Barbara's Briefs

Congratulations to the Lady Matadors for a job well done.

This Spring like weather is certainly good to start the track season. Huh girls.

It has definitely been hard to stay inside these last few days and seems all my work has been inside work.

To me, part of taking time in life to stop and "smell the roses" is being outside and more especially if it is around the water's edge.

So this time of the year enjoy this beautiful weather for the calendar does not say 'Spring' yet.

Tragedy Of Camp Resolution Explored

By Marisue Potts

For three weeks, August 27 to September 19, 1841, a small army camped in the shadows of the Caprock where the Los Linquish and Quitaque streams meet. During that time, within sight of the Quitaque peaks, the men of Camp Resolution faced near-starvation, exposure from the extremes in the weather, and death from Indian attacks and illness.

The Texan-Santa Fe Expedition was promoted by Republic of Texas president, Mirabeau Lamar, who wished to establish a trade route from Austin to Santa Fe thereby pumping vitality into the Republic's sagging economy. Another objective was to extent Texas rule over the Santa Fe territory if its people were amenable to a change in government.

The Texas Congress was violently opposed to the idea, but so sure was Lamar about the benefits of his dream expedition that he withdrew $90,000 from the Republic's meager treasury to finance the venture. Horses, bridles, saddles, blankets, quilts, oxen, wagons, beeves, and tools were purchased in New Orleans. Food purchases included only dried beef, coffee, sugar, and salt.

The expedition experienced a critical delay in departure. Not only were the hungry men in camp cutting into the supplies but summer with its usual drought and water shortages was creeping closer.

The morning of June 19, 1841, found the 270 volunteer soldiers and 51 amateurs, which included merchants, journalists, adventurers, and servants, on their way to Santa Fe, at last. The 23 wagon entourage was made up of 14 wagons filled with $200,000 of merchant trade goods, six for baggage, two for staff and guests, one for ammunition, and one for an ambulance.

Needless to say, from this point on each campsite must be chosen with care because nearly 700 head of livestock would be needing water and forage daily.

General William McLeod, leader of the group, was a West Point man, schooled in bookish

Jo Ann's Jots & Jingles

During this Sesquicentennial year, I think it is good to honor our heroes of early Texas history. But I also think it is good to honor contemporary distinguished Texans, especially those who have some connection with Motley County.

I am wondering if some one in Roaring Springs remembers Brother D.G. Reid who was pastor of the Baptist Church in the early or mid-twenties.

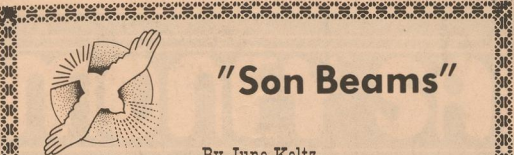

His son, W.T. Reid, told me of attending high school in Roaring Springs. He and his family moved to Roaring Springs at Christmas time. Some of you old-timers will remember that the railroad gave a $10.00 award to the student with the highest grade average. After being there only one semester, my uncle won the $10.00 award. Then there was a protest because he had only been in school one semester. So the rules were changed. A student had to be in the Roaring Springs school the full year. W.T. won it again the next year when he was a Senior.

If any of you remember the Reid family, you might be interested to know that W.T. became a renowned figure in the scientific world of mathematics.

He graduated from Hardin-Simmons and then went on to the University of Texas where he received his Ph.D. when he was barely 21. He taught at the University of Chicago, Northwestern University, the University of Iowa and at the University of Oklahoma. He also spent time at Princeton University where he had association with Albert Einstein. W.T. also was one of the mathematicians who worked on the project of the atom bomb at the University of Chicago during World War II. He had numerous mathematical books published.

He was honored some years ago as a Distinguished Alumnus of Hardin-Simmons University. W.T. is deceased and his widow lives in San Antonio.

"Son Beams"

By June Keltz

Webster defines a foot as "the terminal part of the vertebrate leg upon which an individual stands." Few of us really appreciate our feet until they break down or need repair, even though they are our most important means of transportation. Recently they have taken pre-eminence over the rest of the body as reflexology (foot rubbing) has become an aid for better health.

