U.S. ground forces clash with Iraqi troops

By The Associated Press

WAR with IRAQ

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — U.S. armored cavalrymen skirmished with Iraqis in the first ground clash along the northern border, where vast fleets of tanks maneuvered and dug in on the desert floor Wednesday for the land war just over the horizon.

The Americans captured six Iraqis and suffered two slight casualties, the U.S. command said. It denied a Baghdad claim that the Iraqis also

'Right on schedule'

U.S. gains air superiority

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Wednesday night the war against Saddam Hussein is "right on schedule" and will be unrelenting. "There can be no pause now that Saddam has forced the world into war," Bush said.

The president said allied bombing attacks had knocked out many Iraqi airfields, giving the United States air superiority and "putting Saddam out of the nuclear bomb-building business for a long time to come."

Bush, speaking to an audience of retired military officers, said, "I am pleased to report that Operation Desert Storm is right on schedule."

Military officials warned, however, that Iraq's military machine remains strong despite intense allied attacks. "We're dealing with an enemy that is resourceful, an enemy that knows how to work around problems, an enemy that is ingenious," said Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

But Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Saddam "cannot change the basic course" of the war. "He will be defeated."

"There can be no doubt: Operation Desert Storm is working. There can be no pause now that Saddam has forced the world into war. We will stay the course," he said.

Bush added, "No one should weep for this tyrant when he is brought to justice. No one, anywhere in the world."

"There will be problems. There will be setbacks and sacrifices. But let me say I have every reason to be very pleased with our progress to date."

He said Saddam "has sickened the world" by firing Scud missiles at civilian targets both in Israel and Saudi Arabia.

"These weapons are nothing more than tools of terror, and they do nothing but strengthen our resolve to act against a dictator unmoved by human decency."

"We did not begin a war seven days ago," Bush said. "Rather, we began to end a war, to right a wrong that the world could not ignore."

He said that "appeasement was never an answer."

The president noted that Saddam had ignored international demands for his withdrawal from Kuwait and had "met every overture of peace with open contempt."

"In the end," Bush said, "Saddam brought war upon himself."

The House, by a vote of 418-0, condemned Iraq for parading POWs before cameras to make obviously coerced statements.

At a Pentagon briefing, Powell and Cheney faced a barrage of questions about the extent of damage inflicted on Iraq by unrelenting bombing attacks.

Powell said allied forces have seized air superiority and now intend to focus attacks on Iraqi ground forces entrenched in and around Kuwait. He said the Iraqi army is "sitting there dug in, waiting to be attacked and attacked it will be."

"Our strategy for dealing with this army is very simple: First we're going to cut it off, then we're going to kill it."

Cheney said that Saddam "cannot change the basic course" of the war. "He will be defeated."

Cheney said, "There may well be surprises ahead for us."

Allied bombers demolished half of Iraq's oil-refining capacity, commanders said. Iraq announced it was suspending gasoline sales.

More and more Iraqis were emerging from their shelters in Baghdad, said CNN's Peter Arnett, the only Western journalist allowed to report from the Iraqi capital.

Commerce seemed to be resuming, Baghdadis were shopping at the central market, and water trucks were making their rounds, he said.

The allied army is deployed along the 130-mile Saudi-Kuwaiti border and farther west, along the Iraqi-Saudi border, where the desert-trained 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment from Fort Bliss, Texas is believed to be conducting reconnaissance and guarding the allied force's western flank.

Wednesday's first report of a ground action came from the Iranian news media, which said Iraq reported its forces had attacked enemy troops in Saudi territory and captured allied prisoners.

The U.S. command reported that 3rd Armored Cavalry troopers were manning an observation post near the Saudi-Iraqi border late Tuesday when they came under small-arms fire from an Iraqi patrol and returned fire.

Two Americans were slightly wounded and returned to duty after treatment, and six Iraqis were captured, the command said. It denied that any Americans had been captured.

American armored units continued maneuvering into place along the frontier Wednesday after a days-long spell of rain and drizzle that turned desert-dry areas into small lakes and created sinkholes that can bog down a tank.

Commanders have begun to slow the pace of combat exercises at the front lines so soldiers can rest and equipment can be kept in good shape for could be a prolonged ground battle.

A ground offensive is not expected until February. American tank officers, like Marine Capt. Rob Philon, know it will not be a rollover.

Philon's M-60 tanks will have to go up against Iraq's Soviet-made T-72s, which have longer-range, laser-equipped guns. "We'll have to out-manuever them and not let them get the drop on us," Philon said.

For now the allied troops are content to let U.S. and allied airpower "soften up" Iraqi positions.

In Washington on Wednesday, joint chiefs chairman Gen. Colin Powell told reporters, "Our strategy for dealing with this army is very simple: First we're going to cut it off, then we're going to kill it."

The Iraqi army is "sitting there dug in, waiting to be attacked and attacked it will be," Powell said, adding that the allies are "assembling a fairly sizeable ground force that can finish the job if necessary."

Seniors' Academy simplifies registration for older students

By CHARRIE SOUTH
The University Daily

The Texas Tech Seniors' Academy offers simplified registration procedures and flexible entrance requirements for students age 55 and older.

"Why should college be for just the young?" said Elleta Nolte, one Seniors' Academy student. "Why not go to college now? We should keep learning forever."

