

Rev. Baker Heads Red Cross Drive in County

The appointment of Rev. B. W. Baker, as Red Cross Roll Call Chairman for 1931, was announced today by R. L. McClellan, Chairman, Hansford County Chapter. Rev. Baker will perfect an organization of leading citizens and workers, who will carry the personal invitation to join the Red Cross throughout the chapter territory between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving.

Rev. Baker in his initial statement, said, "My position as Red Cross Fiftieth Anniversary Roll Call Chairman here, is a civic honor fully appreciated by me. The Anniversary is of tremendous public significance throughout the United States and the world, and has already been the subject of congratulations from nearly every foreign nation and comment by the press and leading citizens and organization of the whole country. I have already been assured of the desire of our own people and organizations, here, to participate in making the Roll Call a success, as it undoubtedly will be. Our goal is 200 members. This is not a very high mark to shoot at, and we should exceed it."

"I consider the Red Cross an opportunity to participate in one of the world's most vital, important movements. There are compensations in being a member of the Red Cross beyond the mere satisfaction of having contributed financially."

The appointment came to Rev. Baker Wednesday night at a meeting of charity leaders. Mrs. Myra Cloudman, Houston, National Red Cross representative was present and outlined the program of the roll call this year.

Others in attendance were: Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. McClellan, Mrs. Joe Perry, Dr. G. P. Gibner, C. D. Foote, Frank Wendt, J. W. Ratekin and J. Dave Cameron.

RED CROSS RELIEF IN 79 DISASTERS IN YEAR

Forest Fires, Plagues, Storms, Earthquakes, as Well as Drought, Call for Help.

The forest fires which have raged in Idaho and other western sections this year have presented a serious disaster—one of a number. In addition to the enormous drought relief problem, which have been met by the American Red Cross relief forces.

Suffering, faith and courage are contained in a story coming from the Priest River section in Idaho, told by a volunteer Red Cross worker as follows:

"Picture a happy little homestead near the banks of Priest river in northern Idaho. While father, with a little son tagging at his heels, is out tending crops and adding to the clearing, mother is at home making preparations for another arrival. Then comes the fire demon, sweeping all in its path. While father fights to protect his little home, the stork announces its arrival.

"Mother and baby are bundled in a quilt and loaded on a truck for the race through the flaming forest. Father drives the truck and the little boy sits at his mother's side, brushing away the sparks which fall like rain upon the improvised litter."

To the Red Cross worker, the mother expressed her anxiety to return to the hills to rehabilitate the little homestead. All they possessed was lost in the forest fires. The Red Cross aided all of the families and is working to help them rebuild their homes.

Altogether seventy-nine disasters called for Red Cross help and money during the year just closed. Aside from the drought, which required services of volunteer workers numbering more than 60,000, and a drought relief fund of more than $15,000,000, of which $5,000,000 came from the national Red Cross treasury, help was given in 22 fires, 13 tornadoes, eight storms and eight floods, six forest fires, four earthquakes and four mine explosions, three typhoons and three epidemics, two cloudbursts, and one each hurricane, mine cave-in and railroad accident.

Aside from a major catastrophe, such as the drought, when the whole public was asked to contribute funds for relief, Red Cross relief in these disasters was met from the organization's funds and from special local contributions. Part of each mem-

POLICIES OF STATE PLANT BOARD TO BE PLANNED AT MEETINGS

Austin, Texas., November 5.—Certification policies of the State Seed and Plant Board will be outlined at a series of meetings in the near future, R. V. Miller, secretary of the board, announced here. Miller is in charge of the seed certification regulations, fixed by the board and administered by the state department of agriculture.

The first meeting will be held at Denton November 7, to discuss matters pertaining to certification of small grain. November 9 the board members will go to Lubbock for a meeting on sorghum certification methods. Cotton seed certification measures will be discussed at a meeting here in December and Dallas in January.

Denton, where the first meeting is to be held, is the home of two famous varieties of small grain—wheat and denton wheat, both developed at the Experiment Station there. They are the only grains now offered under the state certification label, he said. A discussion of the possible certification of barley will feature the Dallas meeting.

In the event any applications for barley certification are approved essentially the same rules as are now applied to oats and wheat would be used, Miller said. Several new applications for registration as certified sorghum growers will be heard at Lubbock. The sorghum men recently formed a cooperative marketing organization, first of its kind ever to be formed. Most of the certified sorghums are grown in the plains area around Lubbock, Miller said.

Members of the plant board are Dr. E. P. Humbert, head of the department of genetics at A. & M. College; J. M. DelCurto, state state entomologist, Austin; and W. D. Farris of Ennis, farmer member.

Thrills at Lyric Theatre

Those two outstanding Orientals, Anna May Wong and Sessue Hayakawa, are featured with Warner Oland, the original Fu Manchu, in a new episode of the fascinating Sax Rhomer series, filmed by Paramount as "Daughter of the Dragon."

For those who like romance seasoned with puzzled, thrills and action evolved from lurking mystery, this production talks right out and says big things to any movie audience.

