Bush bombs Baghdad bad boy

Persian Gulf war breaks out; Bush marshalls U.S., allied force

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush marshalled American and allied military forces into war with Iraq on Wednesday night, declaring that with Operation Desert Storm: "The battle has been joined" to free Kuwait.

The initial attack was still underway when Bush spoke to the nation at 9 p.m. EST and said, "We will not fail."

Bush said "all reasonable efforts" to resolve the Persian Gulf by diplomacy had failed and that Iraqi President "Saddam Hussein met every overture of peace with contempt."

He said the allied forces — "standing shoulder to shoulder" — would drive Iraqi troops out of Kuwait, and destroy Iraq's nuclear potential and chemical warfare facilities.

Bush said he had been assured by the top American military commander that the air operations were proceeding according to plans. He said no ground forces were involved in the assault against Iraqi positions in Kuwait and Iraq.

"The world could wait no longer" for Saddam to withdraw, Bush said.

He said it had become clear that economic sanctions alone would never compel a withdrawal, he said. His brief speech included a sharp denunciation of the Iraqi leader. "While the world prayed for peace, Saddam prepared for war," the president said.

Bush repeated his oft-standing pledge that "this will not be another Vietnam," vowing, "I have said this before and I repeat this here tonight, our troops will not be asked to fight with one hand tied behind their back. Our troops will have the best possible support."

Bush acted after molding a potent international alliance to challenge Iraq's occupation of the oil-rich kingdom of Kuwait. He issued his order less than 24 hours after the expiration of a United Nations deadline for Iraq to quit Kuwait — an ultimatum scorned by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Bush, who won congressional backing Saturday for the use of force, telephoned congressional leaders with his decision to strike. Senate President Pro Tem Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia told Bush his prayers were with the president.

"The world could wait no longer. While the world prayed for peace, Saddam prepared for war."

CENTRAL SAUDI ARABIA — The United States launched air attacks early Thursday against Iraq, hurling its mighty air force against an Arab power that for five months has held Kuwait in defiance of the rest of the world.

"The liberation of Kuwait has begun," President Bush declared in Washington.

In Baghdad, television reporters said bombs were falling on the center of the Iraqi capital. They said exploding bombs shook the ground, an oil refinery 10 miles away was in flames, and flashes of light brightened the night sky — apparent anti-aircraft fire.

"Operation Desert Shield" became "Operation Desert Storm" around 12:50 a.m. (4:50 p.m. EST) as F-15E fighter-bombers took off from the largest U.S. air base in central Saudi Arabia and streaked north. "This is history in the making," said Col. Ray Davies, the base's chief maintenance officer.

The offensive included U.S.-allied forces and was aimed at Iraqi troops in both Iraq and Kuwait, U.S. officials said.

But there was no immediate word on whether ground attacks had been mounted against the dug-in Iraqi army in Kuwait. Nor was there any immediate sign of an Iraqi attack on Israel, as threatened.

The early-morning assault was the climax to a crisis that had built over more than five months, as Iraq's President Saddam Hussein, whose forces stormed Kuwait in a lightning invasion Aug. 2, rejected world condemnation and dismissed international economic sanctions designed to force him out of the occupied emirate.

Reporters in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, a staging base for the U.S. force, said air raid sirens sounded about 3:20 a.m. (7:20 p.m. EST) and journalists were told to take shelter.

The AP's Richard Pyle, in the Saudi capital of Riyadh, said sirens also wailed there, but there was no sound of any attack.

The American warplanes took off in pairs, disappearing in red dots that winked out as they gained altitude. The aircraft were heavily loaded with bombs and underwing fuel tanks for the long trip north. They also were armed with cannon and air-to-air missiles for self-defense.

"We've been waiting here for five months now. Now we finally got to do what we were sent here to do," Col. Davies said.

Earlier, ABC and CNN television news reported from Baghdad there were "flashes in the sky." Explosions and machine gun fire could be heard in the background of their reports. "The night sky filled with a hail of bullets from anti-aircraft guns," CNN's John Holliman said.

The U.S.-led attack came one day after the Tuesday midnight deadline set by the U.N. Security Council for an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait. After that, the council declared, the assembled international military force would be free to drive the Iraqis from the conquered oil-rich enclave.

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, quoting Bush, said, "The liberation of Kuwait has begun. In conjunction with the forces of our coalition partners the United States has moved under the code name Operation Desert Storm to enforce the mandates of the United Nations Security Council."

"As of 7 o'clock p.m. Operation Desert Storm forces were engaging targets in Iraq and Kuwait."

Right to the end, Iraq had remained defiant. Saadi Mehdi Saleh, speaker of Iraq's legislature, said on Wednesday that Saddam — already de-facto military commander — would "from now on direct the battle." Saddam later met with his ruling Revolutionary Command Council.

Saleh had said in an interview that Iraq was ready for talks with the United States if U.S. forces are withdrawn from the Persian Gulf. But he reiterated Iraq's threat to use chemical weapons if attacked.

On Wednesday, many of Baghdad's 3.8 million residents, fearful that war was about to befall their ancient city, continued their flight into the countryside.

In Saudi Arabia on Wednesday, as skies cleared after 36 hours of rain in the desert, more than 1 million soldiers had readied for battle — almost 700,000 in the U.S.-led coalition, and more than a half-million Iraqi troops in southern Iraq and Kuwait.

Texans respond to Iraqi war with prayers, tears

By The Associated Press

War broke out in Iraq Wednesday, and Texans prayed for peace and the safe return of their loved ones.

Twyla Beseda, whose son David is a member of the Air Force stationed in Saudi Arabia, wept tears of fear after learning the United States had launched an attack on Iraq.

"I am very scared and disappointed," said Mrs. Beseda, as tears rolled down her face. "I was so hoping it would go the other way. I just got home from work and turned on the television and heard the news. This is devastating."

Mrs. Beseda, a resident of Whiteface, said she feared for her son's life.

"David is stationed at the air base where the Stealth bombers are located," she said. "He loads bombs onto those planes. I just pray to God that he is going to be OK."

"It's such a helpless feeling. I guess all we can do is pray."

The attack, promised unless Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein withdrew from Kuwait by midnight Jan. 15, began about 3:50 p.m. CST (12:50 a.m. in Saudi Arabia and Iraq) as the United States launched air attacks.

