

Tornadoes ravage Monahans

By WAYNE ROPER
UD Reporter

MONAHANS - Limited damage and less than a dozen minor injuries resulted from a tornado that weaved through town at noon Tuesday, officials reported.

Officials are continuing today the "digging out" and assessment of damage from the two funnel systems which hit this town of 9,000. Monahans is the hometown of 43 Tech students.

One funnel was spotted southwest of town about 12:30 p.m. and the city alarm was sounded. Many residents reported not hearing the city's warning sirens, but took action after seeing the tornado coming.

The tornado then turned north causing damage to Ward Memorial Hospital and about three blocks of commercial and residential buildings. About 25 of the 30 buildings were damaged, 10 of which were commercial, according to Jack Farga, city manager.

Officials credit quick action on the part of the hospital employees in preventing many possible injuries. Following the siting, patients in the hospital were moved toward the center of the building and none received any injuries. Patients were then relocated at Odessa and Kermit health facilities.

About 20 National Guardsmen, along with area law enforcement officers from Odessa, Ector and Kermit, have been called to the scene to help enforce curfews and prevent possible looting. A 9 p.m. curfew has been set until further notice, according to Farga.

Residents whose homes were destroyed are staying with friends and relatives throughout the city. City officials said they have had many offers of assistance.

Citizens remain calm after storm

By CHUCK McDONALD

MONAHANS — In spite of the near disaster that could have occurred, the townspeople of Monahans reacted quickly and calmly. A few hours after the tornado had destroyed three blocks of this small town of 9,000, the prevalent mood was one of relief rather than panic.

David Baines, whose house was located on Third Street, where most of the damage was concentrated, shrugged off the seriousness of the disaster. "We're going down to the mother-in-law's for the night," he said as his wife, two children and himself picked their way through the debris. "I imagine I can repair most of the damage myself, it'll just take some work."

His wife Pat was the only one at the house when the tornado touched down. "I saw it (the tornado) coming and I opened all the windows and doors, I think that's what saved the roof," she said. The Baines residence was one of the few on the block whose entire roof was still intact. "Then I went into the hallway and knelt down and prayed. I've never been so scared in my life," said Mrs. Baines.

Jack Cox owned a laundromat on Fourth and the damage done to it's roof was incredible, he said. The roof was lifted up, folded in half and dropped in the back part of the laundry. Cox was standing outside his laundromat a few hours later laughingly asking if anybody wanted "to buy a used laundromat."

"Yeah, I saw it coming so I went out to the house to see if everything was going to be OK," he said shaking his head.

"And when I came back here I didn't have a roof." But nothing's been hurt so bad it can't be fixed—I am moving to a new location anyhow," he said.

Next door to him was a building that had been completely leveled. "That fellow there was lucky," said Cox. "He had a sporting goods store there but just last week he moved to a new location."

The building had been empty when the tornado hit. Others on the same block weren't as lucky. Along the same block were numerous businesses and a dentist's office that had been destroyed.

But it seemed good luck and quick action prevented any serious injuries or deaths.

One of the hardest hit buildings was the Ward County Memorial Hospital in Monahans, but all 23 patients were moved from their rooms to the halls within a matter of minutes and then transferred to hospitals in Kermit and Odessa within the hour.

The roof of the south wing of the hospital was completely sheared off but fortunately all the patients had been moved into the central hallway in a matter of minutes.

The tornado warning had sounded but according to hospital employees they had never heard it and reacted to warnings from people in the south wing.

Most agreed there had been at least two tornadoes in the vicinity of the town. A long narrow-shaped funnel that touched down just west of town and shorter, wider one that did most of the damage.

"It was really something to watch," said Glenda Julian. "There was that long, nasty-looking one that must have had a funnel a mile long but it was that short wide one that I think did most of the damage. If both of those had hit, this town wouldn't have known what hit it," she said.

According to a witness who claimed to have been near the elementary school, only "luck and the good Lord must have saved it." "That tornado came along the ground to within about 50 yards of the school then all of a sudden it just lifted up and went right on over it," he said. The school was untouched.

