TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

The wheels of the chuck wagon were sloshing in the shallow ranch road ruts. The brown thin water was up to the tops of the wheel-fellows. On the rocky hills the water had drained away. Three yellow-coated cowboys rode beside the wagon. The cook also rode out in the open wearing a yellow slicker. He reined the four chuck wagon mules with expert dexterity. Ahead, he could see the flat where the roundup would be held but no cattle were gathering. The cook wiped the water from his mustache and looked again and he could see long lines of cattle moving slowly in the direction of the flat. He pulled off in the direction of some old camp fire holes and stopped his mules. The three cowboys began to unharness the mules and throw the bedrolls from the chuck wagon. The "hoodlum" had been after the wood and water. He helped the others spread the fly tent over the end of the chuck box and provide a small area of protection from the rain. The hoodlum had kept a small quantity of wood dry and he soon had a fire going. The cook had rolled out his sour dough biscuits and was dipping them lightly in beef tallow as he placed them in Dutch Ovens. The coffee was boiling and the cook was slicing tender beef to place in other Dutch Ovens. The pot of red beans he had cooked the previous day had started to simmer. He found the stone jar of stewed apricots that had been cooked almost to the consistency of preserves, and placed it on the ground. He looked at the sour dough biscuits as he turned the steak. In a few minutes twenty cowboys were racing toward the chuck wagon.

There is an old theory that cooks make or break a cafe, restaurant or any kind of an eating place. There are many exceptions, but the products of cooks is advertised by powerful word of mouth advertising. In these days of rapid transportation the word gets around quickly. It gets across a county or to San Francisco within a short time. Some places with alcoholic beverages and atmosphere may serve food that may cause you to call for a "doggie" bag before the meal is half finished.

Life may be a garden of roses or a patch of gourds that offend the senses. It depends on the kind of seeds that were planted and cultivated.

NIECE IS VISITOR

Mr. and Mrs. Lum Sublett of Dallas visited here Sunday evening with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Keith, as they were en route home from a five weeks trip to Montana, Wyoming and California, visiting relatives. They also visited a brother of Mrs. Sublett in Hale Center. Mrs. Sublett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Bourland of California, lived here a number of years ago.

but this is the right wing exactly like the left wing in the foreground. The entrance to the new building faces the west, exactly across the street from the old high school building, which faces the east.

They met late Saturday to load their gear for the early Sunday start. The boys went in two pickup trucks this year, instead of the old school bus, which had been used previously. The local Scout troop is sponsored by the Matador Lions Club.

STUDIES ABOUT THE BIBLE

Christ proved that He is from God by demonstrating His power over death. Let's look at Mark's record as found in Chapter Fifteen

And when the Sabbath was over, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, brought spices, that they might come and anoint Him. And very early on the first day of the week, they came to the tomb when the sun had risen. And he said to them, "Do not be amazed; you are looking for Jesus the Nazarene, who has been crucified. He has risen; He is not here; behold, here is the place where they laid Him. But go, tell His disciples and Peter. He is going before you into Galilee; there you will see Him, just as He said to you."

Mark wrote the above account several years after Christ's resurrection. By the time Mark recorded this, some apostles and many others had lost their lives because they were teaching the "resurrection of Christ." All apostles continued this teaching until death. The apostles must have been eyewitnesses of the resurrection to face death rather than deny the teaching. Let us hear John.

What was from the beginning, what we have heard, what we have seen with our eyes, what we beheld and our hands handled, concerning the Word of life... what we have seen and heard we proclaim to you also, that you also may have fellowship with us; and indeed our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ.