Miss Wong is an oriental actress of obvious personable points, who surrenders to her dying father's wish, and robs a glamorous point of vantage in London's theatrical firmament to project a program of vengeance. With all his fiendish applications of chemistry and psychology, Fu Manchu was not a more resolute menace than the pretty daughter proves to be. Loved by an exalted gentleman of her own race, loving an English nobleman, she allows her heart dictates no chance to defeat the accomplishment of her oath.

The scene of action spins from Limehouse, London's gay white way, and murky Thames River, to luxurious estates of the titled. There are plenty of secret panels and passageways, omnious shadows and a climax that will grasp your heart tighter than baby hands can take hold of a poffered fender or doo-dad.

This creepy picture will be shown Sunday and Monday, Nov. 8 and 9, at the Lyric.

EASTERN STAR NOTICE

PEARL REED, Secretary.

Show Interest Working With Co-Ops.

First time in history that a possible group of Southern men, or anybody else except cotton farmer, has said that they were willing to carry the load," said Carl S. cotton member of the Farm Board, after the in New Orleans recently, among the most influential bankers of the South with Farm Board members cooperative leaders and for holding seven million cotton off the market. Immediate result was that cotton market opened next at an advance of more $2.00 a bale.

Adams, Dallas banker, of the conference, opened it with the statement: "I have made uncomplimentary remarks about the Farm Board, but after what I have recently learned about the load that the Farm Board and the cooperatives have been carrying, and how they have carried it, I find that I have no more criticism to make of the Farm Board, but a great deal to say to my fellow-bankers."

The agreement with bankers followed in less than a week after an agreement had been made between the cooperatives and cottonseed oil mills, under which farmers will be allowed to trade cottonseed for cottonseed meal, at an equitable rate. This not only gives the farmer an opportunity to obtain the cheapest and best feed and fertilizer without cash expenditure, but also starts a movement to consume in the South the surplus of cottonseed products which is holding down the price.

WOMEN AIM TO MAKE MORE VOTERS VOTE

A year from November the United States will again hold a national election. Women's study clubs throughout the country hope to be able, by education and example, to produce a material improvement in the number of eligible voters who go to the polls. In the last presidential election, Americans showed themselves interested only to the extent of 61 per cent of the eligible voters. Almost 40 per cent of the American electorate did something else rather than go to the voting booth on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November. A comparison of this record with that of Argentina is one of the angles which the study clubs will emphasize, thanks to a compilation prepared for this purpose by the Woman's Home Companion. In the Argentine the voters vote—and in numbers worthy of respect. At their last election, which took place in the same year as the American election, approximately 88 per cent of the electorate went to the polls. Not much more than 10 per cent stayed home on election day. Even discounting as heavily as need be the invisible factors in the situation—for instance the fact that there is no middle class in Argentina and the fact that the resulting semifeudal conditions of

Bringing Better Prices to Spearman People

NEXT SESSION OF CONGRESS PROMISES TO BE INTERESTING

By Marvin Jones

The next session of Congress promises to be an interesting one. The House is almost evenly divided between the two parties.

If the Democrats should organize the House, John N. Garner will be elected Speaker. He has served in Congress for thirty years, and knows all of the ins and outs and is the dean of the Texas delegation.

Texas has been in the Union since 1845 and has never had the speakership. It would be a rare pleasure to address a Texas man as speaker for the first time.

Many important questions will be presented. One of the chief of these will be the money question. A little group of men have perverted the Federal Reserve System from its original purpose, and have again centered the money control in the hands of a few men in the East. Chief of these is Mr. Mellon, and his policies have become known as Mellonism.

There are a number of contributing causes to present day conditions, but the chief one is the contraction of the currency. In 1920 there was a per capita circulation of $53.01. According to a late Treasury Report it is $38.62, a reduction of more than 25 per cent. And yet we have one-third more gold than we had in 1920.

When money is scarce, it becomes more valuable because of its scarcity, and property becomes lower in value. Nothing would do more to restore normal conditions than an increase in the volume of money. This would make money more plentiful and would increase the value of property and products, encouraging trade and furnishing work to a vast number of the unemployed.

Naturally this centralization of money has resulted in mergers, monopolies and the lessening of individual opportunity.

In the meantime some immediate changes need to be made. The lopsided tariff, which is destroying our foreign trade, should be revised.

Provision should be made for taking up the current installments due the Farm Loan Banks and placing them behind the other installments. I introduced a measure a year ago, H. R. 16,258, to do this. Several other members introduced similar measures. But due to the opposition of the bank officials and the administration they were defeated. These measures will be reintroduced, and in view of a recent statement by the President, indicating that he now recognizes the necessity for such action, it is to be hoped that some measure will be enacted. This is more important than any foreign moratorium, as home ownership is one of the greatest safeguards of our national life.

The centralization in government and business must be checked. The encouragement of mergers and monopolies should cease, short selling should be stopped, and business big as well as little given to understand that they must obey the law.

These are but a few of the subjects that will be presented. Economics should be practiced wherever possible, excessive salaries reduced, a free circulation of money restored, the control of local affairs restored to local people, and Mellonism should be destroyed.