"The liberation of Kuwait has begun," President Bush declared in Washington and the name of the campaign changed from Operation Desert Shield to Operation Desert Storm.

"I'm praying for our pilots; they're being shot at," said U.S. Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas. "I hope they all make it back. I hope they get their targets."

"It is a very sad time," Gov. Ann Richards said. "My hope is that it will be completed quickly so that our men and women can come back home safely."

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who was in combat during the Korean war, said, "Regardless of one's feeling before today about the possibility of war, there is no question but that we must now unite behind our troops, pray for divine guidance and hope this war is resolved as quickly as possible with as little loss to human life as possible."

In Houston, happy hour customers at a hotel bar were generally unaware the war had begun Wednesday evening.

"We were just talking now about how much time we would give them — two weeks or two days was what we were thinking," said Mark Burliss of Houston. "I think it's going to be over quickly."

"We should have given (Saddam Hussein) a way out," said Tom Ventruo of New York, sitting in the lobby of the downtown Hyatt Regency. "We never gave him a chance to save face."

Dale Garretson predicted the conflict would be "a couple-day air war."

Susanne Walters, in the Back Room bar, said, "I'm scared of chemical and biological weapons. And terrorism. I'm scared of terrorism."

Jim Freyburger of Seminole, Texas, the father of Marine Sgt. Jim Freyburger Jr., said the United States attack was overdue.

"I thought they waited too damn long," said Freyburger, whose son is stationed aboard a warship in the Persian Gulf. "I think they ought to have started bombing when they told them they would start right after the deadline. I think the attack is the best thing they could have done."

Freyburger said his son was ready for battle.

"I am scared for my son," Freyburger said. "But he has got a little over 19 years of experience in the Marines and this comes with the territory."

Freyburger said an attack was necessary to bring Saddam Hussein to justice.

"I hear those Americans crying 'No blood for oil' and it makes me sick," Freyburger said. "This is not a war about oil. This is the same thing that Hitler did. He started small and the next thing you know he wanted the world. This man has to be stopped."

At the Luby's Cafeteria in Harlingen, Cleofas Avilla said, "I am with President Bush."

"Saddam has said he would attack Israel," said Avilla, a Pentecostal minister. "God will fight against Iraq because nobody can touch Israel."

Burning Bush displayed as UT students protest 'Desert Storm'

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Hundreds of war protesters burned President Bush in effigy and marched on the Texas Capitol Wednesday night, holding candles and chanting slogans including, "Hell no, we won't go. We won't die for Texaco."

An estimated 500 demonstrators entered the Capitol, but most left to join others outside after Capitol police refused to let everyone in. Lt. R.W. Woods said the doors were locked for safety reasons.

Demonstrators burned a stuffed figure labeled "Rambo Bush." One protester held the figure aloft on a long stick before setting it ablaze on the Capitol's south steps, prompting applause by the group.

About a dozen protesters sat on the floor of the Capitol rotunda, saying they wouldn't leave.

The crowd began gathering at the University of Texas and Palmer Auditorium one hour after the United States attacked Iraq, drawn by word of mouth, and flyers and a phone bank organized in case war broke out.

"I came out here because I don't think Americans have any business dying in the Persian Gulf," said UT student George Klos, 31. "The U.S. is not the world's policeman anymore. If these nations have a problem, it's not our problem."

Protesters carried candles, beat drums and blew whistles as they marched through downtown. They chanted slogans, such as "No blood for oil" and "Send Dan Quayle," and carried banners reading "Peace Now," "Impeach George Bush" and "Your Taxes Are Killing Your Children."

Some of the marchers said they planned to "take over the Capitol" and were prepared to be arrested.

Texans focus attention, thoughts, on Iraqi war

By The Associated Press

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, in a speech broadcast by Iraq state radio, retorted that Bush was a "hypocritical criminal" and vowed to crush "the satanic intentions of the White House."

"The liberation of Kuwait has begun," President Bush declared in Washington.

Here are some quotations from Texans on the Persian Gulf crisis:

"We're at war. We must stand by our troops and support them in every way possible. I hope and pray that they can accomplish their mission quickly and with a minimal loss of life."

— U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bensten, D-Texas.

"The president spent five months walking the extra mile for peace. Saddam Hussein never responded to any of our efforts. My prayers certainly are with the men and women serving the United States and those serving in the UN alliance. Early indications from the Pentagon are positive, but a lot of young people are at risk tonight."

— Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas

"I don't know in the morning if I will find that they are alive or dead."

— Fawzia Hassosuna, a Palestinian who now lives in Austin and was trying to telephone friends in Saudi Arabia when the attack began.

"It appears that all the ladies are glad that it happened. It was a total shock, though, that it was an air attack first."

— Margie Brandon, coordinator of a support group for soldiers' wives at Fort Bliss.

"It is a very sad time. My hope is that it will be completed quickly so that our men and women can come back home safely."

— Texas Gov. Ann Richards.

"I am very scared and disappointed. I was so hoping it would go the other way. I just got home from work and turned on the television and heard the news. This is devastating."

— Twyla Beseda, Whiteface, Texas, mother of airman stationed in Saudi Arabia.

"I am scared for my son. But he has got a little over 19 years of experience in the Marines and this comes with the territory."

— Jim Freyburger, Seminole, Texas, father of Marine Sgt. Jim Freyburger Jr., stationed on warship in Persian Gulf.

"God will fight against Iraq because nobody can touch Israel."

— Cleofas Avilla, Pentecostal minister, Harlingen.

"I think it's terrible. I've got some good friends over there. I think they've been fighting for 3,000 years and we've got no business being over there."

— Perry Trevillion, Austin.

"It had to be done. It was one of those things — do it now or do it later. We're going to kick some ass."

— Air Force Staff Sgt. Kenneth Johnson, San Antonio.