We are so fascinated by our newborn babies feet that we cover the sole with ink and make a print in his book for future generations to see. Later we try to force that same foot into a size 10 tennis shoe when a 13 is more comfortable.

Little boys discover Dad's footprints in the sand and they step in them heel to heel, dreaming of the day when they will reach heel to toe.

Our parents and grandparents have bunion and corn clad feet attesting to the "good ole days" when one pair of shoes was a luxury and were worn even if they were too short or too tight.

There is good news about feet they can be beautiful. We read in Romans 10:15, "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things."

David seemed delighted when he said that the word of God was a lamp to his feet and a light to his path. (Ps. 119:105). A woman's sins were forgiven as she kissed the feet of Jesus and anointed them with her tears and costly perfume. Peter had a problem receiving when Jesus desired to wash his feet.

The most precious feet that ever walked in the dust of this earth will one day usher us through one of the twelve gates made of a single pearl. Underneath those nail scarred feet will be a street of transparent gold. (Rev. 21:21)

Not useless is the gray
That I've accumulated,
But useless is the fat
With which I'm saturated
Now the hair curls quite easy;
It sort of has a glow,
But since the weight has been increased
The wrinkles are bulges, you know.
After fifty, we join the descent
Whether skin and bones or fat
Of the generation of "has beens"
That comprise the "generation gap."
But true joy is around the corner;
We're advancing to that new day
When it matters to no one in particular
Whether we're fat, or skinny or gray.
So, smile, and be more pleasant
And live closer to the "book"
We are of special concern to Him Our God
Who takes the closest look!

What's A City Manager

In that the position of City Manager is a rather new concept in Motley County, Roaring Springs City Manager, Annie Alvarado was interviewed to clarify what her job entailed.

Primarily, Alvarado states, the position of City Manager in Roaring Springs centers around the fiscal responsibilities; paying bills, formulating a budget and keeping proper records.

This will be an on-going position after Alvarado's departure on July 31, 1986. Alvarado specifically is committed to putting the City on a business-like basis. This is particularly important in meeting the grant requirements of detailed and accurate records.

For the 1986 fiscal year budget, City officials have determined the need to computerize the City records to continue this high level of accountability for years to come. "The City will be held accountable by the Housing and Urban Development in Austin for all money coming from Grants for a period of three years after a grant is administered," Alvarado explained.

In discussion of her particular job in Roaring Springs, Alvarado states she is now working on a part-time basis (15 hr./week) which is all the City actually is paying her for the position as manager, under the requirements of the Feasibility Grant, a salary was initially budgeted into the grant to administer it. Alvarado states that some cities hire a consulting firm to not only write grants but also administer them. The City Council of Roaring Springs voted to hire an individual who had the capabilities and expertise to not only write grants and administer them but handle City business. The salary the City Council felt able to pay was prorated over a 10 month period, due to Alvarado's tenure requirements.

With a BA in Political Science, English/Education and a Masters Degree in Urban Studies, a chief question has been why someone with this background and educational accomplishments would be attracted to a small West Texas town. Alvarado stated that there are several advantages. "Taking this job has put me in the position of being the youngest City Manager in the state of Texas," she said. Alvarado went on to assert that it was initially a definite challenge for an urbanite with no previous rural experience. "I had always wanted to work on an aspect of the public sector on the local level," she affirmed. With aspirations towards winning a degree, ultimately, in International Development, Alvarado feels coming to Roaring Springs is a positive step.

With a firm background in economic development, Alvarado feels that an area such as Motley County has every reason to reach out for grant money available. Alvarado explained that, "Grant money has been set aside from our tax dollars which previously have gone to East and South Texas. The money will be dispersed regardless whether any entity in this County applies for a grant.

It is commendable that both Motley County cities have looked around and decided there were means to better the communities, and taken steps to obtain those benefits.

While Ms. Alvarado's stay in Roaring Springs will necessarily be brief, she has been a good learning experience for Motley County residents as well.

Any fool can criticize, condemn and complain and most of them do.

