THE TEXAS TECHNOLOGICAL COLLEGE

New Policy Helps But Doesn't Cure

The Texas Commission on Higher Education adopted a policy Monday which was a great deal better than the one recommended by a three-man sub-committee in September, but still is lacking in some respects as far as Tech is concerned.

The policy recommended earlier would have frozen the Tech graduate program at its present status, but now the commission allegedly does not favor Texas A&M and the University of Texas (two schools which were given the green light on graduate work) any more than other state schools.

However, the Commission now retains the last word on any "indiscriminate expansion" by Tech and other state supported schools. It is logical to assume that they will also determine what is "indiscriminate expansion."

This is brought out by the fact that the commission approved only one of five specific requests by Tech—the separation of chemistry and chemical engineering into two departments.

We will have to wait until Nov. 5-7 to find out what the Commission's action will be on the other proposals, which are the addition of masters degree programs in civil, mechanical and petroleum engineering; approval of Tech's bureau of business research; reinstatement of the doctor of philosophy program in geology, and the retention of masters programs in Home Economics.

It is our view that the latter four programs are needed at Tech, as was the one that was passed, and unless the Commission allows Tech to progress in these fields, it will be discriminating against one of the better schools in the nation.

RAW DEAL

Editor,
Congratulations! Your editorial on "7 & 8 residents get raw deal" is good.

By bringing the truth of matters to public view, the administration might at least put forth an effort to have the new dorms (7 & 8) finished before next year as it is presently slated.

Keep up the good work.

DORMS AGAIN

Editor,
RE: your rather one-sided editorial of Oct. 14.

To begin with, you are exactly one year late in all your observations. The girls living in Weeks last year went through all that and more last fall.

Your first complaint concerned having to eat in other dorms. The girls in Weeks ate in Knapp, Horn, Drane, Sneed, Bledsoe, Gordon and Doak.

Next, telephone service. You commented on the "faulty and inadequate telephone service." Well, Weeks didn't have any telephone service for the first few weeks of school. Nor were there any parking facilities — not even unpaved ones.

Another thing — many of the rooms on the first floor weren't anywhere near completion, and the rest of the rooms needed finishing touches such as baseboards and tiles on the floor. There were workmen wandering in and out doing various little odd-jobs clear up to the Christmas holidays.

You also mentioned the hard beds and bad acoustics. Well, hard beds are good for you — a proven medical fact — and you do get used to them. Frankly, I don't know of any dormitory on this campus or any other campus which has excellent acoustics — that is acoustics which will keep out ordinary dorm noises.

Now, despite these manifold disadvantages, the occupants of Weeks managed to get through the year and even enjoy it. After all, these new dorms do provide much more storage space and better studying facilities than do the older dorms. So I don't see how you can say that the rooms are "below par," when actually they are above par in every sense.

While I do not believe that "what is, is right," I think you must accept it in this case. Even though these dorms are not complete now, they will be shortly, and I imagine the boys had rather live there, inconveniences and all, than to be crammed three and four in rooms in the older dorms. The girls in Weeks didn't feel they got a square deal either at the beginning of the year, but everything came out all right in the end, and no fatalities resulted.

Your views on "poor management and shortage of money" are completely unfounded. Before you write your next such editorial, I suggest that you do a little research and dig up some facts to back up your opinions. You might also tune into the rest of the

"When it rains it pours." This is a phrase used in a salt advertisement, but I think it aptly applies to hour quizzes. They hit students all at one time.

For example, I've got two Friday and one Saturday, and I've already had two. I'm sure that many have a sadder tale to tell, but if mine were any worse I would throw up my hands and scream.

From hearing students talk, I understand that some instructors still have a little mean streak in them. Several pop quizzes were given the first class period following the Out-of-Town trip. I guess I am lucky after all — I couldn't have made 2 on a quiz at that time.

It's a good feeling to know that Tech students are taking an interest in their college and the welfare of the other students.

The "Techsans Talk Back" section of the TOREADOR is steadily building up strength, and this, in itself, is a sign of strength on the student's behalf.

A part of the matriculation fee students pay each semester is used to help finance the paper's operation, and the staff is made up of students, so it is, by all rights the student's prerogative to use the TOREADOR to express its views on matters from time to time. Keep the letters coming.