Operation Desert Storm becomes cold reality

LeAnna Efrid
Editor

We're at war!
As my fellow journalists and I sat around last night choosing what you would read in The UD today, a discussion arose of when war with Iraq would actually break out.
As though we were certified military analysts, we made our wagers carefully.
"I suspect a nighttime attack on...Friday."
"Yeah, it will more than likely be a night attack, but I'm predicting next Tuesday."
Then another co-worker, "by dawn's early light, my friends. We'll attack by dawn's early light for sure."
As we joked and lightly contemplated the thought of when war could break out, the news broke in. War had already begun.
As flustered news correspondents were trying desperately to find out if, in fact, the U.S. military had launched THE attack on Iraq, we sat around a little dumbfounded.
Us? In a war? That's something I thought (or hoped) would never happen in my lifetime. But it was confirmed. At 6 p.m. our time, 3 a.m. in Saudi Arabia, the United Nations coalition launched an attack on Baghdad — headquarters for Saddam Hussein.

We had all resigned ourselves to the fact that a war would definitely take place. But as President Bush slept soundly as the Jan. 15 deadline came and went, war just didn't seem real.
Then as a news correspondent in Baghdad briefed a curious United States while bombs exploded in the background, a cold reality set in.
Operation Desert Shield had ended, but Operation Desert Storm had begun (notice the subtle transition from an object of protection to a life-threatening act of God).
Bush delivered his message to the nation two hours after the attack began, to rehash his shallow reasoning for entering a war to drive Saddam from Kuwait.
"...to defend a country in which innocent citizens have been raped, pillaged and plundered."
It's awful to know that people are being senselessly murdered in another country, but is that reason enough to offer the lives of our own? Oh no, it was the OIL we are defending. Well, in that case...
It's too late to argue about Bush's reasoning now. We are engaged in a war — no matter if half the country is still clueless as to why.
Analysts predict that the war could last around two weeks with more than 2,000 attacks in the Baghdad area. Meanwhile, the senseless loss of lives, possibly the lives of fellow Texans, rages on.
In the words of our chosen leader, "We will not fail." Mr. President I read your lips and God willing, I hope your right.

Reagan made citizens proud to be Americans

Joseph Graham
Guest Columnist

Since Ronald Reagan left the White House in January of 1989, much has been written and said about his accomplishments as president. Unfortunately, almost all of it has been nothing more than party-line rhetoric.
When he took office in January of 1981, President Reagan had three major goals: restoring the American economy, increasing the strength and readiness of American military forces while seeking rapprochement with the Soviet Union, and eliminating the federal budget deficit. He enjoyed varying degrees of success in all.
When Reagan took office, the United States were being ravaged by the worst economic crisis to hit the country since the Great Depression. High inflation, high unemployment, and high interest rates gripped the nation. Cutting taxes was high on Reagan's priority list. His tax-cutting proposals passed through Congress largely intact, and over a three year period, federal income taxes were cut by 25 percent.
Later, the Tax Reform Act of 1986 cut taxes further and lowered the top personal-income-tax bracket to 28 percent, the lowest rate since 1931.

It is not surprising that Reagan was an avowed tax-cutter, because for many years of his life in the 1940s and 50s, he was in the 94 percent personal-income-tax bracket. The 25 percent tax cut, coupled with the Tax Reform Act, ignited a surge of growth in the U.S. economy that brought down inflation from over 12 percent to 1.1 percent in 1986, brought down interest rates by half, and brought down unemployment from 10.8 percent in 1982 to 5 percent.
This incredible growth created more than 20 million new jobs and a windfall of new revenues for the federal government.
The reasons are simple: when people realized that they could keep more of what they earned, they worked harder and made more money. The used their increased income to buy new cars, homes, durable goods, etc...
Corporations stopped throwing money in tax dodges and began investing in new plants and methods of increased worker productivity. The result was the longest period of sustained economic growth in the history of the world.
Some acknowledge the economic growth but claim that only the rich took part in the prosperity and that the poor were made to shoulder more of the nation's tax burden. Such claims are absolutely untrue.
Under the new tax laws initiated by the Reagan administration, more than 80 percent of all Americans were in the lowest personal-income-tax bracket of 15 percent. The four million poorest Americans were exempted altogether from paying federal income taxes.

Furthermore, from 1981 to 1987, the tax burden of the richest 1 percent of Americans rose from 17.9 percent to over 24 percent of federal revenues while the tax burden of the poorest 50 percent dropped from 7.4 percent to 6.1 percent of federal revenues.
The second major goal of the Reagan administration was increasing the strength and readiness of American military forces. When Reagan assumed the presidency in 1981, the American military establishment had fallen into a state of neglect.
According to senior Pentagon officials in 1981, nearly half the ships in the U.S. Navy could not sail on any given day due to lack of spare parts or shortages in qualified personnel.
Similarly, nearly half of our military aircraft lacked spare parts and would necessarily be grounded in case of a national emergency.
Enlisted military servicemen were comprised overwhelmingly of high school dropouts. Morale was at a low ebb. Military salaries had fallen so low that some married enlisted men were eligible for welfare benefits.
At the same time that U.S. strategic forces were growing obsolete, the Soviet Union had embarked upon a massive program of military modernization. The United States was seriously in danger of falling behind the Soviets and becoming a second-rate industrial power. President Reagan fully appreciated the gravity of the situation and decided to do something about it.

Late in 1981, President Reagan gave final approval to a sweeping multi-billion dollar program aimed at modernizing American military strength and sustaining military superiority over the Soviets.
In order to accomplish this goal, Reagan allowed the Pentagon to move ahead with the B-1B bomber, the B-2 Stealth bomber, the MX Peacekeeper missile, the Trident nuclear submarine, and the F-117 Stealth fighter.
The Navy was strengthened by the addition of new surface ships, and the Air Force was strengthened by the addition of new combat aircraft and communications satellites. The balance of power began to shift with the deployment of the Pershing II missile in Europe in 1983.
Reagan wanted to end the Cold War hostilities between the two superpowers, but he wanted a peace through strength, not a mere capitulation to Soviet demands. Therefore, at the same time he agreed to a massive military modernization program, he reached out to the Soviets by proposing the "zero" option: the elimination of all Soviet and American intermediate range nuclear missiles in Europe.
The Soviets, under Leonid

Brezhnev, stonewalled and refused to negotiate. Only when President Reagan introduced the Strategic Defense Initiative, the "Star Wars" project designed to give us a protective shield against incoming nuclear missiles, did the Soviets, by then under the leadership of Yuri Andropov, agree to negotiate.
By the time Mikhail Gorbachev came to power in 1985, American military strength had fully recovered from the neglect of the 1970s. The United States had reasserted its dominance, and the Soviets were eager to negotiate.
Following much turmoil and give-and-take by both sides, the INF treaty eliminated, for the first time in history, an entire class of nuclear weapons, making the world a safer place in which to live.
During Reagan's presidency, he and Gorbachev met five times, and together, ended the Cold War. For this incredible achievement, both men deserve a special place in history.
Reagan's third major goal as president was to eliminate the federal budget deficit. Unfortunately for him and for America, he did not achieve this goal.
The federal budget deficit went through the roof in the 1980s and Reagan must bear some of the blame for this. He never once proposed a balanced budget. However, most of the blame, about 90 percent, belongs to Congress, at least one house of which was controlled by the Democrats every year Reagan was president.