Range Grass Program Presented to Matador Lions Club

Preservation of range grasses, and conservation of other natural resources comprised the subject of a program on film shown for Matador Lions Club at its February 18 meeting. Lion Joel Holt presented the film strip.

Grasses and rangeland in Montana, North and South Dakota and Wyoming were featured in the film, together with advice on means to stop erosion, and development of water conservation methods by building tanks and dams. In viewing the film, the club learned that grass, which covers 44% of the earth, is a most important commodity and should be controlled. Central theme of the message was: As demand for more beef, and the population increase the need for more rangeland control will also increase.

Boss Lion Jack Van Eaton presided at the meeting and led the club in a big hand for the good meal served by Mrs. Mutt Smith and Mrs. Mike Smith.

Recorder Lion Bill McCaghen introduced the guests; Derrel Johnson, Mike Reisman, R.N. and Dr. Leon Garcia.

Lions Sweetheart Shawna Campbell invited and urged the Lions to support the basketball teams by attending the games. While presiding, Lion Van Eaton named as the club's Sesquicentennial Committee, Lions John Barnhill, Vann Francis and J.B. Cooper, to be responsible for the Lions booth during the festival activities.

1986 Farm Program and Conservation Reserve Program Meeting

By Scotty Abbott

Sign-up for the 1986 Farm Program will begin March 3, 1986, and will end April 11, 1986. The first sign-up for the Conservation Reserve Program will begin March 3, 1986 and end March 14, 1986. Because of the complexity of the new program, James Gillespie, SCS District Conservationist, and I, are going to hold 2 meetings to discuss the provisions of the new farm program and Conservation Reserve Program. The meeting place, time and dates are: Matador - Monday, March 3, 9:00 a.m., Motley County Courthouse. Flomot - Wednesday, March 5, 7:00 p.m., Flomot Community Center.

James and I urge you to attend at least one of these meetings, because you will have more options to consider than during PIK. We hope to have enough information for you to make the best management decision possible.

DRT Donates to Floyd County Museum

The Floyd County Museum recently accepted a donation in the amount of $250 along with documented research to start proceedings for a historical marker near the Floyd-Motley County line for Camp Resolution, campsite of the Texan-Santa Fe Expedition of 1841.

The gift was presented on behalf of the General James Smith Chapter of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas from the proceeds of their fall history project, "History Day at the Ranch," in which many Motley County volunteers participated.

Upon approval from the State Historical Commission the proposed Camp Resolution marker would be located about seven miles southwest of Quitaque on Farm-Market Road 1065 near the confluence of the Los Linguish and Quitaque streams.

Congratulations

"For we are God's workmanship, created in Christ Jesus to do good works, which God prepared in advance for us to do." Ephesians 2:10 NIV

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Crouch of Roaring Springs are pleased to announce the birth of a granddaughter, Jessica Lynn Crouch. Jessica came kicking into this world on Jan. 12, 1986 at 11:45 p.m. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Crouch and has two big brothers, Jordan and Jared, of Vancouver, Wash.

If you have a new baby, grandbaby, or bride in your family, bring this information to the Tribune so that we can share the joy with our readers.

Quick! Without looking, what are the six historical markers in Motley County and what do they say?

If you are like most people, you won't be able to answer that question. Though we often pass historical markers most of us are too busy or too preoccupied to read them.

Now, with the help of WHY STOP?, a book recently donated to the Motley County Library by local members of the General James Smith Chapter of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, you can keep whizzing by those markers but know what they say. The reader can enjoy the fascinating "roadside" history of Texas without the tedious delay of stopping and reading each marker.

Entries, selected from 10,000 markers in 254 counties, are listed in the recently updated version of Claude Dooley's best seller.

Texas State Historical markers for Motley County are Roaring Springs, Roaring Springs Depot; Motley County, in Virginia Walton Park, Teepee City, Motley County Railroad, H.H. Campbell, (stolen, but soon to be replaced).

If you still don't know what they say, drive out and take a look-or borrow WHY STOP from the library.

Candy and Soft Drinks Hit Peak Consumption

Although Americans seem to be more interested in diet and nutrition than ever before, we're also consuming record amounts of candy and soft drinks.