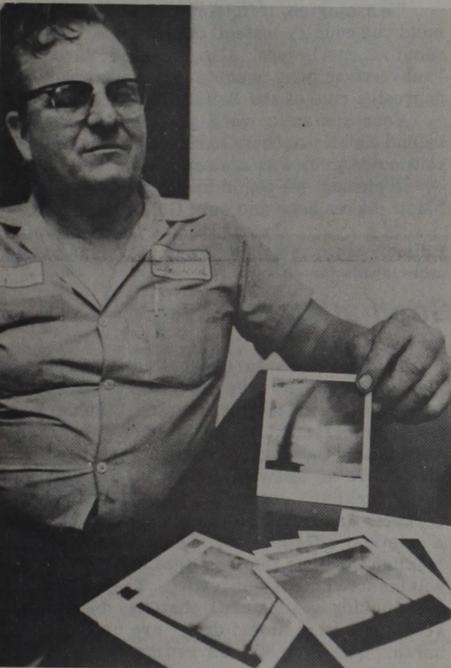

Approximately 20 homes were damaged but according to city manager Jack Farga no great housing problem for those displaced had occurred. "We've had more calls from people volunteering temporary housing arrangements than calls from people who need a place to stay. Most of them are staying with neighbors or relatives," he said.

Around a dozen people were injured, according to sources at the hospital, and none of those were serious. Most were cuts from flying glass and the most serious known injury was a broken arm.

"I came down to the hospital as soon as I could to try and help out," said one woman. "But there wasn't really that much to do after awhile." Of course, this town has always been pretty good about taking care of each other."

The unpredictability of a tornado's path was demonstrated by the sight of three houses at the end of the block. The tornado had destroyed one house, lifted the roof off of another, and left the house in between the two unscathed. With the confusion of people trying to salvage their belongings on either side of them, the National Guard patrolling the streets, and reporters prowling the area, there was one woman calmly rocking on her front porch.

"I don't know," said one bystander, "tornadoes are strange critters."

Tornado path

Clockwise from the top: Jack Cox, Monahans resident, remains cheerful as he sits in the shell of his laundromat, which was destroyed by a tornado Tuesday afternoon.

Small by most comparative standards, the Monahans tornado still demonstrates the power enough to destroy this residence while depositing debris from other homes.

Transit board to present Citibus alternatives

By BABS GREYHOSKY
UD Reporter

The Lubbock Transit Advisory Board agreed Tuesday to present to the City Council three alternatives for alleviating the $150,000 deficit incurred by the new Citibus system.

At the last council meeting, the council members ordered Lubbock transit to get the operation back within the $404,000 budget originally set for Citibus. The advisory board will take the proposals before the council at the April 28 meeting.

Of the three alternatives, the board is recommending a proposal to increase fares and to eliminate some routes. According to Brenda Kendrick, transit planner, the charge for the thrifty-twenty fare would be increased to $3.50, the regular 40-cent fare would go to 50 cents and the fare charged to senior citizens and the handicapped would be increased from 20 cents to 25 cents.

Also included in this proposed alternative is the elimination of a couple of the routes that, according to the board, are not worth continuing.

Kendrick said the recommended proposal will not put the transit system back within the budget; therefore, the board will ask the council to subsidize. "With this method, the people would still be able to ride and the services would be available," Kendrick said.

Another alternative would be to create a system that would totally eliminate the deficit. Under this system, Lubbock transit could either continue running Citibus in the same manner until June, then discontinue service, or gradually decrease services through October at which time services would cease.

Kendrick pointed out, however, that either of these methods would force Lubbock transit to forfeit federal funding provided by the Urban Mass

Transportation Administration (UMTA).

Currently, UMTA subsidizes 50 per cent of the cost of Citibus and a drastic cut in services would not meet the standards set by the agency for subsidization.

Dr. Bill Dean, board member and Tech professor, questioned the exact amount of the deficit since UMTA was responsible for picking up half the tab on the costs.

"The city has budgeted $404,000 for the service, but UMTA will reimburse half that, so the city isn't actually losing $150,000," Dean said in an effort to seek clarification of the actual deficit.

Transit officials said, in effect, that Dean's assumption is correct, but that UMTA was not very prompt with its reimbursements.

"The first reimbursement came back two years later," Wilson said, "so even though UMTA is subsidizing part of the cost, the city still has to put up the money to begin with."

Wilson added, however, that when the money was reimbursed, it did not go back to the transit system, but probably back into the general fund.

The final alternative proposes to cut hours of bus operation and to combine and eliminate some of the routes.

