

Lynx Meet Elks Here Friday Nite!

Like a child in wild anticipation, the Lynx are looking forward to their meeting Friday night at Lynx stadium, against the Elks from Stratford! This rivalry is un-equaled in the schools history, and the Lynx have had much trouble with the talented Elks in the past. And the Elks are loaded this year.

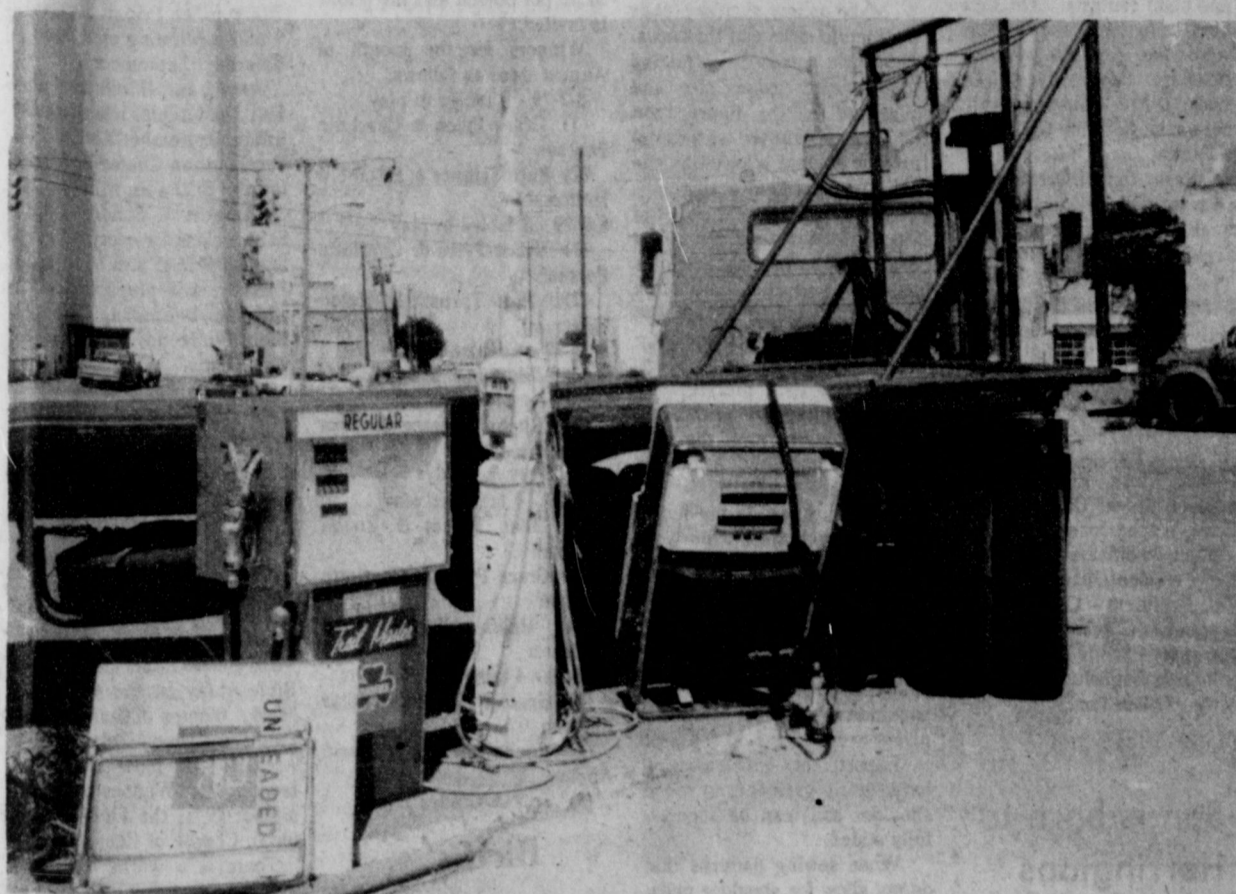

Coach Duncan spoke at the Lions Club on Tuesday of this week, and he told the Lions that his team would be ready, and that not one of his varsity boys had been injured so far this year. This means that the Lynx will be in top physical shape for Friday night.

The kick-off will be at 8 p. m. at Lynx stadium and a sell-out crowd is expected if the weather is good! And, all indications are that we will have a perfect evening for football.

Coach Duncan has not released a starting eleven for the Lynx. However, it is assumed that he will go "both ways" with about half of his players, and gradually use the entire 32 man squad as the season progresses.

