

Rep. McAlister discusses provisions on education of proposed constitution

By JEFF LUCKY
UD Reporter

State Rep. R. B. McAlister explained the tentative provisions on education of the proposed new state constitution to Tech students and faculty members Saturday in a session sponsored by the local chapter of Common Cause.

McAlister confirmed that sections of Article VII on education which discuss the Permanent University Fund have remained relatively undisturbed while the ad valorem tax proposal for funding several universities, like Tech, excluded from the revenues of the fund, was completely replaced.

The 21 non-Permanent Fund schools will draw their support from money that shall be allocated from the state's general fund by the legislature. The new provision reads that the total amount allocated to the schools shall not be less than the amount generated by the Permanent Fund annually for the use of Texas A&M and the University of Texas.

THE LUBBOCK LEGISLATOR estimated that this formula will assure Tech about $3 to $4 million annually, leaving the school, along with others in the state, up to $2 million short of individual projected financial needs for basic capital improvement and adjustment of physical facilities.

"This measure has been approved by the education committee with the understanding that the legislature will have to make up that difference in some form," McAlister said.

He did not indicate what revenue source might be utilized to provide the additional money. McAlister said that the new funding proposal was supported by university presidents from institutions throughout the state.

THE DEFEATED AD VALOREM funding source would have provided Tech with a projected $5.4 million annually.

Responding to a question from the floor about the basic inequity of giving UT $20 million annually (its portion of Permanent Fund money last year) and only $3-5 million to schools like Tech and the University of Houston, McAlister cited a lack of voting punch.

"We just don't have the votes to do it (open up the fund to schools other than UT and A&M)," he said.

Other changes in the education proposal included the elimination of a clause prohibiting state support of private (especially religious) schools or their students below the college level. McAlister said the section was eliminated because the committee felt it was redundant in light of the state bill of rights which also prohibits state support of non-public schools.

He said the tuition equalization act will probably remain in effect although he expressed doubts about its constitutionality. The act provides tuition subsidies for students at such private schools as Baylor and Texas Christian.

CHANGES IN PROVISIONS affecting education below the college level include an amendment by education committee chairman Dan Kubiak, asking that the State Board of Education be composed entirely of elected members. It is currently made up of elected and appointed members.

McAlister took the last portion of his speaking time to outline a proposal of his own he hopes to put before the entire Constitutional Convention as an addition to Article VII.

"I want a 10-year review board on education included in the constitution," he said.

Citing the effort of ex-Governor John Connally's Committee of 24 in the late Sixties, McAlister said he hopes to formalize the procedure of examining education as a whole on a regular basis.

"We are on the verge of a revolution in education in this state and throughout the country," he said. "Every child learns differently and our curriculums are going to be changing radically in the next few years.

"WE NEED TO EDUCATE the 2, 3, 4 and 5-year-olds."

McAlister spoke warmly of the educational needs of children as individuals and charged the current educational system with ill-preparing Texas youth to excel at their individual talents and grow in their own intellectual vein.

"We are teaching the rabbit to fly and the bird to burrow like a squirrel," McAlister said.

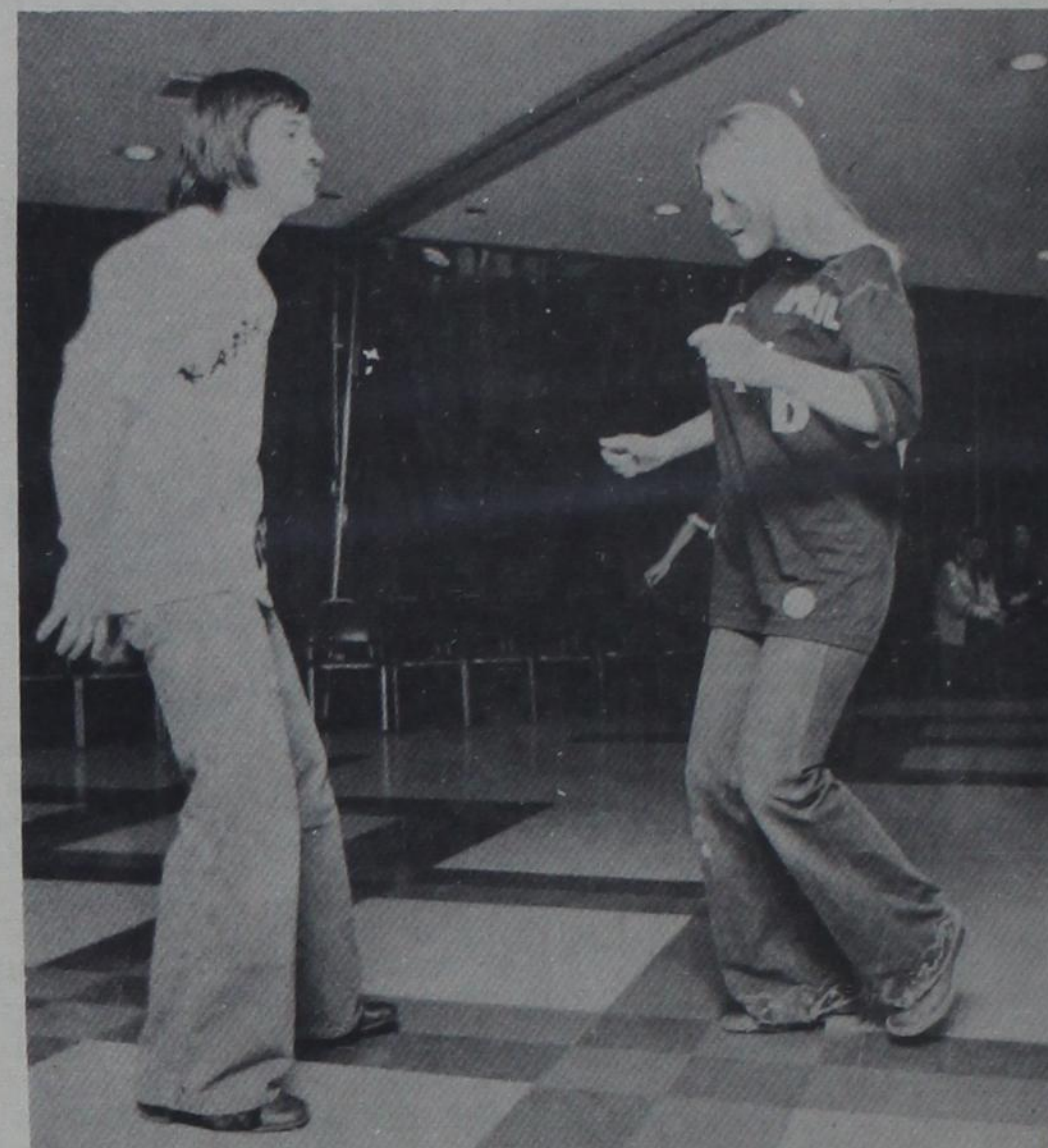

"A lot of people are going to say the child is not a ward of the state and I agree.

