Bush troop proposal supported by West

By The Associated Press

LONDON — Western European leaders Thursday supported the U.S. proposal for significant new troop withdrawals from Europe but, amid hints of anxiety, stressed that they want a continued American presence. Britain said it hoped this was the last reduction planned by Washington.

The Soviet Union welcomed as a sign that "things are changing for the better" the proposal by President Bush to cut troop levels in central Europe to 195,000 for each superpower — below the 275,000 being negotiated at talks in Vienna.

But Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov complained the plan did not go far enough, adding, "We must continue to have as our goal no foreign troops on foreign soil."

Some analysts said the Bush plan signaled the beginning of the final withdrawal of American troops from Western Europe — dreaded by many of the U.S. allies in NATO — as well as the departure of all the Soviets.

"I personally would be surprised if the Soviets have anything like 195,000 soldiers left in East Germany within the next two to three years," said Francois Heisbourg, director of the London-based Institute of Strategic Studies.

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Britain attached "great importance to President Bush's assurance that the new figure will be a floor and that no more reductions are envisaged."

Thatcher aides said Bush telephoned her Saturday to discuss the proposal, and "we indicated our support."

Bush sent two senior aides to put this plan to the leaders of the four major Western European powers, Britain, France, West Germany and Italy.

The United States has 305,000 troops in central Europe, and the Soviet Union has 565,000. Another 30,000 U.S. troops in Britain and southern Europe are excluded from the Bush proposal.

West Germany, where most of the U.S. troops are deployed, hailed the proposal. Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg called it "a balanced combination of disarmament policy and unequivocal recognition of the West's defense readiness and alliance solidarity."

West German enthusiasm for troop pullouts by both sides reflected eagerness for unification with East Germany, where 380,000 of the Soviet troops on foreign soil are stationed.

Two other East bloc nations, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, have demanded that the Soviet forces leave their soil.

Other European NATO allies are concerned about being dominated by a powerful, single German state. The fears are heightened on a continent that was overrun by Nazi Germany in World War II.

They are also worried about the United States detaching itself from Europe.

Student Senate shoots down resolution mandating 2.0 GPA for members

By CHRIS BOBBITT
The University Daily

The Texas Tech Student Senate failed to approve a concurrent resolution Thursday night that called for a required semester grade point average of 2.0 for all senators.

"I believe that if I were a constituent, and I recognized that there was someone on the senate that could not make a 2.0 regardless of the circumstances, that would take away from my opinion of this organization," said Sen. Stuart Schmidt.

Schmidt introduced the resolution following the implementation of increased admission standards for the university by the administration, he said.

"We are elected to serve the university, and I don't see how I can look up to someone as a senator from my college as able to adequately serve my college if he cannot maintain a 2.0," said Sen. Russell Laird.

"We are an institution of elected students, elected by the constituents, and the student bill of rights guarantees students the ability to participate in their student government and in any political endeavors on campus," Sen. Ross Crabtree said in opposing the resolution.

"Everyone can have a bad semester, and if you were in this senate right now and you were to have a bad semester, you would be out of here," said Rodney Markham, president of the senate. "It is not grade point averages that got the bank on campus. It is not GPA that recognized the football team or funds organizations. It is leadership."

Despite arguments by senators Jamey Laney and Bret Hobbs in favor of the resolution, the senate voted against the resolution 23-17.

In other business, funds were allocated from the senate contingency fund to bring the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill University Teleconference on "Depressive Illness on Campus" to Tech. The adopted senate resolution, introduced by Sen. Doug Tate, will help support a program that offers support to depressed college students.

The Dean of Students Office and private organizations also will provide funding for the teleconference, which will be free to all students. The teleconference will be from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Feb. 13.

Black achievements recognized in program

By KIRK PARKS
The University Daily

A celebration recognizing the contributions of outstanding figures in black history marked the beginning of Black History Month Thursday night in the UC ballroom.

Phillip Birdine, an assistant dean of students, delivered a proclamation from the city of Lubbock in the absence of Mayor B.C. "Peck" McMinn.

The proclamation stated, "February has been designated as Black History Month and will be observed in our community with a series of special presentations and exhibits. Whereas this observance affords a special opportunity to become more knowledgeable about the black heritage and to honor the many black leaders who have contributed to the progress of our nation. And whereas, such knowledge can strengthen the insight of all our citizens regarding the issue of human rights, the great strides that have been made in the crusade to eliminate the barriers of equality for minorities and the continuing struggle against racial discrimination and poverty."

Paul Wyatt, president of the Black Students Association, said the fact that black history is studied only one month each year is a form of history.

"Black History Month is modern-day slavery of the mind, because we are being dictated when to study black history, and that is February only. We are being dictated where to study black history, and that is outside the classroom. We are being dictated why to study black history, and that is because blacks have done so much for their people," Wyatt said. "But I'm here to tell you that's not it. Blacks have not only done much for their people, but blacks have done so much for these United States, and the people that live in them. Black History Month is a month that society has taken all of the famous blacks and their contributions and has stuffed them into 28 days."

Wyatt noted contributions of blacks such as Fredrick Jones, who invented the refrigeration system in order to transport meat; Richard Spikes, who invented the automatic gearshift; Elija McCoy, who invented the automatic lubrication system; and Charles Droop, who invented a blood preservation system.

Lunch counter sit-in re-enacted 30 years later in Greensboro

By The Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — The dramatic lunch counter sit-in 30 years ago that helped ignite the 1960s civil rights movement surprised everyone, even the four black participants who re-enacted it Thursday at Woolworth's.

"We were scared," recalled Franklin McCain, one of the four college students who staged the first lunch counter sit-in Feb. 1, 1960. "All I wanted was a Coke and a doughnut."

"If someone had come up behind me and said boo, I probably would have fallen off the stool," said another protester, David Richmond.

When McCain and his three college friends took their same seats Thursday, they were treated like celebrities. A black Woolworth executive greeted them before they sat down to a breakfast of eggs, grits, bacon and coffee.