The board deliberated for about two and a half hours over the alternatives, hearing reports from Ernie Prenevost, Lubbock transit manager, and John Wilson of Lubbock Transit.

The board cited four reasons for the deficit, most of which were directly related to over estimation or projection by planners.

Ridership did not meet its projection of 91,000 passengers, although Wilson said ridership has increased by 71 per cent and was up to 78,000 in March.

Last call for buses

Student Association President Terry Wimmer says he has not received many comments on the new bus routes which have been running on a trial basis for two weeks.

The two weeks are up Friday and Wimmer will have to meet with Vice President for Administrative Services Fred Wehmeyer and those in Traffic and Parking and from Lubbock Transit to decide whether the new system has worked. But Wimmer can't tell them if the students have liked the routes if the students don't tell him whether or not they like the routes.

Everyone complained when the buses were rerouted earlier this semester because of the loop system. Wimmer worked hard to get the routes changed and added the routes around the Engineering Key. If students like the new system, Wimmer needs to know so he can defend the changes to the administration. If the administration feels students are not using the route around the key they may close it again.

If, on the other hand, students don't like the new system Wimmer needs to know that, too. This is the students' last chance to change the routes. We can't go through this every semester.

Let Wimmer know if the change has been for better or for worse by calling the SA Office at 742-3631.

On cheerleader tryouts; more on pot

Capability not color

Dear Editor:

There has been some discrepancy regarding the outcome for Cheerleader try-outs this past semester because the black organization on campus is not equally represented. There really should not be a problem because try-outs were held and each person had the same length of time to perfect their performance to its best possibility. Judges picked the cheerleaders on capability not color. Those that were chosen performed to their best ability and whether they are black, white, or polka-dot, the outcome depended on their performance not their color.

In the first place, the decision has already been made, and it is a discrimination to those who have already been made cheerleaders for next year. One of the proposals was to add on the alternates and have a minority tryout, and that makes the grand total amount to anywhere from 20 to 22 people on the field! Why stop there, we shouldn't discriminate against the Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, Jews, Christians, Gays and Straights, the Short People, and last, but not least — the Hog Liver Eaters!! That way the $2,700 that will remain as the budget will provide transportation to Post, Idalou, or maybe even the strip!!! (Oh, let's not forget sororities and fraternities . . . just think, who needs a stadium — we'll all be on the field!)

This brings up another problem, who is going to watch the game? (After all, that is what we are cheering for.) We are all going to be so busy trying to perform our best (you can imagine everyone trying to start on READY OK!), that we won't even be able to watch the game.

The final problem evolves around the most discriminated performer of all — Happy V! We need to equal things out by getting an all white horse to alternate with Happy V to run around when we make a touchdown. (But don't forget, the horses probably won't be able to make it around because of all the "cheerleaders" that will be on the field!!)

Standard procedures

Dear Editor:

This is a letter in response to the article that appeared in Monday's paper, referring to the cheerleaders.

This letter actually should be going to the spirit committee, but as the information appeared in the newspaper, I wish to air my complaints in the same way.

1) The eight cheerleaders that have already been picked by the standard procedure should not have to put up with the politics that are obviously concerned.

2) To make special tryouts after the normal procedure is an affront to both the cheerleaders that are already picked and the student body as a whole.

3) In defense to the fact that the picking committee supposedly judged on "stunts" and that the blacks did not have the background in these "stunts," well, the vice-president of SOBU, Cora Guinn was cheerleader in high school with one of the cheerleaders already named for next year. Why, if SOBU wanted representatives, did Cora not tryout? And if she did not want to try out, why did she not help her "brothers" or "sisters" to be able to compete?

4) If Bill Dean was interviewed and quoted correctly, which I assume he was, he was quoted as saying he was against tokenism.

Well, if two blacks are "appointed" or "selected" to be members of the cheerleading squad, that is tokenism. Evidence of that is the fact that the extra cheerleaders are not going to travel to out-of-town games, and are not going to cheerleader camp this summer.

5) If SOBU is asking for equal representation, then give it to them! Figuring it out, the ration is about 400 blacks out of 22,000 students or about 1/50 of a cheerleader. There is a bigger percentage of red-headed students, and yet there are no red-headed cheerleaders.

6) In regards to the "special tryouts," if your skin is not black, don't bother trying out. It would be a waste of time.

