CLINTON WILSON IS SERIOUSLY INJURED

Prominent Gruver Farmer Sustains Fractured Hip as Car Overturns on Highway 117

Clinton Wilson, prominent farmer living near Gruver, sustained a fractured hip and possibly other injuries, last Saturday night about 9:30 o'clock, when his car overturned on Highway 117, about 20 miles Southwest of Spearman. A travelling man pulled Wilson from the wreck and hurried him to Spearman, where he was given medical attention by Dr. R. T. Spencer of this city. Dr. Spencer said that the man's condition could be termed critical.

Wilson was making a business trip to Amarillo and was driving at a good rate of speed. A dim detour sign indicating a sharp turn off the new highway onto the old highway was not seen until the driver was immediately at the turn. He attempted to swerve his car and make the turn. The machine hurtled to one side and rolled over several times.

A Wilson Ambulance, with Star Harbison driving, left Spearman a few minutes after the injured man was given medical attention, for Amarillo. At the same turn on the highway Harbison wrecked the ambulance, but kept the car from overturning. Wilson was not further injured in the second mishap.

An ambulance was summoned from Borger, where Wilson was finally placed in an Amarillo hospital. Dr. Spencer said that due to the man's condition, that it would be necessary for him to spend at least six months in the hospital.

Appendicitis Operations

Word is received from Mrs. B. B. Divers, near Julia Snowden, that she underwent an operation for appendicitis and had her tonsils removed at the City Hospital of Mineral Wells, July 10 at 6 a. m. Mrs. Divers is getting along as nicely as could be expected at this writing.

Andy Creach underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Music Hospital at Elk City Saturday morning of last week. Mr. Creach's appendix had burst and he was in a very critical condition, and fear of gangrene added to the seriousness of the case. It is assumed that he is practically out of danger now. Mr. Creach is the son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. P. O. Snook of this city.

Dr. and Mrs. Jackson B. Cox of Tampa, Florida, are here visiting Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Dennis.

BE CAREFUL AND AVOID TRACTOR TRAGEDIES

The life of one man was snuffed out a few days ago beneath the wheels of a tractor. Another man suffered a badly mangled leg. Tuesday a youth who thoughtlessly poured gasoline into the tank of a tractor with the motor running, was seriously burned and died in a Perryton hospital Thursday morning.

Tractor power is very essential in the preparation of ground and harvesting of crops, particularly in this section of the country. But, they are dangerous! Scores of men are now working with these machines, day and night. A few acres of extra ground plowed in a day or a few more bushels of wheat threshed in a day, by getting in a hurry and taking chances with tractors that might result in the loss of a limb or even the loss of life, is not worth the risk.

Be careful of tractors. Take the greatest precaution that you do not get your limbs emeshed in the dangerous lugs. And by no mean attempt to pour gasoline in the tank with the motor of a tractor running.

The youth who was burned Tuesday, was trying to make a "hand"—to do an extra bit of work—so that he could hold his job make enough money to go to school this fall. He should have been cautioned before hand about the hazard of pouring gasoline into the tank of a tractor with the motor in motion. Perhaps he was, but he had no idea how much he was endangering his life until it was too late to avert the tragedy.

Farmers, who you know tractors and have worked with them—should not have to be told about their dangers, but by all means, when you employ a boy or a man to run a tractor for you, tell him what to do and what not to do. Don't be guilty of an omission that might take a life. Ninety-nine out of a hundred tractor tragedies can be avoided. Let's be careful!

Welfare Association Asks Farmers For Wheat to be Used in Charity Work

The Spearman welfare association is making an appeal to farmers, asking them for any amount of the 1931 wheat crop, to be used this fall and winter in the charity work of that organization.

Farmers are urged to set aside a small portion of grain to aid in the charity work. Farmers in many other section of Texas are contributing wheat for charity. The contributed grain will be stored with the Spearman elevators and those who wish to help along with the cause are requested to get in touch with Miss Vera Campbell at the Spearman Equity Exchange.