McCain, Richmond, Joseph McNeil and Jibreel Khazan, formerly Ezell Blair Jr., were surrounded by dozens of reporters and spectators when they ordered food from two women who worked there on Feb. 1, 1960.

Woolworth Vice President Aubrey Lewis noted that 30 years ago he, too, would have been denied service. "I'm proud you had the courage to open the doors for a movement," Lewis said.

While they waited for their meals, some spectators began singing "We Shall Overcome." Outside there was more singing, directed by the NAACP, and some bystanders carried placards saying "Feb. 1, 1960. It seems like only yesterday but it could be tomorrow" and "The only thing that's worthwhile is change — Remembering Feb. 1, 1960."

One thing that hasn't changed much is the lunch counter, which looks about the same as it did in 30-year-old news photographs about the sit-in.

When the four North Carolina A&T State University freshmen refused to leave the whites-only counter 30 years ago, their sit-in touched off similar protests across the South.

During their sit-in, which began about 4 p.m., a policeman stood near them and slapped his billyclub in the palm of his hand a few times, but they were not threatened with arrest. The store was closed at 5 p.m., a half-hour early, and they left peacefully.

"We did get some encouragement on the first day and we got it from quarters you wouldn't ordinarily expect it to come from," McCain said.

"There was a little old white lady of oh, 75 years of age, who came over and placed hands on our shoulders and said to us, 'Boys, I'm so proud of you. The only thing I regret is that it didn't happen 20 years earlier.'"

People should ponder life, death AIDS issue

Cindy Pandolfo
News Editor

To live or to die — that is the question.

I know Tech students probably are tired of hearing about AIDS. Every time you turn on the TV or pick up a newspaper, the topic is AIDS.

And yes, this is another column about AIDS, but please don't turn the page. Read just one more column for your own sake.

Today at noon, a rally at the free speech area in front of the UC will kick off an AIDS awareness campaign. Petitions urging Tech regents to install condom machines on campus will be available for any interested party — students, faculty and staff, administrators, concerned citizens — to sign.

More than 1,400 free condoms will be distributed with AIDS awareness and safe sex literature.

Many of you will read this column and think, "This doesn't concern me. I can't get AIDS."

That is not true. AIDS is not a disease of just homosexuals. AIDS is no respecter of age, sex or race, so it can affect you.

Consider this.

FACT: The World Health Organization reported that more than 20,000 Africans had AIDS by the beginning of 1989 — the majority of whom are heterosexual.

FACT: Texas has the fourth highest incidence of AIDS nationwide.

FACT: Last year in Lubbock, more than 93 cases of syphilis, 495 cases of gonorrhea and 1,263 cases of chlamydia were reported to the city health department.

FACT: One of every 500 college students is infected with the HIV virus. The current spring enrollment at Tech is 22,567, which means at least 44 students on this campus are infected.

FACT: Using condoms would change all those statistics!

The AIDS virus usually incubates for seven to 15 years and can remain dormant for as long as 15 years. During that time, a person will be infecting others and not even be aware of it.

The only way you can be absolutely certain that you have not already contracted AIDS is if you are a virgin or have been celibate for more than 15 years. Even if you are a virgin, you could acquire AIDS if you come into contact with an infected person's body fluid. And don't forget that dirty needles used for intravenous drugs also spread the disease.

Students can do many things to be sure they do not get AIDS — such as limiting partners, knowing the sexual history of partners before engaging in sexual activity and staying drug-free.

Another important preventative of the disease is the use of condoms every time you have a sexual encounter.

Some administrators, regents, faculty and staff members and even some of your fellow students on this campus would have you believe the condom issue is a moral issue. AIDS and condoms are not to-have-or-not-to-have-sex issues.

The older generation's response to the AIDS epidemic is, "Don't have sex and you won't get AIDS." As a member of that generation, I would like to tell you that the decision to have or not to have sex is a personal decision that should be made by each individual. No one can make that decision for you, and no one has the right to judge you for whatever decision you make.