Fans were not as happy after the Sunray scrimmage as they were after the Dumas scrimmage, but this is the way it happens every year. It seems like the Lynx can play well against the Demons, and just have a terrible tough time with the Bobcats from Sunray. But, Sunray always has a good team and this is no exception.

Remember if you haven't purchased your reserved seats, do so now! They will go on sale to the public before the football game Friday nite!

This truck was parked in the drive-way of Davis Oil Company and probably saved the life of another trucker who smashed into this truck, and knocked it into the gas pumps. No-one was injured. It happened Thursday night of last week.

Peggy's Pointers

Shoulder pads emphasize fashionable width in the shoulder area.

This look will continue during fall/winter '79.

Make or buy shoulder pads in different sizes and thickness. The trick comes in adjusting pads to the proper size and thickness for the figure type (sloping or square shoulders) and the amount allowed by the pattern or garment designer.

More thickness is needed at the end of the shoulder at the armhole if extra diagonal folds form along the underarm area above the bustline toward the neckline. Sleeves will not hang properly.

Correct this problem by raising the garment at the end of the shoulder until the garment lies smoothly. A thicker shoulder pad is needed.

Less thickness is needed if pull or wrinkle lines form from the end of the shoulder toward the center front and back. Again, sleeves will not hang properly.

To make the garment lie smoothly, lower the end of the shoulder. A thinner shoulder pad is needed.

Experiment with existing loose-fitting garments to see if shoulder pads can be successfully added.

When sewing patterns that do not allow for shoulder pads, alter the pattern for square shoulder to add pads. Add length at the outside of the shoulder for both front and back pattern pieces.

Instructions for constructing your own hand-made shoulder "shapes" are available at the County Extension office. Come by the Courthouse or call (659-2030 or 733-2901.)

Mileage Means Money!
You can cut down on the cost of driving your car and help conserve gasoline in the process.

Most important, for safety's and economy's sake, heed the national 55-mile-per-hour speed limit. The difference between 55 and 70 mph, is about 25 percent better mileage.

The Golden Spread Center emphasizes the positive aspects of aging and the aged and taken on the function of a social utility. The Golden Spread Center will know it has met the challenge of this rewarding field when the senior center construct and the positive images of age have become the community idea of reality so that the Golden Spread Center no longer has to speak on these points or say the obvious.

The Golden Spread Center is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 to 5:00 p.m. There is an abundant supply of reading material, a color TV, a piano, a pool table, and a constant round of activities. Any person, fifty-five years of age or older, may feel free to drop in at any time when the Center is open and use any of the facilities or join in any of the activities. Managing Rangeland Properly

WARREN PROCTOR INSPECTS EXCELLENT STAND OF SIDEOATS GRAMA

For lush grass lands of a century ago must have been a beautiful sight. Historians recorded that Indiangrass, switchgrass, big and Little Bluestem, sideoats grama and other choice forage plants waved stirrup-high across much of Texas.

But those days are gone and all that remains is only a memory, something that our grandfathers have told us about, yet something we could not really visualize.

But for more than 30 years the Soil Conservation Service working with local soil and water conservation districts have been striving to return much of the nation's rangelands to its once highly productive capabilities.

Managing existing rangeland properly is the key to improve range condition and allow the better more palatable plants a chance to gain in vigor and become better established.

Some important considerations include the fact that plants produce food in the leaves through a process called photosynthesis. This fact is extremely important in grassland management. It means the more leaves you have on a plant, the more forage you can grow, if moisture and other conditions are available, on the other hand the more leaves that are removed by grazing the less forage the plant can be expected to produce.

The amount of leaf removal also affects root growth. According to available research you can graze up to 50% of the forage without adversely affecting root growth. This relationship between leaf removal forage production and root growth is one reason why you should theoretically "Take half and leave half of the forage produce during the current growing season."

Native rangeland is usually made up of a mixture of different plants in any one pasture and livestock will harvest these plants differently according to how palatable they are and their stages of growth. So which plants do you use to estimate proper use?

Each pasture has a key plant that can be used to judge the proper use of forage. It is the plant or plants you want to try to increase by grazing management. But these plants should be abundant enough to manage for an increase. That's why proper use is based on taking half and leaving half by weight of the key plants in a pasture.

The proper use of available forage is the most important management item in any grazing operation.

The Soil Conservation Service is available to assist you develop ways to improve your native rangeland and restore it to its highest capabilities.