Hansford Farmers Eager To Improve Home Life County Agent Finds

That farmers of Hansford county are eager to improve their rural home life and are offering the very best of interest and cooperation, was reported today by Frank Wendt, newly elected county farm agent who spent this week visiting and consulting with farmers of this section.

Mr. Wendt's observation he declared that farmers here need more hogs, chickens, a small home orchard, more row crops and gardens to supply home needs. Too many farmers in the county are without these necessities on their farms, Wendt said.

"We need smaller farms and more people in Hansford county," he went further to say, "and that is going to be one of the major objects in my work here."

Livestock can also be made profitable, Wendt said, by farmer's adopting a plan of feeding them low priced feed. They are able to raise here.

O. G. Barkley Celebrates Nintieth Birthday; Is Still Hale and Hearty

Gathered with relatives and a few old time friends at the home of his son A. F. Barkley in Spearman, O. G. Barkley, an illustrious figure of early pioneer days and still active and in good health despite his years, celebrated his 90th birthday, Sunday, July 12.

Conversing freely with those about him, the old pioneer who traversed Texas before the Civil War, referred occasionally to the good old days, when he freighted from Kansas City to Santa Fe, over the old Santa Fe trail.

The old gentleman is living now with his son, W. L. Barkley, on a farm near Morse. He tends his garden and exercises the same care in its cultivation as he did years ago, when a young man in Socorro, New Mexico, where he was among the first settlers of that section to reclaim a portion of the Rio Grande valley for irrigation.

Chamber Commerce Work Needed Now More Than Ever Dr. Klien Says

In a U. S. Chamber of Commerce news letter, in answer to some business men who are now talking of discontinuing their membership in Chamber of Commerce and trade associations, Dr. Julius Klein said:

"In very great measure the commercial advance of the United States in recent years is directly due to organizations like Chambers of Commerce and Trade Associations. I hear some members of business bodies talking these days about the possibility of resigning from the organization, with the object mainly of supposedly saving money. I can think of nothing more dangerously extravagant than that—a wasteful squandering of that invaluable asset of good teamwork at the very time when collaboration is absolutely vital. When you are out in mid-Atlantic in a bad storm, do you see anybody shoving off from the big liner in a row boat by himself to save passage money? Well, hardly!"

Mrs. John A. Trice and Bro. Claude House of Oklahoma City were week-end guests of their brother Charles House and family of Spearman.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen King left this week for Lubbock and from there will go to Snyder, where Mrs. King will visit with her mother while Allen attends of-ficers training camp at San Antonio.

SAYRE MAN CRUSHED TO DEATH BY TRACTOR

Was Running Tractor on Broadhurst Ranch When Accident Occurred; Found by Herder

With his head crushed, bruises about his body and his right leg broken, Walter Laxton, 31, workman on the Broadhurst ranch about 8 miles from Spearman on Palo Duro Creek, was found by one of the sheep herders on the ranch last Friday morning about 10 o'clock. It is believed that he had been dead for about an hour when found by the herder.

No one witnessed the tragic death of the man. He was harrowing in one section of the field Friday morning. He set about to cross the creek, where he was to begin work on another tract. The man herding the sheep helped him to get the machine across the ravine. When the herder returned more than an hour later he found Laxton pinned beneath the lugged wheel of the tractor. The motor of the machine was still running and the machine was wedged against a tree in reverse. One wheel had kept in motion, cutting a ditch in the ground, which finally suspended the weight of the tractor. The other wheel was clamped down against the body of the dead man.

The remains of the victim was brought to Harbison Funeral parlor, where it was later transferred to Perryton by a Wilson ambulance and from there carried overland to Sayre, Oklahoma, for burial.

Laxton had been here about two weeks when the tragedy occurred. He is survived by his father C. A. Laxton of Sayre, and a number of other relatives.

Spearman Golfers Want To Stage Tournament Earliest Possible Date

Since the local golfers have been cutting down their scores at Spearman Golf course, many of them are now primed for a city-wide tournament among their membership.