I hate to keep harping on school spirit, but I feel there is liable to be somewhat of a let down after the TCU game. The players depend to a large extent on the support of the student body, so let's stay behind them and grab another victory.

Carol Thompson
Doak Hall

Editors Note:
The editorial was not merely opinions. It was the facts as many residents of the two dorms have related them to me and the TOREADOR staff. I think your remarks about Weeks Hall bring out very well what we meant about "poor management and shortage of money." Your last point was well taken — "You might also tune into the rest of the world" — but, before I can tune in I have to have a signal.

FOREIGN STUDENTS

Editor,
The future of our nation rests, in part, in the attitudes and opinions held by the people of the uncommitted nations of the world as well as our allies.

As far as I can tell by talking with the foreign students of this college and by reading articles written by Western observers in these uncommitted nations, these people on whom our future depends do not judge us by the principles we adhere to as expressed in the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and our systems of morality. They judge us by our deeds and actions.

We are privileged at Texas Tech in having about forty foreign students, many of whom come from the nations that in the future will

With the nip of a brisk, if not the moist, fall in the air, homecoming is just around the corner.

ALL THE GOOD things associated with homecoming — meeting old friends, watching a first-class football game, dancing, going to parties, viewing the homecoming parade and showing parents around the campus — will be enjoyed before Tech settles back into the old academic routine.

Highlights of the homecoming festivities is the selection of a homecoming queen to reign over the weekend activities.

THE PRACTICE of selecting a homecoming queen is relatively young, starting in 1954. The procession of beauties who have received this honor include Suzanne Matteson, 1954; Sandra Shook, 1955; Revis Jordan, 1956, and Sharla Pepper, a Tech cheerleader at present, 1957.

The selection of the queen is made by the Double T Association from a group of five finalists. Sponsoring groups are the Student Council and Forum.

THE QUEEN is usually announced at a Friday night pep rally, and reigns over the following activities. Highlight of the queen's brief reign is her crowning during the halftime of the football game.

Don't hold your breath waiting for the homecoming queen to be announced. Rather, help your organization build its float for the homecoming parade, Nov. 22.

A PERSON GETS as much out of something as he puts in it, so take an active part in the homecoming activities — and enjoy yourself.

If the above rule holds true, Arkansas University, Tech's homecoming game opponent, deserves a royal welcome. When the Raiders sallied into the Ozarks last fall, the students came back with a plaque welcoming them as the SWC's newest member, and the football players with a turkey apiece.

THE GAME OUGHT to be a good one, as the Raiders will be out for revenge for the 47-26 setback that the Razorbacks handed them last year.

No matter what the final score, one thing is sure — Techsans are going to have a good time during homecoming.

Editor,

In the Oct. 9 edition of the TOREADOR, you printed a letter by Roy Lemons in the "Techsians Talk Back" column.

Mr. Lemons, it seems, had taken it upon himself to criticize our Tech cheerleaders. I don't know the reason for the absence of the two cheerleaders at the Austin game, but I do know that we have an enthusiastic and dedicated bunch leading our yells. Anyone who has ever seen Joe Naylor and his group at work will agree, I'm certain.

I'll wager that the two missing cheerleaders would have preferred to be in service at the game than where ever they were. If the content of the "rumor" that they were attending a social was true, we should realize that such things cannot always be avoided.

Mr. Lemons is entitled to his own opinion, of course, but I personally believe he should have taken the facts of the matter into consideration, before writing to the TOREADOR.

Our cheerleaders have a big responsibility in building spirit among 8,500 students — students who should be backing the Red Raiders anyway, whether we have one or one-hundred cheerleaders. It is too much to ask of merely five people. Aid and encouragement, not criticism, should be given them, for they are doing a grand job.

The fault should not be borne by the cheerleaders alone, but by the college as a whole. Why don't we have substitute cheerleaders to take care of such emergencies as were contained in Mr. Lemons' "rumor"? Is there some college regulation against it.

Federal Appeals Court Extends Temporary Order

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal appeals court Wednesday extended again its temporary order blocking the use of Little Rock's public schools as private, segregated institutions.

PRESIDING JUDGE Joseph W. Woodruff of the special three-member panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals announced the order will remain in force until the court has made its final ruling. He added that would be "as soon as possible."