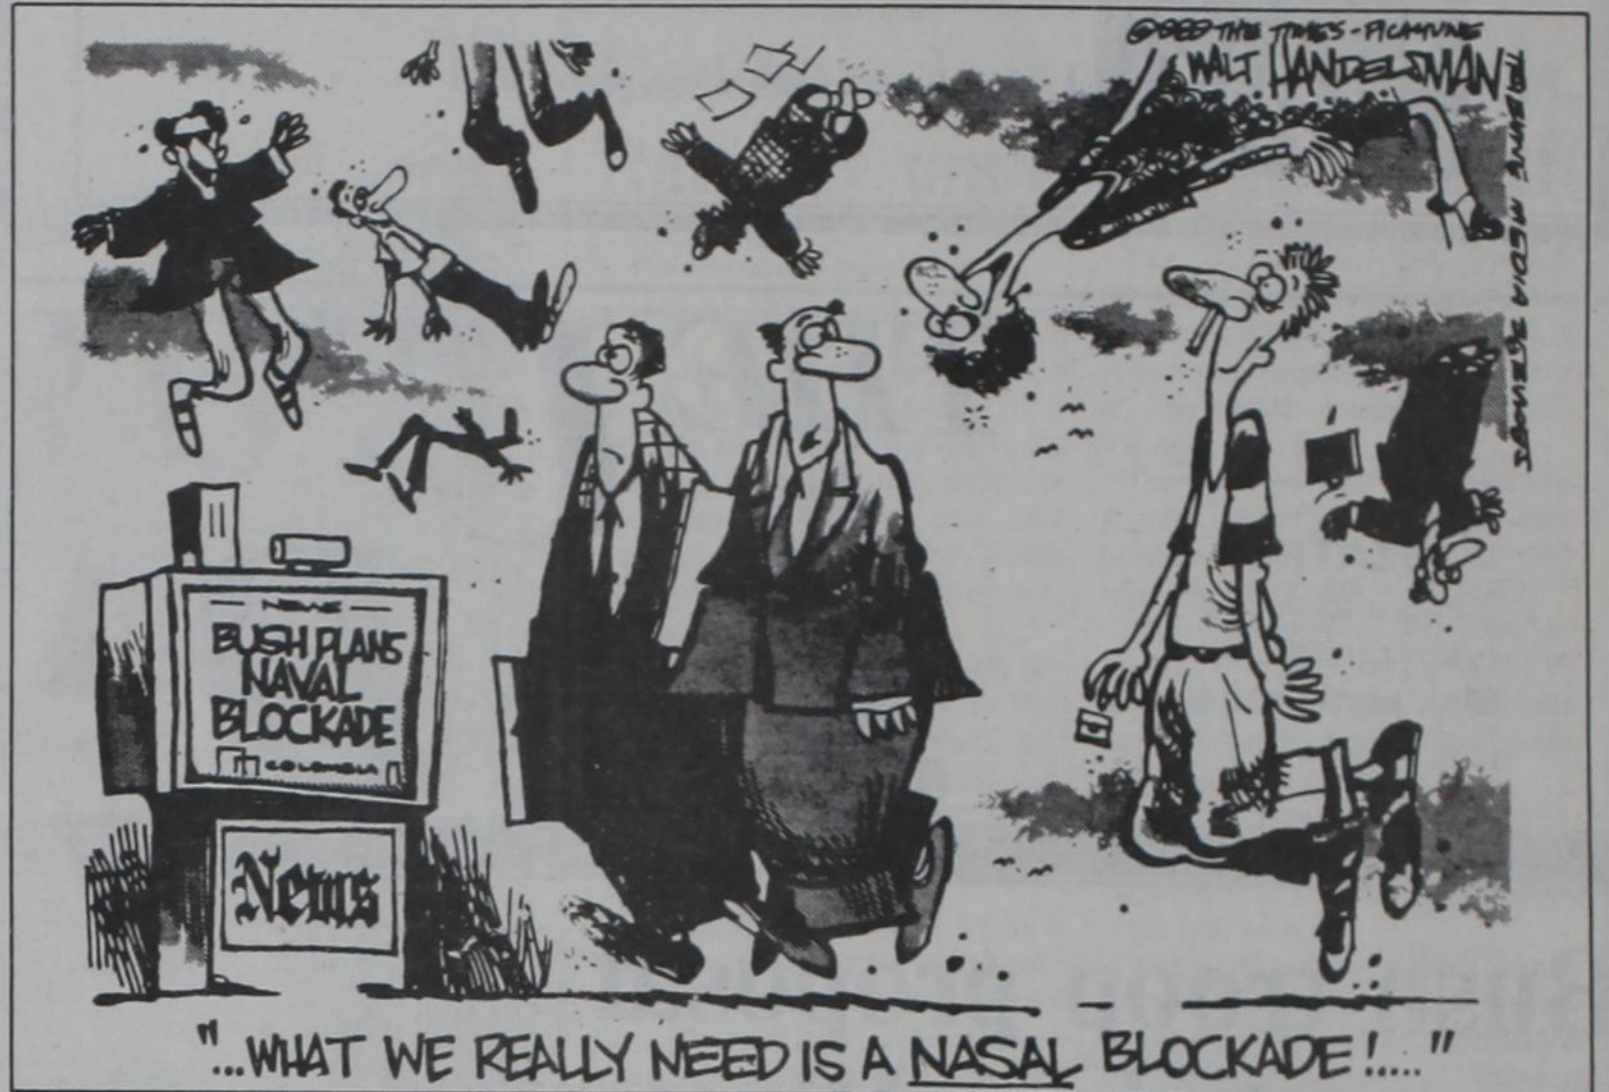

Those who argue that condoms promote promiscuity are not very realistic. The decision to engage in premarital sex is made long before a student enters college. Condoms won't promote sex; they will only make sex safer.

Another argument, that condoms can be purchased off campus, lacks validity. Many students don't have transportation. If you live in Weymouth or Chitwood, it is more than a short jog to a convenience store.

The off-campus availability argument only obscures the real issue, which is: students would be MORE likely to use condoms MORE often if they were located in convenient locations such as dormitories and restrooms. And if more students use condoms, fewer people will be infected with the HIV virus and more lives will be spared.

AIDS, and consequently condoms, is one of the most important issues facing college students today. I urge every student, every faculty and staff member, every administrator who cares about the future of our university and our world, to attend the rally today and join in the fight against AIDS.

EDITOR'S NOTE: As in all columns, the opinions expressed are solely those of the author. The University Daily is in no way officially affiliated with the rally mentioned in the above column.

Letters

What about MR.s?

To the editor:

This letter is written in response to Mr. La Spina's letter of Wednesday.

In the closing of Mark La Spina's letter, he said that he was "by no means insensitive to women's viewpoints." Well, I don't think that he is necessarily "sensitive" to women's viewpoints, either. So I have another viewpoint for him to consider:

You complain about the women; but what about the men who are pushing (or at least implying) for a matrimonial commitment from women? Next time one of those many young women come to you, beseeching your excellent advice, you should ask them about "the guys" in their life who have pushed them into commitment. You would be amazed at how many girls have been proposed to (and turned down the proposal) by the time they are 21. So apparently, there must be a MR. degree, too.

Now, granted, I think you had some valid points in your letter. There are some girls who do live up to the stereotype that you described. However, I do think that you need to open your eyes to your own gender. Maybe some of the men are doing the same things to the women.

Assess hoop season

To the editor:

The 1989-90 Tech basketball team has been anything but FANTASTIC! Who are you kidding? I have attended several games this season, and I have to say I was disappointed! Mr. Maun said in the Jan. 24 issue of The University Daily, "Gerald Myers taught young men how to play a game," but he did not say how Coach Myers takes good fast-break ball players and turns them into average passing ball players.

Mr. Jeff Brown's letter of Jan. 23 to the editor was well written and sensible, but I would have to disagree with him on the initiative of firing Coach Myers immediately. Coach Myers should be evaluated at the end of the season like any other coach at Texas Tech is evaluated. Personally, I will say that at the current time, his chances of staying here should be slim. I don't dare make the assertion that he should be dismissed. It is not up to me or up to any student to make that decision.