Bill and Roy Russell, C. P. Cockrell, Fred Lusk, R. H. Prewitt, Harry Dumas, Johnnie Duncan, Clyde Hazlewood, Bob Clogston, H. L. Ball and a score of other good golfers are all expressing themselves for just such a tournament.

It is expected that within the next few days a committee will be appointed and players will qualify to determine the flight they shall be placed in. It is likely to take at least two weeks for winners to be decided.

Succumbed at 9:40 O'clock Thursday Morning; Efforts to Save His Life To No Avail

With the fighting spirit of youth that was game to the last moment, after attending physicians gave up hope for him, J. T. Bowen, 16-year-old son of Mrs. Florence Driskill, died in the Plaza Hospital at Perryton at 9:40 o'clock Thursday morning. The young man suffered serious burns over three-fifth of his body last Tuesday afternoon when he attempted to pour gasoline in the tank of a tractor with the motor running, while he was plowing on the farm of Marvin Lee, 7 miles south of Spearman.

Young Bowen was smiling and optimistic to the last. Never for once did he lose heart. He consoled his mother, Mrs. Driskill, who was at his bedside when the end came, saying that he was alright, that she must not worry about him.

Dr. G. H. Budd, prominent physician of Perryton, associated with Dr. J. C. May of the Plaza hospital, had everything in readiness Thursday morning to administer a blood transfusion, in an effort to save the boy's life. He died before the transfusion could be given.

Altho semi-conscious when he drew his last breath, Bowen, rallied early in the morning, conversing optimistically with Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Lee who had come to the hospital to see him. He asked Lee how he was getting along with his plowing and conversed about other matters without signs of pain.

The Perryton physicians marvelled at the youth's gameness and fighting spirit. Never did he complain or whimper. He drew his last breath smilingly, confidently.

Bowen, with another younger brother, Brice, came to Spearman a little more than a month ago from Dodsonville, Texas, where the two were to live with their mother in Spearman. Mrs. Driskill is employed by W. L. Russell Dry Goods Co. It was a happy reunion of mother and sons. Young Bowen set out to seek work. This fall he would be a senior in high school and he must have enough money to go to school on. He worked for a while on the paving program in the city. A little more than a week ago he was employed by Lee to run a tractor and plow on his farm. Attempting to make a good record and show his eagerness to work, so that he might hold his job, the youth was trying to save time when he left the engine of the tractor running, while he started to re-fuel with gasoline.

When the explosion occurred, which was supposed to have been caused by a back fire of the engine, flames enveloped the body of the boy. Cool-headedly he threw himself to the ground, rolling over and over trying to put out the flames. He succeeded partially in extinguishing them, but was forced to tear his clothes off before the flames were completely out.

He was alone at the time. He cranked a truck nearby and started to town, where he was overtaken by Lee, who brought him to the offices of Dr. R. T. Spencer in Spearman. Dr. Spencer gave first aid treatment and immediately ordered that he be sent to the hospital at Perryton.

Some hope was held out for the boy's recovery Wednesday, because of his cheerful fight against the ghastly burns. So much of his body was burned that he grew weaker due to the great shock on his nervous system. According to information made known today, the remains are expected to be carried overland to Dodsonville for burial.

Dean was plowing on the Riley Bros. farm, when the accident occurred. Growing tired of the tractor seat he sat over on the fender of the machine, placing his right foot on the belt pulley. A lug on the wheel caught in his trouser leg, wrenching his foot down against the wheel. Dean thrust his hand toward the switch and succeeded in reaching it before he was pulled from the moving tractor.

Suffering intense pain from the wound, Dean was brought to the office of Dr. J. E. Gower in Spearman, where his wound was dressed. He was reported Thursday to be improving with slight chances of any complications in the wounded leg.