Although federal revenues increased by nearly $500 billion in the wake of the 1981 tax cuts, federal spending increased even faster, resulting in huge deficits.
Congress never once passed a Reagan budget intact. Instead, it added tens of billions of dollars to these budgets and then passed them.
To stop this obscene mismanagement of taxpayers money, Reagan long called for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget. Congress never gave it to him.
He then asked for a line-item veto, a power belonging to 43 out of 50 governors. This request was also refused.
Had Reagan's budgets been passed intact, federal budget deficits would have been over $400 billion less than they actually were.
All in all, Reagan will be remembered as a great president. He will be remembered as the president who started the United States down the road to the longest period of economic growth in the history of the world.
Equally important, Reagan's legacy will be that of a man who made us believe in ourselves. He rescued us from the "national malaise" that tainted the Carter years. He made America great again, and made her citizens proud to call themselves Americans.

Tech shoots down Owls 77-63

Kirkland's 12 assists ties school record

By LEN HAYWARD

McMillan Kirkland

HOUSTON — Even with the absence of senior guard Tammy Walker, the Texas Tech women's basketball team prevailed over the Rice Owls 77-63 last night at Autry Court in Houston.

Walker sprained her ankle Monday during practice.

The Red Raiders held off a late second-half run by Rice with Jennifer Buck scoring 14 of her 24 points in the second-half of the Tech victory.

Freshman guard Stephanie Scott, who started the game in place of the injured Walker, finished the game with six points.

"When you take one of your starters off the floor, and on the defensive end especially, you're going to notice that," Raider coach Marsha Sharp said of Walker's injury after Tech's fourth Southwest Conference victory. "Stephanie Scott, although, has done a great job for us all year."

The closest the Owls came after the intermission was seven points when Rice guard Yolanda Stiner hit a 17-footer with 6:20 left to play in the game. Stiner finished the game with a team-high 15 points.

The Raiders never looked back during the second half, opening up leads of 17 and 15 points before finishing with their final 14-point margin. Tech entered the locker room at halftime with a nine-point advantage.

The Raiders took the lead in the first-half at the 5:50 mark on Wilson's shot under the basket.

Sophomore guard Krista Kirkland was second in scoring behind Buck with 17 points and tied a school record for assists with 12.

Kirkland tied the assist record held by Tech guard Camille Franklin, who set the mark against Houston in 1986.

Kirkland also finished the game with nine rebounds.

Junior post Teresa McMillan added 14 points and grabbed a game high 11 rebounds to pace the Raider victory.

Tech upped its record to 12-3 overall and 4-1 in conference play, while Rice fell to 6-7 overall and 0-4 in league action.

The Tech inside game once again aided the Raiders as they out-rebounded the Owls by a 45-38 margin.

Rice did not help its cause any, as the Owls as a team committed 20 turnovers, nine coming from junior forward Evenda Barnes.

The Tech victory marks its first win at Rice's Autry Court since 1988 when the Raiders defeated the Owls 73-59.

The Raiders return to Houston Saturday to take on the Houston Cougars at Hofheinz Pavillion at 5 p.m.

Raider inside game missing in 70-58 defeat Butts' 19 points not enough; Tech drops third straight

By LEN HAYWARD
The University Daily

HOUSTON — The Rice Owls' inside game proved too much for the Texas Tech men's basketball team to handle as they down the Red Raiders by the score of 70-58 in front of 2,007 fans at Rice's Atry Court in Houston.

Tech coach Gerald Myers said the Owls used strong inside pressure to counteract the Raiders' inside game.

"The two big guys (Kenneth Rouke and Brent Scott) did a good job inside with some help from the outside players to stop our inside game, something we wanted to establish," Myers said. "We're not a great perimeter team, and that's always going to hurt us."

The Raiders dropped to 2-3 in the Southwest Conference and 5-12 overall, while the Owls got their first conference win of the season, upping their record to 1-3 in league play and 6-8 overall.

Rice had a lead at halftime and never seemed to succumb to the Tech defensive pressure.

The closest the Raiders came to the Owls in the second half was six points when Tech forward Will Flemons put in a lay-up, making the score 56-50 with 3:48 left in the game.

Rice junior-college transfer Chase Maag scored 19 points in the second-half on the way to his game high 22 points.

Maag was also four-of-seven from the three point stripe and pulled down two rebounds.

"I thought we probably worked too hard to eliminate their inside guys from the offense," Myers said. "Then their perimeter guys hurt us by making some big shots."

Tech senior guard Derex Butts was the leading scorer for the Raiders with 19 points, 13 coming in the second half.

The Owls dominated most of the first half with guard Dana Hardy scoring 12 points, while Tech only shot 39.6 percent from the field for the game.

The only Tech lead in the first half came when junior-transfer Stacey Bailey hit a three pointer with six minutes left in the first half, making the score 21-18.

Bailey came off the bench, after not seeing any playing time against Arkansas, and scored nine points, all from three point land.

The Raiders stay in Houston until Saturday as they take on the Houston Cougars at 2 p.m. in Houston's Hofheinz Pavilion.

Sierra, Incaviglia among Ranger arbitration cases

By The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — The Texas Rangers face eight salary battles next month, and outfielder Ruben Sierra could set an arbitration record with his expected request for about $2.6 million.

Around the majors, 153 players filed by Tuesday's deadline to have their wages determined by an impartial third party. All arbitration contracts are for one season.