Coach Myers is a good man and means well, but for now, things seem to be getting a little out of hand. I say let's wait until the end of the season.

Who knows — maybe it is time to make a change at the top of the coaching staff? If change is needed, then I propose that we go forward and get this matter cleared up. In whatever decision the athletic department and the board of regents make, I stand behind it!

Costa Rica's celebration of democracy century-strong

Carlos Gamboa
Guest Columnist

Three months ago Costa Rica celebrated its 100th anniversary of democracy — a rare privilege in Latin America. This Monday, Costa Ricans return to the ballots to democratically elect a new president to serve a four-year period.

Even though there are more than 10 political parties in Costa Rica, the estimates are that about 86 percent of the voters are divided into 43 percent for Rafael Angel Calderon Jr. of the Christian Unity Party (PUSC) and 43 percent for Dr. Carlos Manuel Castillo of the National Liberation Party (PLN) and that a remaining 12 percent are undecided and 2 percent are for the remaining organizations, including the Communist Party.

This is the third presidential campaign for Rafael Angel Calderon Jr., a 40-year-old Republican lawyer, whose most remarkable background is the fact of being the son of Dr. Calderon Guardia. In 1948, Calderon Guardia was president of Costa Rica and was supposed to end his term by transferring the power to the democratically elected new president. However, Calderon Guardia did not cease power and a civil war erupted, led by Jose Figueres, to attempt to secure the democratic system.

Castillo, the presidential candidate for the ruling PLN, has a doctorate in economics and was recognized as the man with the knowledge to deal with the economic crisis at the beginning of the 1980s, when he was president of the Central Bank. Castillo relies on the 38-year-old political machinery of the PLN.

The achievements of the current Costa Rican administration in the social and economic fields (closing 1989 with unemployment and inflation rates of 3.91 percent and less than 10 percent, respectively) and the efforts made by Nobel Peace Prize-winner Dr. Oscar Arias with his Central American Peace Plan are some of the facts that Castillo has been trying to take advantage of in his campaign in order to gain the votes of the remaining 12 percent of undecided people.

In the past 30 years, the PLN has lost only two political campaigns. If the PLN obtains the majority of votes, for the first time in modern Costa Rican history a political party will remain in the executive branch for a third term.

Castillo's basic platform, on the one hand, is to continue with the long-term housing program for the low income sector of the population. The program was started under the Arias administration. To keep the current system going, fighting against inflation, unemployment and corruption are some of Castillo's commitments.

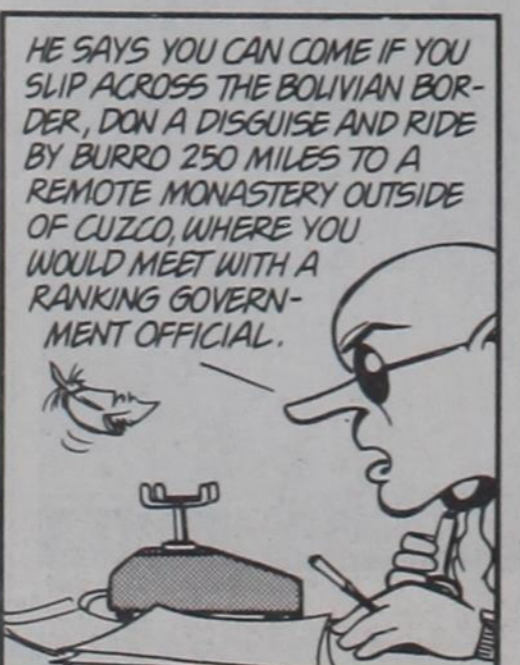

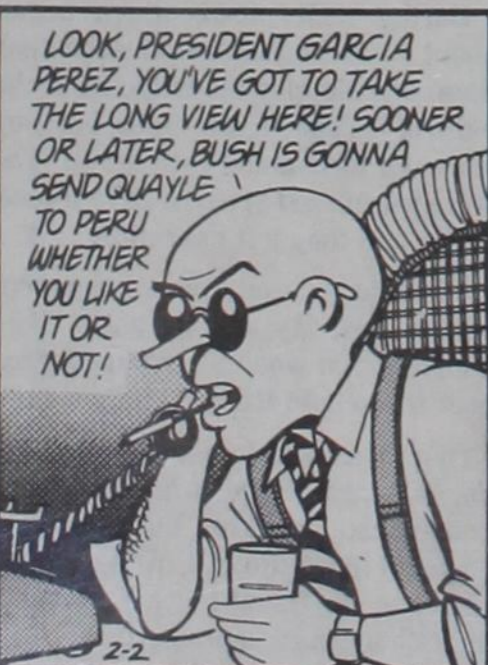

On the other hand, it seems that Calderon's campaign is basic on attacking the current government, careful of not provoking the resentment of the popular sector that, without being "Liberacionistas," are sympathetic with Arias' achievements.

Ironically, the only new subject in this campaign is that after 42 years, and as a meaningful political strategy, Castillo has chosen Jose Figueres' daughter, Muni Figueres, to run as vice president against Dr. Calderon Guardia's son.

No matter who wins the election, this Feb. 4 will be recorded in Latin American history and place Costa Rica again on the front pages of newspapers worldwide. Peace and democracy will continue, and those characteristics are some of the reasons why today, we don't need to answer the question of where Costa Rica is by making reference to its location between Nicaragua and Panama. Today, us Costa Ricans can proudly say that democracy shines by itself.

Gamboa is a senior agricultural economics major from Costa Rica.

Klan clashes over control of territory

By The Associated Press

MALONE — Two different Ku Klux Klan groups are arguing over who gets control of Hill County — the scene of the strangulation death of a black burglary suspect — but Sheriff Brent Button said he would rather they all go away.

"I prefer they go somewhere else," Button said. "I don't think they have any business down here... There's nobody... in Malone or in Hill County that has an interest in them."

But a Klan group from Waco and another from Fort Worth feel the Malone area has become an especially fertile recruiting ground for members following a request for an FBI civil rights investigation by some Hill County residents.

