is with mingled feelings of pride and sadness that I sever my business relations with this company, — pride, pardonable pride I trust, that it has flourished and prospered during my connection with its business management and that in a measure my ideal of a cattle ranch has been realized, and in the interest of which a number of the best years of my life have been spent, and upon which all the thought of my years of greatest mental activity has been expended.

The currents of our lives, yours and mine, have run side by side through many years, many hardships and privations, many victories and defeats. With sadness I see these long established associations severed, associations rendered sacred by many severe tests of both manhood and friendship. And my good wife, who has been my comfort and support in all these years of toil, exposure and privation—she who has been your friend and comfort in many a gloomy hour, when far from the tender sympathies and ministrations of your own loved ones—has a warm place in her heart for each and every one of you, and heartily joins me in admonishing you to continue steadfastly in the paths of truth, honor and duty, ever aspiring to higher and nobler manhood, and it is needless for me to add that she also joins me in wishing you all the prosperity and happiness that this world can bestow upon a set of deserving boys.

Henry Campbell's Farewell Address Urges Cowboys to Own Land

Custom of the Matador Ranch during the pioneer days when it was managed by Henry H. Campbell, was the annual Christmas dances which lasted three days and nights. Cowboys from all the early-day ranches came to the Matador for the excellent food prepared by Mrs. Campbell, the music and dancing.

At the beginning of this Christmas event in 1890, Henry H. Campbell delivered his farewell address to his cowboys, associates and the cowboys of other ranches. He had resigned from the helm of the Matador. The address is as follows:

Gentlemen of the Matador Land and Cattle Company:

I am heartily glad to greet you, one and all, this evening. These annual festivities are always seasons of freedom from care, good fellowship and happy reunion. But this particular occasion is fraught with special, almost painful, interest to me. The flood gates of thought are opened up, and the lights and shadows of years filled with joys and sorrows, battles and victories, successes and failures, chase each other in rapid succession across the field of consciousness. You, my friends, have all traveled far enough along the journey of life to have observed that nothing is permanent, and that change is everywhere prevalent. The winds of heaven that blow across our limitless plains change continually. The sleepless rivers that roll on to the ocean are continually carving out new channels and gnawing at the banks that confine them. Old Ocean himself is restless and unceasing in his lashings of the coast that confines his angry billows. Our lives are full of changes: First we are cooling infants in the arms of dotting and devoted mothers, then prattling and mischievous children, whose lives are filled with careless joys and short-lived sorrows; next we are grown-up boys and young men with stronger sinews and budding ambitions for higher achievements, and then comes mature manhood with its grave responsibilities, high aspirations and ardent labors. But not only do changes take place in our physical beings, in our places of abode and in our surroundings; there are also changes in our occupations and in the business and social relations that we sustain to each other. This brings me directly to the thoughts that are uppermost in my mind, and time.

You are doubtless aware that important changes in the management of this splendid property are impending changes that will probably change the currents of several of our lives into different channels, and in a greater or less measure, for better or for worse, affect the community that has for so long been the scene of our labors. Before the revolving wheel of time shall have made another circuit and ushered in another holiday season, our present business and social relations will have been forever served. I feel that this is a fitting occasion to review the past, contemplate the present, and cast the horoscope into the shadowy and uncertain future for a prognosis of coming events. I cannot deny myself a free and soulful talk with you at this time — you whose skill, energy, endurance and courage have contributed so largely to the building up of this, the most successful and possibly the most famous ranch in all the imperial domain of Texas. I also want to take advantage of this, our last annual reunion, to express to you my appreciation of your unswerving fidelity to myself, your courtesy and kindness to my wife and child, and your faithfulness and devotion to the interests of your employers.