Farmers Union Exposes Foreign Investor Ploy

Waco, TX--An official of the Texas Farmers Union has alleged that "countless alien investors are intentionally avoiding full disclosure of ownership of Texas farm land" and has cited "a case in our own backyard" as proof positive that a new federal reporting law "is toothless and inadequate."

Ron Butler, State Secretary of the Waco based farm organization, called reporters to the McLennan County courthouse to expose a foreign investor in the county who has failed to totally comply with the Agricultural Foreign Investment Disclosure Act of 1978.

The law, which passed Congress last year and went into effect February 1, required all foreign investors who hold American farm land to report information on their holding to county USDA offices by an August 1 deadline. Thereafter, all new transactions involving aliens must be reported within ninety (90) days of purchase.

Butler revealed a report submitted before the deadline but containing insufficient information, particularly in identifying the owner of the property and the origin of nationality.

"I suspect," said Butler, "that the lack of information on the report is intentional. For what reason, I don't know. But the inadequacy of the report was pointed out, and the people who filed it still failed to reveal the owner."

County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Office Manager Wilburn Dreyer received the report, dated July 27, 1979, and returned it for further information. When it was returned again without the information, Dreyer had no choice but to submit it to the Washington collection point for all U.S. reports.

In the place of owner, those filing the report listed the Northern Trust Company of Chicago, a fiduciary holding the land in trust. The trustee, or owner, was listed simply "Trustee #2-45255" with a representative "Second Vice-President, Susan J. Ehrbar" of the Chicago trust company.

Butler stated, "We have searched the deeds and other records of transaction and hit a dead-end everytime we saw the Northern Trust Company name. What this means is there is no way for the public to find out who owns the land, which was the main intent of the federal law."

"Furthermore," he continued, "if such games are being played with the submitted reports, I would guess there are hundreds, perhaps thousands, of other Texas land owners who have camouflaged their deeds and records to the point that they feel that they can safely fail to even file a report. That means data gathered under this federal law can not be accurate. It's all still a guessing game like it was in the beginning.

"Policy makers tell us they cannot justify passage of a law prohibiting non-resident aliens from owning farm land until we can demonstrate a clear need for such a law.

"What's worse is that the agency put in charge of gathering the information (ASDA/ASCS) has no real enforcement power. There is a penalty for not reporting, but none for submitting insufficient reports or using such ploys as listing real estate trusts rather than individuals or countries.

"These huge investment firms, domestic and foreign, as 'big guys'. Congress has essentially asked understaffed ASCS offices to 'hunt bear with BB-guns'!"

Butler said that the major opposition to foreigners owning American farm land is that the use is often for speculating on investments rather than producing food and fiber. He further stated that local farmers have complained that the Northern Trust Company land in particular is being managed by an operator who is "hiring all the good labor away by paying tractor drivers $1,000 a month, providing them with new pickups, housing, and paid utilities". He also said that aliens are paying premium prices for land, an average in Texas of $250 per acre above current values, which accelerates the already spiraling cost of farm land.

"I'm very much in favor of labor receiving fair wages in any American business, especially if the labor is domestic," said Butler. "But throwing money around like this for investment is inflationary to both farmers and consumers. This practice also puts the ownership of farm operations by our farmers, especially the young, further out of grasp...or makes it outright impossible. Additionally, the dollars they spend do not necessarily go through the local community. In this case, a lot of the capital is going to Chicago or possibly Iran...or gosh only knows where since they didn't list the nationality of the owner."

Texas Farmers Union was recently blocked in its attempt to pass a law prohibiting ownership of Texas farm land by non-resident aliens when Austin lawmakers introduced a bill for consideration by the 66th Legislature. The principal opponent of that measure was Shell Oil Company, which is based in the Netherlands Antilles, a country with which the U.S. has a special treaty under which its citizens or corporations pay no capital gains, estate, gift, inheritance, dividend, or interest taxes.

"The Farmers Union wants to stop huge investment firms, foreign or domestic from speculating in finite land resources," concluded Butler. "American farmers are interested in producing food and fiber, and it's downright impossible for them to compete with high-rolling investors who are interested only in land speculation."

Social Security

Howard L. Weatherly, Manager of the Pampa Social Security Office, spoke today about fraudulent activity which sometimes occurs in connection with the programs administered by the Social Security Administration.

Weatherly said that the public has a right to expect that measures have been taken by the Social Security Administration to prevent unlawful invasion of the Trust Funds from which benefits are paid.