The Rangers who filed are: pitchers Brad Arnsberg, Mike Jeffcoat and Bobby Witt; catcher Mark Parent; infielders Steve Buechele and Rafael Palmeiro; and outfielders Pete Incaviglia and Sierra.

Last season Sierra ranked fourth for the Rangers in batting average. He batted .280, drove in a team-high 96 runs and hit 16 home runs to rank second on the club to Incaviglia, who hit 24.

Palmeiro led the Rangers with a batting average of .319. He also had a team-high 191 hits, had 14 home runs and drove in 89 runs.

The 153 players who filed join six players who became free agents and returned to their teams by accepting arbitration offers last Dec. 19.

The 159 players in arbitration is two short of the record set last year.

The overwhelming majority of players will settle before their cases reach arbitrators.

Last season, only 24 cases were listened to and the players won 14.

Players and clubs will exchange figures on Friday, and arbitrators will hear cases during the first three weeks of February.

Since the process began in 1974, clubs have won 164 cases and players have won 139.

The eight Rangers who filed this year earned $4.17 million last season, and the club expects to hand out about $5 million in raises.

Sierra is expected to ask for $2.6 million. The largest salary determined by an arbitrator is the $1.975 million given to the Yankees' Don Mattingly in 1987.

"There are some pretty good names on our team out there," managing general partner George W. Bush said. "All that talk that we're unwilling to spend money should come to a screeching halt. We're prepared to pay the price."

The Rangers also are prepared to let an arbitrator set the price. The owners see arbitration as a tool to be used, not avoided.

"We believe arbitration is set up to settle disputes, not create disputes," Bush said.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, like the Rangers a club that complains of limited financial resources, last year set a precedent for this course.

Pittsburgh had 10 players file for arbitration and took seven to a hearing. The Pirates won four cases and handed out an average 32 percent pay raise to the seven players.

Pittsburgh won the National League East in 1990 with its arbitration players in the forefront. Pitcher Doug Drabek, who won his case, won the Cy Young Award.

Outfielder Barry Bonds, who lost his case, won the Most Valuable Player award, and outfielder Bobby Bonilla, who also lost his case, was runner-up in the MVP balloting.

Bonilla's numbers were not as spectacular as Bonds', but Bonilla finished with a .280 batting average and belted 32 home runs.

The Rangers settled with their four arbitration filers before reaching a hearing last year, giving them an average raise of 153 percent.

The Rangers will negotiate with all eight players up to a hearing, he said. The team is discussing one-year contracts.

For Buechele and Incaviglia, that means an inevitable exploration of free agency after this season.

Last season Buechele hit .215, had 7 home runs and drove in 30 runs. Incaviglia has said he will try free agency if not signed to a multi-year contract by the start of spring training.

San Antonio cancels 1991 Grand Prix

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — After four years of losing money, organizers of the Grand Prix of San Antonio canceled the car race that attracted thousands to downtown on Labor Day weekends.

The Alamo Grand Prix Association said it was suspending operations. The 1991 race is off, and future races don't appear likely, officials said. "This organization cannot present it," John Mosty, association executive vice president and chief operating officer, said Tuesday. "If someone else wants to assume the responsibility, we will let them."

The Labor Day weekend event, sanctioned by the International Motor Sports Association, has been held on the streets of downtown since 1987. The 1990 race, plagued by rain, lost $600,000, said AGPA president Curtis Gunn Jr. The race has averaged a loss of $300,000 since its first year, and the association has lost an estimated $2 million overall.

"Individual members have personally underwritten financial losses over the first four years and despite improved acceptance and sales to date, they were not willing to personally carry the Grand Prix for another race," Gunn said.

Kite, Wadkins prep for Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU (AP) — Lanny Wadkins and Tom Kite hope to resume their longtime rivalry at the Hawaiian Open.

Two weeks ago, the 41-year-olds went shot-for-shot in the final round of the Tournament of Champions, with Kite holding off Wadkins by one shot to win the PGA Tour's first event of the season.

"It probably won't happen, but I think it would be great if we could both get there again," Kite said Wednesday before a practice round.

Kite and Wadkins passed on last week's Northern Telecom Open, won by amateur Phil Mickelson.

Wadkins said he and Kite are playing well and the two could wind up fighting it out for another title on Sunday.

With a five-hour time difference between Hawaii and the East, the tournament will be the first to have all four rounds televised live in prime time.

Information access products reduce student research time

By CHARLES POLLET
The University Daily

The Compact Disc-Read Only Memory products offered at the Texas Tech Library save students precious time and the library vast amounts of space, said a library information access specialist.

The CD-ROM products, which were introduced last semester, have been increased to 15. The entire system cost more than $35,000, and it is well worth the cost, Jack Becker said.

"(The CD-ROM products) get constant use. I think their appeal has been overwhelming," Becker said. "It's just a matter of students understanding how to use them."

The ProQuest package has replaced the Infotrac CD. On ProQuest three different CDs exist: ABIINFORM contains business articles, Periodical Abstracts holds general information from more than 300 periodicals, and Newspaper Abstracts has articles from nine metropolitan areas, including The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal.

Students may also access Sociofile, a database which contains information on sociology. The Dissertation Abstracts database holds information on speeches. The Life Science Collection CD stores material related to biology, and the Compendex Plus is helpful in TEXAS TECH UNIVERSITY engineering. The final new CD is Compact Disclosure, which contains all pertinent information on public corporations.

Bridge Information Systems is an on-line computer system linked to the stock market, and it is set up similar to the CD-ROM products.

"(The CD-ROMs) get constant use. I think their appeal has been overwhelming," Becker said. "We hope it will replace paper because we have a limited amount of money and space."

One CD stores 250,000 pages of manuscript. In one year approximately five to six volumes of one research index are printed. Conversely, one CD can store five to 10 years worth of information, which greatly reduces library space devoted to paper research indexes.

Becker said he hopes the library will have approximately 100 on-line computers accessible to students, faculty and staff for up-to-date research materials by 1992.

Education reforms, budget cuts concern faculty

By CHARLES POLLET
The University Daily

Revamping the Texas higher education system, possible budget cuts from the Legislature and channeling control of the library's copy machines headed the Texas Tech Faculty Senate meeting Wednesday.