"But if you think the working mother is going away, you're wrong," he added.

He cited a growing rate of young suicides in the state and said 13,000 children and young people are receiving psychiatric help in Tarrant County alone.

McALISTER SAID he had discussed the proposal with child psychologists and educators from Texas who agreed that such a review period as he proposed is needed.

"If we don't change our educational system to cope with these problems then, statistically, we are going to hell," McAlister said.

Parking permits available for commuter car pools

By SANDY MARTIN
UD Reporter

Fred Wehmeyer, associate vice president for administrative services, announced Friday that parking permits are now available for commuting students who form car pools.

Wehmeyer said 20 spaces in the east side of the Stangel parking lot have been set aside for car pool vehicles. According to the student car pool policy, reserve parking is available for car pools with three or more participants. Wehmeyer said up to six parking decals will be issued for the same parking space.

"We settled on three as the minimum so that it would encourage more people to form car pools," said Wehmeyer. He also said a car pool arrangement for faculty and staff had been operating since last summer.

Gene Lake, traffic and parking counselor, said students in one car pool should all come to his office together. They will need to turn in their commuter permits and receive the special reserved parking permit for the Stangel lot.

Lake said the reserved space fee is $6.60 and each commuter will be refunded $2.50 for his permit. "If there are six in the car pool, each person will only have to pay $1.10. You can't beat that," he said.

Although each person in the car pool will have a parking permit, only one vehicle may be on campus during the day. According to Wehmeyer, abuse of the provision will result in revocation of the reserved parking permits for all participants in the car pool.

Wehmeyer pointed out that the Stangel parking will be closer to the interior of the campus than either commuter lot. The closeness of parking combined with the inexpensive permit is designed to be advantageous to students.

The Student Association, in an effort to promote car pools and the saving of energy, is offering to match students with others who would like to form a pool.

A car pool form may be picked up in the SA office or a student may call and give the information. The form requires the name, address and phone number of the student. There is also room to indicate if the student wants riders or wants to be a rider. The questionnaire also asks if the student is willing to share cost and how many passengers he is able to carry.

Pat Moody, SA secretary, said students will be matched according to the area of the town they live in. Those unable to come by the office, may call 742-6151 and leave their information or ask questions about the car pool.

Lake said, "It's ready now. All we need are students to come in and get their permits."

West Texas truckers hope for better times

By CHUCK LANEHART
UD Reporter

When things are looking bad, truck drivers in this part of the country traditionally have passed it off with a saying: "Oh, well, it's rough all over the West," and hope for things to get better.

But recent economic pressures on the industry and the current independent trucker's strike, plus subsequent violence, have made things rough all across the nation. And truck drivers passing through Lubbock are determined that things must get better.

A PROPOSED SETTLEMENT of the strike announced last week in Washington provided for the delivery to truck stops 100 per cent of the diesel fuel needed by drivers and permission for truckers to get more money for the cargo they haul in direct proportion to increased fuel costs.

However, most West Texas independent drivers are reportedly not buying the settlement. Instead, they are joining thousands of their fellow truckers across the nation in refusing to "keep on truckin'," holding out for lower fuel prices and higher speed limits.

The strike has not affected Lubbock to a great extent, largely because there are no interstate highways passing through the city, said Jimmy Cauthorn, manager of Rip Griffin's Truck Stop No. 1 at 4609 Ave. A. But the truckers who stop at Griffin's to rest, eat and hopefully refuel are full of tales of the effects of the strike in other parts of the state and nation.

ONE GASOLINE TANKER rig pulled into Griffin's last week with a hole from a small caliber pistol bullet just above the saddle tank. The violence which has permeated the nation's highways in conjunction with the strike has prompted many of the truckers to drive only during the daylight hours.

"I can see the independent's position and I feel for 'em," said a burly company trucker from Colorado. "But I don't think this violence bit is accomplishing anything. I don't really think the independents are responsible for it, either."

Most of the truck drivers at Griffin's expressed disgust at the entire situation of higher fuel prices and lowered speed limits, and blamed the government for the biggest part of their troubles.

"I DON'T THINK the government realizes what the trucking industry means to this country," one independent driver said. "If this strike continues, we could really bring the country to its knees. And it could be solved easily if those jokers in Washington would just make a few changes."

Whatever materializes from the strike settlements, one thing is clear: the truck drivers of this country are determined to get back on the highway, with things a little less rough all over the West.

Truck stop

West Texas truck drivers have not gone on strike like their fellow truckers across the nation. However, the area truckers are discouraged by high diesel fuel prices and slower speed limits approved by the government.

City K-9 squad has plenty of bite

By KAREN MURPHEY
UD Reporter

The old saying that a "dog's bark is worse than his bite" certainly doesn't refer to the Lubbock K-9 Squad. Should one of the police department's German Shepherds bark, you can be sure that he has plenty of bite to back it up.

The K-9 Squad of the Lubbock police was established in 1961 and its present representatives are Bud, Flash, Oso, Cesó and Prince. They are registered German Shepherds and each was donated to the department by local citizens, said Officer J. A. McCauley, head of the K-9 division.

OWNERS OF SOME of the dogs began to realize that their dogs were mean, and they wanted to give them away.

In another instance, a farmer living outside of Lubbock had a dog who enjoyed chasing sheep. The man was afraid that one of his neighbors might shoot the dog, so he donated him to the police department.

McCauley said the K-9 Squad only accepts male dogs of one to two years of age. However, one 11-month-old puppy already weighed 100 pounds and the rule was bent in his case.

The dogs are first examined by a veterinarian and checked for any physical defects. Some German Shepherds have defective hip joints and this disqualifies the dogs for police work, McCauley said.

After the thorough examination, the dogs begin training. Training sessions are held twice a day, five days a week for 16 weeks.

The dogs are first taught strict obedience by their assigned handler. Then the canines are put through an "agitation" course in which a police officer, dressed in a thickly padded uniform, bats at the dogs and agitates them. This trains the dogs to attack and makes them meaner, said McCauley.

OTHER PHASES of the training include an obstacle course, exposure to gunfire and building search.

Gibson's (discount store) allows the policemen to use their warehouse during the training period. An officer hides in the building and a dog searches until he finds the man.

Even after the 16-week period of extensive training, the dogs are required to drill every Saturday afternoon at Mackenzie Park, said McCauley.

The dogs live with their handlers and come to work when the officer does. The dogs must be available to be called at any time they may be needed.

The police department pays for the canines' food and medical expenses.

"The dogs are city equipment, and the masters are responsible for keeping them in top-notch condition, just as an officer would care for his gun," McCauley said.