"Sometimes we detect suspected fraudulent activity ourselves through review of case files and other means," continued Weatherly. "However, we are also dependent to a large degree on reports from the public regarding what they feel is fraud or improper receipt of checks." "For instance, someone might see a person out working when they know for a fact that person is receiving a disability check and they will then call us and ask about the situation. We are then obligated to check into the matter."

"It has become very popular to 'beat' the system. Those who seem to accomplish this feat are applauded

Surprising to some is that the U.S. now imports more than 8,400,000 barrels of oil a day at an annual cost of over $50 billion—an outflow of American dollars that contributes heavily to inflation.

Working Couples Should Check Withholding

Dallas--It's not too early to think about your federal tax bill, especially if you're among the millions of couples in which both spouses bring home a paycheck.

"Last filing period, many married couples who expected refund checks were surprised to find out that they instead had to write a check to cover a balance due on their tax bill," noted A. W. McCanless, Director of the Dallas District of the Internal Revenue Service. "The problem lies in the fact that the withholding rates are designed around the individual's wages and do not take a spouse's wages into account."

For example, the highest tax rate applicable to a couple filing a joint return with only one wage earner making $26,000 is up to 32 percent. The withholding would be adequate. But for a couple with one spouse earning $10,000 and the other $16,000, the likelihood that an insufficient amount would be withheld is very great. Mr. McCanless offers several alternatives for the two-paycheck couple. One possibility is to pay additional tax by means of estimated taxes. In this system, the amount is paid in quarterly installments directly to the IRS using vouchers that come with Form 1040-ES, "Declaration of Estimated Tax for Individuals."

Depending on the age of your house, and when you purchased it, insuring only for the resale value could be risky because most insurance policies pay according to the rebuilding value of your home, not the resale value. In many cases, these two values are not the same. In fact, they can be thousands of dollars apart.

CHARLES BRONSON MOVIES: A DREAM FOR STUNTMEN

Stuntmen all over the world love Charles Bronson movies for two reasons. The ex-miner, ex-fighter is one tough cookie who does a lot of his own dirty work in pictures... and there's so much fast-paced action wherever Bronson goes that a small army of stuntmen is automatically included in any Bronson production team.

Take his latest, for instance... "Love and Bullets," which opens 9-7 at the Holiday Theatre. In which Bronson stars with Jill Ireland and Rod Steiger. It's a thriller, and Bronson as an Arizona police detective not only helps Jill Ireland flee for her life through the treacherous Swiss Alps, but also fends off a horde of hoods dispatched by gangster-boss Steiger to murder her before she talks too much.

There are fights in the world's highest aerial tram, chases through mountain tunnels ten miles long, and hand-to-hand battles in and out of Swiss chalets — all of them requiring the daredevil services of some of the best stuntmen in the business.

For one stunt — perhaps the most spectacular in "Love and Bullets" — the unique services of top stunt-driver Remy Julienne were called for.

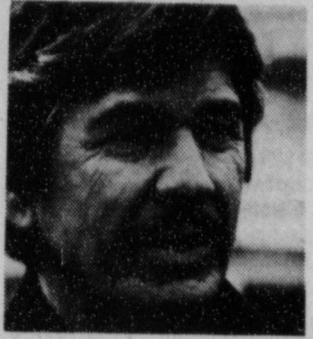

To escape his pursuers, Bronson trapped on a car-train barreling through an Alpine tunnel, had to put his car in gear and go hurtling off the train as it blasted out of the tunnel at 80 miles an hour. Since there are concrete pylons every 82 feet along the track, carrying 15,000 volts of electricity to power the train, the least miscalculation could have sent the car smashing into a pylon, incinerating both car and driver.

The sequence seemed impossible to pull off... then producer Pancho Kohner remembered a Fiat commercial in which French driver Remy Julienne had car-jumped an astonishing distance. He found Julienne in Paris, described the action and the terrain, and gave him all the needed measurements. After working it out on his calculator, the Frenchman said, "It can be done."

When he arrived to shoot the scene, Julienne spent a day measuring various distances and making dummy runs. He requested and got a snow-covered wooden ramp which, placed at a specific distance from the train track, would be his target as he flew his car off the train.

Director Stuart Rosenberg meanwhile arranged to cover the stunt with five cameras. One, buried in the snow alongside the ramp, would be started by remote control... a cameraman in such a spot was out of the question.