SOBU will probably rebuttal, saying that the standard procedures are not fair to blacks. They will also probably call me a white racist pig. I don't care. The procedures for picking cheerleaders for Texas Tech are very fair for those who are qualified. If the blacks do not try out because they think the practices are unjust, then I say they don't think they are qualified.

In closing, I want to point out that I am all for blacks as cheerleaders-IF THEY MAKE THE SQUAD THE SAME WAY WHITES DO! My high school had a black cheerleader, and personally, I judged him to be the best of the bunch. But, he made it fairly, just like the rest did. So more power to them, if they make it fairly. Otherwise, it is a farce.

Rebuttal to AMERICA

To the Editor:

This letter is in rebuttal to the letter from AMERICA. If America is the place you feel it is, why did you fail to sign your name?

Your atrocity refers to people who smoke marijuana as "some look like humans, but most have long hair which is usually filthy, beards, wear stupid looking beads, and need a bath." First, beads went out in the sixties. Second, when did long hair cancel a person's membership in the human race? Finally, we cannot think of anything filthier than spitting in a Coke bottle.

Now, we'll give you a trip back in history, to 1932. Congress has just created the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and appointed Harry Anslinger as its first commissioner. Harry needs something to make his new agency respectable and himself famous. Narcotics could not make him famous, but with a little help, marijuana could. After five years of hard work he had scared the people enough to convince Congress to outlaw the "drug." Next, he convinced the AMA (American Medical Association), which had defended marijuana and whose doctors used it daily to treat minor ailments, to condemn it.

Most of the studies that do call marijuana dangerous have been discredited, usually because of faulty methodology. Many of the other studies showing marijuana harmful have been along the lines of the now famous rat experiments, in which rats were given the human equivalent of 50 joints a day and then - surprise! - bizarre behavior changes. Some even died.

The great majority of marijuana studies conclude that it's of little danger to the user. The AMA, the Canadian Commission of Inquiry into the Non-Medical Use of Drugs, HEW, the Ford Foundation, National Commission on Marijuana and Drugs - all have conducted research and all say it is relatively harmless.

In your reference to 15-year-olds that smoke cigarettes, chances are those same 15-year-olds smoke pot, which may be easier for them to get than alcohol. Legalization of marijuana would make it more difficult for minors to obtain.

It is evident by your blatant ignorance of the song title, "Don't Fear the Reaper," that you have not researched your information. Personal taste is required in your choice of music and we feel no defense of Rock and Roll as music is necessary.

"Washington, Jefferson, and others who help build our country instead of destroy it" are also some of our heroes. Also, because they were "subversives who wanted to undermine" the oppressive rule of the British Empire.

Your semantic word play in the disguise behind which you chose to hide was creative, but said nothing. It was ambiguous at best.

In closing, we would like to remind you that "Man makes beer and only God makes grass."

Joseph Webb & David Downing

Editor's Note: This letter was also signed by 13 other students.

Good story

To the Editor:

This letter is to congratulate and thank Regina Smylie for her story on the status of marijuana laws in this country. Some very important facts were brought to light, particularly the clogged court dockets they bring about. We all know who pays for the time and administrative costs of those overwrought dockets. And for what? To see a young kid have a criminal offense hung over his head, not to mention the fines and legal fees he or his family will incur? This is not justice. These penalties for smoking a substance that has become an accepted "recreational drug" are obviously too harsh. The fact that an estimated 34 million Americans have tried pot, and over 25 state legislatures have introduced bills providing for its decriminalization support the word "accepted" in the previous sentence.

If our policemen didn't have to worry about busting the aforementioned kid, they could be using their time preventing crimes and apprehending REAL criminals, like rapists and burglars, whose crimes are a hell of a lot more traumatic, not only to the victim but also the public, than getting high on pot.

Finally, I would enlist the support of those who agree with me (I know of at least two) and entreat them to do something about it, namely, write your Congressman or Senator. A letter to Mahon, Bentsen, or Tower won't change the world, believe me, but for 13 cents you, a voting constituent, can let one of them, an elected official, know how you feel.

No one is forced to smoke marijuana, no one has died from smoking marijuana. I believe as an American, I should have the right to smoke pot, by my own choice, as we choose to drink, to be Baptist, to drive a Chevy, whatever, but you and I don't have that right or choice. We can, and will before long, so let's help turn the rusty wheels of Justice: write your lawmakers.