The court used strong language in its formal order which was broadened to include not only the school board but all others who might try to block integration through the private school plan.

THE COURT took several hours to prepare the order after the hearing. It used 600 or more words and set out the order had to be extended to protect what racial integration had already been accomplished in the Little Rock schools.

The Little Rock School Board was attacked at the hearing by two Negro attorneys who charged it was irresponsible and trying to evade an integration order of a federal court. The government joined in the attack on the board.

IN LITTLE ROCK, Gov. Faubus noted the court's action. He said it was now taking its time while a few weeks ago it was in such "a hurry it issued orders by telegraph." He also accused the

Little Rock School Board of refusing to release its teachers so they could teach in private schools. The school board was granted a 2½-year breathing spell from Judge Davies' order after Little Rock Central High School operated last year on an integrated basis under the guard of federal troops.

THE TRUE AND HARROWING FACTS ABOUT RUSHING

It is well enough to sit in one's Morris chair and theorize about sorority rushing, but if one really wishes to know the facts, one must leave one's Morris chair and go out into the field. My Morris chair, incidentally, was given to me by the makers of Philip Morris. They also gave me my Philip chair. They are great-hearted folk, the makers of Philip Morris, as millions of you know who have enjoyed their excellent cigarettes. Only from bountiful souls could come such mildness, such flavor, such pleasure, as you will find in Philip Morris! For those who prefer crushproof boxes, Philip Morris is available in crushproof boxes. For those who prefer soft packs, Philip Morris is available in soft packs. For those who prefer to buy their cigarettes in bulk, please contact Emmett R. Sigafos, friendly manager of our factory in Richmond, Virginia.

But I digress. I was saying that in order to know the true facts about sorority rushing, one must go into the field and investigate. Consequently, I went last week to the Indiana College of Spot Welding and Belles-Lettres and interviewed several million coeds, among them a lovely lass named Gerund McKeever. (It is, incidentally, quite an interesting little story about how she came to be named Gerund.) It seems that her father, Ralph T. McKeever, loved grammar better than anything in the world, and so he named all his children after parts of speech. In addition to Gerund, there were three girls named Preposition, Adverb, and Pronoun, and one boy named Dative Case. The girls seemed not to be unduly depressed by their names, but Dative Case, alas, grew steadily more morose and was finally found one night dangling from a participle. After this tragic event, the father abandoned his practice of grammatical nomenclature, and whatever children were subsequently born to him — eight in all — were named Everett.

But I digress. I was interviewing a lovely coed named Gerund McKeever. "Gerund," I said, "were you rushed by a sorority?"

"Yes, mister," she said, "I was rushed by a sorority."

"Did they give you a high-pressure pitch?" I asked. "Did they use the hard sell?"

"No, mister," she replied. "It was all done with quiet dignity. They simply talked to me about the chapter and the girls for about three minutes and then I pledged."

"My goodness!" I said. "Three minutes is not very long for a sales talk!"

"It is when they are holding you under water, mister," said Gerund.

"It was all done with quiet dignity."

"Well, Gerund," I said, "how do you like the house?"

"I like the house fine, mister," she replied. "But I don't live there. Unfortunately, they pledged more girls than they have room for, so they are sleeping some of us in the bell tower."

"Isn't that rather noisy?" I said.

"Only on the quarter-hour," said Gerund.

"Well, Gerund," I said, "it has certainly been a pleasure talking to you," I said.

"Likewise, mister," she said, and with many a laugh and cheer we went our separate ways — she to the campanile, I to the Morris chair.

THE TEXAS TECHNOLOGICAL COLLEGE

Editorial Page

New Policy Helps But Doesn't Cure

The Texas Commission on Higher Education adopted a policy Monday which was a great deal better than the one recommended by a three-man sub-committee in September, but still is lacking in some respects as far as Tech is concerned.

The policy recommended earlier would have frozen the Tech graduate program at its present status, but now the commission allegedly does not favor Texas A&M and the University of Texas (two schools which were given the green light on graduate work) any more than other state schools.

However, the Commission now retains the last word on any "indiscriminate expansion" by Tech and other state supported schools. It is logical to assume that they will also determine what is "indiscriminate expansion."

This is brought out by the fact that the commission approved only one of five specific requests by Tech—the separation of chemistry and chemical engineering into two departments.