IF FARMERS SHOULD STRIKE

Farmers are so disgusted with the loss of this year's work as well as a loss of money, that many of them are threatening a strike. We wonder what state of affairs the country would get in if farmers should refuse to plant wheat, cotton and other farm products in 1932? Every industry in the whole world, every business on the globe, your job, my job and every other fellow's job, depends directly or indirectly on the progress of agriculture, more specifically, the farmer. One Hansford county farmer says, "I have enough to live on for another year. I would have to go in debt if I put in a wheat crop. I'm not going to sew an acre of wheat next year, I'm simply going on a strike."

It looks like the farmer who is able to plant wheat is not willing to risk another year's work and loss of money to do so. There are scores of farmers who will not be able to get the money to put in a wheat crop in 1932. Such a condition throws an entirely new slant on the farming possibilities of Hansford county.

Farmers over the county are pretty unanimous in their assertions that they are going to have milk cows, chickens, hogs, good gardens and row crops, so that so far as it is humanly possible, they will be able to live at home.

The present low price of wheat, depressing as it may seem and unhealthy for both farmer and business man, may prove to be a blessing in disguise. If farmers become so disgusted with the one crop idea that they turn their attention to other things that produce a living at home, it might be the turning point for better days ahead for the farmer. Who can tell?

DO YOU HAVE ANY LITTLE DITCHES NEAR YOUR HOME?

When the new and larger water mains were put in a couple of months ago, various and sundry ditches were cut in the process of laying the pipe. When the system was completed, the loose dirt was raked back into the ditches.

There's been a general settling of this dirt and now in various portions of the city there's a series of wash-board rents in the ground that will give the springs of your automobile a test of endurance.

We have a new street grader that drags one of the main traveled streets occasionally. This is good. This is needed. But these water main ditches that run askew, principally on side streets, should be levelled and filled in. There's possibly two days work for a couple of men to get this done, and there is no plausible excuse for it not already having been done.

Along the street in front of our public school buildings—we venture to say—with its series of sharp ditches running across it, is as rough a street as you'll find in anybody's town anywhere. Many residents report "We have several 'little' ditches on our street near our home."

A city like Spearman, with its civic pride should not be guilty of permitting anything to go undone that might reflect directly or otherwise on the duties of city officials in keeping the city in order.

MORE TROUBLE FOR UTILITY COMPANIES

James V. Allred, Attorney General of Texas, hurried a challenge last week at the state's public utility companies, by filing a suit to forfeit the charter of the San Antonio Public Service company.

Not only did the Attorney General cite the San Antonio company, but said that "Other suits of a like nature would follow." Mr. Allred said that under Texas laws, no private corporation can be chartered for the purpose of conducting more than one separate business and merchandising, he claimed, is a separate business from supplying a city with electric lights and gas.

Public utility companies for a good many years in Texas have been selling electrical supplies, such as irons, refrigerators, radios. This action taken by the Attorney General, will curtail merchandising strides that these companies have been making. It may be for the good of the people of Texas for this law to be rigidly enforced.

Oklahoma and several other states are now enforcing a similar law. Besides being investigated for high rates, utility companies of the state are in for another set of trouble. It looks like they are going to have to toe the mark from now on. Not only does the law put a constraint on their actions, but the public in general is watching them with questioning eye.

International Sunday School Lesson

By DR. J. E. NUNN

SUNDAY, JULY 10

Topic:—The Generosity of the Early Christians.

Lesson:—Acts 4:32-35; 2 Corinthians 9:1-7.

1. And the multitude that believed were of one mind and of one soul; neither did any of them say that aught of the things which he possessed was his own, but they had all things common.

2. And with great power gave testimonies with the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and grace was upon them all.

3. Neither was there any of them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the feet of the apostles: and distribution was made unto every man according to his need.

4. And in those days, the number of the disciples multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Jews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration.

5. Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.

6. Wherefore, brethren, look ye among you seven men of good report, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

7. But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

8. For as touching the widows, it is the duty of us to write letters, and to send them unto you, who are diligent to do this thing.