Fire destroys Galveston hotel

GALVESTON (AP) - Firemen dug eight charred bodies out of the smoldering debris of a 60-year-old hotel in this Texas Gulf Coast island city Tuesday after the building was destroyed by fire earlier in the day. Police said more than 20 other guests were still unaccounted for.

The bodies of five children, including three babies, were among the first pulled out of the pile of rubble hours after the fire was brought under control.

People said arson was suspected. Thirteen persons were taken to John Sealy Hospital. A hospital spokesman said only four were admitted, and their condition ranged from good to fair.

The fire burned to the ground the Central Hotel, a five-story brick building about two blocks from the docks in a rundown section of downtown. It also damaged a furniture store and a drugstore.

A police spokesman said the fire spread rapidly and sealed off the narrow entrance to the hotel.

Among the first six bodies pulled out by firemen were those of a young girl, about 10, and three babies, one about two years old, the others only a few months old. Police estimated about 50 persons were in the building. Some managed to escape by jumping out of windows.

Briscoe discusses Concorde

WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, after a meeting with Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams, said Tuesday that he got no indication of when a decision will be made on supersonic passenger flights to Dallas-Fort Worth airport.

Briscoe said Adams "took under consideration" his desire to win federal approval for Braniff Airlines flights to Dallas-Fort Worth. Under the Texas proposal, Braniff crews would take over British Concorde jets after they arrived in Washington and fly them at subsonic speeds to Dallas and back.

Briscoe also said he was confident there was little public opposition to the flights in Texas because he had received "practically no" mail against his position.

Court to rule on inspections

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court said Monday it will decide whether government inspectors violate the Constitution by making unannounced visits to factories and other business establishments.

If the high court rules against the government, the enforcement provisions of the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act could be seriously impaired.

Appealing a lower court's decision that struck down the OSHA law, Labor Department and Justice Department attorneys argued: "The effectiveness of the inspection system would be largely nullified if an employer could gain significant delay by refusing to permit an inspection without a warrant."

Speaker warns of gonorrhea strain

By ROBIN HARRINGTON
UD Staff

No one is immune to gonorrhea, but a strain of the disease has developed an immunity to penicillin, according to Dr. Christopher Duncan of Baylor College of Medicine.

Because Neisseria gonorrhoeae is untreatable with penicillin, Duncan said, the potential for it spreading is very great and is something to be concerned about.

Duncan is in Lubbock to speak to sophomores in Tech's Medical School and to the Family Practice Conference at St. Mary's Hospital.

One antibiotic, spectinomycin hydrochloride, has so far been 100 per cent effective against the new strain. Duncan said there is a possibility an immunity may develop for this antibiotic as it did for penicillin.

Since the strain was found in February, 1976, 124 cases have been reported in 18 states. One case was reported in Dallas.

No penicillin resistant cases have been found in Lubbock, according to Dr. Barbara Wade of the Tech Medical School. Gonorrhea cases are screened at the City-County Public Health Center for the resistant strain.

Duncan said cases have increased by 10 per cent every year for treatable gonorrhea.

"If gonorrhea is untreatable, how fast would it go up each year?" Duncan asked.

The problem is finding cases before they spread, Duncan said. The incubation period is two days and can spread after that time. The disease can be spread for any months, Duncan said.

"By finding a cure for gonorrhea, doctors made it possible for someone to get gonorrhea three times in one week," Duncan said.

Symptoms of the resistant strain are identical to other strains of gonorrhea.

The new strain originated in Southeast Asia and was first discovered in port cities, he said.

Berry to head English

Dr. Wilkes Berry has been named the new chairperson of the English department, according to Lawrence Graves, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Committee changes scheduled meeting

The Spirit Coordinating Committee, originally scheduled to meet Tuesday, did not meet due to scheduling conflicts, according to Dr. Bill Dean, faculty cheerleader sponsor.

The committee will meet at 4:15 p.m. Thursday in the Executive Room of the University Center. The committee will meet to review their decision considering the possibility of expanding the cheerleading squad for next year.

Accounting receives funds

The largest single contribution to Tech's area of accounting was presented recently by the certified public accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., according to Dr. Doyle Z. Williams, director of the area of accounting. Williams said $11,180 was donated.

The presentation was made by Frank M. Burke, Jr., partner with the Dallas office of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., and graduate of Tech.