For example, the consumption of chocolate is higher today than at any time in the past ten years. In 1984 Americans ate 2.2 billion pounds of chocolate - that's nearly 10 pounds of chocolate chips and candy bars for each person!

We're eating other kinds of candy too. The U.S. Commerce Department says that in 1984, about 9 pounds of candy per person was sold in this country.

Government reports also show that more than 50% of the population consumes carbonated soft drinks, and that the use of soft drinks has increased greatly during the last 15 years.

A nationwide food survey showed that soft drinks consumed per day increased with age to 24 years, then declined with increasing age after that. For diet soft drinks, average consumption peaked at 19-24 years for women and 45-54 years for men.

The survey also showed that for children 10 years and younger, the evening meal was the common time and place for a soft drink, followed by between meals and than school.

Candy and regular soft drinks are sources of calories, but few nutrients. People who can afford the extra calories and who don't use sweets as a replacement for nutritious food, can enjoy these treats without thinking much about it.

But those of us who are truly calorie and nutrition conscious, may need to keep more careful watch on the candy and soft drinks we consume.

WORD of GOD

Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time:

Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you.

Window Solitude

by Michelle Bearden

The sky outside my kitchen window at the ranch house on the Bird Ranch has given me a million dollars worth of pleasure. The palette of sunset colors, runs a gambet of the hottest pinks and flicks of yellow fire to deep, quiet purples. At that magic time just before dusk the sight of grandfather cottonwoods down on the creek to the southwest raising gnarled limbs, as if to protest the hardships time has dealt them. Usually an owl or two favor these old trees and their silhouettes add to the timeless quality of a scene that has become deeply etched in my mind.

So much of our lives are involved in such busyness, that we truly lose sight of that which is most important. Things like love of family, gain of wisdom, perhaps growing toward wholeness. We schedule so much in our days - take a little time to schedule solitude to think and gain perspective of your world.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Conklin

Campbell - Conklin Exchange Notes

Kimberly Dawn Campbell and Gary Eugene Conklin exchanged wedding vows in a double ring ceremony read by Reverend Jerry Golden, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Lornezo, at 7:00 p.m., February 1, 1986.

The First Baptist Church of Matador was the scene of the candlelight ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bundy Hal Campbell of Matador, and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Clayton E. Conklin of College Station, Texas.

A brass archway entwined with greenery was centered at the altar with an arrangement of ivory roses, tulips, freesia, and baby's breath. It was flanked by two pair of brass candelabras wrapped with greenery and holding ivory tapers.

Ivory gladiolas, iris, tulips, and baby's breath were arranged in a large basket set on a pedestal behind the archway.

Brass containers of ivory azaleas were placed about the front of the church. Each window featured globe arrangements which held ivory tapers accented with English ivy, fern, and baby's breath.

Markers of ivy and fern tied with ivory bows and streamers dotted the bridal aisle. Mother's pews were marked with arrangements of freesia, starburst palms, and baby's breath.

Mrs. Sondra Francis played a medley of wedding songs as guests were seated. Mr. Stanley Martin of Andrews sang "Savior, Like a Shepherd Lead Us" to the piano accompaniment of his wife, Melissa. Together they sang "Friends, That's What We'll Be" and "The Wedding Song."

Escorted to altar by her father, the bride wore her mother's formal gown of white imported candlelight taffeta. Seed pearls outlined the scooped neckline. The sleeves were long and tapered at the wrists. Her full bouffant skirt was re-embroidered with medallions of imported lace, and extended in a chapel train from a bow at the waist.

She wore a fingertip length illusion veil dotted with seed pearls. An ivory silk flower, also dotted with pearls, held the veil in place. She carried a cascade of ivory roses, stephanotis, and English ivy centered with a Catalaya orchid. Ivory streamers tied in love knots fell from the bouquet.

Koree Campbell was her sister's Maid of Honor. Paka Barton, cousin of the bride, acted as Bridesmaid. Both girls wore ivory satin brocade tea-length dresses with full, pleated skirts. Their deep vee necklines were attached to a choker collar by ivory tulle. They carried bouquets of ivory tulips and roses, accented with fern and English ivy.