9. For I know the forwardness of your mind, for which I boast to you to them of Macedonia, that you were ready a year ago, and your zeal hath provoked very many.

10. Yet have I sent the brethren to boast of you, as if ye were in Jerusalem; that ye might be a glory to them as ye are, and that ye might continue in the same mind, and in the same charity, which ye have toward one another.

11. Therefore I thought necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would do beforeunto you, and make up beforehand your bounty, whereof ye had promised before, that the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty, not as of covetousness.

6. But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.

7. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver.

Golden Text:—He himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.—Acts 20:35.

Introduction:—The Christian Community in Jerusalem

We think of them as ablaze with spiritual fire and enthusiasm; but they had also thus early developed a strong social consciousness. It could not have been otherwise, for many of them had been with Jesus when he was going about doing good and saying such things as the parable of the Good Samaritan and John 17. See how interrelated here are the various aspects of true religion, of true Christianity: "One heart and soul; unselfishness in personal goods (which is no easy form of unselfishness!); a powerful witnessing of the corner-stone truth of the resurrection; the grace of the Lord Jesus; no lack of the necessities of life.

As one might expect, there was no compulsion in their partial communism. Peter reminds Ananias of this (Acts 5:4). That miserable man's sin was lying and false pretense. It appears from Acts 12:12 that at later time John Mark's mother, a prominent member of the Jerusalem Christian community, still owned her house.

In other words, they were spiritual in this as in other respects. Some of them were poor, and when they joined Jesus company it became still harder for them to make out a living; others of them, like Barnabas, were well-to-do, and it was necessary for such to sell some of their property to meet the common need.

Unity and Community in Acts 4:32 and 34f is a beautiful picture of fellowship. And for Luke the primary fact is the unity. His words are few, but full and clear. First, he points out the basal fact of a common religious experience. All who enjoyed this fellowship were believers in Christ, men and women over whom the shadow of persecution was already beginning to creep, who staked all on the same Power and lived in the same Spirit. Secondly, Luke says that they were of one heart and soul. Drawn to Christ, they were therefore drawn to one another. In Christ, such a sense of kinship and commonness of interest sprang up that differences melted away. The writer once asked a man how he felt toward his twin-brother and he replied, "I feel that he is just my other self." It was so with these men and women after Pentecost.

A likeness in feeling, in thought and in purpose gave a controlling sense of unity. Thirdly, Luke says that unity of heart and soul was followed by a community of goods in which no brother or sister was permitted to suffer.

Power and Grace. Acts 4:33

Generosity was not the only flower in the garden of that early fellowship. Luke says, "With great power gave the apostles their witness of the Lord Jesus." The emphasis is twofold: (1) upon the witnessing, and (2) upon the power. In the joy of their fellowship they did not slacken in their obedience to Christ's command, nor lose the Pentecostal fire. They continue their evangelism with great power.

Again, Luke says that "great grace upon them all." The grace of the Lord transfused them, appearing in their beautiful unity, and generosity, and burning enthusiasm for the Saviour.

A Problem of Growth. Acts 6:1

One trouble of these early days was that recorded in our lesson. It was a problem of growth. The church continued to grow, through the constant witnessing of the apostles and other believers. And with the increase the task of distributing help to those who needed it became more difficult and exacting. At the same time the hearts of the apostles were aflame with the desire to preach the gospel. Drawn thus between two desires it was all but inevitable that one thing or another should be neglected. And in this case the problem was made more delicate by the presences of sensitiveness which was quite natural. There were in the church Jews who were reared in Palestine and who spoke Aramaic, and Jews from other lands who spoke Greek and were more favorable to Greek culture. They spoke a different language and had different opinions regarding many things.

Grecians and Hebrews. Acts 6:1

So the problem arose. The Greek-speaking Jews began to murmur against the Hebrews "because their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations." We are reminded of conditions in our modern churches which challenge us to utter love and fairness.