We will have to wait until Nov. 5-7 to find out what the Commission's action will be on the other proposals, which are the addition of masters degree programs in civil, mechanical and petroleum engineering; approval of Tech's bureau of business research; reinstatement of the doctor of philosophy program in geology, and the retention of masters programs in Home Economics.

It is our view that the latter four programs are needed at Tech, as was the one that was passed, and unless the Commission allows Tech to progress in these fields, it will be discriminating against one of the better schools in the nation.

Editor,
Congratulations! Your editorial on "7 & 8 residents get raw deal" is good.

By bringing the truth of matters to public view, the administration might at least put forth an effort to have the new dorms (7 & 8) finished before next year as it is presently slated.

Keep up the good work.

DORMS AGAIN
Editor,
RE: your rather one-sided editorial of Oct. 14.

To begin with, you are exactly one year late in all your observations. The girls living in Weeks last year went through all that and more last fall.

Your first complaint concerned having to eat in other dorms. The girls in Weeks ate in Knapp, Horn, Drane, Sneed, Bledsoe, Gordon and Doak.

Next, telephone service. You commented on the "faulty and inadequate telephone service." Well, Weeks didn't have any telephone service for the first few weeks of school. Nor were there any parking facilities — not even unpaved ones.

Another thing — many of the rooms on the first floor weren't anywhere near completion, and the rest of the rooms needed finishing touches such as baseboards and tiles on the floor. There were workmen wandering in and out doing various little odd-jobs clear up to the Christmas holidays.

You also mentioned the hard beds and bad acoustics. Well, hard beds are good for you — a proven medical fact — and you do get used to them. Frankly, I don't know of any dormitory on this campus or any other campus which has excellent acoustics — that is acoustics which will keep out ordinary dorm noises.

Now, despite these manifold disadvantages, the occupants of Weeks managed to get through the year and even enjoy it. After all, these new dorms do provide much more storage space and better studying facilities than do the older dorms. So I don't see how you can say that the rooms are "below par," when actually they are above par in every sense.

While I do not believe that "what is, is right," I think you must accept it in this case. Even though these dorms are not complete now, they will be shortly, and I imagine the boys had rather live there, inconveniences and all, than to be crammed three and four in rooms in the older dorms. The girls in Weeks didn't feel they got a square deal either at the beginning of the year, but everything came out all right in the end, and no fatalities resulted.

Your views on "poor management and shortage of money" are completely unfounded. Before you write your next such editorial, I suggest that you do a little research and dig up some facts to back up your opinions. You might also tune into the rest of the

"When it rains it pours." This is a phrase used in a salt advertisement, but I think it aptly applies to hour quizzes. They hit students all at one time.

For example, I've got two Friday and one Saturday, and I've already had two. I'm sure that many have a sadder tale to tell, but if mine were any worse I would throw up my hands and scream.

From hearing students talk, I understand that some instructors still have a little mean streak in them. Several pop quizzes were given the first class period following the Out-of-Town trip. I guess I am lucky after all — I couldn't have made 2 on a quiz at that time.

It's a good feeling to know that Tech students are taking an interest in their college and the welfare of the other students.

The "Techsans Talk Back" section of the TOREADOR is steadily building up strength, and this, in itself, is a sign of strength on the student's behalf.

A part of the matriculation fee students pay each semester is used to help finance the paper's operation, and the staff is made up of students, so it is, by all rights the student's prerogative to use the TOREADOR to express its views on matters from time to time. Keep the letters coming.

I hate to keep harping on school spirit, but I feel there is liable to be somewhat of a let down after the TCU game. The players depend to a large extent on the support of the student body, so let's stay behind them and grab another victory.

world and be a little more up to date.

Carol Thompson
Doak Hall

Editors Note:
The editorial was not merely opinions. It was the facts as many residents of the two dorms have related them to me and the TOREADOR staff. I think your remarks about Weeks Hall bring out very well what we meant about "poor management and shortage of money." Your last point was well taken — "You might also tune into the rest of the world" — but, before I can tune in I have to have a signal.

FOREIGN STUDENTS

The future of our nation rests, in part, in the attitudes and opinions held by the people of the uncommitted nations of the world as well as our allies.