A police dog is rewarded for doing a good job by being petted by his master, to whom he is totally devoted.

"YOU TOUCH THAT officer and you're dead," said McCauley. The dogs are trained to attack at the sight of a gun and will even attack the other policemen.

The five handlers of the canines are officers Wayne Martin, Larry P. Downey, Daniel Emerine, Frank Barnhill and Johnny Mowrey.

At home, the dogs are friendly and playful with officers and their families.

Martin said his five-year-old daughter rides his dog, and the animal plays gently with her. The dog is very protective of the family, Martin said.

"The dogs don't attack unknown females and children as fiercely as they do males. They seem to sense the difference," said Martin.

The police dogs are transported in regular city vehicles with the back seat removed and platforms installed on which the dogs stand or sit. They are kept on a six-foot leash.

THE K-9 SQUAD is used mainly to search buildings in burglary cases and the dogs have caught several burglars in recent years.

In searching a building, the officer walks down the hall, allows the dog to search each room and saves himself a lot of walking, said McCauley.

Because the dogs will attack immediately, the officer must be sure that all innocent persons are cleared from the area before releasing the dog.

An animal can be retrained should his handler be transferred or killed in the line of duty, but it takes two weeks to a month for the dog to adjust to and accept another handler.

Prince, nine years old, is the oldest of the K-9 Squad. He is beginning to suffer from arthritis and will probably be retired before long, McCauley said.

A REPLACEMENT FOR HIM has already been given obedience training and is being kept in a kennel until he is needed.

McCauley said a retirement ceremony was held several years ago in front of City Hall for a member of the K-9 Squad named Fritz.

Fritz received a service pin and a box of dog biscuits for his six years of working with the Lubbock police. He is still alive and belongs to a Lubbock resident now.

The Fort Worth Police Department has a special cemetery for "the brave and valiant dogs of the Fort Worth K-9 Squad." McCauley said "we're not quite up to the Fort Worth department yet," as Lubbock has no such cemetery.

LEGAL RAP

The average student pursues and completes his academic career without knowing the pain and frustration of a major law suit. My experience as Student Legal Counsel also indicates that less than three per cent of the student population can expect to be indicted for a felony. Most students are never involved in expensive litigation or felony criminal cases even as witnesses.

It is the traffic ticket or the claim involving less than $100 that usually confronts a student and results in the first encounter with the necessity for legal assistance. Traffic tickets coupled with practical suggestions in dealing with them comprised last week's column; today the resolution of small claims is the subject for discussion.

Historically, a tendency has existed to ignore claims less than several hundred dollars; they are frequently considered insignificant within the framework of the legal system. Although it is advisable, it is difficult as well as expensive to retain an attorney to assist in resolving such claims. Yet, it can certainly be established that to the average student, the amounts involved are significant. In my opinion, they are the most important kinds of cases because of the difficulty in getting professional assistance to resolve the matter.

One of the most frustrating experiences for an attorney is to explain to a client the problems incurred in attempting to seek relief through negotiation or court. It is also tough to explain that in some cases there is no legal cause of action. A person who feels he has been wronged expects to be reimbursed immediately. What does an attorney do to satisfy this request for relief? What sources are available to utilize in the resolution of small claims?

Of course, the first course of action is to come to the legal office for general guidance and direction. It should be kept in mind that getting the money back regardless of the nature of the problem can be a matter of weeks. After the initial interview and determination of facts, the other party is contacted. The usual procedure is to accomplish this by letter stating the student's position and requesting a reply within at least 10 days. Naturally, it is hoped that through this first contact a channel of communication can be opened that will result in an equitable settlement. Surprisingly, a large percentage of cases are resolved in that manner; however, the situation is not hopeless even if the offending party does not answer the letter or refuses to meet the student's demand. Small Claims Court is an available and helpful forum for relief in contested cases.

Article 2460a, Vernon's Texas Statutes, creates and establishes in each county a court of lesser jurisdiction known as the Small Claims Court. It has authority to consider actions for the recovery of money by any person where the amount involved does not exceed $150; however, claims for wages or labor are allowable up to $200. A justice of the peace serves as the judge.

Most persons are aware of the fact that the party filing suit is referred to as the plaintiff and the party against whom the action is filed is referred to as the defendant. As a rule, all actions must be brought in the county where the defendant lives. Causes of action are initiated by the filing of a simple sworn statement of claim sometimes referred to as a verified petition. The petition can be prepared by the legal office, or it can even be accomplished by filling out a form maintained in the justice of the peace office. Filing is only a matter of taking the petition to the JP office, presenting it to the clerk and paying a filing fee. The Small Claims Court clerk provides an information sheet for plaintiffs; it is a helpful concise step-by-step accounting of how to proceed in the court.

The filing fee is $5 and the maximum court costs that can be expected even in the event of appeal is $10.

After a case is filed, a copy of the petition is served on the defendant. The defendant has approximately 10 days to answer the suit; if he does not, a judgment is entered on behalf of the plaintiff. In the event the defendant files an answer, the next step is the court hearing.

It is the responsibility of the plaintiff to request the trial date and to push for a speedy hearing. The court does nothing if the plaintiff fails to meet this responsibility.

A plaintiff can expect it to take three to four weeks between the date of filing and the hearing date even where both parties pursue speedy trial. In most cases, it takes three to four months to obtain a trial. The statute is unusual in that it states that it is the duty of the judge to develop all of the facts in the particular case. He may ask questions of any witness or party to the suit, or upon his own motion may summon any party to appear as a witness in the suit. In other words, the judge plays a significant role in the prosecution and settlement of cases.

In addition to checking the law on small claims courts, I recently interviewed a local justice of the peace pertaining to the practical operation of the court. He indicated that the vast majority of plaintiffs are not represented by attorneys. It is usually the defendant who hires an attorney. The judge assured me that every effort is made to protect parties who represent themselves. He also stated that a large majority of the cases are settled in the judge's chamber.

The court files judgments on behalf of plaintiffs who win their cases, and it is then necessary to collect on the judgment. It is difficult to do so, but it was stated to me that the local rate of successful collection is approximately 60 per cent.

A dissatisfied party may appeal to the County Court where he is entitled to a new trial. The procedure is the same prescribed for the Small Claims Court. It is specifically provided that the judgment of the County Court is final.

It is true that judgments are sometimes difficult to satisfy, but I urge students to seek legal advice to determine if there is a legal cause of action. If there is, I contend that a student has an obligation as well as a right to demand relief within the framework of the legal system. The Small Claims Court information sheet concludes with the statement, "Your justice of the peace will make every effort to effect a just settlement of your claim."

I have no reason to doubt the sincerity of that statement.

'I JUST DON'T SEEM TO HAVE BEEN CUT OUT FOR THIS KIND OF WORK!'