Just as the December light began to fade, everything suddenly dove-tailed into place. A walkie-talkie signal from a mile back inside the tunnel alerted the film crew. An assistant director checked the buried camera and rushed out of range. Then the train roared out of the tunnel and turned the curve that passed by the wooden ramp. Almost too late, the Peugeot shot forward on the flatcar and sprang into the air, missing the high voltage pylon by a scant two inches. Landing square on the ramp in a monstrous flurry of snow, it ploughed down the steep dip, twisting and turning as it passed the last cameras, coming to a sudden stop as it hit a patch of mountain briar.

Remy Julienne, who had barely missed being fried by 15,000 volts, emerged from the tiny car to the applause of the crew and his fellow stuntmen. Joining in was Charles Bronson, who now had to drive the car on down the steep incline, tumbling in the drifts until he jumped free — seconds before the car crashed into an electric power installation, rigged by special effects to blow sky-high on impact. He carried it off, like Julienne, on the only take allowed — the first one.

Starring Charles Bronson, Jill Ireland and Rod Steiger, "Love and Bullets" was produced by Pancho Kohner and directed by Stuart Rosenberg. Written by Wendell Mayes from his original story, the AFD release of a Sir Lew Grade presentation also stars Strother Martin, Bradford Dillman, Paul Koslo, Michael Gazzo, Val Avery, Albert Salmi, Billy Gray, Sam Chew, Lorraine Chase, John Hallam, Sidney Kean, Richard Graydon, Alan Bryce and Henry Silva.

The Internationally Famous Musical Hit 'Hair' Now On the Motion Picture Screen

(Advance Production Feature)

"Hair," the phenomenally successful international musical hit is now a Lester Persky and Michael Butler production, a Milos Forman film, one of the most eagerly awaited screen projects of the 1970s that also marks the first motion picture assignment for choreographer Twyla Tharp, who created the dances.

"Hair" is the first film Milos Forman has made since he won the Oscar as Best Director for "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," and was developed in pre-production for over a year and a half before filming began in October, 1977.

It is produced by Lester Persky who has most recently made the motion picture "Equus," and Michael Butler in association with CIP Film Productions for release by United Artists, a Transamerica Company, from a screenplay by Michael Weller. It will open 9-9 at the 4pm Theatre.

Based on the work by Gerome Ragni, James Rado and Galt MacDermot, who has reorchestrated his score for the film which contains some of the most popular music of the last decades, the Milos Forman film of "Hair" looks back at the 1960s with warmth and humor as it depicts this turbulent era in personal and dramatic terms.

"Hair" was originally presented off-Broadway at Joseph Papp's Public Theater from where it was transferred uptown to Broadway under the aegis of Michael Butler. There it broke various long-standing records and became an emblematic part of the 1960s. Produced on the stage all over the world, as a multi-million dollar film musical it will reach an even wider audience.

Lester Persky, who was planning to produce a film of "Hair" offered Milos Forman the chance to direct the musical immediately after seeing an early screening of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." Forman, who first attracted international attention with films he made in his native Czechoslovakia and who had tried to set up a stage version of "Hair" in Prague, was delighted to accept. A creative team was assembled by Forman and Persky that worked for months to fashion the work into a film. Under Forman's direction, this included screenwriter Michael Weller whose hit play, "Moonchildren," concerned itself with the 60s, Twyla Tharp, whose dance works have established her as one of the most important choreographers today, "Hair" composer Galt MacDermot and cinematographer Miroslav Ondricek.

During the time the film was in pre-production, Forman, the producers, and composer MacDermot read and tested scores of veteran players as well as non-professionals for the major roles until they had their ideal cast assembled. Starring are John Savage in the role of Claude who was seen on Broadway in the prize-winning "American Buffalo" and has made enormous impact on film audiences in "The Deer Hunter"; Treat Williams as Berger who made his film debut in "The Ritz"; and currently starring in Stephen Spielberg's new film, "1941"; and Beverly D'Angelo as Sheila who has appeared in the films "First Love and Clint Eastwood's "Every Which Way But Loose."

The rest of the cast includes Annie Golden who sings with the New Wave rock band, The Shirts, as Jeannie; and, to complete the all-important tribe, the newcomers Dorsey Wright, who can also be seen in "The Warriors" and Don Ducas who is the lead guitarist with the rock group Chicago, as Hud and Wool. Also featured are Cheryl Barnes, Richard Bright, Charlotte Rae, Miles Chapin, Nell Carter and Charlaime Woodard (who now stars in the Broadway smash "Ain't Misbehavin'"). Ren Woods, the noted film director Nicholas Ray, and Melba Moore and Ronnie Dyson who appeared in the original stage production of "Hair." In addition Twyla Tharp herself appears in the film.