The age in which we live, gentlemen, is pre-eminently an

Tribune, Matador, Motley County, Texas, Thursday, August 23, 1951

Founder of The Matador

SEARCH for a perfect cattle country ended here in the Caprock foothills for Henry H. Campbell, above, one of the country's greatest cattlemen. Here he founded the Matador Land & Cattle Co. which he later sold to the Scotch syndicate. He helped organize Motley county and was the first county judge. The city of Matador is located on a section of land which he once owned. Born in North Carolina, Mr. Campbell first came to Texas in 1854 and moved to Ellis county in 1860. He had driven cattle to California, Montana, Dodge City and New Orleans. He found here in the foothill country the ideal area for cattle raising. He bounded the ideal region as 40 miles east of the Caprock thence north to Red river and south to Duck creek. He died here in 1911 and is buried in Ennis, Texas.

age of specialties. The day of glittering generalities is a thing of the past; there is no room for the Jack-of-all trades in our modern business economy. He who would succeed in any undertaking, profession or enterprise must do so by careful preparation and unceasing devotion to that calling in its minutest detail. All modern mechanical wonders existed in the minds of their inventors as purely mental conceptions before they assumed tangible shape. The railway engine, the electric light, the ocean steamer and the cotton gin were at first but intangible ideas in the minds of their respective inventors, till they were clothed with material form to bless and benefit mankind. This is no less true of the splendid property, known nearly all over the civilized world as the Matador Land and Cattle Company. It was at first but a figment of the fancy, to be brought into existence, developed and perfected into its present mammoth proportions through years of patient toil on your part and mine, backed up by the liberal endowment given it by foreign capital. Twenty-two years ago, just as the country was beginning to recover from the effects of the civil war, we started out, with the Matador a mental picture, photographed upon our mind, to find a place and the means to clothe it with the garb of materialization. The Pacific Slope, the Sierra Nevada Mountains, and the Great Northwest were all carefully searched for these essentials. At last a proposition was made to a capitalist by the name of A. P. Haws for the building up of such a property. The proposition was favorably received and the prospects looked encouraging for a while, but resulted in disappointment. Negotiations were then entered into with Chicago capital that for a time promised good results, but these, too, resulted in disappointment. We then turned to acquaintances of our boyhood days, who had grown wealthy, and had large means at their disposal, but their inordinate demand for a guarantee of sixty per cent. per annum on their money invested in the enterprise courted disappointment and invited disaster from the start, and rendered worse than hazardous any enterprise established upon such costly capital. Then it was that, with pride wounded by a lack of confidence on the part of those of whom we had a right to expect the most, we turned our eyes to foreign lands in search of the necessary capital, at a low rate of interest, to establish this enterprise upon a firm basis, and through the financing ability of Col. A. M. Britton, secured the necessary means, located the maturing grounds for our product, and successfully inaugurated the enterprise that has grown into the splendid and world-famed property, known as the Matador Land and Cattle Company.

In this connection we wish to call your attention to the various efforts that have been made in our State and Nation to prejudice the minds of our people against foreigners and foreign capital. We would also impress upon your minds the fact that, but for this cheap foreign money, Northwest Texas would still be a desert, the refuge of bandits and outlaws. It is this cheap foreign money that has enabled you, gentlemen, to subdue the country, make the desert blossom as the rose, drive out the thief and the bandit, and prepare the way for the splendid civilization that is now taking possession of this fertile and beautiful country over which you, gentlemen, have already established supremacy of law and the dominance of right and justice. And while we would admonish you to devotion to your country above all things else, and to let your lives be in strict conformity with the highest and purest patriotism, we would also counsel justice to those foreign capitalists who have so liberally placed their money at our disposal to accomplish these results. We would counsel you to be faithful to them in the future as in the past both in word and in deed, defend them when their good name is traduced and their intentions misrepresented by malignant ignorance, and protect their property from abuse and destruction by the vicious and the dishonest. In this vast and fertile country we have the natural resources for wealth and widespread prosperity, but we have not the capital to develop and render available these riches. We must combine our knowledge, skill and resources with the cheapest money that we can find, and whether that be home or foreign capital, it is but right and justice that each should have his equitable share of the proceeds of this combination of resources; therefore we would admonish you to broad and liberal views in regard to the investment of outside money in ranching, or in railway or other public enterprises in this country, that will tend to the development of the natural resources of the country. Be true to yourselves but also be broad and liberal in your views, and just to those who furnish you the means to enable you to achieve results otherwise unattainable.