WASHINGTON

merry-go-round

by Jack Anderson

Hoover and Hughes

WASHINGTON — Frustrated with Mafia infestation of Las Vegas, the late J. Edgar Hoover schemed to turn the Dunes Hotel over to Howard Hughes in hopes of ridding it of suspected underworld influences.

As sometimes happened, the pugnacious old crime fighter refused to let anything get in his way, including firm Justice Department antitrust guidelines against Hughes' purchase of the gaudy Nevada pleasure palace.

This strange venture by the FBI director into corporate takeovers has been described to us by those close to the case who had access to secret FBI memoranda involved.

We have already told from confidential Senate Watergate studies how Attorney General John Mitchell was also working in 1970 to throw the Dunes to Hughes. It has been said, over heated denials by Mitchell, that Hughes was to get the Dunes in partial return for his $100,000 gift to President Nixon's political treasure chest.

The FBI director's motives were entirely different. Hoover was miffed over Nevada hotelmen's suits against FBI bugging and over the skimming of casino profits by the Mafia which Hoover knew about but could not prove in court. The aging G-man wanted the Mafia out at all costs.

Hoover would have preferred to throw the Dunes to the Hilton or Webb interests or some other less controversial businessman, but Hughes was already leading the bidders. The FBI head, therefore, cast his lot with Hughes even though Justice's antitrust division already had turned down Hughes on other deals in the Nevada gambling capital.

Justice's antitrust chief at the time, Richard McLaren, learned of Hoover's and Mitchell's efforts and bitterly opposed them on grounds that subverting antitrust laws was not the way to eradicate a crime syndicate.

Our sources have seen FBI memos showing that McLaren charged Hoover with misrepresenting the antitrust division's views. The FBI, according to the memos, countercharged, saying it was McLaren who was doing the misrepresenting.

As the FBI chief and McLaren warred, with Mitchell playing a supporting role for the Hughes takeover, the situation resolved itself. As we reported earlier, Hughes learned that the Dunes ownership had given him dubious profit and loss data, and the whole deal fell through.

FOOTNOTE: Nevada officials and Dunes management have insisted that the Mafia did not control the Dunes then and has no influence on it now. McLaren, now a federal judge, flatly refused all comment. At FBI headquarters, a spokesman said Hoover had never taken a position on the Dunes sale. The FBI had merely forwarded information to the Justice Department from an informant that Hughes was interested in the hotel and that certain federal agencies would not stand in the way of the deal.

Nixon pension

Despite President Nixon's firm resolve to stick out his full term, sources close to him believe he would resign if faced with certain impeachment.

Impeachment would deprive him of his $60,000-a-year pension. The pay-raise bill, now awaiting congressional action, will increase pensions. Under the bill, the President's pension would increase around $15,000 over the next three years.

Rather than give up a $75,000-a-year pension check, our sources say, the President would resign if he could make a deal to avoid prosecution. House Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills has already offered to introduce legislation granting him immunity from prosecution.

Mass Communications Week set

Professional men and women with distinguished careers in telecommunications, journalism, public relations, advertising and photography will share their expertise with students, faculty, industry and the public during Mass Communications Week at Tech Feb. 17-23.

Top U.S. executives of ABC Radio, A. C. Nielson Company, the National Cable Television Association, the Los Angeles Times and other communications industry leaders will speak and participate in seminars and panel discussions during the week.

Representing European advertising executives will be William G. Tragos of Tragos-Bonnange-Wiesendanger-Ajroldi, a Paris, France advertising agency.

The week concludes with the second annual Thomas Jefferson Award dinner Feb. 22 when Gov. Edwin W. Edwards of Louisiana receives the award from Felix R. McKnight, president of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association (TDNA) and co-publisher and editor of the Dallas Times Herald.

ABC Radio president Harold L. Neal Jr. of New York City will be the luncheon speaker Feb. 22, Telecommunications Day, and David Foster, president, National Cable Television Association, Washington, D.C., also will speak that day.

Assistant Managing Editor John Foley of the Los Angeles Times will be the luncheon speaker on Journalism Day, Wednesday, Feb. 20, public relations executive Richard M. Perdue of Texas Instruments, Inc., Dallas, will speak at noon Feb. 18, the day designated for public relations.

L. F. Ostrom, vice president of A. C. Nielson Company, Northbrook, Ill., will be the opening speaker Feb. 21 at the World of Advertising Seminar. Journalism Day speakers, in addition to Foley, include Ben R. Morris, president of the State Record Company, Columbia, S.C., and Bronson Havard of the Dallas Times Herald.

The company Morris represents is the parent corporation of eight subsidiaries, owners and operators of newspapers and television stations.

At the Journalism Day luncheon Wallace E. Garets of Green Lake, N.Y., former chairman of the Journalism Department, will be inducted into the University's Mass Communications Hall of Fame.

The World of Advertising seminar will feature lectures by Ostrom, Tragos and Kirk Carr Jr. of the Detroit offices of the Wall Street Journal.

Carr sold advertising for the Lynn County News in Tahoka, Texas, and KBFM Radio, Lubbock, before joining the Wall Street Journal in 1968.

James R. Theiss, vice president, Blair Television, New York, will join Foster and Neal as speakers for Telecommunications Day.

Speakers for Feb. 18, with emphasis on public relations, are Eddie Barker of Eddie Barker and Associates of Dallas, Joe Riordan, division public relations supervisor, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Austin, and Perdue.

Attention is focused on photography and film on Feb. 19. Works by Tech students, the Professional Photographers of America and the South Plains Professional Photographers will be on display.

The theme for this year's week of activities is "Mass Communications At This Particular Point in Time."

Last year's Thomas Jefferson Award went to Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina, chairman of the U.S. Senate committee investigating the Watergate affair.

The dinner at which the award is presented is sponsored by Tech, the TDNA, the Texas Association of Broadcasters, the Texas Press Association, and the Mass Communications Advisory Committee.

The award is presented to honor the public official who has done the most to defend and preserve the freedom of news media.

Panel discussions with the day's speakers participating will be conducted each afternoon with receptions honoring speakers each night until the Friday night awards banquet.

'Birth of a Nation' to highlight Photography-Film Day at Tech

By CINDY PARKER UD Staff

"Birth of a Nation," a 1915 classic silent film, will be shown at 7:30 p.m. February 19 in the Coronado Room of the University Center to culminate Photography-Film Day, second day of Mass Communications Week, February 18-22, at Tech.

"One reason we chose 'Birth of a Nation' is because it has never been shown full-length in Lubbock before," said Ashton Thornhill, photography teaching assistant in charge of Photography-Film Day.

Directed by D. W. Griffith, "Birth of a Nation" was the first feature-length film, running over two hours.

"The film concerns the United States after the Civil War," Thornhill said. "It's a racial film during the time the Ku Klux Klan was becoming powerful."