There are, for instance, the differences in education. Men have different social standing and associations; and the barriers of wealth and poverty. All of these tend to make people sensitive to slights, and the church must be ever on its guard that these differences may make no difference, that the natural human tendencies shall not be fed by neglect or unfairness, but rather forgotten in true brotherhood.

A Christian Solution. vs. 2, 3, 4

Although the neglect was unintentional, it was probably real, and the apostles responded to the criticism in a wonderful Christian spirit. The critics could ask no more in fairness or promptness.

pel. Drawn thus between two desires it was all but inevitable that one thing or another should be neglected. And in this case the problem was made more delicate by the presences of sensitiveness which was quite natural. There were in the church Jews who were reared in Palestine and who spoke Aramaic, and Jews from other lands who spoke Greek and were more favorable to Greek culture. They spoke a different language and had different opinions regarding many things.

See verses 2 and 3. And the church went full length in its choice of men who would avoid the same error and convince the Hellenists that the language they spoke made no difference in love. Notice in verse 5 the names of the men chosen. Every one of them had a Greek name. Some think that all were Greek-speaking Jews. One of them we know was not a Jew at all. Others think the division of the six Jews was equal as between the Hebrew and Hellenists. At any rate, those chosen were noted for their goodness, fairness and faithfulness, men full of the Holy Spirit. So by its spirit of generous brotherhood the church not only corrected the error, but (1) released the apostles for their spiritual ministry and (2) called into service men who would become great in the work of the kingdom.

the Philippians to bountiful liberality. Now he is about to return to Corinth (perhaps accompanied by some Philippians) to receive the collection, and is anxious for them to make good their promise and justify his boasting. And in his message he says some things that ought to be of great value to us.

sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." Let them purpose in their hearts, but not on too small and sparing a scale. Men may boast of having paid their pledges, when their pledges are mere piteances, and justifying his boasting. And in his message he says some things that ought to be of great value to us.

First, he exhorted them to give "as a matter of bounty and not of extortion." He had no taste for urging people overmuch. He did not wish to appear as covetously grasping and coercing men to give against their will.

A Harvest Principle. v. 6.

The Farm Filosafer Says

We old farmers are shore bearing in mind that next year is election year and we're going to hold out enough to pay our poll tax. Since this ain't election year, we can't expect the price of wheat to go up. But mind my word, next year there'll be a little flurry on farm commodities that will look like it's going to help the farmer—but just long enough to try to get his vote. You can bet your life here's one old hay seed that's not going to vote for a god darned one of them fellers that in office now. The fellers that come out agin' these here sharp shooters holding office in Washington now, whether they're wet, dry, Democratic, Socialist or Republican, we're going to vote for 'em.

Self Feeders For Hogs Is On An Increase

The modern way of feeding hogs by means of self-feeders is on the increase in Texas, and most county agents are including this labor saving device in plans worked out with farmers for feeding demonstrations, declares E. M. Regenbrecht, Swine Specialist in the Extension Service of Texas A and M College and the United States Department of Agriculture. He points out that tests made at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station show this method gives the most economical gains where corn or grain sorghums are fed free choice with a protein supplement consisting of equal parts of cottonseed meal and tankage.

Experiments reveal that most grains can be economically fed underground if fed in a self-feeder, thereby saving a big expense. Hogs on a self-feeder eat slowly, chew their grain better and a very small amount of the grain passes through the hog undigested.

The economy of the self-feeder, in addition to saving the cost of grinding, comes from the great amount of labor saved, from securing a naturally balanced ration, and from preventing wastage of feed on the ground or on feeding floors. Mr. Regenbrecht says. Many demonstrators find that self-feeders need be replenished only once a week or even less often, making the job of feeding hogs very light. By using these feeders a pound of gain is made with 3% to 4 pounds of feed.

The type of feeder recommended is 4 to 6 feet in length, 3 or 4 feet in height and 1 foot in width, with a feeding trough at the bottom 12 inches wide, covered with wooden flaps. The walls of the feed compartment are perpendicular, thereby allowing the feed to settle down more freely than was the case with the old "V" type of feeder.