The Fort Worth-based Klavern of the Invisible Empire plans to have what it calls an education and recruitment drive in Malone on Saturday, according to the group's Kleagle, J.D. Calhoun.

Michael Lowe, the exalted Cyclops of the Waco Knights of the KKK, said the Fort Worth group is interloping and trying to "reap what we have sowed in the Hill County area the last three months."

Hotline provides outlet for students

By CONNIE SWINNEY
The University Daily

Interchange, a student hotline at Texas Tech, responds confidentially and seriously to calls concerning sex, roommate conflicts, possible suicides and basic campus information, said Raquel Contreras-Ramos, coordinator of the Interchange program in the Counseling Center.

The service began in 1975 as an information program. Students would call with questions concerning the university, such as football schedules, tuition payment information or organizations on campus, she said.

The Counseling Center recognized a need for a hotline to handle personal problems, she said, so the information line incorporated a crisis line.

"The line handles crises, but students can just call in informally just to relate to another person," Ramos said.

Most of the workers on the line are college students. "They are not experts, but training for a profession that requires a lot of contact with people on a social level," she said.

Ramos said that with the help of an assistant, she screens a student with an interview to determine the student's level of thinking.

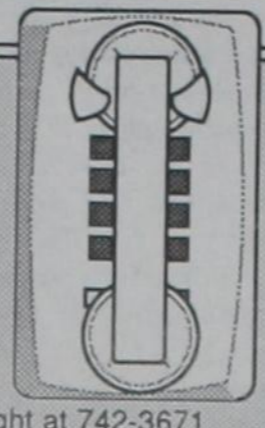

Student Help Line

Tech's on-campus hotline, Interchange, is a confidential counseling service which allows callers to talk about:

- sex
- roommate conflicts
- possible suicides
- campus information

Both the phone counselor's and the caller's identity remain anonymous, allowing the caller to say what is on his or her mind without fear of judgment.

Interchange is available every day 6 p.m. to midnight at 742-3671.

Gerald Kelley/The University Daily

"I want a certain amount of flexibility in their thinking," she said.

"This is important in determining how sensitive and patient a person is to the psychological needs of another person."

The students Ramos deems acceptable by interview complete a two-day training program, she said.

The students discuss hypothetical situations of crisis calls and receive information about the ethics of properly handling calls, she said.

The location of the hotline and the workers' identities are confidential. "It's important to have complete confidentiality in a psychological setting," she said.

Callers' identities also remain anonymous. Exceptions include crisis call situations, she said.

"Crisis calls range from someone who calls and says, 'I'm going to kill myself,' to, 'I'm going to kill someone else,'" she said.

"To determine the seriousness, the volunteers form a relationship with the caller. Get the caller to keep talking to you, and you can assess the severity of the call.

"Interchange can be a friend. We treat all calls with respect, and that respect is conveyed to the caller. We encourage students to call if they feel they need for someone to listen to them, because we take the students seriously."

"Alex," an Interchange volunteer and social welfare major, said freshman students especially need the line.

"Most of them have not spent a large amount of time away from home," Ramos said. "They may not have a serious problem but just need someone to talk to."

Students can call Interchange at 742-3671 from 6 p.m. to midnight every day.

Measles rage in Dallas, El Paso

By The Associated Press

EL PASO — Health officials in Dallas and El Paso are stepping up immunization efforts to combat a measles outbreak that has spread to 16 counties.

Dallas and El Paso have the highest numbers of measles cases, with Dallas reporting 183 confirmed cases since Dec. 1 and El Paso 51 cases since the beginning of January, said Cindy Banister, assistant division director of the immunization division of the state health department.

Grayson County north of Dallas is third with 35.

"We're not seeing the numbers like we were in Harris County last year," Banister said. "We're still seeing disease occur. I certainly would not say Dallas is a repeat of Houston." Last year Houston reported nearly 2,000 cases with nine deaths.

Houston has reported only five confirmed cases since Jan. 1 this year, said Houston immunization program administrator Fred Wilt.

National health officials had hoped to stop measles in the United States by fall 1982, but outbreaks in Texas in 1981 disrupted that goal.

Measles is a highly contagious disease that can lead to serious cases of pneumonia or encephalitis, a swelling of the brain which can be fatal.

Children usually are immunized against the disease at 15 months and again before sixth grade, but health officials are allowing infants as young as 6 months to receive the measles-only vaccine.

Dallas and El Paso health agencies have held several mass immunizations. In El Paso the city-county health district took out half-page ads in both newspapers advertising the immunization clinics.

The El Paso vaccinations are being offered to children ages 6 months to 6 years and are given out at recreation centers, a mall, a high school and a clinic on Thursday and Friday.

Dr. Charles Haley, Dallas County epidemiologist, said his office plans immunization clinics through the middle of March.

"We don't see this as a small problem," Haley said. "There are large numbers of unimmunized preschoolers. We can offer immunization clinics, but if the parents don't bring their children to the immunization clinics, we're kind of helpless."

Other counties with outbreaks but with fewer reported cases are Bexar, Brazos, Denton, Erath, Harris, Hill, Hutchinson, Kaufman, Tarrant, Travis, Van Zandt, Webb and Wharton.

Cotton show will kick out the jams Sunday night

By RICK STORM
The University Daily

Tap into the roots of rock 'n' roll, and Cotton will be found. Alligator recording artist James Cotton, a living blues legend, will invade the UC Allen Theatre at 8:15 p.m. Sunday, and no prisoners will be taken.

Da bluz is what I'm talkin' about. Born in 1925 in Tunica, Miss., Cotton learned to play harmonica after hearing Sonny Boy Williamson play harmonica on the radio. He ran away from home at age 9 to find his hero and was adopted by Williamson.

Cotton's hard-driving, bump-and-grind, blues style was forged in his formative years in Memphis, Tenn., where, at age 13, he played with one of the granddads of rock 'n' roll, the immortal bluesman, Howlin' Wolf. The Wolf recorded such standards as "Smokestack Lightnin'," "Spoonful," "Back Door Man" and "I Ain't Superstitious." His songs have been recorded by the Doors, the Rolling Stones, the Yardbirds, Rod Stewart, Cream, Led Zeppelin and the Grateful Dead.