Words of Encouragement His Last Public Service

In paying a last tribute to the late Thomas A. Edison, nothing more impressive can be said than to repeat what was probably his last public statement, flashed by radio from his laboratory in Fort Myers, Florida, to the National Electric Light Association last summer, at Atlantic City. His words which follow show his interest in humanity which he had served so long and faithfully. In these difficult times they should be engraved on the consciousness of lurking man seemed to crouch. Would she enter the bedroom through the dressing alcove?

"Go ahead, dear lady," said Kronau mockingly. "Shoot me!"

The next moment the door to the hall opened and Magda entered that way. Her face was drained of color, but it was controlled now—almost as still as stone.
The maid approached her. "Madame is ready to retire?" she inquired. Magda looked up, only half-hearing, a film over her eyes.
"What?" she said apathetically.
"Madame is ready to retire?" repeated the maid. But Magda released into her thoughts, her gaze lost in the distance. The maid shook her head slightly and decided to go ahead with preparations for the night anyhow. She turned toward the dressing room. Her hand stretched out toward the portieres. The shape within made ready to spring and stifled her scream. At that moment Magda came out of her abstraction and stopped the maid.
"Anna!" The maid halted. Magda looked at her watch. "It is after 11. Finish packing that bundle for me, and call me at 2:15."
"Yes, madame," said the maid, going to the hallway door.
"I've only three hours to sleep—or to think," murmured Magda, as if to herself.
"Good night, madame," said the maid at the door. She passed through the door without any sign from Magda, who was once more immersed in her absorption. The lurking invader watched her rise with sudden restlessness, get and light a cigarette from the tray and stand beside her bed, puff at it a moment and then, unable to draw any soothing effect from the tobacco, dash it down and pace to the window disquietedly. She jerked up the shade impatiently. As she stood peering out, her eyes troubled, the hidden observer thought the opportunity had come to slip into the adjoining living room. He melted inside, silent as a ghost.
The room was dark, but after he gently closed the door he snapped on a small pocket flashlight. The room, tastefully adorned, with a grand piano prominent in the center, gave evidence of being used as a study as well as a place of relaxation. There was a desk in one corner. The vagrant beams of the intruder's lamp, as if to reveal a map upon the wall, he moved phantom-like toward it. Yes, a map of Europe—with a faint pencil mark drawn from Vienna in a straight line to a point in Poland—a point southwest of Przemysl where the campaign was state-mated at a critical juncture. Evidently this had formed part of Magda's labor in that room a few minutes ago. The prying figure switched off its light and drifted back into the dressing room.
Magda was seated now on the bed, attired in a filmy night dress covered by a dressing gown that was loosely opened in front. As she brushed her hair, falling in a gleaming cascade down over her shoulders, her brow was puckered in thought.
The next minute she was looking into the eyes of the man she thought to be dead.
Kronau entered from the dressing room with a jaunty smile on his lips.
"You!" she cried, springing to her feet. "Alive!" Her bonnet moved convulsively. For the moment she forgot where she was—forgot that her attire was intimately negligent—forgot everything except that he stood before her. Her agitation did not affect his poise—in fact, his smile broadened.
"You seem surprised to see me," he remarked. "Have you forgotten that only two hours ago you invited me here? Or do you think I'm the sort of man to disappoint a lady?"
So that was to be the mood of their encounter—fencing again. Quickly Magda recovered her equilibrium, drawing her dressing gown dryly have paid their owners substantial prices for home grown feeds and pasture," he says.

"A drastic reduction in cotton acreage means a shift to other crops in 1932, and by far the greater part of these are bound to feed crops," Mr. Martin continues. "Such crops have seldom paid in the past when sold for cash and there is no indication that they will prove profitable sold that way next year. Sold through various kinds of livestock, however, feed crops have paid well, even this year. Demonstration records show that pigs are paying from 50 cents to one dollar per bushel for corn, grain sorghums and wheat; that beef cattle paid $8 to $10 per ton for feed in a bad season last year; that dairy cows use grain and cheap grown roughages and pastures at prices double and treble the cash grain market; and that each hen in a flock offers a market ranging from 50 cents to $1.50 for one bushel of grain per year."
Not every farmer can shift in one year from crop farming to a combination crop-livestock system Mr. Martin admits. On the other hand he believes the present one-crop system is fundamentally wrong and that 1932 is a good year to start readjustments that will eventually result in a balance between cotton and diversified farming. The course is already charted by demonstrators in every part of Texas, he says.

"this would be equal on a year's basis to a cotton crop of 24 bales. Mr. Elliott's flock is only his sideline, but the neighbors have learned that he breeds, feeds and manages his flock with the same care that he uses on his main farming operations."

The Danger of Dust

report to the American Medical Society states that silicosis, an illness due to breathing in dust, is more widespread than was hitherto believed.

Silicosis is caused by silica, a crystalline substance composed of oxygen and silicon, the most abundant elements in earth's crust. They are believed to dissolve in the lung to form a colloid, a substance glue-like consistency which is in the lung tissue fluids. The irritating creates scar tissue, and once established silicosis is permanent. The disease is highly progressive and frequently fatal.