A grant of $2,840 from Tech alumni with the firm was matched by the Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co. Foundation.

"We have great confidence that Dr. Berry will continue the high standards of the English department that Dr. Marion Michael has upheld in past years," Graves said.

Berry will take over the office of chairperson of one of the largest departments at Tech beginning in the fall semester.

This is the 13th year Berry has taught at Tech. He is director of graduate studies in English at present but has served in various capacities in the department.

Berry teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in Shakespeare. He has served as chairman of sophomore English and taught in the integrated honors program.

Berry has also advised student groups such as Junior Council. He is the adviser of Mortar Board for this year.

League director speaks in favor of ERA

By KANDIS GATEWOOD

"Barriers need to be broken whether we have the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment) or not," according to Louise Cummins, state board director for the League of Women Voters.

Cummins spoke to about 20 people in the Horn Hall cafeteria Tuesday concerning the Equal Rights Amendment. Cummins spoke in favor of the ERA and answered questions about the amendment.

"I would hope that a lot of attitude changes will come about because of the debates over the ERA," Cummins said. "I think women's rights will evolve eventually, but it would be neater if it would be sooner, with the ERA."

Thirty-six states have ratified the ERA, Cummins said, "and contrary to the Avalanche-Journal, there is not a large sweep across the nation to stop the ERA."

Two more state legislatures need to ratify the amendment by March 31, 1979 for the ERA to be put into the Constitution, Cummins said. However, three of the 36 state legislatures (Nebraska, Tennessee and Idaho) are trying to rescind the ratification, but are running into legal complications.

"I think it will be tough to get the next two states," Cummins said.

Cummins said that 65 per cent of the United States people are in favor of the ERA according to a Gallup Poll. "One of the arguments against the ERA is the idea that if ratified it will destroy the home and family idea of today," she said. "The average family is changing."

The typical family includes 43 per cent of the women in the country who are in the labor force, she said. "Women, like the husbands, work because they need to," Cummins said. Of the women working, 70 per cent are working because they need the money, she said.

Also, Cummins discussed the possibility of homosexual marriages being legalized.

Cummins said that Washington State has a state equal rights amendment and a case came up about legalizing a homosexual marriage.

"The courts decided that this applies to gender, not sexuality in people," Cummins said. Homosexual marriage was not approved. One girl at the meeting asked why Colorado allowed homosexual marriages. She said the couple is living in Texas now.

Cummins said she does not believe Colorado allows homosexual marriages. She said that many conceptions about the ERA are opinions of lawyers. She said the couple in Texas has not been brought to court and opinions are just opinions.

Another girl asked if it would bother Cummins if her granddaughter was taught by a homosexual in school.

Cummins said, "I think I may have been taught by homosexuals."

Cummins said that the sexual behavior would not be involved with the amendment, but that gender of the sexes is the point of men and women equal under the law.

Also, Cummins said that in 1972 Texas passed a state equal rights amendment four to one and that Texas has lived successfully under it with no bad problems.

One girl asked why states were rescinding the amendment.

Cummins said that a lot of people for a while were worried about unisex bathrooms and homosexual marriages. She said that laws presently on the books combatting discrimination because of sex do not have the universal strength of an amendment. Also, each case must be tried individually.

Range fire tool for grassland

Range fire is a valuable tool in today's range management, according to Dr. Henry A. Wright, Tech professor of range and wildlife management. Prescribed burning of rangeland can increase grass production, make forage more accessible to livestock, improve wildlife habitat, control undesirable shrubs and plant diseases, and provide a mineral seedbed for establishment of commercial trees.

"After 10 years of research we know a lot that ranchers can use if we can get the information to them," Wright said.

Prescription burning of rangeland has produced impressive results, according to Wright. Grass production was doubled and grass utilization increased after burns near Colorado City. Five years after a burn in the Rolling Plains, 25 per cent of the mesquite and 70 per cent of the prickly pear were dead and grass production increased.

Wright also said prescription burning is cheaper than the uses of chemicals. A prescription burn done by Tech cost between two and five dollars an acre where as Chemical control cost about eight dollars an acre. Wright added that a rancher could probably do the same job for about fifty cents an acre, but would need expert assistance with the two or three burns.

Prescription burning unlike wildfire is done on a "manageable unit basis."