At the outset I remarked that we must concentrate, if we would succeed; that we must familiarize ourselves with the details of our business; that we must grow up into it, as it were, and if you will pardon for a moment the introduction of personalities into these remarks, we will state that, our first experience in the stock business was the riding a goat in our father's lane. We never repeated the experiment, we never want to. It didn't hurt the goat, but somehow the ground just flew up and hit our pistol pocket so hard that we have ever since been firm in the conviction that there was an earthquake on that particular day. We are fortunate in that, with the assistance of two sympathetic brothers, our next venture in the stock business was the breaking in of a calf. It was more successful; there was no earthquake that day. This particular calf became the object of our constant care and solicitude. It was a companion; we studied its wants and its habits and became intimate with its every instinct as it grew into mature oxhood. This was but the beginning. From this time on our life was constantly associated with cattle, both in driving and tending herds and in the handling of oxen. Whatever measure of success has attended our management of the Matador Ranch must to a very great extent be attributed to our intimate knowledge of cattle, their wants and habits, acquired by careful observation and study in early life. The lesson we wish to inculcate by this recital is that, whether you continue in the cattle business, or engage in some other occupation you must familiarize yourselves with the details of your business if you would succeed. We trust that we may not be considered egotistic if we assume that what it has taken us forty years to learn cannot be grasped by others as an inspiration, and you, gentlemen, must not hope to embark in the cattle business or other avocation and grasp by inspiration the knowledge of that business that will guarantee success. It must be acquired by patient toil, investigation and experiment. But just here we would observe that these are the very instrumentalities that make the good citizens, the useful man and the wise counselor.

Perfection of management and execution must not be expected of imperfect beings. We of the Matador Ranch have made mistakes, probably many and serious mistakes, but when we look around us at the hopes that have been wrecked and the fortunes that have been squandered by others in fruitless efforts to succeed at the same line of business, we can but congratulate ourselves that we are associated with an enterprise that has weathered the storms, paid regular and legitimate dividends and landed safely in the harbor of financial security, while thousands have shipwrecked on the same sea.

The Future

The prudent man is rarely content with the present, but desires, as far as possible, to peer ahead and see what the future promises. We have already remarked that everything is characterized by change. How often have we seen this truth verified by personal observation in this country. First the Indian and the buffalo; then the cowboy and the herd, and finally the settler and civilization. The cowboy — how shall I pay tribute to his courage, his fortitude and his kindness? He has defied the torrid heats of summer and the frigid blasts of winter without shelter and at times almost with-

You can Beat the Bushes — but you can't Beat this

If you want to know why shrewd car shoppers are saying "Smart Buy's Buick," take a look at this.

It's the new Buick SPECIAL 2-door, 6-passenger Sedan — and it's roomier than most 4-door sedans, higher-powered than many costlier cars — and priced, as you'll discover, right down near the lowest.

Now, we ask you: where can you beat it for the money?

Can you beat this beauty on looks and style and rich bearing in any other car near its price?

Can you match, at the same money, the big power of its valve-in-head Fireball Engine (128 hp with Dynaflo Drive*) — or the big miles-per-gallon figure it delivers with such thrills?

Can you equal this traveler's roominess in any other car of comparable cost — get full-size headroom, legroom and hip-room both front and rear in any other 2-door automobile?

Can you come even near the gentle levelness of its ride and the solid steadiness of its going — have coil springs on all four wheels and a torque-tube keel beneath you — except in another Buick?

And where can you top the restful ease and luxurious smoothness of this sweet-heart's Dynaflo Drive* in any other automobile at any price?

The answers, from a lot of certain-sure folks, sum up to a great big, "YOU CAN'T!"

But why take anyone else's word for it?

Come in and get your own answers. Look over this bed-rock-priced Buick — compare it with any other automobile at the same money — and you'll agree you can't beat this smartest of buys.

DUTCHMAN CAUSED
 CHANGE IN NAME OF WALNUT CREEK

A Dutchman cook and his wife traveling with the pioneer buffalo hunter Frank Collison caused the name of a Motley county creek to be changed. Old maps of the area show the present Dutchman creek as Walnut creek, according to Harry H. Campbell, son of the founder of the Matador Land and Cattle Company.
 The Dutchman (actual name is unknown) was cooking for a group of buffalo hunters headed by Frank Collison. During a previous excursion into the Caprock country Collison had built five dugouts in what is now the Martin ranch, about ten miles southwest of Matador. The "Dutchman houses" as they were later known, were on the bank of what was Walnut creek.
 The buffalo moved their grazing to an area near the present city of Spur and the hunters followed, but the Dutchman and his wife remained.
 The name of the creek by popular reference became changed to Dutchman creek, a monument to an early pioneer, whose departure is not known to be recorded in the shifting sands of a young and restless country.