As far as I can tell by talking with the foreign students of this college and by reading articles written by Western observers in these uncommitted nations, these people on whom our future depends do not judge us by the principles we adhere to as expressed in the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and our systems of morality. They judge us by our deeds and actions.

We are privileged at Texas Tech in having about forty foreign students, many of whom come from the nations that in the future will

With the nip of a brisk, if not moist, fall in the air, homecoming is just around the corner.

ALL THE GOOD things associated with homecoming — meeting old friends, watching a first-class football game, dancing, going to parties, viewing the homecoming parade and showing parents around the campus — will be enjoyed before Tech settles back into the old academic routine.

Highlights of the homecoming festivities is the selection of a homecoming queen to reign over the weekend activities.

THE PRACTICE of selecting a homecoming queen is relatively young, starting in 1954. The procession of beauties who have received this honor include Suzanne Matteson, 1954; Sandra Shook, 1955; Revis Jordan, 1956, and Sharla Pepper, a Tech cheerleader at present, 1957.

The selection of the queen is made by the Double T Association from a group of five finalists. Sponsoring groups are the Student Council and Forum.

THE QUEEN is usually announced at a Friday night pep rally, and reigns over the following activities.

Highlight of the queen's brief reign is her crowning during the halftime of the football game.

Don't hold your breath waiting for the homecoming queen to be announced. Rather, help your organization build its float for the homecoming parade, Nov. 22.

Federal Appeals Court Extends Temporary Order

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal appeals court Wednesday extended again its temporary order blocking the use of Little Rock's public schools as private, segregated institutions.

PRESIDING JUDGE Joseph W. Woodruff of the special three-member panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals announced the order will remain in force until the court has made its final ruling. He added that would be "as soon as possible."

The court used strong language in its formal order which was broadened to include not only the school board but all others who might try to block integration through the private school plan.

THE COURT took several hours to prepare the order after the hearing. It used 600 or more words and set out the order had to be extended to protect what racial integration had already been accomplished in the Little Rock schools.

The Little Rock School Board was attacked at the hearing by two Negro attorneys who charged it was irresponsible and trying to evade an integration order of a federal court. The government joined in the attack on the board.

IN LITTLE ROCK, Gov. Faubus noted the court's action. He said it was now taking its time while a few weeks ago it was in such "a hurry it issued orders by telegraph." He also accused the

Little Rock School Board of refusing to release its teachers so they could teach in private schools. The school board was granted a 2½-year breathing spell from Judge Davies' order after Little Rock Central High School was operated last year on an integrated basis under the guard of federal troops.

THE TRUE AND HARROWING FACTS ABOUT RUSHING

It is well enough to sit in one's Morris chair and theorize about sorority rushing, but if one really wishes to know the facts, one must leave one's Morris chair and go out into the field. My Morris chair, incidentally, was given to me by the makers of Philip Morris. They also gave me my Philip chair. They are great-hearted folk, the makers of Philip Morris, as millions of you know who have enjoyed their excellent cigarettes. Only from bountiful souls could come such mildness, such flavor, such pleasure, as you will find in Philip Morris! For those who prefer crushproof boxes, Philip Morris is available in crushproof boxes. For those who prefer soft packs, Philip Morris is available in soft packs. For those who prefer to buy their cigarettes in bulk, please contact Emmett R. Sigafos, friendly manager of our factory in Richmond, Virginia.

But I digress. I was saying that in order to know the true facts about sorority rushing, one must go into the field and investigate. Consequently, I went last week to the Indiana College of Spot Welding and Belles-Lettres and interviewed several million coeds, among them a lovely lass named Gerund McKeever. (It is, incidentally, quite an interesting little story about how she came to be named Gerund.) It seems that her father, Ralph T. McKeever, loved grammar better than anything in the world, and so he named all his children after parts of speech. In addition to Gerund, there were three girls named Preposition, Adverb, and Pronoun, and one boy named Dative Case. The girls seemed not to be unduly depressed by their names, but Dative Case, alas, grew steadily more morose and was finally found one night dangling from a participle. After this tragic event, the father abandoned his practice of grammatical nomenclature, and whatever children were subsequently born to him — eight in all — were named Everett.

But I digress. I was interviewing a lovely coed named Gerund McKeever. "Gerund," I said, "were you rushed by a sorority?"

"Yes, mister," she said, "I was rushed by a sorority."