Tech President Robert Lawless informed the senate of a recommendation to the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board that would implement a four-system coalition for Texas universities. The system would reduce governing boards from each university into one board for each system.

The first system will incorporate the current University of Texas system minus UT at Permian Basin and UT at Tyler. The second system, the Texas A&M system, will eliminate West Texas State University and Tarleton State University. The third system will consist of Tech, the University of North Texas, Texas Women's University, the University of Houston and Texas Southern University. The fourth system is a catch-all of those universities excluded from the first three systems.

Lawless said he believes the recommendation — which lacks support — will not pass because it would require several constitutional amendments.

Under the proposed system, UT and Texas A&M will maintain sole access to the Permanent University Fund (PUF). Lawless said the proposal might have gained the necessary support if access to PUF were granted to all universities in the system.

Improving the overall quality of Texas higher education, not necessarily the quality of each university, spawned the proposal, said Lawless.

The Texas House of Representatives introduced a preliminary budget which will reduce Tech's funds by 9.9 percent and the Health Sciences Center funds by 12 percent.

While the budget has not yet been passed in the House, Lawless said he hopes the Texas Senate's budget will keep the same level of funding for higher education. Higher education will not be able to offer the necessary quality education if budget cuts are made. An investigation to transfer control of copy machine services from the Ex-Students' Association to the library will conclude Feb. 11, said Marian Hampton, assistant director of libraries for administrative services.

Based in Tucson, Ariz., CDT currently provides copy services to the library and 10 other Tech buildings through the Ex-Students' Association. According to a study conducted by Faculty Sen. Kathleen Hennessey, the Ex-Students' Association received more than $15,000 in rebates on copier charges from CDT last year. The alumni group gave the library $2,000 for new books.

Lt. Gov. Bullock announces state Senate committee chairmen

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, a fiercely partisan Democrat, announced a new Senate committee lineup Wednesday that lopped off the only Republican chairman, 23-year veteran O.H. "Ike" Harris of Dallas.

Harris, 58, had been chairman of Economic Development since 1979. He was replaced with Sen. Temple Dickson, D-Sweetwater, a longtime friend of the new lieutenant governor.

"I personally prefer that he (Dickson) be in that spot," Bullock said.

Harris was dropped to vice chairman, which has much less authority. He was not immediately available for comment.

Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, said,

"I'm disappointed for his (Harris) sake."

Asked if he was ruling out Republicans for key assignments, Bullock responded, "Certainly not."

Bullock's assignments to committee, which to a large degree shape a senator's influence, were announced less than 24 hours after he was sworn in to succeed Bill Hobby. However, he said they had been in the making since the November general election.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, was elevated to chairman of the Finance Committee, whose budget-writing duties make it a prime panel. He fills a vacant position created by Kent Caperton's decision not to run for re-election.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, was moved from the top job on Jurisprudence to chairman of State Affairs to replace Montford.

But Glasgow lost the No. 2 spot on Finance. Bullock said he does not think there is enough time to serve on state affairs and finance, which he views as a full-time job.

Glasgow, a Bullock friend for many years, also drew the chairmanship of the Subcommittee on Legislative Districts.

In somewhat of a surprise, Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, was retained as chairman of the Education Committee, which is expected to deal with the crucial issue of public school finance.

Parker, a sponsor of school reform legislation, had "expressed a desire" for another appointment, Bullock said, "and I had to do a lot of persuasion."

"I felt like he has more knowledge, more expertise in school finance than any other senator, and has done a tremendous job," Bullock said.

Other new Senate committee chairmen include Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, Criminal Justice; John Whitmire, D-Houston, Intergovernmental Relations; Gene Green, D-Houston, Jurisprudence; Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, Natural Resources; and Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, Nominations, which considers gubernatorial appointments.

Sims' appointment was denounced by the Sierra Club's Lone Star Chapter, which said Sims has in the past opposed "environmental initiatives" supported by Bullock during his campaign for lieutenant governor.

STUDENT SERVICE FEE REQUEST 1991-92

Departments or programs currently receiving Student Service Fee money must submit a budget request with twelve copies to the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs by February 8, 1991.

Programs which might be eligible to receive Student Service Fee support and do not now do so from either the Student Service Fee budget appropriations or the Student Association should submit budget requests to the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs no later than Monday, January 28. Forms for submitting requests are available in the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs and the Student Association Office.

New federal law recommends college students receive MMR vaccination to avoid measles

By STEPHEN PHILLIPS
The University Daily

Texas Tech's Student Health Services has begun administering the measles-mumps-rubella (MMR) vaccination to students in an attempt to avoid another measles epidemic similar to the 1989 outbreak that hit the Tech campus.

The vaccinations have been initiated as a result of a federal recommendation that students born after 1956 receive two doses of the (MMR) vaccination to help prevent contracting measles.

In addition to the federal recommendation, both the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) and the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (ACIP) have changed measles vaccination recommendations from one dose to two doses for students born after 1956.

Carol Plugge, health educator with Student Services, said student services does not want a repeat of the outbreak that hit Tech two years ago. "We immunized around 6,000 students in the Spring of 1989," Plugge said.

According to the American College Health Association, in 1989 between 9,000 and 12,000 cases of measles were reported, compared to 3,411 for 1988.

Plugge said Student Health Services will continue to administer the second dose of the MMR vaccination to entering and current college students until those students who have already received double vaccinations begin entering college.

"There is nothing to suggest another outbreak will occur this semester," Plugge said, "but you never can tell when these things are going to hit."

Plugge said that besides getting the vaccination to prevent the measles, students will already be vaccinated when the new vaccination law goes into effect sometime in the next few years.

"Students who believe they have never had a second dose of the (MMR) vaccine should get a shot," Plugge said.

Students should not receive the vaccine if:

- born before 1956...natural immunity.
- previously contracted measles...no immunization required.
- a student has received a second dose of MMR as a child, adolescent, or adult (for example, at Student Health during 1989 epidemic.)
- if the student has had a second dose of measles vaccine only, he or she may wish to discuss with one of the physicians whether mumps or rubella immunization is needed.

Students wishing to receive the MMR vaccination should make an appointment with Student Health. Students will be provided with a physician's order.

Students wishing to receive more information on the MMR vaccination should call Student Health Services at 743-2848.