Buffalo Hunter Gave Name To Roaring Springs

THREE-QUARTERS of a century ago a group of buffalo hunters headed by Frank Collison, made camp on the north bank of Tongue river. During the night when the camp became quiet, the men could hear a roaring. The next morning Mr. Collison walked about a mile east of the camp and came upon a small canyon filled with willow and cottonwood trees and the roaring that had attracted his curiosity, was coming from the canyon.
 He investigated closer and found Roaring Springs. He found signs that it had been a prominent Indian camping ground. In a letter to Harry H. Campbell Mr. Collison says, "I believe I am the first white man to drink from the springs and when I returned to camp I told the men we would call it Roaring Springs. Later when the surveyors came through they accepted my name for the spring. It is hardly possible other white men had been there before me because up until a very short time before, the Indians had made it almost impossible to enter the territory."
 The year was 1877 and Mr. Collison killed buffalo just south of the springs. He also killed two large panthers on a rock ledge above the springs. They were eating a young buffalo and the second panther did not run after he shot the first. He believed they had never before heard a gun. His letter said the country was a paradise with deer in every thicket, antelope and buffalo on every hand.

 Mr. Collison said what was probably the last Indian raid in this country was at Fish Hole on Tongue river south of the springs, in 1879. The band of Indians raided a cow outfit but were driven off.

Control Of Salt In Diet Essential To Proper Balance

There seems to be an increasing number of ailments which call for a cutting down on the amount of salt in the diet. In fact, since salt has received so much publicity in the past few years as one of the items not to eat at time of certain illnesses, many of you might get the idea that it would be better to cut out salt while you're in good health, too.

Salt is essential to life. There is practically nothing living that doesn't contain salt. Because nearly all foods contain salt (or sodium, as it is called), it would be impossible to cut salt out of the diet completely, even if such a thing were desirable.

The aim of the body is to keep the salt level of the body fluids at 0.85 percent. That is the amount of salt in the body fluids of healthy persons. When that level changes, it shows up in the blood. The kidneys are the chief regulator of the salt level, either retaining salt when the level gets too low or throwing off excess salt; kidney disease, therefore, is likely to change the function of the kidneys to such an extent as to throw the salt level out of kilter, which in turn affects the whole body.

Other organs of the body also have an effect upon the kidneys, of course, so that with improper functioning of such organs as the adrenal cortex (the capsule that sits on top of the kidney), the heart, or the liver usually there is a change in the salt level of the body.

When salt is retained in the body, water is retained with it, usually creating a swelling of the various parts of the body which is known as edema; dropsy is an example. To get the body back to normal, medical treatment is aimed at restoring that salt level by getting rid of the retained salt and water.

Along with other treatment, a diet which cuts down on the amount of salt eaten is usually prescribed because the body will use up the salt it has stored away if too little salt is taken in; as the stored salt is called into action, the water it dams is also removed from storage.

No one should undertake a restricted-salt diet without the advice of a physician. When such a diet is prescribed, however, it should be faithfully followed. Kidney trouble, heart trouble and high blood pressure are usually thought of as the leading diseases which make a low-salt diet necessary, but many doctors will prescribe the diet for a number of other ailments, also.

Depending upon the amount of salt which must be cut from the diet, there are schedules of foods to eat which vary from highly restrictive to just adding no extra salt at the table. That is a matter between each patient and his doctor as to how much salt must be eliminated. There are, however, certain foods which are lower in salt content than others; they usually form the basis from which to work on eliminating items on a salt-restricted diet.

All salted foods, naturally, come off the list first—salted nuts, potato chips and the like. Canned foods which have had salt added in the canning process are also often eliminated, but special saltless canned foods are available now in most grocery stores.

Meats and dairy products are nearly all high in sodium. Those which contain the least include lean beef, lean lamb and lean pork (smoked pork is omitted); chicken breast, duck breast and turkey breast; veal, venison, beef liver, pigeon, rabbit liver and foreleg, sweetbreads, tripe, and turkey leg. Butter (unsalted), cream, egg yolk and milk are the least salty of dairy products.

Other foods which are basically low in sodium content include:

Beverages—the cola drinks, coffee, cocoa, fruit juices, ginger ale, cereal drinks, tea and wines.