Randy Rudd, Tech student, contributed the film, "Birth of a Nation," for use during Photography-Film Day from his private collection of films, Thornhill said.

Still photography will also be on exhibit in the Coronado Room during all of Mass Communications Week. Exhibits will be contributed by beginning and advanced photography students at Tech and by two professional groups.

The two professional groups contributing exhibits are the Professional Photographers of America, who are showing portraits and South Plains Professional Photographers, who are exhibiting commercial photography and some portraits, Thornhill said.

Mass Communications Week starts Monday, February 18, with Public Relations Day. Tuesday is Photography-Film Day; Wednesday, Journalism Day; Thursday, Advertising Day; and Friday, February 22, Telecommunications Day.

The final event of Mass Communications Week will be the Thomas Jefferson Awards Banquet Friday evening. "The Thomas Jefferson award honors the person who has contributed the most to maintaining freedom of the press the previous year," Thornhill said. This year's recipient of the award is Governor Edwin W. Edwards of Louisiana.

The following is a time schedule of the events of Photography-Film Day. All the exhibits and films are free and open to Tech students and the public: 10:00 a.m., "CLIO Awards"; 11:00, "Trip to the Moon"; 11:25, "In Search of Ancient Astronauts"; 12:30 p.m., "Yentra"; 1:00, Break; 1:30, "Sherlock, Jr."; 2:30, "Bach's Transmogrified"; 3:00, "CLIO Awards"; 4:00, "Dream of Wild Horses"; "Horses"; and "Portrait of a Horse"; 5:00, Break; 7:30, "Birth of a Nation."

Skylab 3 returns to earth safely

ABOARD USS NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Skylab 3's astronauts overcame a leaky rocket system problem Friday and returned safely to earth, splashing down in the Pacific Ocean to successfully complete an 84-day mission, history's longest space voyage.

"Good to be back, glad to be home," was the report from astronaut Gerald P. Carr, William R. Pogue and Dr. Edward G. Gibson minutes after their Apollo command ship landed on choppy seas 176 miles southwest of San Diego, Calif., and within 3 1/2 miles of the prime recovery ship, the USS New Orleans.

One of two rocket thruster systems designed to control the spacecraft developed a leak less than two hours before splashdown, forcing the astronauts to come in with only one thruster system operating.

Splashdown came at 11:17 a.m. EDT, 84 days, 1 hour and 16 minutes after the Skylab 3 mission began.

It was the end of an era of manned space exploration and the first splashdown of an American space crew in almost a decade that was not carried live on national television.

In Washington, President Nixon hailed the astronauts and said they had completed "one of the scientifically most productive endeavors in human history."

"I feel great," said Gibson as he stood on the deck of the recovery ship.

The astronauts were helped from their spacecraft, but a doctor said they suffered no apparent, severe effects from their long exposure to the deconditioning effects of space weightlessness.

"They're a little bit shaky," the doctor said. "But they're in fine shape."

Carr, Pogue and Gibson traveled 34 1/2 million miles, orbited the earth 1,214 times and collected scientific information—photos, electronic tapes and biological samples — that will give and provide knowledge about the sun, the earth and about man itself.

Nuns support amendment

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two nuns who say their Christian duty is to "fight for justice wherever there is oppression" are campaigning in Florida for the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) to the U.S. Constitution.

Sister Helen Duggan, southeastern administrator for the Adrian Dominican order, says the ERA is "a very fundamental issue in terms of human persons. As religious women, I hope we can bring new dimension to the struggle. It's just too important an issue not to be involved."

Thursday, Ohio became the 33rd state to ratify the ERA. Five more states must ratify it before it becomes law. The ERA provides that "equality of rights under the law shall not be abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex."

Sister Carolyn Royal, a social sciences teacher at the Rosarian Academy here, says many men and women of the Roman Catholic Church are involving themselves in secular issues.

The nuns have joined the local ERA Coalition and speak to various groups in an effort to build support for the amendment.

The Florida Legislature, which rejected the ERA last year, will reconsider the amendment during its April session.

"Certainly, some congregations give you more latitude than others. As far back as 1968 our order (the Adrian Dominicans) adopted a very strong resolution to give support to sisters who joined picket lines or in other ways took an unpopular stand," Sister Carolyn says.

The sisters say they have not run into opposition from their superiors in the Church.

Commission to supervise SA elections

According to Student Association sources, there will be a student election commission supervising the Tech elections this semester.

The University Daily reported Friday that the local chapter of the League of Women Voters will supervise the elections. However, SA officials said the League of Women Voters would be subordinate to the student election commission and their duties will be to watch the polls as a security measure.

"The Prisoner of Second Avenue"
Feb. 18, 8 p.m. Municipal Auditorium

IMOGENE COCA plays a working urban wife, beset by an array of city problems that would confound a Job, while KING DONOVAN is her husband, who seems to be enjoying a nervous breakdown that allows him to indulge in art therapy, in the long-run Neil Simon comedy, "The Prisoner of Second Avenue", which ran for 788 performances on Broadway. Out of a melange of city-induced problems, Mr. Simon has extracted a myriad of laughs, chuckles and guffaws, which impelled Clive Barnes, the illustrious critic of the N.Y. Times to call the play, "Gloriously funny!", while Time Magazine said, "It is Simon's funniest play since the "Odd Couple".

Energy experts to discuss current crisis

Four of the nation's most knowledgeable energy experts, including nuclear physicist Edward Teller, will talk to West Texans this month about the energy crisis.

The South Plains Section of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, in cooperation with Tech Institute for Energy Research, initiated the plans for the Feb. 20 meeting on "The Energy Problem: What Can Be Done."

Dr. Stanley R. Liberty, the meeting chairman, said that a major purpose of the meeting is to help the West Texas community become aware of potential solutions to the energy problem and of current and future research and development efforts in energy areas.

technical people," Liberty emphasized, "although there will be an additional benefit in bringing together the highest quality of technical expertise in a professional assembly."

The program is specifically designed, however, to bring about public understanding of science. All persons interested will be invited to attend the all-day session in Lubbock's Municipal Auditorium.

In addition to Teller, those participating will include: Terry D. Bauer of Syn Fuels Services, speaking on coal gasification; Aden Meinel of the University of Arizona's Optical Sciences Center, speaking on solar energy; Harold W. Sohns of the U.S. Bureau of Mines, speaking on oil from shale; Morton C. Smith of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, speaking on geothermal energy.

Tech faculty members participating will include: civil engineering prof. Kishor Mehta, discussing wind energy; chemical engineering prof. James Halligan, energy from solid waste; visiting prof. of electrical engineering Karl Selin, energy conservation.

Teller, of the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory at Livermore, Calif., was an early researcher in studies of thermonuclear reactions. His current research interests are concerned with peaceful uses for nuclear energy.