Brent Campbell, brother of the bride, acted as Best Man, while Cary Dukes of Bryan, Texas, served as Groomsman.

Leigh and Brandi Barton, cousins of the bride, lit candles for the service. They wore dresses that matched those of the other attendants accented by wrist corsages of ivory roses and stephanotis. Coke Barton and Roy Thompson seated the guests.

Erin Bostick, cousin of the bride, registered guests in the church foyer. The bride's book lay on a table covered with a white cloth and centered with an arrangement of ivory tulips, roses, and iris.

Grandparents attending the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs.

France Barton of Matador, Mrs. Vivian Campbell of Amarillo, and Mr. and Mrs. L.B. Campbell of Matador.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bundy Hal Campbell, parents of the bride.

Chosen colors of the bride, ivory and green, were carried out on the bride's table. A white cloth covered the table which featured a three tiered wedding cake centered with a fountain and covered with cascading ivory tulips. Mrs. Cindy Riggins of Vernon presided at the crystal punch service while Miss Laura Grundy of Shamrock and Miss Pam Francis of Matador served the cake.

Mrs. Shelley Palmer of Rule presided at a silver coffee service on the groom's table while Tracy Smith of Bryan and Mrs. Reneigh Burns of Matador served a chocolate cake made for the occasion by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. France Barton.

Assisting with the hospitalities were Olivia Barton, Donna Barton, Brig Brownlow, Tommie Jo Cruse, Lindy Stafford, Dan Barton, and Sondra Francis.

Lindsay Bostick, cousin of the bride, passed ivory rose rice bags to guests just before the couple left.

For a wedding trip to Lake Tahoe, Nevada, Mrs. Conklin chose to wear a black and green houndstooth jacket over black silk pants. She accented her outfit with the orchid from her bouquet.

The couple will make their home in College Station, Texas, where the groom, a graduate of Texas A & M University, is self-employed. The bride plans to work on a graduate degree at Texas A & M University.

Bridal Courtesies

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Conklin honored their son and his fiancée with a rehearsal dinner held at the Senior Citizen's building January 31, 1986. Guests enjoyed a buffet style barbeque dinner. The tables were covered in red cloths accented with white runners printed with red hearts. Red and white carnations carried out the theme.

Bridal Breakfast
Mrs. Dan Barton and Mrs. Gale Stafford honored the bride-elect and her wedding party with a breakfast held Saturday morning in the Stafford home.

Sausage quiche, fruit salad, and assorted fruit breads were served to guests. Tables were set with white, and spring-colored flowers were used as decorations on the tables. Guests were presented with hand-crocheted baskets filled with potpourri as favors.

Predicta Study Club Hosts Husband Night

The Predicta Study Club of Roaring Springs, met at the Depot for Husband Night. Buffet meal was served. Food was provided by the members.

(Continued from page 1) military tactics but inexperienced in frontier ways. To compound his problems he commanded an "army" of mostly undisciplined volunteers who refused to obey orders. As they pushed their way up from Austin, stampedes, buffalo hunts, prairie fires, almost unbearable heat and thirst in the impenetrable Cross Timbers, gyp water, Waco Indians, and lack of roads marked their torturous route.

The group became lost when the Wichita was mistaken for the Red River. Supplies dwindled. Mesquite beans, prairie dogs, a mule killed from an Indian attack, and occasional antelope or buffalo supplemented their diet. Grapes, plums, and mushrooms were relished when found.

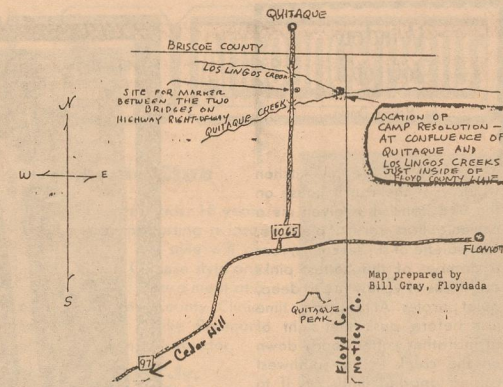

As the hit the Pease breaks progress became difficult, with only two miles made in a day. As groups went off to hunt grapes or plums, water or game, all discipline was lost.