Science Center starts new publication

"Counterpoint," a new monthly internal publication for the Health Science Centers, published its first edition in March. "Counterpoint" is funded through Tech's Medical School as a service to the community. The publication is designed to let the public know how their money is being spent, according to Peggy Nodurft, editor of "Counterpoint."

The publication includes features as well as news about the employees, new equipment, and Health Science activities. The publication is about and for education and services, and clinic and medical care in all locations.

"Counterpoint" is written and edited by Health Communications. Health Communications is a news and public service. They handle news releases for the Health Science Center.

THE SAGA OF AN ELEGANT GYPSY-AL DiMEOLA

There are some musicians whose careers are extraordinary. Al DiMeola is one of them. At 18, he was a student at the Berklee School of Music in Boston. A year and a half later he was the guitar mainstay of Return to Forever. Last year, Al surprised everyone with "Land of the Midnight Sun," an album which excited jazz and rock audiences alike.

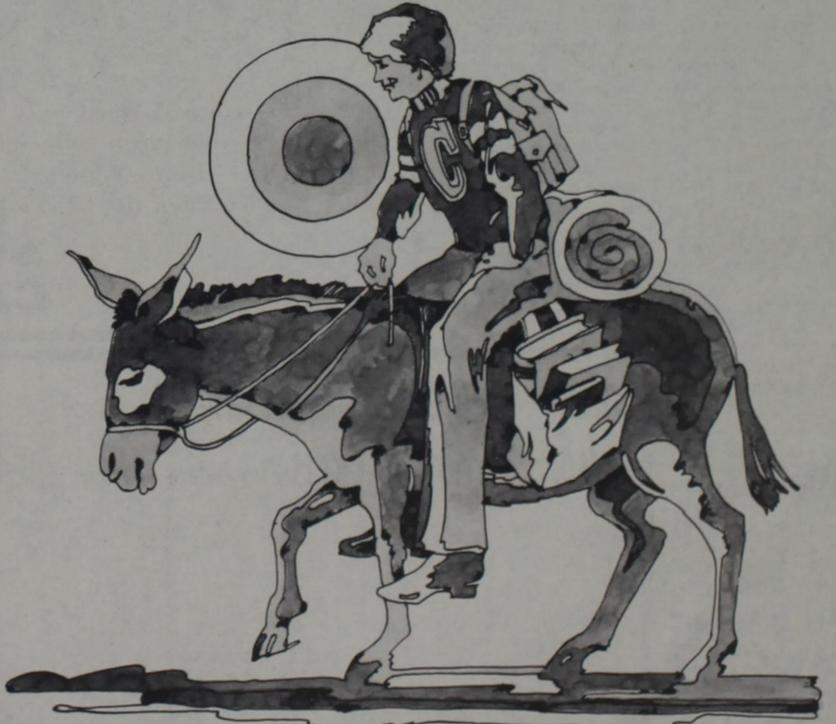

Now Al gives us "Elegant Gypsy" which has a Spanish flavor due in part to his collaboration with Paco de Lucia, one of Spain's premier flamenco guitarists. With "Elegant Gypsy," Al's fiery guitar inventions are more powerful than ever.

"Elegant Gypsy," from the extraordinary Al DiMeola. On Columbia Records and Tapes.

At any price you can afford to be choosy.

Because the value of every diamond is determined by four characteristics (cut, color, clarity and carat weight), you can always use these qualities to your best advantage.

Perhaps you're attracted by the grandeur of a large diamond. Well, sometimes a large stone can cost the same as a smaller one. Simply because it has a little more color. Or a delicate birthmark hidden inside.

On the other hand, you may feel size isn't the most important quality. Then you could choose a diamond that's small, but perfectly cut to sparkle with an icy-white elegance.

In any case, you'll be able to find one to suit your personality. Because each one is an individual, with its own combination of characteristics. And you can use these qualities any way you wish, to help you decide what's precisely right for you.

But the important thing to remember is to buy a diamond engagement ring you'll be happiest with. You'll be sharing it for a lifetime with someone you love.

And for that reason alone, you should be choosy.

A diamond is forever.

Prices shown represent retail quotations for these specific rings (enlarged for detail). Your jeweler has many diamonds to choose from and can give you the best guidance. De Beers Consolidated Mines, Ltd.