Rural Architecture To Be On Program Of Farmers Short Course

College Station, Texas, July 16.—A series of illustrated lectures on architecture from the rural standpoint will be given by Prof. Ernest Langford, head of the department of architecture, Texas A & M College, during the Farmers Short Course at the college the week of July 27. His lectures will make up a part of the home planning sessions included in the homemakers programs for farm women and girls.

Prof. Langford defines architecture as "the index of the civilization of an age, a race, or a people." All that goes to make up the life of any people, such as migrations and conquests, social, political and economic changes, religion and ideals, have all been manifested in the changing styles of architecture, he points out. "Vices and virtues have been portrayed side by side with their proper symbols—in the architecture of earlier peoples by hieroglyphics and crude paintings, in the Middle Ages by stained glass and statuary, and in our own time by various innovations undreamed of by men of other days.

"Likewise the punishments of vices and the rewards of virtues are equally portrayed in architecture. Gods and devils, heavens and hells, saints and sinners all find their places and each tells its own story, however subtle and crude. Various arts of peace and war are mirrored in faded paintings, or imperishable stone and in colored glass. In short, architecture, then, as now, was the grand chronicler of secular and religious history, in which king and nobleman, priest and common man alike find their various places."

Minerals Fed Sows Stop Hairless Pig Farrowing

Wheeler, Texas, June 16.—Ground wheat and equal parts of tankage and cottonseed meal fed in most cases in self feeders is the ration used by 39 Wheeler county farmers who are conducting hog growing demonstrations with Jake Tarter, county agent. In some of these herds and in others where sows were farrowing hairless pigs the trouble was overcome by adding a mineral mixture to the feed of the sow during the gestation period. The mineral consists of two pounds of bone meal mixed with one ounce of tincture of iodine.

State Prepares To Issue Licenses For Butter Fat Testers

AUSTIN, July 16.—Issuance of permits to test milk and cream for butterfat content, under authority of a law enacted by the 42nd legislature, will start within the next two weeks, according to M. S. Frazee, weights and measures chief in the state department of agriculture.

Frazee hopes to have every milk and cream tester in the state licensed by the time the law goes into effect on August 22, he said, in order that the department may proceed from that date in enforcement of the law.

The law, sponsored in the legislature by Rep. A. B. Tarwater, makes the Babcock test of butterfat content, universally recognized, the standard for all testing in the state. It was designed chiefly as a protection to the farmer and small dairyman, many of whom, according to Tarwater, had complained of the tests made on their products.

The law specifies that every person operating a cream or milk testing apparatus to determine the per centage of butterfat for the purpose of purchase must secure a license from the commissioner of agriculture. The issuance of this license will be contingent upon the competency and reliability of the applicant. Inaccurate testing will constitute reason for revoking the license.

The law sets out all tests and regulations with which a tester must comply, these being identical with those laid down by the Bureau of Standards of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

"It is our desire," Frazee said,

"to make this law equally beneficial to the farmer and to the cream and milk station operator, and our inspectors have been instructed to do everything within their authority to produce this result."

The young Lieutenant at the desk gave her a boyishly unabashed inspection.

The unctuous aplomb of one who was leading her adroitly out of a labyrinth. Once the suspicion crossed Magda's mind that they had passed a corner before.

"I've been through these corridors so often," remarked Lieutenant Meyer with lofty composure, "that I'm never at a loss which turning to take."

"So I see," Magda breathed. "How well you know your way about! But you look like the sort of young man who'd be that way in everything he undertook."

By the time they reached Colonel Emmerich's sanctum he was her complete slave.

He spoke to the guard at the door with unusually commanding imperiousness. With a flourish of salutes they were ushered into the antechamber, which appeared to be a huge filing room for storing innumerable archives.

The Lieutenant conveyed her across the congested space, remarking, "I'll leave you here. But I'll wait for your return—you might get lost in the corridors going back."