The Lubbock meeting will begin at 9 a.m. and end at 5 p.m. There is no charge.

Dr. John R. Bradford, dean of the Tech College of Engineering, is the director of the Institute for Energy Research.

"It is our purpose to acquaint the public with facts relating to the energy problem," he said. "With the facts, the public can make better decisions regarding the potential sources of energy and where research dollars should be spent to bring the greatest benefit to the public."

He said the meeting will take place during Engineers' Week and that it was appropriate for engineers to use one day to bring to the public a greater understanding of the problems of technology which must be solved before technology can be used to develop sufficient sources of energy.

"We know, for instance," he said, "that there is enough oil in shale to last us a thousand years, but we don't know how to go about getting that oil at a reasonable cost."

"There is enough oil now," he added, "but the problem is a dislocation of petroleum supplies."

Even with sufficient oil for today's needs, according to Bradford, there are alternatives to fossil fuels and these should be explored. With wind energy, he said, most West Texans might think first of the outdated windmill — but wind energy has a much greater potential for man's needs.

"We have arranged this program," said Bradford, "to bring the general public together with scientists and engineers in a comprehensive one-day conference."

Dr. Darrell Vines is chairman of the South Plains Section of the IEEE.

Jack Baker

Councilman announces candidacy for mayor

Lubbock City Councilman Jack Baker announced Friday his candidacy for the mayor's office.

Baker is the second to enter the mayor's race. He will run against attorney Roy Bass, who announced his candidacy on Jan. 28.

Baker said his number one qualification, is that he is a businessman. He also said that City Council experience is necessary for a mayor, and he had been on the council for four years.

"Lubbock city government is a $33 million business and requires a man who has a business background and an intimate knowledge of the city," Baker said.

As a Councilman, Baker said, he backed the Canyon Lakes project, the airport development and the Civic Center.

He said he has been active in city affairs for "many, many years."

Baker is in the advertising business and is a past president of the Lubbock Advertising Federation. He is also a past director of the 10th District of the American Advertising Federation.

Prior to the May 1970 tornado which struck Lubbock, Baker was Disaster Chairman for the Red Cross, a position which he filled the night of the tornado. Nine days after the tornado, he was elected to the City Council.

Among the many civic positions he has filled, Baker has been publicity and executive director of the United Fund since its inception in Lubbock. He is also the president of the South Plains Council of the Boys Scouts of America and training chairman of the South Central Regional Area. Baker is also publicity chairman for the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Lubbock Rotary Club.

Illusionist believes demons real, communication with dead impossible

"The Exorcist" is very close to reality. I hope people don't take it as just another Hollywood production," says Andre Kole, the nation's leading illusionist.

Kole, who performed in the Municipal Auditorium last week, said that the demon possession depicted in the controversial movie is true to life.

The illusionist told an audience of about 1,000 that he has spent 20 years investigating aspects of spiritualism — including seances. He has concluded that willful communication with the dead is impossible.

However, he believes that it is possible to have contact with demons.

The 37-year-old has been working in "The World of Illusion", as he calls it, since he was seven years old. At that time he met a magician named Moxo who taught him his first tricks. From that point on, Kole determined that he would become a great illusionist.

Kole has always developed his own tricks. In fact, in one year alone he invented more than 1,000 magical effects and ideas.

Today, he is one of the world's leading inventors of magic tricks.

He now owns a company which develops, builds, and sells magic tricks to magicians.

Kole said he calls himself an illusionist rather than a magician because he produces "larger effects."

"I make people appear and disappear," he said. "A magician does smaller tricks with cards or by pulling rabbits out of hats."

Kole's feature trick is the "Table of Death," which he believes is the most dangerous ever performed.

Kole told the audience before he did the "Table of Death," "When I began my career, I decided I was going to have to surpass Harry Houdini, the famous magician who died in 1926. That is how I got the inspiration for this stunt."

and transcendental meditation shows that people are seeking meaning to life.

"People have problems for which they are searching for solutions. And they are turning to fantasy to try to find reality," he said.

The illusionist said that he began a similar search for reality when he was 25 years old.

"Two of my friends committed suicide at that time, so I began questioning the purpose of living."

"I found that God is no illusion. He is a reality," Kole said.

"I realized that there is a difference between religion and true Christianity. In fact, the kind of life that Jesus taught was a new kind of life."

Kole said he became a Christian at that time.

Groucho to receive Academy Award

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Groucho Marx responded sentimentally to news that he would be awarded a special Oscar at the Motion Picture Academy awards April 2.

"I only wish that Harpo and Chico could be here to share it," the comedian said. Then he added reflectively, "No — if only Minnie were here."

Minnie Marx was the legendary matriarch of the performing family and Groucho remarked, "None of us would have amounted to anything if it hadn't been for her."

"What a woman she was! She said that Sam, her husband, could cough all night and she wouldn't wake up. But if one of her sons coughed just once, she was awake immediately."

necessarily slowed his pace. His walk is deliberate, the quips come less rapidly. But he is as unregenerate as ever, making innocently lascivious remarks to pretty women and continuing his long-time warfare with inattentive waiters.

He recently demanded faster service at a hotel where he has been eating for 40 years. "I only have two hands," the waiter snapped.

"Did you ever see anybody with three hands?" Groucho replied.

The comedian spends much of his time at his Beverly Hills home. He reads a great deal and is enjoying a new book about his idol, Harry Truman. He watches television, especially "All in the Family," "Maude," and "Sanford and Son," and he follows the news. He is admittedly enjoying the problems of Richard Nixon, a long-time hate.

Will Groucho perform again? "If you mean concerts like the ones I did last year — no. I'll do the Merv Griffin Show and I'll appear with Johnny Carson if he would tape in the afternoon. My doctor doesn't want me to stay up till 2 a.m."

He leads an active social life, often going to film previews. Even without performing, Groucho earns a handsome income. His manager, red-haired Erin Fleming, whom Groucho describes as "the woman I love," reports that he collected $250,000 in 1973 from endorsements, record albums, and other activities.

In the trick, his hands, feet and chest are chained to a table. Suspended over him is a heavy canopy which has dozens of foot-long steel spikes protruding down from it. When the trick begins, a burning candle is placed just under the rope that holds the canopy in position. Kole has 60 seconds to free himself.

The illusionist had a close call during his Lubbock performance when the supporting rope gave slightly and the spiked canopy slipped several inches. But Kole's two assistants replaced the rope and the trick proceeded without further mishap.

In a University Daily interview following his performance, Kole said the current trend of interest in the occult

In 1964 he became a traveling representative of Campus Crusade for Christ, an interdenominational student christian organization. Since then, he has refused to appear anywhere except on university campuses and military bases. He says his reason for declining other performances is that he wants "to be where the action is."