Raiders try new drill in spring training: Karate

BY GREG DAVIS
UD Sportswriter

For three weeks Tech's football team has been in spring training.

Not unusual, right? Wrong. Instead of the usual off-season, weight lifting and running, karate lessons are now a part of every team member's day.

The Raiders went through five weeks of the self-defense training to help their quickness, flexibility, coordination and agility, according to David Ellis, owner of Texas Karate Institute in Lubbock.

Ellis, karate trainer for the Raiders, has taught karate for several years and is a black belt in three types of karate. Ellis said that many teams around the country have made karate a part of their training programs. The Dallas Cowboys and Cincinnati Bengals have used karate in their programs for four or five years.

Karate not only builds endurance but increases flexibility, according to Ellis. "Most people have tight muscles and when they run or do heavy weight lifting they strain, pull or even tear these muscles. Karate teaches a person how to stretch, be flexible and control the muscles to prevent such injuries, Ellis said.

Speed and power are basic principles in football as well as karate. "A person must feel light and loose to fight or compete. The basic principles of speed and power is relaxed motion. Those three things, relaxed motion, speed and power are essential to every athlete," Ellis said.

Mental preparation is an integral part of football and is taught in karate. Mental preparation for competition is very important and should never be taken lightly, Ellis said. If the mind is ready, the reaction is quicker and better. "Karate gives a feeling of well-being and good physical health which leads to mental health. It is a great way to get your head together," Ellis said.

Several of the Red Raiders have noticed improvement in their playing this spring because of the karate lessons.

Greg Wessels, starting guard for the Raiders, said, "The lessons helped with my flexibility and stretching. It is a good way to stay in shape."

Tight end Greg Adkins, said, "The program really helped me with my quickness and speed. I do find it hard to apply all the karate we learned to football because they are two separate sports."

"I found the stretching helped me in many ways, but as far as using karate in football there is little opportunity to use these skills," according to Tres Adams, reserve quarterback for the Raiders.

Karate, however, is not just for the athlete. Anyone wanting to learn may do so, Ellis said. He did caution that many schools do not teach karate as a fighting tool, but as an art.

"Some karate schools are not professional in their teaching methods. These schools play on the public's lack of knowledge on the subject," Ellis said.

Ellis added that the school chosen by the individual should be investigated as to its qualification and quality of instructors.

Tornado's Myernick fills leadership role

DALLAS (AP) - Dallas Tornado Coach Al Miller says he felt he was throwing Glen Myernick "to the wolves" when he made the 1976 soccer Collegiate Player of the Year his starting center fullback.

But in two games, the 22-year-rookie has made the wolves in the North American Soccer League shy.

"I didn't think he was prepared to do it," Miller said, "but Myernick has given us that added leadership we were lacking."

Myernick is anchoring a Dallas defense that has allowed only one goal - a penalty kick - in two games. What makes it even sweeter for Miller is that the Hartwick College product is the leader of a defense that includes three other U.S.-born players.

They are Steve Pecher, a brawny, aggressive 190-pounder who was NASL Rookie of the Year in 1976, and Neil Cohen, a two-year man out of Dallas' Bryan Adams High School. The fourth man is English veteran George Ley.

"It is imperative that leadership come from the position I play," Myernick said. "I have vision of the whole field. Anytime you can help direct it's a plus."

Myernick took over the position because the Tornado had to wait for the arrival of English import Max Thompson. But Miller may decide to stick with Myernick now, although Thompson is available.

"I don't think Thompson or anyone else could do as well as the four defenders we have right now," Miller said. "If those four maintain that rate, they'll have to get better. If they keep the pressure on, we'll be tough. And if they slip a little, that's what goalkeeper Kenny Cooper gets paid for."

Dallas is 2-0 for the year and will travel to New York Saturday to play Cosmos.

Myernick has orchestrated a Dallas defense that 27 times this season pulled a successful "off-side trap" on opponents during free kicks.

Miller said Myernick has made the Tornado defense more compact giving it a "swarming" effect. It has given the midfielders more flexibility to move into the attack. Two of the goals in the 3-0 victory over St. Louis Saturday were scored by midfielders Kevin Kewley and Tony Bellinger. Bellinger is a rookie.

"What we are sacrificing in experience, we're getting back in quickness and young legs," Miller said. "The combination of people swarming and Myernick's ability to control this is making a big difference for us."