She smiled, this time indignantly. "Thank you," she said. "You are very kind."

He showed her card to the guard posted at the far door. The guard immediately pressed a button on the wall a number of times. A moment later two heels flashed on the wall in a telegraphic code. The soldier swung open the door and Magda, with Lieutenant Meyer's devoted eyes upon her, entered the presence of Colonel Emmerich with a feeling that she was stepping across the portals of destiny.

For the first instant she had difficulty in deciphering him. The huge room had only one window, a large one, admitting the light through heavy, bare, that they minister stretches of vitreous pipes and organ trappings of lost tubes in stands. This intricate glittering array radiated odd traceries of light and shade across maps on the side walls that wove unusual patterns themselves through the elevations which modelled them in relief.

Then at a large desk, almost hidden by a student lamp before his face, Magda espied her acquaintance of the night before. His civilian apparel had been exchanged for military trappings, his face was now clean-shaven and incisive as a knife. "Good morning, gnadies Fraulein," he greeted her, rising and bowing with a hint of a reminiscence smile. He waved her to a big chair opposite his desk, and as she sat down he pressed one of a squad of buttons that flanked his desk. Immediately from a stand near Magda a flood of light engulfed her face.

"I am pleased you have come," he said, plunging directly into his subject. "You are probably now aware that I am the head of the secret service, and that last night I made a test of your loyalty."

"Yes," she nodded.

"This branch of the service," he said, "is as important to the country as fighting in the trenches. There are times in our work when masculine brains cannot accomplish as much as feminine charm."

"So I have heard," Magda murmured.

"We are in need of such charming great need," he said, his intent upon her. He pressed another button, and the topographical maps on the wall rose and crossed to one expanse in relief, and Magda followed. His arm swung along a sector of the front, studded with tiny Austrian and Russian flags.

"Here last week, we lost twenty thousand men," he said. His arm described another arc. "And here, the week before, eight thousand were wiped out." He turned to her, his voice taking on a savage edge. "In both cases, I regret to say, our losses came from the enemy's knowing more of our plans than they should have known."

CAT'S EYE

By Wm. A. Wilbanks

The Cat's Eye doesn't intend to take all the credit for getting Spearman new telephone directories, but Fred Lusk local manager says that I might if I wish, for he couldn't see any possibility of it hurting his standing in the community. The Cat's eye mentioned last week the age of the telephone directories that are now in use. This week L. C. Mills is here working on the new directories, and reports that M. H. Berkmeier, directory supervisor for the company will be here tomorrow. So it looks like we will have new directories soon. The Cat's Eye's number will be found on the last page if he can get his telephone bill paid in time.

The Cat's Eye knows that Mrs. Bert Briley has something on Bert, because I saw something that substantiated my opinion. He bought her a great big chocolate malt, and when Bert does something like that, you can rest assured there is something hurting his conscience.

Everyone can be wrong and I can cite one case against Mrs. Warren McNabb, nee Miss Ruth Prutsman, who used to write a column for the Reporter. Here is a clipping taken from her column that appeared in the Reporter April 17, 1930.

"A kind hearted gentleman handed me a small pamphlet on the street this week. I glanced at it and read, 'Your life time opportunity.' I became interested and read the next line, 'Panhandle Matrimonial Mutual Endowment Association.' Somewhat disgusted I continued reading, 'Your membership today will solve your financial troubles after you are married.' A slight movement and the pamphlet hit the waste basket. What I want is something that will solve financial troubles of the present instead of the future."

It is easy to see now where she was wrong, for she certainly has just cause now to have cashed in on a proposition like that, if she had only heeded the man's advice. She might have been worse for experiences, however, for these matrimonial insurance agencies seem to have been a "wash-out."

G. O. Thompson, manager of Amarillo Hotel and R. D. Thompson of Thompson Drug Company of Amarillo, were in Spearman Wednesday, seeing after business affairs.