In 1954 "Mr. Superharp" moved to Chicago to play in Muddy Waters' band. Waters, probably the most influential bluesman since Robert Johnson and arguably the greatest bluesman of them all, stands with Howlin' Wolf as the greatest influence on rock 'n' roll music.

In the 1940s Waters took his Delta blues sound from Rolling Forks, Miss., and took them to Chicago, where he adapted the country blues to electric instruments.

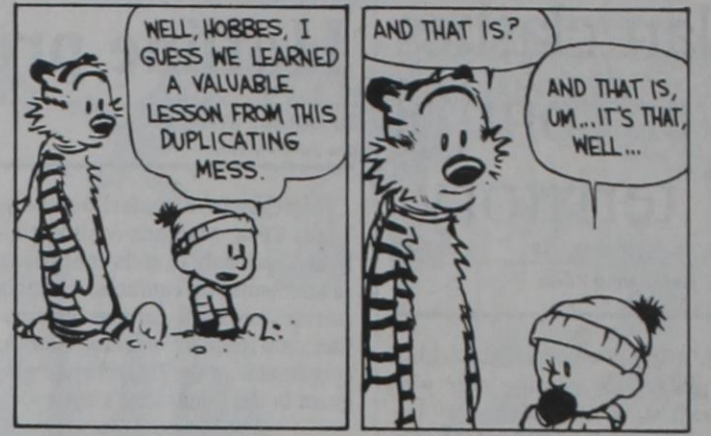

Cotton teamed up with Johnny Winter, king of the Texas guitar slingers, to back Waters on his last four albums before Waters died in 1974.

Cotton formed his own band in 1966 and has been on the road performing his kick-out-the-jams style of blues ever since. A James Cotton concert is a walk-in, crawl-out affair.

So put a little rock in your sock, a little shake in your shaker, a little quake in your quaker and boogie to a blues giant Sunday night.

Carrasco's show promises to be energetic, classic

By KIRK PARKS
The University Daily

Joe "King" Carrasco is truly a Texas original. Born in West Texas, his Lubbock show is a sort of homecoming for him. It's also a chance for people to catch a firebrand, party-till-you-drop, good old-fashioned, rock 'n' roll show. If you haven't seen Joe "King" Carrasco and the Crowns yet, don't make any other plans this Saturday.

As for how Joe got started and combined rock music with Latin music: well, it all started on a distant planet, where... actually, it started in Dumas, Texas. A young boy, striving to play guitar, joined the infamous "garage bands," but soon his talent carried him above all that. His extensive travels took him to California and then to Mexico, where he learned about the Latin-flavored music played there. He took a liking to it and wanted to see if he could "translate this music to a broader audience." It was shortly thereafter that he released his first album, El Molino.

Latin-flavored rock 'n' roll always has been the crux of the band, but it took a stint in California and the local punk scene there to speed up Carrasco's music. He then went to England, where he got a record deal with Stiff Records. From there, he toured England and Europe; he eventually ended up in New York, where he was a big success. Still, his Texas roots were a-calling, and he found himself back in Austin where, with his powerful live shows, he quickly made a name for himself.

Joe "King" also is fired up about the show, saying that "Texas audiences are crazy" and that Lubbock people "really get excited." With the kind of energy he expends in his shows, combined with the energy of an enthusiastic crowd, you can expect one heck of a concert — one your kids might want to know about 20 years down the road.

Come see Joe "King" Carrasco and the Crowns at 9:30 p.m. Saturday at the Depot Warehouse. Tickets cost $6.50 in advance and $8 at the door. Believe me, when the "King" is involved, money is no object.

Transfers, veteran pitching to tell Raiders' fate

By WAYNE BARRINGER
The University Daily

New faces in new places will be the theme for this year's Texas Tech baseball team. Even Dan Law Field will sport a new look.

The 1990 Red Raiders will start two players from last season's 9-12 Southwest Conference team in this weekend's season-opening, three-game series against New Mexico.

Tech will host the Lobos at 1 p.m. today, Saturday and Sunday at Coronado High School's O'Banion Field. Dan Law Field is under construction until at least next Friday with the addition of an AstroTurf infield.

Gone from the '89 club are the two-through-seven hitters in a batting order that included sluggers Donald Harris and Greg Kobza, both chosen in last year's major league draft, and cleanup hitter Mark Helms. Gilbert Arredondo, Mike Gustafson and Brian Roper also were lost to graduation.

According to manager Larry Hays, Tech will have more depth, a stronger pitching staff and better overall team speed. He thinks that will be the case, anyway. "I don't really know where the quality is yet," Hays said. "I do know that we have some good ball players who have played well in other places."

The starting pitchers will be the most familiar group of this year's team. Junior Rodney Steph will start today's game in the absence of last year's ace Jeff Beck. Beck has been plagued by arm soreness since last year, and Hays said he will be out at least a month.

Kyle Guerry, Kevin Kirk, Kurt Shipley and Brian Boesiger also are back to complement newcomers such as Lucio Chaidez, a junior who will start Saturday's contest, juniors Pete Ardizzone and Bubba Johnson and freshman John Macatee from Plano. Although his pitching staff is as solid as it has been in his three previous seasons here, Hays said Beck's injury is a major setback.

"Beck is probably our biggest concern," Hays said. "We have a lot more depth than we have since I've been here, but in this league you need a legitimate number one starter going into it. Beck is our man, but at best he's a month away."

"I'm looking right now for another number one."

Behind the pitchers, Hays said he will be looking for some stability in the infield. The players will be experienced, but Hays admits depth will be a problem.

Sophomore Shannon Hays will be a returning starter at third base. Junior Matt Martin was last year's shortstop, but the manager said he will start transfer Tim Tadlock from Denton. Martin did not lose the job, rather Tadlock won it.