Before shooting began, Forman, MacDermot and Choreographer Tharp rehearsed many months with the stars as well as a group of modern and classically trained dancers and the principals of the Twyla Tharp Dance Company who were also cast in the film.

Bergland Urges Redefinition

SAN FRANCISCO—Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland, reviewing farm policy and programs of the past two years, suggested here today that the time has come for a redefinition of the goals of American agriculture.

Bergland said, in remarks prepared for the Commonwealth Club, that farmers are getting prices for their crops and livestock that are about 16 percent higher than last year, that net farm income this year may match the record $33 billion reached in 1973, that farm exports are on their way to another new record, and that farm programs will cost taxpayers $1.4 billion less in 1979 than they did in 1978.

"But while we are telling farmers that they are well off—that farm prices, net farm income, and farm exports are up dramatically—some farmers continue to tell us that in the midst of stability and prosperity, they can't make it,"

Bergland said. "For some of them, there still is bankruptcy alongside prosperity."

"Individuals have individual problems—problems they explain in terms of machinery and land and investments and debt—and averages do not address their very real and specific situations," he said.

For the better part of a century, farm policy has addressed immediate farm problems with little regard for the composition, the control, and the direction of our farm and food system, Bergland said.

"The present structure of agriculture was never planned—it simply evolved in reaction to technical, economic, and institutional forces and a series of short-term responses since the beginning of the century," he said. "Although we recognize the current diversity of agriculture, for example, we still approach that diversity with price and income policies and programs that worked well for the relatively homogeneous structure of agriculture in the 1930's."

Bergland noted that two million farms have disappeared since 1950 and that the size of the average farm has more than doubled in that period.

"Six percent of the nation's farms now control the bulk of our food supplies," he said. "And the top 2 percent—only about 55,000 operations—sell more than a third of all farm commodities."

He pointed out that this trend is most apparent in California, where 62,000 farms—3 percent of all the farms in the nation—realized 10 percent of the national gross receipts from farming.

"Large commercial farms receive the greatest benefits from traditional agricultural programs," Bergland said. "Program payments, which are based on volume of production, exceeded $2 billion in 1978. Ten percent of the farms participating in the programs got nearly half the total payments. They were the largest farms. The smallest farms, those making up half the total, got only 10 percent of the payments."

Bergland questioned policies that encourage the consolidation of farm and land ownership, that provided most of the benefits to those least in need of help, that served to inflate land prices and thus hinder access to farming by young people who want to farm.

"We have a choice," he said, "either to perpetuate the cycle of political, social, and economic structures that got us where we are, or to be the people who start in motion the force that will bring about change."

Lead can help protect us from inflation. Large lead battery banks are currently being studied in our nation's energy program as a means of making the most of electrical utilities' output. Battery-powered vehicles reduce our dependence on imported oil.

Still 11-8 One of the many exciting musical scenes from the motion-picture, "Hair," which will open Sept. 9 at the 4pm Theatre through release by United Artists, a Transamerica Company.

Tech's Feed Manufacturing Short Course Successful

FEED MANUFACTURERS—Participating in the first Feed Manufacturing Short Course at Texas Tech University were, left to right: Michael R. Skinner, vice president, Skinner Farms, Spearman, Texas; Jeff Dyer, director of field sales, Bill Barr & Co. Inc., Springfield, Mo.; and Dr. C. Reed Richardson, animal science faculty, Texas Tech, who coordinated the course. It was sponsored by the university, which has a $1.5 million feed mill devoted exclusively to the study of livestock feeds. Short course cooperators were the Texas Grain and Feed, Texas Cattle Feeders and American Feed Manufacturers associations. (Tech Photo)

LUBBOCK—Texas Tech University's first Feed Manufacturing Short Course was so successful that plans already are being laid to conduct a second one in 1980. Attending the first were 37 persons from 11 states and Mexico. Inquiries were received from five European countries and several other states. Dr. C. Reed Richardson, coordinator for the course, said that most of the evaluations and responses has been highly positive. "We expect to sponsor a similar course, with some improvements, in 1980, probably in mid-summer," he said. Cooperating with the university in sponsorship of the first short course were the Texas Grain and Feed, Texas Cattle Feeders and American Feed Manufacturers associations. Representatives of those three organizations serve on an advisory committee which will meet in the early fall to plan the 1980 course.

Richardson said the widespread interest in the short course could be attributed to the complexity of modern feed manufacturing.