Fats and oils—unsalted beef drippings, unsalted butter, vegetable oils, olive oil and salad oil.

Cereals and cereal products—arrowroot, pearl barley, cornflour, cracked wheat, cornmeal, farina, white flour, wheatmeal flour, macaroni, malted oatmeal, puffed rice, puffed wheat, rice, sago, semolina, shredded wheat, soya flour, tapioca, and wheatena.

Fruits—all except those to which salt or sodium benzoate have been added.

Vegetables—same as for fruits except that celery, beets, kale, dandelion, mustard greens, spinach and sauerkraut are often eliminated.

Sugar and preserves—plain chocolate, dry coconut, sugar, honey, jam, jelly and marmalade.

Fish—all except shellfish and oysters. No salted or smoked fish are low of course.

Nuts—any that haven't been salted.

Condiments—all spice, cayenne, cinnamon, curry powder, garlic, mace, mustard powder, nutmeg, paprika, pepper, peppermint extract, sage, thyme, tumeric, anilla extract and vinegar. Prepared flavorings are not included nor are onion salt, celery salt, and garlic salt.

Such condiments as are allowed will usually make the difference between tasteless salted food and a nice palatable dish. Someone who has leaned heavily on salt for seasoning will usually find after a month without salt that he is detecting rare flavors in foods which he had previously drowned in salt. And those who stick to their restrictions in the use of salt testify that the day does come when salted food no longer tastes good.

Baptist Church To Hold Revival At Northfield

A ten-day revival meeting will begin at the Northfield Baptist Church on Friday night, August 24th, with Rev. Luther R. Bradley, pastor of the Bible Baptist Church of Childress, doing the preaching. Rev. Bradley is a former pastor of the Northfield church. Most of the evangelistic messages will be based on the book of Revelation, and Rev. Bradley has witnessed as many as 26 saved in one service after delivering a message on this great book.

Rev. Coy Finley has recently been called as pastor of the Northfield Baptist Church. He was ordained to the Ministry, Sunday, August 19, by the Baptist Church at Goodlett, Texas. He is a student of Hardin-Simmons University, Abilene.

Revival services will be held twice daily at 10 a. m. and 8:15

p. m. The public is urged to come and meet the new pastor and hear Evangelist Bradley.

Plans for a charter are to be discussed at a steering committee meeting scheduled for today.

NAVY PLANE HITS THOUSAND MILE AN HOUR CLIP IN TEST

LOS ANGELES.—A supersonic hummingbird, the Navy's Douglas Skyrocket, has zoomed nearly 70,000 feet into the stratosphere at a dazzling speed of more than 1,000 miles an hour.

The rocket-propelled craft bettered all records for speed and altitude in a July 11 test, the Navy announced guardedly yesterday. The exact figures were withheld for security reasons, but speed conjectures ran from 1,200 to 1,500 m.p.h.

The Air Force's X-1, previous unofficial record holder, zipped 1,000 m.p.h. to an altitude of 63,000 feet.

At the controls of the needle-nosed Skyrocket was veteran Douglas test pilot Bridgeman. Bridgeman told reporters the ship burst smoothly through the sonic barrier—speed of sound is 661 mph above 35,000 feet—and handled easily during the 15-minute flight over Edwards Air Force base at Muroc, Calif.

The 40-foot rocket ship was launched at 35,000 feet from a B-29, from which it hung suspended.

The accepted world's speed record is 670.981 m.p.h., set at Muroc in 1948 by a North American F-86. But the Air Force's Bell X-1 piloted by Maj. Chuck Yeager in 1947, by official announcement, flew "several hundred miles faster than the speed of sound." The X-1's ceiling was given as 63,000 feet, exceeding the official record of 59,492.

The new record breaker is the product of six years work by Douglas Aviation Company's El Segundo plant near here. Chief Engineer E. H. Heinemann said: "It passed the speed of sound by a considerable margin, greater than the wildest expectations of our most optimistic engineers."

The hummingbird of them all has swept-back wings only 25 feet across, a pointed five-foot nose, and weighs about 15,000 pounds. It is normally powered by both jet and rocket engines, but for the record flight the jet engine was removed and and extra fuel tank was installed for the rocket motor.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Wilson of Sweetwater, visited here Thursday and Friday as they were enroute to their home after a vacation trip to Pagosa Springs, Colorado.