"Tadlock is the best defensive shortstop I've seen since I've been here," Hays said. "Plus he hit about .340 last fall."

Hays plans to use Martin as the backup for second and short and said he feels Martin will be steady.

Two more junior transfers will occupy first and second base. Mike Adams from Odessa will replace Kobza at first, and Mark Ward will take over for Gustafson at position four.

Another junior transfer, Tony Tijerina, won the catching honors. Hays is carrying four catchers on the roster, but two are currently out with injuries.

"We're getting close to having two deep at every position," Hays said. "Short and second will be our only problem spot depthwise. With the catching injuries, I'm glad we have four." Hays admits that this year's offense has lost some of its power punch, but he also said he does not see that as a big problem for this club.

"I think we've got some pretty good hitters," he said. "Power hitters are good a lot of times, but when you run into that pitcher who throws 90 miles an hour on your fists, then it gets tough."

"Sometimes you get these guys with a little shorter swing and can hit it in the gaps but won't hit as many home runs and can run a little bit. Sometimes you can score almost as many runs."

Hays said the addition of the artificial turf should help his team. Although he did not get to recruit with the turf in mind (the decision to revamp Dan Law Field came late last fall), Hays said he thinks the Raiders "will do a pretty good job on it."

"To have a good program you have to have a good short game," he said, "and turf really makes the short game more of a factor."

The turf is scheduled to be finished by next Friday if weather and other factors cooperate, Hays said.

Raider men power past North Texas

By CAMERON MAUN
The University Daily

Dominating singles play allowed the Texas Tech men's team to handily defeat North Texas 7-1 in the first round of the Tech Indoor Quadrangular Thursday night.

The No. 2 seed doubles results were not available at press time, but the Raiders secured victory in the dual match by winning the minimum five games in singles play.

No. 1 seed Matt Jackson had no difficulty in disposing of the Eagles' Sandeep Chhabra in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1.

Coach Ron Damron said he was pleased with Jackson's effort.

"He played very good," Damron said. "He jumped on their guy pretty hard tonight and didn't let up."

Jackson raised his record to 6-4 for the year in leading the Raiders (2-0). North Texas is 0-1 for the year.

Fabio Walker defeated North Texas' Scott Peebles in straight sets 6-3, 6-0 in No. 2 singles action. Walker ran his record to 4-2 with the victory.

No. 3 Michael Slauson did not fare as well as Jackson and Walker, losing in three sets to Greg Lim 6-3, 1-6, 7-5. Slauson's record fell to 10-4 with the defeat.

Tech's Richard Dopson continued his fine play from the No. 4 slot with a straight-set victory over Kevin Peters 6-3, 6-4.

No. 5 Alan Christopher boosted his team-best record to 9-1 with a convincing win against Greg McCurdy 6-1, 6-3.

Christopher moved up to the No. 5 position for North Texas after his performance against Abilene Christian.

Thomas Cook dominated Tor Krosby 6-2, 6-2 in the No. 6 position.

In doubles play, the No. 1 team of Jackson and Walker won 6-2, 6-0 over Krosby and Chhabra and the No. 3 team of Christopher and Charles Bailey defeated North Texas' Rick Sweeney and David Toney 6-3, 6-4.

The Raiders play Tulsa at noon today in the Tech Athletic Training Center.

Vick not settling for single loss in Tech Indoor Quadrangular

By CAMERON MAUN
The University Daily

A perfect record heading into conference play is coach Kathy Vick's goal as the Texas Tech women's tennis team opens the spring campaign at the Tech Indoor Quadrangular today and Saturday at the Lubbock Athletic Club.

Teams that will compete in the Quadrangular include Colorado, New Mexico and North Texas.

The Red Raiders posted a 3-0 mark in fall play by defeating Abilene Christian, New Mexico State and Southwest Texas. Those three teams had a combined mark of 23-4 in fall play.

Vick said an undefeated record going into conference play is not an unlikely scenario for her squad.

"I'd like to finish up this weekend 6-0," Vick said. "I feel that is pretty realistic."

"We'll have to play well, but if we do, we can take all three matches. We have seen New Mexico and Colorado in flighted tournaments and we came out on top as far as matches won, but dual team matches are a different thing. Colorado had some injuries then, so I know they'll be improved."

Sophomore Mallory Grantham was injured all fall but is expected to hold down the No. 1 position for the Raiders this spring. Vick said Grantham should be able to perform well in spite of her injuries.

"Mallory is still having some pain and occasional swelling," Vick said. "But I really don't think it will slow her much."

Former No. 1 Amy Ryan enters the match with a 5-6 record and is expected to be in the No. 2 singles slot. Ryan led the Tech assault on Colorado last fall, when Tech swept its nine matches against the Buffaloes.

The rest of the lineup is projected to be No. 3 Rebeca Nevarez-Ayon, No. 4 Karen Biggerstaff, No. 5 Tanya Hamilton and No. 6 Cristi Cudd.

Tech takes hot streak on road

Owls stand in way of Raider express

By JEFF PARKER
The University Daily

Houston is the next stop for the Red Raider express as the Texas Tech women's basketball team tries to continue its dramatic turnaround against the Rice Owls at Autry Court at 5 p.m. Saturday.

The Raiders moved into a tie for third place in the Southwest Conference standings with their 74-62 victory over Texas A&M Tuesday. Tech improved to 12-7 and 5-3 in the SWC, bouncing back from a disappointing 1-3 start to conference play.

Both the Raiders and TCU (8-10, 5-3) now trail only Arkansas, who stands at 14-3 and 7-1 in conference action, and league-leading Texas, who is 14-3 and 8-0 in the SWC.

Tech is enjoying its longest win streak of the season after rattling off four consecutive wins against Baylor, TCU, SMU and Texas A&M.

The Owls, however, have dropped three straight contests by a combined 98 points to SWC foes Texas A&M, Texas and Houston.

freshman forward from Houston, leads Rice in scoring with just over 11 points an outing. Stiner also is the Owls' top rebounder with 7 boards a game.

The Raiders lead the all-time series with Rice 12-3 and hold a 6-1 advantage in contests at the Owls' Autrey Court.