Kole has presented his illusions in all 50 states, Canada, and in almost 50 other countries. He has appeared on national television in 38 countries. Last year he performed before more than 78 million people including citizens of Central and South America and Asia.

His Lubbock performance was the last appearance in a three-week tour through Texas.

The Academy Board of Governors this week voted Marx the award for "his brilliant creativity and for the unequalled achievements of the Marx Brothers in the art of motion picture comedy."

Will Groucho appear at the Los Angeles Music Center to claim the Oscar?

"Certainly," he said. "Unless they just want to shove it under the door."

Groucho is the remaining member of the zany trio whose comedies of the 1930s are cherished by each new generation. Two other brothers are alive: Zeppo, who played the romantic interest in the early films, and Gummo, who managed the team.

At 83, Groucho has

No album shortages predicted in Lubbock

By CHARLEY BANKHEAD UD Reporter

A spot check with area record distributors and retailers indicates that customers should not have much trouble obtaining their favorite albums and 45s — if they are willing to pay the price.

During the past weeks, there have been rumors circulating that the record industry will be affected by a shortage of the vinyl from which their products are made. A main ingredient of vinyl is petroleum, which is now in short supply.

Representatives from three Lubbock record retailers said they had not experienced any problems with obtaining records. They did say that prices had been increased and that other increases might follow.

"We've had a little bit of trouble getting certain albums," said Richard Roof of Discount Records, "but nothing really bad so far."

"I really can't tell if there is a shortage. Some distributors say there is a problem, and others say there isn't. I just don't know who's right. But I know that the prices of some albums are already up, especially the new releases."

Roof said new artists might have difficulty getting their music recorded if there is a shortage of vinyl. He said new artists will probably be on a trial basis and will have to release one or two singles that sell well before they get the opportunity to record an album.

Discount is one of the major suppliers in this area for classical music records, reportedly in short supply. But Roof said there had not been a shortage of classical albums at this store.

Jim Muir of Record Town said there had been no shortages at his store, either. But he said prices of albums have been increased.

"Our distributors haven't said much about it (the vinyl shortage)," said Muir. "They kind of avoid the subject. But I've read in several magazines that there is a shortage of vinyl and paper. This means the record companies will probably start going to single-leaf album covers in addition to possibly having to cut back on production."

A representative of Flip Side Records also said his prices were higher, but that he had experienced no shortages.

An official of one of the area's major distributors made similar comments about the vinyl situation. Paul Sheffield of Warner-Elektra-Atlantic Records in Dallas said there had been some problem with obtaining records but nothing severe.

"So far as our company is concerned, we can usually get the records if we want to pay the price," said Sheffield. "The big thing has been the price increase of vinyl. The service has also been slower because several of our plants have cut working time from 24 hours, seven days a week to a four-and-a-half day work week."

"The only records that have really been hurt are quads (quadraphonic). That's because they are made of almost pure vinyl. We've put a 90-day freeze on quad production to see how the vinyl supply is going to be affected."

One final aspect of vinyl shortage and its effect on the record industry was brought to light by an employe of a local recording studio. Harold Franklin of Custom Fidelity Recording Studio said some companies are using a new kind of material to make records.

"I really don't know a lot about the new material," said Franklin. "The records seem to cut good, but the material is harder and breaks easier."

Franklin said companies that use vinyl exclusively for their records might have problems in the future, but he said the new material should help ease any shortages.

Senators screen council applications

By TONY BATT UD Reporter

Five student senators are currently screening applicants for a revamped Arts and Sciences Council that is supposed to give students more voice in affairs within the A&S college.

"The Arts and Sciences Council before was never really operative," said Shad Brooks, one of the five senators selecting members of the council. "We have two primary objectives in creating the new council. First, we want to have an influence on teacher evaluations and the choosing of new professors. And we also want to have a say about degree requirements within the College of Arts and Sciences."

Dick Robie, who originated the bill calling for a new Arts and Sciences Council in the Student Senate, Cindy Martin, Mike Bedwell, and Charles Gonzalez are the four other senators screening applicants for the council. Along with Brooks, they will serve as members of the council.

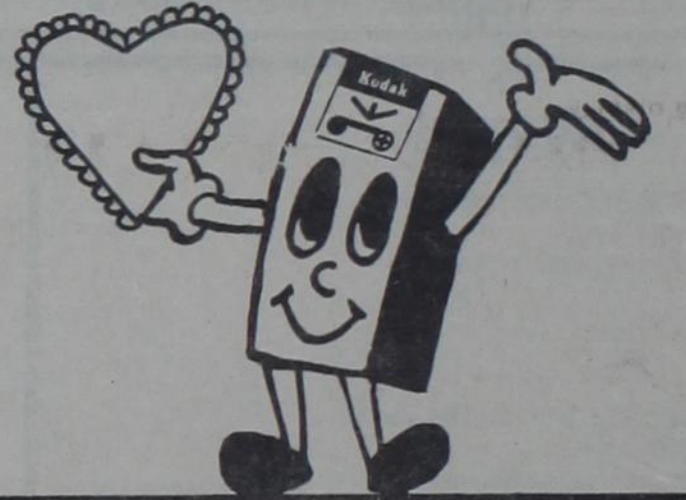

After the Senate passed the bill authorizing the new council in early December, a constitution explaining the group's functions was drawn up and presented to A&S Dean Lawrence Graves. Graves okayed the constitution, clearing the way for applications to the new council.

One of the changes in the constitution included the selection of the president. "The president of the Honors Board in Arts and Sciences was formerly always the president of the A&S council," said Brooks. "Now, the President will be a member of the A&S council elected by council members."

Applications at the Student A&S council. The constitution stipulates that the group will consist of at least 29 members. Brooks said students interested in applying for a position on the council should pick up an application at the Student Association office.

Brooks said he hopes the council will also act as a "buffer" for students on any issue that arouses interest.

Pony assist puts Raiders back in SWC driver's seat

By MIKE HALLMARK
Sports Editor

Large red hearts around court-side proclaimed that the Red Raiders were deep in the Heart O' Texas, Baylor's Heart O' Texas Coliseum that is, and the Lubbockites found out that was not a very friendly place to be.

Some 8,100 enraged Baylor fans showered the referees and the Red Raiders with paper cups and cokes during a second half Tech surge which staked them to an 85-69 victory over Baylor. The win propelled Tech back to the pinnacle of the conference race with a 7-1 record as Texas fell to SMU, 74-72.

The Red Raiders were booed when they stepped on the court and that was probably the high point of their popularity all night. During a wild second half which saw Tech take control, lose it to a Baylor surge, then wrest it back at the end, the game had to be halted several times in order to clear the court of all the debris. At the end, the referees and the Tech players had to be escorted out of Heart O' Texas by uniformed policemen as the Baylor fans had poured down upon the floor.