The first short course dealt with nutrition, feed mill operation and efficiency, personnel management and consumer relations.

"Participants were working hard throughout the week," he said, "and their evaluations indicated they found the presentations useful. We think we're on the right track, and succeeding short courses will be redesigned annually to assist management and operators of both small and large commercial feed manufacturing plants."

Post Office Ordered To Hold Vacation Promotions

The Postal Service Judicial Officer has ordered a temporary "mail stop order" against a Las Vegas company involved in a vacation certificate operation.

Evidence presented by postal inspectors linked the firm, Computer Selections, Inc. of 605 Las Vegas Blvd. to a Chicago firm which had been ordered to change some of its advertising claims and refund policy for offering vacation certificates to Las Vegas and other resorts.

Judicial Officer James A. Cohen issued the order upon a petition of the Postal Service Law Department alleging that Computer Selections President Edna Waldman, alias Edna Chambliss, was associated with Columbia Research Corporation of Chicago and its president, Raymond Anderson.

As a result of the action, mail containing payments to Computer Selections for vacation offers to Las Vegas and other resorts will be detained until there is a hearing to determine whether the actions of Computer Selections violate a consent agreement by using the mails to obtain money through misrepresentations.

Two months ago, Columbia Research and its president agreed to stop claiming in advertising that lodging, gaming, food and drink obtained with the vacation certificates was "free" or "on the house," unless the buyer got those benefits without extra cost or effort. It also was agreed to include in the advertising all conditions, restrictions or limitations on the availability of "vacation package" offers, and to include in the advertising the availability of refunds if the certificate buyer is in any way dissatisfied.

The Postal Service said postal inspectors found several employees of Columbia Research were involved in setting up and operating Computer Selections, both before and after a U. S. District Court Judge in Chicago ordered Columbia Research to change its advertising and refund policies. Computer Selections employees, according to Postal Service attorneys, also tried to obscure their connection to Columbia Research with fictitious names and personal histories.

The attorneys also said advertising circulars of both companies are "strikingly similar" in text and format.

Employees of Computer Selections and Columbia Research can contest the allegations before Judge Cohen. If they are unsuccessful, mail being detained by the Postal Service will be returned to the senders.

One award will be presented to Tumbleweed Smith (Bob Smith Lewis) of Big Spring, whose radio program "The Sounds of Texas" has preserved the heritage of Texas on tape for posterity and been a source of daily entertainment. The outstanding and unusual traits of Texans have also been chronicled in Smith's book, "The Tumbleweed Collection."

The Carson County Square House Museum of Panhandle will be honored for its role in preserving and displaying the area's history since its establishment in 1967. A major tourist attraction on U.S. Highway 60, the museum is accredited by the American Association of Museums.

The Lubbock Arts Festival will also receive a Cultural Achievement Award. The entire arts field was represented in the first annual, three-day festival held in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center as more than 65,000 visitors were exposed to the arts.

For sharing her artistic impressions of West Texas with the public, an award will be presented to Mrs. Willie Rowe of Fort Stockton. Mrs. Rowe specializes in scetchings and has exhibited her work in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C.

The annual awards luncheon will be held Friday, Oct. 12 at the Villa Inn in Amarillo.

Agriculture
News

On Tuesday, September 11 the Annual Field Day will be held at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock. The field day will begin at 1:00 p.m. at the research site 7 1/2 miles north of Lubbock on U.S. 87 at Farm-Market Road 1294.

Highlights of the field day will include water use efficiency, sorghum improvement, and weed control. This will be an excellent opportunity for producers to see and hear the latest developments in these areas.

The 3rd Annual Randall County Crop Tour will be held on Monday, September 10 in Canyon. The tour will feature an implement show at 9:30 a.m. East of the Reeves Elementary School on Highway 87, a free noon luncheon, a tour of demonstration plots and conservation practices. This again will be an excellent opportunity for producers to see new equipment and cultural practices.

TEXAS GRAIN SORGHUM PRODUCER BOARD ELECT-ION

The Texas Grain Sorghum Producers Board, High Plains Area, will hold its election on September 15, 1979. Hansford County grain sorghum producers eligible to vote may pick up their ballots in my office now.

MOVE

Hansford County residents should be on the lookout for rattlesnakes. This seems to be the time of year for the snakes to be moving and they can be found anywhere.

A three foot long rattler with five rattlers and baton was killed by myself in the city street just one block south of the radio station here in Spearman last Thursday night.

