Necessity sometimes arranges the ribbon-cutting ceremony for a young man to enter the wide road of responsibility. The event is not marked by music and fanfare, but may be decorated with garlands of perpetuating needs.

Considering the income poverty levels announced by the government, it now appears that many of us have been suffering all our lives without knowing it.

The mouth to mouth resuscitation now being practiced in emergencies, probably owes its origin to the old silent movies. The handsome men and beautiful women stars provided emotional demonstrations, but to a country boy it appeared that rather than restore life, they were attempting to enhance it.

Greatness makes no demands on appearance, unless it is an inward enthusiasm for challenges, that radiates for the individual presence.

We of the senior citizens set find an increasing difficulty in providing convincing excuses for using so much time to accomplish ordinary tasks.

Children used to place pennies on the railroad track and wait for a train to run over them. It ruined the penny but made a good conversation piece. Now children don't use pennies anymore and the trains are more remote.

It requires good acting to appear dignified while placing a small coin in a church collection plate.

As a boy I had an ambition to go to Panama and learn to weave hats under water, and once soaked a domestic straw hat in the water trough. The hat came apart and my mother gave me some reflective moments through the application of a cottonwood switch.

The greatest disadvantage of youth is that it must consume most of a lifetime to acquire experience.

ONE IN COUNTY — So far as can be determined, the above photo of the intersection of US Highway 70 and Main Street in Matador, is the only four way stop in Motley County. The new bracket (4-Way) has been added to the four stop signs. —Tribune Photo

Site Donated City By West Texas Gin

A VALUABLE piece of property cornering the courthouse square has been donated to the City of Matador. The land comprising 19 city lots (about 1 1/2 acres) was the former location of the West Texas Gin which has relocated on State Highway 70 about 1 1/2 miles north of town.

West Texas Gin is a subsidiary of the Quanah Cotton Oil Company of Quanah. Hugh Marshall, manager of the firm, sanctioned the decision to donate the property to the city.

Mayor Freddie Welling said yesterday that the city council in meeting Tuesday night, had formally accepted the property. There is an attitude of appreciation among the residents of this community for the gift.

While not official, the fact that the land might be contributed had been known for some time. Two weeks ago the site was considered as location for the proposed nursing home. Land D. Wall, administrator of Colonial Nursing Home in Lubbock, said the property would be ideal. He said its proximity to the business section of Matador, and the short distance to the hospital made a most excellent site.

Bennie Keltz, manager of the West Texas Gin here, said there was no restriction on the use of the property. Legal transfer of the lots is expected in the near future, according to Mayor Welling.

Skyjacked Plane Carries Tribune

The plane that was skyjacked in California late in October and forced to fly to Rome, Italy, carried at least one copy of the Tribune.

Carney Fulkerson, former Matador resident, who now lives in Merced, California, is a subscriber.

His issue of the Tribune (late in October) did not arrive on time, but a few days later. With his newspaper was a note from the Post Office Department, explaining that the delay was caused because the mail had been skyjacked, flown to Italy and returned.

Mr. Fulkerson called the Tribune long distance Friday night because he had failed to receive the previous week's newspaper. He says he reads every word and always gets homesick after an issue arrives. The reason he failed to get the issue was that he had changed his address and had failed to notify the Tribune.

Valentines Mailed Men in Service

Original hand-made valentines designed by fifth grade art pupils of Mrs. Bennie Keltz were mailed this week to local men in service, in Vietnam and other overseas areas.

Supplying the class with pictures of animals, clowns, birds, etc., Mrs. Keltz directed the pupils to write their own captions. The name and age of each pupil was printed on the back of the valentine which he or she designed. Most of them are 11 years old.

The sentiment, "I would go out on a limb for you," was inspired by the picture of a cardinal on a tree limb. An elephant flying through the air resulted in this message, "I'm flying high for you." "Stop CLOWNING around and Be Mine," was penned with the picture of a (you guessed it) clown, while a pair of owls suggested "I am Hooting for You—Be My Valentine."

A horse's head admonished, "Quit Horsing Around—Be My Valentine," and "I would like very MOO-oh for you to be my Valentine," was inspired by a herd of cattle.

A valentine decorated with a cheeta proclaimed, "You may be fast, but I am going to catch you for my Valentine," and an ostrich inspired this one: "My neck sticks out For You."

The valentines were of various shapes and sizes, although most of them were the traditional red heart, and a few were decorated with lace.

Sheriff Spray said articles taken included boots, belts and other items of clothing. An electric clock which was on top of the safe, indicated it had been unplugged at 3:45.

Mr. Peacock said he discovered the robbery when he opened at about 7 a.m. Monday.

The following is from Wednesday Lubbock Avalanche-Journal: "Texas Rangers, sheriff's deputies and Lubbock detectives hit four Lubbock residences simultaneously Tuesday night and arrested three men and a woman for receiving and concealing stolen goods.

"A quantity of clothing reported taken in a burglary of a Roaring Springs dry goods store, was recovered, authorities said."

Mood Variations From T. S. Eliot

Two creative Juniors of MHS, Jeanette Day and Jan Higginbotham, taped some original material and presented it to the Junior and Senior English classes. The Juniors had just completed the study of T. S. Eliot's Waste-land, and the girls were trying to do a similar work of their own. The mood of the Waste-land moves from the sterility of man's living to one of some hope through unselfish love. On the tape the earlier mood, based on revenge of modern man for his neighbor, is given through poetry and popular music. The final mood is that of release and hope based on music containing the freedom of nature. The girls used original poetry written by Jeanette and an original musical composition written by Jan.

Other members of the class did some original art work showing their impressions of the Waste-land.