The first half of the game was a contest in turnovers, with the Bears outdoing the Raiders in that department, 14-13. Turnovers had been the key to Tech's two points loss to SMU last Tuesday and they were a major factor again as Tech trailed, 34-32, at the half.

However, Tech's defense again pulled them out of a tight spot, and keyed their second half charge. Forward William Johnson tied the game immediately with a jump shot. Then, Baylor Coach Carroll Dawson drew the first of three Baylor technicals in the second half. Richard Little sank the charity shot to put Tech in the lead for good amidst boos and paper cups from the Baylor fans.

Tech ran their lead to 11, 62-51, keyed by their defense. However, Baylor fought back and Lee Griffin's lay-up with 4:54 remaining brought them within seven, 64-57.

Tech went back to work, spurred by Rick Bullock's two lay-ups and another by Richard Little. The Raiders led 74-63 with 1:52 remaining and seemed to be in control.

But at that point, things began to happen. Bullock drew his fifth personal foul on Baylor's Steve Dallas. In the elation that followed the big Raider center's exit, Baylor's Gary McGuire hit a free throw. Tech coaches Gerald Myers and George Davidson came up screaming and the referee quickly signalled a technical foul, much to the delight of the partisan crowd. However, Baylor fans watched in horror as McGuire's point was erased from the scoreboard, Baylor was assessed the technical, and the pesky Little was once again putting a technical freebie through the nets. It seemed that Dallas was supposed to shoot the free throw and not McGuire. The alert Tech coaches quickly spotted this and the Raiders used it to effectively turn back the Bear rally.

William Johnson was the man for the Red Raiders. Johnson was high point with 22 points, lowest percentage against any high rebounder with 10, and he limited Baylor's top gun, Charlie McKinney, to only 11 points. Earlier, McKinney had only gotten 12 points off Johnson in Lubbock making for a season total of 23 versus Tech, his face. Bullock contributed 21 points while Richard Little added 19. Dallas and McGuire both had 12 for Baylor.

Throwing of debris can result in ticket

The throwing of cups and ice on the Lubbock Coliseum floor during Tech basketball games could result in the issuance of a ticket, according to Lt. R. T. Hamilton of the Tech University Police.

"The disciplinary action to be taken depends on the student's behavior and the officer's attitude concerning the subject matter," Lt. Hamilton explained.

Lt. Hamilton said the student is usually ejected from the coliseum and taken to the dean of students. Others are taken to the Lubbock Police Department.

Mauk drives

Bryan Mauk, Tech's pint sized guard, works here against Baylor's Tom Wilkins in Tech's win over Baylor in a game played in Lubbock earlier in the year. Tech won both ends of the Baylor series this season with an 85-69 victory in Waco Saturday.

SWC roundup

SMU surprises Horns

SMU came up with its second consecutive upset of the SWC season Saturday night as they knocked the Texas Longhorns out of a tie for the conference lead with a 74-72 victory.

Zack Thiel was the Ponies' man of the hour as he sank a pair of charity shots in the game's final seven seconds.

Saturday's battle was in Austin before a capacity crowd of Texas partisans in Gregory gym. The loss put the Longhorns in sole possession of second place, one game behind Tech.

The Mustangs, who beat the Raiders 73-71 in Dallas Tuesday enabling Texas to tie for the lead, jumped to an 11-point halftime lead.

The 'Horns, led by Larry Robinson's 32 points, had pulled to a 47-47 tie with 13:27 remaining but SMU edged back in front.

Thiel was fouled by Robinson as he drove toward the bucket and sunk both halves of a one and one.

Texas' final shot was thwarted by an offensive foul committed by guard Harry Larrabee.

Ira Terrell led the Mustangs with 23 points, 15 of them in the first half. Thiel added 14.

Hogs pulverize Owls

Dean Tolson netted 36 points and hauled in 20 rebounds as Arkansas crushed the Rice Owls 106-81 Saturday in Fayetteville.

Tolson's 17 field goals set a new school record and the game was also the highest scoring affair this year in the SWC.

Tolson was unstopable as he played all but the last seven minutes of the second half.

Rice jumped out to an early lead behind the shooting of guard Tim Moriarty and center Danny Carroll. However, Arkansas stormed back behind the hot shooting of Tolson and the rebounding of Danny White.

The Hogs took a 17-16 lead after six minutes of play and were never headed.

The game was played before a partisan Razorback crowd in John Barnhill Fieldhouse.

Arkansas is now 7-13 on the year and 3-5 in conference. The Owls are 9-12 on the season and 3-5 in SWC play.

Ags coast by Froggies

A&M's Randy Knowles peppered the nets for 27 points Saturday night as the Aggies poured the coals to hapless TCU 90-64 in A&M's G. Rollie White Coliseum.

Knowles scored five straight points to break a tie midway through the first half and helped the Ags to a 35-24 halftime margin.

Another Knowles hot streak pushed the lead past 20 points in the second half.

A&M held a 47-36 advantage in rebounds with Knowles leading all rebounders with 10. John Thornton added 19 points to the Aggie attack.

Jeff Wright led TCU with 19 points while Gary Landers had 12 before fouling out.

TCU led in total fouls 20-15 but A&M was assessed the only technical foul of the night, called against Jerry Mercer.

A&M is now 12-8 for the season and 4-4 in conference play. TCU dropped to 7-12 overall and sank deeper into the conference's cellar with a 1-7 mark.

Tech record falls in Astrodome meet

HOUSTON (AP) — SMU's Gene Pouncy and Angelo State's Josh Owusu ignored the dazzling competition they faced in the sixth Astrodome-Federation indoor track meet Saturday and registered the two biggest upsets of the meet.

Although not winning a race, the Tech tracksters cracked a school record in the distance medley and came within a second of their mark in the two-mile relay. In both races, the Raiders finished third.

Pouncy, who finished third in the Southwest Conference 100-yard dash last year, won the event Saturday night in the Astrodome with a 9.5 clocking.

Pouncy beat such heralded sprinters as Steve Williams of San Diego State, the world co-record holder at 9.1, and world 100-meter record holder Don Quarrie of Jamaica.

Owusu leaped 25 feet 3 inches in the long jump to defeat Olympic gold medalist Randy Williams of Southern California, who was second at 25-2 1/4.

There were six Astrodome and four divisional meet records established in the invitational college and university divisions.

Former Houston schoolboy Paul Geis, now running for Oregon University, lowered the invitational two-mile record to 8:24.8. That equaled Geis' best time last year when he had the eighth best time in the world.

Three-time NCAA pole vault champion Dave Roberts, formerly of Rice, set an Astrodome record of 17-2.

Baylor's mile relay team set an Astrodome record with a 3:10.9 clocking in the meet's final event. Texas won two relays, setting an Astrodome record in the 2-mile relay and a divisional record in the distance medley relay.