Parents should alert children not to play with any snakes and to be especially wary of vacant weedy lots and piles of junk where snakes could abound.

In case of being bitten by a snake, kill the snake if at all possible so it can be identified. Remain calm and seek medical attention immediately.

More information concerning first aid for snake bites can be obtained from your Doctor or local Red Cross Chapter.

CLOTHES DRYERS

Question: How can I reduce static electricity in clothes and linens?

Answer: The home economists at Whirlpool Corporation, one of the leading manufacturers of clothes dryers, recommend that you do not overdry the load. Remove the load from the dryer while there is still a trace of moisture in the fabrics. If you have a dryer with an automatic sensor, select a less drying setting in the automatic cycle. Overdrying creates static electricity, wrinkling of permanent press and shrinkage of many cottons and knitted fabrics.

ISN'T SHOCKING—just annoying. Using your dryer properly can help reduce it.

Evidence of Archaic Man Excavated At Lubbock

LUBBOCK—A few bones, a fist-size rock and a few chipped flat stones added up this summer to significant history of man on the southern Great Plains.

The discoveries at the Lubbock Lake Site add to proof that aboriginal mankind knew how to deal with a harsh and changing environment, living in harmony with it and surviving despite vicious dangers and disastrous drought.

The bones discovered were particularly important at the Clovis level, marking lifeways 12,000 years ago. The fist-size rock turned out to be a pounding stone, probably used in butchering.

The flat stones included a tool from the Archaic level, about 5,000 years old, and this has caused great excitement among scholars interested in that particular period. Only at the Lubbock Lake Site has there been evidence of middle Archaic man excavated on the High Plains of Texas.

Dr. Eileen Johnson, director of the Lubbock Lake Site research project, explained that this is "extremely important" to scholars because many thought the area might have been completely abandoned during that period because of severe climatic conditions.

"The record at the Lubbock Lake Site indicates that the population may have been reduced, but the site was not abandoned," she said.

Studies indicate that the period might have been one of severe drought, and this might account for the population decrease, in Johnson's view.

The remains of one rodent found at the Archaic level was that of a gopher known to be the best adapted to arid conditions.

The 1979 dig closed Aug. 18, with materials retrieved from the site removed to The Museum of Texas Tech University where a National Science Foundation grant will support detailed analysis leading to an understanding of the cultures which developed at the site and the environmental conditions shaping those cultures.

The Moody Foundation has supported the 1979 dig. That grant was made through the Lubbock Lake Site Development Corporation to The Museum.

In addition to the Archaic stone tool, archeologists uncovered two flaked tools about 8,500 years old, from the First-view level, earlier than the Archaic period but later than the Plainview era.

At the Clovis level, about 12,000 years ago, they discovered the humerus of a prehistoric cat, about twice the size of the modern mountain lion; a bear bone tool, the proximal end of a radius of the Arctodus more than twice the size of the modern grizzly bear; a pounding stone, the size of a big man's fist; a mammoth bone tool; a flake from the bone of a mammoth, particularly valuable as representative of that culture; and a turkey bone from the late Pleistocene epoch.

The cat bone, the first found at the site, was that of a saber-tooth tiger, an American lion or a giant jaguar. It and the turkey bone must await further study before scientific identities can be assigned. The bear bone tool was more readily identified.

The tooth of the ancient Arctodus was found during an earlier dig and it has been positively identified. Its discovery marked the first time Arctodus has been found in association with man.

"With our first discoveries, we could know that the bear had been skinned," Johnson said, "but our new discoveries tell us that the animal was butchered and, after the meat was torn away, the bones were used to fashion this tool at least and probably others."

In addition to digging for evidence of man's activity, scientists at the site this summer made intensive soil and geological studies. Vance Holliday, field supervisor for the project, was in charge of the soil studies. Curtis Welty was field geologist. Both were working to reconstruct the kind of physical environment and changes that affected human cultures.

"Man has left us little evidence of prehistoric times," Johnson said, "but with what we are discovering, we can see that aboriginal man survived by finding a harmony with his environment. As it changed, cultures changed. Few many want to go back to aboriginal lifeways, but some consideration for the harmony between man and environment is necessary for survival."

Because environment shapes cultures, emphasis in the Lubbock Lake Site research project has dealt with the changing environments there. Soil dug at the site is washed through screens to retrieve small particles of evidence. These, along with the bigger finds, are analyzed in the laboratory during the winter months.

"It is this comprehensive study that helps us interpret and understand the cultures at the site," Johnson said.