"Did they give you a high-pressure pitch?" I asked. "Did they use the hard sell?"

"No, mister," she replied. "It was all done with quiet dignity. They simply talked to me about the chapter and the girls for about three minutes and then I pledged."

"My goodness!" I said. "Three minutes is not very long for a sales talk!"

"It is when they are holding you under water, mister," said Gerund.

"It was all done with quiet dignity."

"Well, Gerund," I said, "how do you like the house?"

"I like the house fine, mister," she replied. "But I don't live there. Unfortunately, they pledged more girls than they have room for, so they are sleeping some of us in the bell tower."

"Isn't that rather noisy?" I said.

"Only on the quarter-hour," said Gerund.

"Well, Gerund," I said, "it has certainly been a pleasure talking to you," I said.

"Likewise, mister," she said, and with many a laugh and cheer we went our separate ways — she to the campanile, I to the Morris chair.

ing activities. Highlight of the queen's brief reign is her crowning during the halftime of the football game.

Don't hold your breath waiting for the homecoming queen to be announced. Rather, help your organization build its float for the homecoming parade, Nov. 22.

A PERSON GETS as much out of something as he puts in it, so take an active part in the homecoming activities — and enjoy yourself.

If the above rule holds true, Arkansas University, Tech's homecoming game opponent, deserves a royal welcome. When the Raiders sallied into the Ozarks last fall, the students came back with a plaque welcoming them as the SWC's newest member, and the football players with a turkey apiece.

THE GAME OUGHT to be a good one, as the Raiders will be out for revenge for the 47-26 setback that the Razorbacks handed them last year.

No matter what the final score, one thing is sure — Techsians are going to have a good time during homecoming.

Bricker Foresees Lack of Fuel As World Energy Needs Grow

by LEE SULLINGER

Unless a method of harnessing nuclear energy is developed, the constantly increasing demand on fuel reserves will someday exhaust the world's supply of energy, Dr. Clark Bricker, associate professor of chemistry at Princeton University said Tuesday night.

DR. BRICKER voiced this opinion in his lecture on "The World's Energy Needs."

"As the world population rose, the energy demand naturally increased also," said Dr. Bricker. "And in the last century, which saw the Industrial Revolution begin, we used more energy than in the preceding eighteen and one half centuries combined. The world is demanding three per cent more energy each year. Also, the potential development of the under-privileged countries of the world may increase the demand for more energy."

USING THE past records as a method of estimating the increased future demands for energy, Dr. Bricker pointed out that if depletion of capital reserves continues at the present rate, the United States will have used up almost all of its reserves of fossil fuels by the year 2000.

"WE HAVE many ways of obtaining energy," said Dr. Bricker, such as burning wood, farm wastes, harnessing water power and using solar heat collectors, but the world is demanding more energy each year than it can readily accumulate. This means that by the year 2030 the world will have used up almost all of its fossil fuel.

DR. BRICKER pointed out that nuclear energy is the answer to the problem. The energy derived from nuclear fission could be made to supply the world's power for a considerable length of time after fossil fuel gives out," he stated.

"However," Dr. Bricker added, "the energy derived from nuclear fusion can potentially be much greater than the power derived from nuclear fission."

"If a method of fusing deuterium, which is in sea water, can be perfected, then one gallon of sea water will contain as much potential energy as 30 gallons of petroleum."

HE POINTED out that research is being done on a type of "magnetic bottle" called a stellarator. It is still in the embryo stage and is not yet operational. Dr. Bricker stressed the necessity of starting now and expanding the project into a race against the time when we no longer would have reserves of fuel.

"This is what we could've looked pretty sharp this noon," Weaver said.

Raiders Work Hard For Baylor Contest

"We've really been getting after it this week and, as a result, we look a lot better," Coach DeWitt Weaver said Wednesday.

"This is what we couldn't do last week and we needed it. We've looked pretty sharp this afternoon," Weaver said.

THE RAIDERS went through a long, intensive scrimmage, working on both offensive and defensive weapons. All three teams took a turn on defense and then the No. 2 and No. 3 units spent more time than usual on offense.

Tech's crippled list was much improved and it was thought that everyone would be available for full service Saturday. The only players held out of action were guard Jerry Don Stockton and halfback Floyd Dellinger.