After much hardship they emerged from the brakes onto a mesquite covered tableland. Horses and mules disappeared, and it became evident the Kiowas were following them.

On August 27, the Caprock was in sight for the first time. The expedition crossed another salt stream in broken country, and by evening reached the Quintufue, where the waters "were bubbling along over a bed of golden sand." A chain of three peaks rose to their left.

Upstream in a hastily deserted Indian campsite, the ravenous men devoured dried buffalo, deer and mustang jerky.

Captain Strain's company was ordered out to make contact with the Indians, and thereby pinpoint their position. The wagons moved on, but encountering impassable ravines, halted. Lt. Hann and ten men were sent to find a road onto the Llano Estacado.

Location of Camp Resolution, where Los Lingos and Quitaque Streams meet.

They camped without water that night, eating primarily hackberries and gnawing on green cottonwood bark. Parched mesquite beans sufficed for coffee.

The next morning a report went around that water could be found two miles away. All the animals were hastily driven there, but the rumor was false. As they straggled back to camp that night it was insufferably hot.

The council of officers decided to return to the Quintufue. Fear was mounting for the safety of Captain Strain's men. As the horses and mules were saddled, the oxen yoked, rifle fire was heard over a slight rise.

Fifty men mounted and rushed to the scene, but too late. Seeing the small hunting party of Lt. Hull massacred, the men gave chase to about 100 Kiowas, but their malnourished horses proved inadequate. Returning to the scene, they counted thirty lance and arrow wounds perforating Lt. Hull's body. William Mabee's head was smashed, his brains scattered over the ground, and his heart cut out. Robert or James Dunn, Samuel Flenner, and Francis Woodson were carved on from head to toe, and like the other men, scalped and mutilated.

While these fellows buried the soldiers, General McLeod headed the expedition back to the Quintufue. Captain Strain returned but reported no success in finding a road the wagons could travel.

Men wandered at will looking for food and water. Donovan, J.

Kenyon, and Klein disappeared from camp and were never heard of again.

The fallen horses from the day's skirmish became supper, with the men greedily devouring everything including the blood, hide, and entrails.

That night the council of officers reviewed their serious situation. They were lost, almost without provisions, weakened by long marches, poor nutrition, and illnesses, and now surrounded by a sneaky, powerful enemy. They considered the two possibilities open to them: destroy the wagons and retreat to Austin; or send a party with the best horses to the settlements for help. After a long deliberation, they resolved to reach the settlements by splitting the command. Thereafter, this camp and its two successors located at various locations upstream was known as Camp Resolution.

Thank you all very much.

Roaring Springs Volunteer Fire Dept.

I want to say thanks to the friends and neighbors for the cards, letters and telephone calls while I was in the hospital and since I have come home. I have really appreciated your love and concern.

Mrs. Elsie Lynn

We want to take this means of saying thank you for all the things you did for us in the past and in the loss of our loved one. For calls, flowers, food brought to the home, and for the lunch at the Watson home. May God Bless each of you in our prayer.

Dee Hall and Family

IN MEMORY

I Am Now In Heaven

I am now in heaven—the gates have opened wide

And now I have the privilege of walking by His side.

The angel choir is singing, and the music is so sweet;

I'll join them just as soon as I have worshiped at His feet.

I am now in heaven, and the Blood washed through is here.

I recognize a lot of them—there's not a single fear.

There's joy beyond description and reunions by the score;

There'll be no separations, for we'll be here evermore.

I am now in heaven—please wipe away your tears!

I've bought the battle, run the race—I'm rid of all my fears.

There is no pain or sorrow here; the heartaches now are past;

I've read and sung of heaven, and now I'm here at last!

I am now in heaven, and oh, the place is grand!

No one could ever tell me all about the beauties of this land.

Since I cannot describe it, you'll have to come and see

That it was worth the trials to live here eternally!

The family of Ruby Poruner would like to thank each and every one for the expressions of love with calls, cards, food and comfort you have brought us.

S.K. Hong, MD.