'Transforming experiences, renewed action' theme of MLK celebrations

By TARA MULDRON
The University Daily

The federal government should make reforms to progress civil rights due to previous setbacks, said the chairman of Lubbock's Martin Luther King Jr. committee, Wednesday at a tribute to King's birthday.

"Civil rights was set back 20 years by the Reagan administration. Not by (Reagan's) advocating segregation, but he allowed it. He never put his foot down against segregation," Fulton Berry said.

"We must go forward. We must remember the days of the past. In 1991, we as people must turn to each other and not on each other," he said.

"If we can fight side-by-side together in the Persian Gulf, we should have no problem standing together across this nation and in Lubbock," Berry said.

"More than a dream, transforming experiences and renewed action" will be the theme of the annual celebration.

The tribute kicked off celebrations lasting until Monday evening. The primary opening will begin tonight at Saint Luke Baptist Church, 306 E. 26th St.

"Youth will celebrate (King's) birthday Friday night with singing and fun," Berry said. The youth celebration will occur at the Community Baptist Church, 220 Quirt Ave.

The tribute will end Monday evening at the Mount Gilead Baptist Church, 2510 Fir Ave.

Lithuanians band together to bury their dead

By The Associated Press

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. — Hundreds of thousands of people bid a tearful farewell in the silenced Lithuanian capital Wednesday to nine countrymen turned martyrs by their deaths at the hands of Soviet soldiers.

In the neighboring republic of Latvia, Soviet forces shot and killed one man as he drove across a bridge in Riga, the capital.

In Moscow, Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev cited rising tensions in urging the legislature to take control of the national media. He was particularly unhappy about a critical press account of Sunday's military assault on Lithuania's broadcast center, which left 14 people dead.

A crowd police estimated to be as large as 1 million jammed the city's Roman Catholic cathedral, a square surrounding it and the funeral route that wound through narrow streets to a hilltop cemetery.

A tenth person was being buried in Kaunas, the republic's second city. Four others were being buried separately.

In a eulogy, Russian Orthodox clergyman Father Khrisostom acknowledged that ethnic Russians had been involved in the killings and apologized.

"This is a shame for all of us," he said. "Believe me, Lithuanians, we Russians are with you."

Calling for peace, he added, "It is not possible to stop blood with blood."

Men listening outside the Vilnius cathedral doffed their fur hats during the two-hour service despite the chill wind, and many people held candles, illuminating the overcast northern day.

"They are real heroes," said Vincas Gursky, a 59-year-old schoolteacher who held a candle outside the cathedral. "What else would you call someone who bravely sticks his chest out in front of a tank?"

In Latvia, officials said a 39-year-old man was shot in the head by so-called "black berets," under control of the Soviet Interior Ministry. He was taken to the First Riga Hospital, and died there, Dr. Juris Lange said.

The man, identified as Roberts Murnieks, was driving on a bridge leading to the northern suburb of Vecmilgravis, where Soviet military bases are located, officials said.

Black berets have been shooting out the tires of heavy vehicles parked on the bridge to act as barricades, but it was not clear whether Murnieks was killed by accident. No other information was available.

In another incident, black berets stopped a van, forced the occupants onto the pavement and set fire to the vehicle, said Sakari Nupponen, a Finnish journalist driving by at the time.

Latvian President Anatolijs Gorbunovs told a news conference on Wednesday he would consider forming a coalition government with opponents if they dropped demands that Latvia suspend its independence declaration.

Tallinn, the capital of Estonia, remained quiet. But police and home guards protected the parliament building. Fire hoses were ready for use against attackers, and 1,000 gas masks were in boxes inside.

Traffic was halted in much of Vilnius for the funeral cortege. Schools were closed for the third straight day. Many offices and stores also were closed.

But construction workers continued to erect a 15-foot-high barricade of cement, steel and dirt to defend the Lithuanian parliament. The workers tore down an unfinished five-story office building nearby and used the construction materials for the barricade.

A representative of a Soviet government commission sent to Vilnius, Byelorussian President Nikolai Demantei, told the Supreme Soviet in Moscow that the group had succeeded in establishing contacts between the Vilnius military garrison and the Landsbergis' government.

Gorbachev, speaking to the Supreme Soviet late on its last day before a month-long break, urged it to take temporary control of the media. He apparently was prompted by a critical article about the crackdown in Lithuania in the latest edition of the weekly Moscow News.

Richards calls auto insurance hike 'outrageous'

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — On her first full day on the job, Gov. Ann Richards ripped the insurance industry Wednesday, describing proposed automobile premium increases as "outrageous" and calling for major reforms in regulation.

Consumer advocates praised Richards' appearance before the State Board of Insurance, while insurance industry officials said her recommendations were unfair.

In a related development, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock created a new Senate subcommittee on insurance and appointed as its chairman Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, a frequent critic of the insurance industry. "I support Gov. Richards very much in what she's trying to do" on insurance reform, Bullock said.

At the start of the insurance board's public hearing on auto rates, Richards urged regulators to delay a decision until an independent audit can determine whether an increase is justified. The board's staff has recommended a 23.3 percent rate increase, which would be the largest hike in at least 32 years. Insurers want a 29.1 percent increase. The state's consumer advocate recommended an 11.4 percent boost.

"I want all of you, as the State Board of Insurance, to fulfill what I believe is the public mandate to monitor insurance rates for the public good," said Richards, who took office Tuesday.

Disco Daddy's wedding debut

Kirk Baird-Parks
Lifestyles
Writer

The wedding was going as weddings often do: in a slow, overwrought procession that culminates in an anticlimactic and hostile throwing of Uncle Ben's rice (actually, they use bird seed now to protect the birds).

Everything was in order. The bride was in white, the groom was nervously panting and the onlookers were in tears. But the tears turned to violent laughter when Disco Daddy made his appearance. But how did this all start?

The bachelor party was swinging and everyone had their fill. For one unfortunate individual, the maximum capacity for tolerance was reached twice within a few hours of each other.

The next day was designated official recovery day. Long hours were spent in dark isolation bemoaning the previous days events.

As the dawn of the wedding day crept into the sleepy eyes of a huddled mass, an idea crept into his head: "What am I going to wear?"

This idea turned to stark-raving panic as the closet revealed nothing but out-of-style clothes, pants that should fit but for some reason don't and a colorful jacket. Things had gone from bad to hellacious.