Otherwise all the Raiders were able to scrimmage, including tackles Phil Williams and Jim Henderson, end Jerry Selridge and halfback Ronnie Rice, who bruised a hip in the TCU game Saturday.

THE RAIDERS have more than one reason to look good Saturday. The game with the Bears will be on a regional television hook-up, and it will be Dad's Day to boot.

The Raider's main task Saturday will be stopping the bull-like rushes of Baylor's Larry Hickman. Leading rusher this season in the Southwest Conference, Hickman has been this way before — and he left a lot of cleat marks in Jones Stadium last fall as reminders.

THE BEARS who exploit the "winged T" with their strong passing threat in the form of Buddy Humphrey, top Bear tosser, are expected to concentrate on both the ground and air routes.

Last year's contest was won by the Bears 15-14.

RALPH'S RAMBLINGS

by Ralph W. Carpenter

Raider performances in the first two ball games were indications of what we all hoped for — a well-balanced, fighting team. However, their last two efforts have taken some of the luster from them.

Of course, the Raiders were not expected to defeat either Texas or TCU. They were underdogs in both contests. They did an acceptable job against Texas, holding them to a 12-7 score — but they let down against TCU. This is not like the Raiders of last year and through the first three games of this year. I don't think we will see this lack of fighting spirit again this season.

The Baylor game would be a good time for the Raiders to prove they still mean business.

I think they will.

★—RWC—★

ABOUT A WEEK before the Texas-Oklahoma game, Sooner Coach Bud Wilkinson was quoted as saying the Longhorn contest would be the proving ground of Oklahoma's 1958 season. He said, "It's always the best way we have of finding out what kind of team we're going to have."

After that loss to Texas Saturday, Big Bud is probably kinda worried.

★—RWC—★

Time out for a personal note: "Truly one of the nicest guys you ever hope to meet," I think that pretty well sums up Bill Holmes, Tech's Director of Sports Publicity. Bill is always busy — but he always has time to lend a helping hand — especially to confused sports writers like me.

★—RWC—★

Had only 2 right out of six picks last week. Still hoping:

Tech 13, Baylor 8 — Raiders win a tough one.

TCU 15, Texas A&M 7 — Martin's men roll on.

SMU 22, Rice 13 — Ponies pluck the wise ole Owls.

Arkansas 13, Texas 8 — ??? ?

Bears Sharpen Attack For Raiders

Sam Boyd's Baylor Bears roll into town Saturday to battle the Red Raiders.

THE BOYD coached crew is 2-2 lead, has beaten Arkansas and for the season. The Bears, in a Hardin-Simmons and lost to Mite for the Southwest Conference and Duke.

They boast two of the leading backs in the conference, at least statistic wise. Larry Hickman, the big bear fullback roamed for 92 yards against Duke last week and it gave him the lead in ball carrying. Hickman has 263 yards on 56 runs into the line.

The Bears have moved to a new style of attack this fall, deserting the Multiple-T offense for the new "Baylor Multiple Wing T," so called because it always employs a man-under and because its variations may include one, two or more "wings."

BUDDY HUMPHREY, the Baylor man-under rammed into first place in passing. Humphrey passed for 55 yards against Duke and it brought his total for the season to 358. He leads in completions with 35 out of 67 attempts.

The Bears have been concentrating on offensive maneuvers this week in drills. Coach Boyd said, "The boys realize that a lot of work must be done and are really getting after it."

BOYD LOST 22 of 34 lettermen from the 1957 squad which was a disappointment — winless in conference play. He bolstered his coaching staff with the addition of Chuck Purvis, from Purdue and Tom Pruett from the high school ranks.

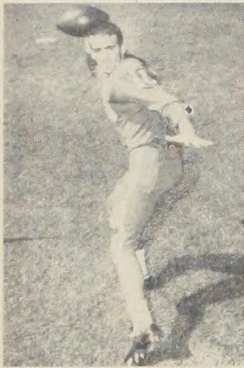

The Baylor boys have always been rough on Tech. Through 1946 the Raiders held a 4-3-1 margin in the rivalry that began in 1929. But the Bears have won the last eight contests to pull well in front, 11 wins to 4.

LOPSIDEDNESS in the win-loss column is little indication of the way that most of the games were played. In four of the Bear victories the Raiders have held leads, twice being ahead in the fourth quarter.