In the season's first meeting between the two clubs, 13 Tech players got in the scorebook, with Kelly Schilling's 11 points leading the way to a 68-49 victory.

Rice was paced by then-reserve center Robin Castell's 16 points but was unable to cope with the Raiders' tough defense, which held the Owls to a paltry 31.3 shooting percentage.

Stacy Seibert, who will continue to come off Sharp's bench, is leading Tech in scoring averaging 12.2 points a game. Reena Lynch paces the team in rebounds with 6.7 a contest.

As of Thursday, senior guard Karen Farst was not scheduled to start Saturday. Farst led Tech with 17 points against Texas A&M after returning from a two-game absence.

Schilling would start her third straight game in Farst's place.

NCAA to reinstate Arkansas athletes

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Four University of Arkansas baseball players, suspended from competition after their names were found among the records of an alleged bookmaker, will be eligible to resume their collegiate careers after they sit out 15 games, the NCAA said.

Jim Treadway, a UA spokesman, said Thursday that the NCAA notified Al Witte, the school's NCAA representative, and that Witte informed Chancellor Dan Ferritor.

"The NCAA has notified the University of Arkansas that the remaining student athletes who were suspended from competition because of gambling activities have had their eligibility restored," Treadway said.

Academics, revenue proposal top Lawless' list on CFA board

By WAYNE BARRINGER
The University Daily

He already has a list of credentials a mile long.

But now, Texas Tech University President Dr. Robert Lawless has added one more element of prestige to his credit.

Lawless has been appointed by current members of the College Football Association to replace former member William Cunningham on the CFA board of directors.

"I think this will be good exposure for Texas Tech," Lawless said.

Lawless will be the representative to the CFA from the Southwest Conference. Former member Cunningham, from the University of Texas, recently resigned his post on the board.

Lawless said the job, which is non-compensatory, will not take much time away from his duties at Tech. Meetings are conducted twice a year for one day each. One is in January with the NCAA convention, which he already attends.

"It's not going to be terribly extensive," he said. "Besides the meetings, just basic upkeep reading will be involved."

The CFA is a subset group of 65 members whose purpose is to promote athletics and academics, especially the delicate relationship between the two.

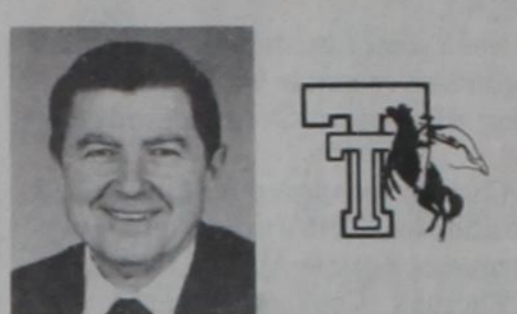

Lawless said the CFA board has sponsored legislation that has been introduced in the NCAA conventions, including the most recent one in Dallas in January.

"I am particularly interested in running the academic side," he said. "There are some of us who have a good handle on the business aspects, but I would like to focus on the student-athlete as opposed to the athlete-student."

Lawless attended his first meeting on Jan. 7. The president said his involvement on the board has prompted him to make an informal proposal to move in the opposite direction in revenue terms than college athletics are now headed.

"The overall idea is that college athletics should not have a financial payoff system like it does now,"

Lawless

Lawless said. "My proposal is to take all the television and bowl revenue and distribute it equally to all at that level."

The current situation is one of wrong ideals, he said, because now only the teams that go to bowls or are on television get the revenue from those events. Hence, the less known schools have a hard time with budgets and recognition.

But that is not all.

"This issue transcends Texas Tech," Lawless said. "Collegiate sports is not meant to be a capitalist undertaking for the coaches involved. In terms of what college sports should be about, in the true college spirit, the money should be distributed equally. Right now, colleges do not share."

Lawless cited the attitude 20 years ago, when college sports were played for pride and prestige, compared to now, when schools are competing for millions of dollars in TV and bowl revenue.

"This attitude is basically wrong," he said. "To compete for the thrill of competition and winning should not be monetarily based."

Although Lawless said he feels strongly about the issue, he also realizes it has little, if any, chance of being taken realistically.

"I'd say that if you gave it a .01 percent chance of passing, that would be optimistic," he said.

Not only was Lawless at the CFA meeting on Jan. 7, but he attended the 84th NCAA convention during that time.

Among some of the new legislation from that convention, Lawless said those of shortening the basketball season by three games, reducing spring football practice and the year-round drug testing restrictions will not affect Tech severely.

"Nothing passed was unduly harsh on Tech," he said. "Except the new graduation rate information."

The new regulations, which go into effect in October, will force universities to make public the graduation rates not only of athletes, but of the whole student body. To make matters more difficult, the figures must be available complete with ethnic breakdowns as well.

"It's not too hard to do for the small percentage of students in athletics," Lawless said. "But now it must be campuswide and include the ethnic breakdowns."

"We don't have the mammoth computer system it would take to facilitate an ethnic breakdown for the campus as a whole."

Lawless said the NCAA convention was good for student athletes and that the changes made were on their behalf.

"There will have to be a great effort, though, in institutional research to comply with this legislation for non-athletes," he said.

Lawless received his letter of appointment from CFA executive director Charles M. Neinas on Dec. 27, 1989.

Walker trade complete; Dallas deals draft picks

By The Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys and the Minnesota Vikings wrapped up the Herschel Walker trade Thursday with a deal that gives the Vikings three draft picks and allows the Cowboys to keep three veterans who played for them during the 1989 season.

Cornerback Issiac Holt, and linebackers Jesse Solomon and David Howard will remain Cowboys, and the Vikings will get third-round picks in 1990 and 1991 and a 10th-round pick in 1990.

The Cowboys originally received eight draft picks when they traded their star running back to the Vikings in the middle of the season.

The Vikings had until 5 p.m. Thursday to accept a deal with Dallas or the Cowboys would have put the three players on the plan B unprotected list.

The NFL will release the list of unprotected players today.