Meanwhile, in a cranium not so distant, a throbbing pain continued its assault on the lesser brain functions rendering the victim brain dead.

The result was a fashion mix that left women speechless and children terrified: a jacket, nice button-down shirt and NO TIE. The 1970s had reared its ugly head.

The victim of poor and impaired judgment traveled on much to his parents chagrin. How his mother pleaded with him to wear a tie that day.

"Please, sonny, I'll do anything. Just don't leave this house without a tie. Your family's honor is at stake."

"Don't worry, mama. I'll be OK. I'm runnin' late and I don't have time. I can borrow one from a friend."

The friend, however, proved fruitless, and so, after several minutes of heckling, Disco Daddy traveled onward to his date with total embarrassment.

Upon arrival at the wedding, Disco Daddy's sidekick quickly fled the scene — not wishing to see his friend crucified.

Disco Daddy walked inside the church. The organ was grinding out a somewhat familiar tune, and the whole audience seemed enraptured by a familiar figure in white strolling leisurely toward the altar.

The silence began to slowly erupt into a few brief subdued laughs. Cackles then began to fill the air followed by howls. Pointing fingers were swirling toward the resplendent figure dressed in a coat, shirt and NO TIE.

Disco songs began echoing through the chamber. Children clamored to their parents' side: "Please, mommy, make it go away! Don't let the evil '70s man get me."

The groom covered his face in disbelief. The bride began to weep openly: "What kind of a man am I marrying who has such openly heathen friends as Disco Daddy?"

The groom sensed he was in trouble and shouted: "I do not know this plague of the planet, this scourge of humanity who doesn't even have the decency to wear a tie to a wedding."

Disco Daddy began to realize something: these tauntings and fingers were aimed at him. He tried to adjust his coat and hide his shirt, but it was too late. His true identity had been revealed.

The masses erupted from their seats and began to pick up stones.

The TV news that night told of brief rioting in small areas of town. No injuries were reported, but someone's pride had just been put into a coma.

Gray wolves could be returned home

By 1990 New York Times News Service

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo — The haunting howl of the gray wolf, one of nature's great primal cries, may soon return to Yellowstone's wilderness after an absence of more than 60 years.

A federally appointed committee has a May 15 deadline to produce a plan for reintroducing the once-plentiful predator to the 2.2 million-acre park, the nation's oldest and the largest in the contiguous 48 states.

If a majority of the 10-member panel supports reintroduction, work could begin on the required environmental impact statement.

Within a few years, the first wolves could be moved into Yellowstone. They would be the first major predator ever returned to a U.S. national park.

Environmentalists and wildlife managers would be ecstatic, because they see the wolf as an integral part of the Yellowstone ecosystem that hunting and trapping eliminated.

Neighboring sheep and cattle ranchers, however, have traditionally looked upon the wolf as a killer that threatens their economic well-being.

Shaping a plan that they will accept poses a daunting challenge.

"It's not strictly an economic issue," says David S. Wilcove, senior ecologist at the Wilderness Society in Washington, D.C. "Many of us feel it's a moral imperative and a biological imperative."

Carolyn L. Paseneaux, executive director of the Wyoming Woolgrowers' Association and the Wyoming Public Lands Council, differs.

"We must look at economics," she says. "The Endangered Species Act doesn't look at economics."

Cold Stare

Deer hair from recent kill still clinging to its nose, a gray wolf stares at the camera. Proponents of reintroducing wolves to Yellowstone National Park say they expect the predators to feed primarily on elk deer and bison.

Since the act was passed in 1973, the gray wolf has been on the endangered list in all of the lower 48 states except Minnesota, where it's classified as threatened.

All but eliminated by 1930, the wolf today is making a comeback in several states.

It has never been endangered in Alaska, where wolf numbers are the largest, an estimated 4,000 to 6,000. The present count in Minnesota is between 1,550 and 1,750.

Controlling nuisance wolves and fairly compensating aggrieved livestock owners are two of the most contentious elements in the controversy.

Bookstore showcases feminist texts

By CRISSIE McMENNAMY
The University Daily

As the second woman governor of Texas takes her post in Austin, a new era is dawning on the Lone Star State. The awareness of feminine importance is on the rise in cities throughout the state, and Lubbock is no exception.

Ellie's Garden, a bookstore specializing in feminist works, is just one representation of this idea. Located at 2812 34th St., this bookstore contains books beyond the traditional best seller or instruction guide. The focus of Linda McGann and Wanda Clark, co-owners of Ellie's Garden, is to offer area readers an outlet for obtaining a different type of novel.

"Basically we are trying to fill the holes that other bookstores leave," Clark said. "Primarily we specialize in the areas of women writers and feminist works. We also have a really extensive gay and lesbian section."

Both graduates of Tech, Clark and McGann recently returned to the Hub City in order to establish a business that they believed to be necessary. Although the store has only been in operation for two weeks, knowledge of its existence has traveled well by word-of-mouth.

"I don't know if this is just the honeymoon phase of being thrilled with something new or what, but we have been experiencing some really good business," Clark said. "Before we decided to open here, we heard quite consistently that there probably wouldn't be a large enough community to support a business like this, but we think we have something to offer more than one community of people."

In addition to the books, music, cards and magazines on hand in the store, most items, even those now out of print, can be obtained by placing an order. For the budget conscious buyer, there is a policy of trading and selling books.

Future plans for McGann and Clark include hosting group discussions as well as sponsoring a book of the month. However, right now they are concentrating on establishing something more than just a bookstore. "In our minds, it's not necessarily the store that is so appealing, but it is the atmosphere that we offer," McGann said. "This is a safe place for women. We won't allow any disrespect to women or any person."

It seems that every feature of this store is an indication of the owners' determination, including the name Ellie's Garden. One day when Clark was looking at some old photographs she found a picture of her grandmother with Ellie's Garden written on the back. The title seemed an appropriate representation of her ambitions for the store.

"The growth imagery that the name suggests is exactly what we were looking for," Clark said. "It is sort of a tribute to my grandmother, but it's a movement of our own too."

More than anything, these women would like to furnish Lubbock with "a comfortable space for women of all shapes, sizes and backgrounds" to learn more about themselves.