Seniors' Academy students have access to specialized counseling with adult learning experts to determine the right course of study for that individual and orientation sessions for the university's varied resources, such as the library and the ATLC.

"My mind doesn't think I'm old, it thinks I'm still 40," said Bob Dennis, a Seniors' Academy general studies major. "I like taking classes at Tech, because I don't want my mind to atrophy."

A Seniors' Academy student can earn a baccalaureate degree in 134 different majors. These students must complete several general education requirements but are not required to take physical education courses.

Seniors' Academy students need not necessarily work toward a degree. They may take a series of classes for their own satisfaction.

"We are retiring earlier and living longer. In fact, about one-third of our lives is spent in retirement. We need to make it our best part," Nolte said.

Beverly Thompson, Visitor Center coordinator, said there are about 40 students in the Seniors' Academy.

"Hopefully, as time goes on and this program is more widely known, it'll grow," she said.

The Seniors' Academy program started in the fall semester and will continue as long as it is needed, Thompson said.

Seniors' Academy students pay $18 per semester hour if they are Texas residents.

"Five of my children have graduated from Tech and another is a senior here. It's my turn and I'm making the most of it," Nolte said.

Waiting on the northern front: confidence, anxiety

By The Associated Press

NEAR THE IRAQI BORDER, Saudi Arabia — In a gas line such as this desert has never seen, assault helicopters swarm in like black death, filling up for a ground war their crews expect any day.

At a highway cloverleaf, American MPs hunker down behind a concrete block barrier painted, "Pink Floyd, The Wall," waiting for their piece of the war.

In a truckstop curry joint, two British artillerymen, "Desert Rats," shake their heads in grim anticipation of a weeks-long onslaught they predict will be far worse than is widely believed.

By a roadside phone booth, Omani soldiers in faded combat turbans wait cheerfully to ring up their families, hopeful that their next call — if Allah wishes — will be made from liberated Kuwait City.

Desert Storm is getting ready to break, and all concerned are convinced that a hard rain is going to fall.

On the surface, the mood is mostly positive, even relaxed.

Full alert conditions did not stop a Bedouin from threading his pickup load of confused sheep beneath the revolving blades of U.S. Army helicopters awaiting fuel on an abandoned stretch of tarmac.

Capt. Robert Belletier of the U.S. First Cavalry Division climbed out of a Blackhawk helicopter as it settled down to a rumbling idle, in line with 12 Cobras, Apaches and little Bell choppers.

"We're all set," said Belletier, a southerner from Atlanta with an easy laugh. "We hear about all those Scuds in Dhahran, and we're happy to be up north where it's safe."

But when pressed to reflect on what might lie ahead in the next few weeks, his face took on that half-somber, half-quizzical look so common among allied troops on the northern frontier.

Three MPs from the 14th Military Police Brigade had that look as they watched the main road north from Dhahran to Kuwait in their machine-gun mounted humvee, the Army's newfangled version of the jeep.

"It's gonna take longer than we thought," said Cpl. Dave Hoernle, of Harrisburg, Pa., who ended up in the desert from his former base in Stuttgart, Germany, where his wife is also an MP.

"Hopefully it will be done by June, but I doubt it," he said. Asked his age, he replied with a nervous chuckle: "I'm 24, hoping to be 25."

Two British artillerymen preferred to speak frankly rather than give their names. One, a veteran non-commissioned officer who had learned lessons the hard way, had no illusions.

"It will take five weeks at the least, from the word 'go,' and it will be bloody difficult," he said. "A bloke's dug in with his artillery, he's going to fight you, isn't he?"

He described U.S. land forces as hampered by too many overconfident young troops who had little idea of what they faced.

"I don't mean to be impolite about the Americans, but they're not ready," he said. "Too many aren't serious."

Jordanian student says Middle East lifestyle not mysterious

By JULIE COLLINS
The University Daily

The Middle East is not an amorphous, mysterious way of life — their way of life is amongst all U.S. citizens, a Texas Tech teaching assistant said.

Khaled Abuelgham, a graduate student from Jordan, said the United States is a melting pot not only for European and Asian countries, but for the Middle East as well.

"The United States is integrated with the Middle East by blood ties and culture ties, not just by war," Abuelgham said.

"The Arab nations contain people who believe in communism, fundamentalism, and liberalism, just like the United States. The problem arose when the radicals of one Arab nation gained power," Abuelgham said.

Saddam Hussein gained that power and used it to create a dictatorship in Iraq and to invade Kuwait, Abuelgham said.

The way to acquire peace is not through war but through respectful compromises and a complete understanding of the world's varied cultures, Abuelgham said.

Abuelgham said lack of respect among Arab nations and the United States caused great dissent among the respective leaders, thereby — although indirectly — causing war.

Consequences of war in the gulf raises not only economic and social questions but environmental concerns, Abuelgham said.

"The war could cause agricultural failure worldwide through the extensive use of chemical and logistical warfare."

Abuelgham said war could have been avoided if the United Nations sanctions imposed upon Iraq would have had more time to have adverse effects on the Iraqi economy.

Abuelgham said civilians in Iraq, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia will suffer the result of dehumanization through continuous bombardments and military assaults.

"The Iraqis have little respect for human life," Abuelgham said.

Abuelgham said time for peace talks has come and gone but future generations can benefit by discussing ways to acquire peace while war rages in the Middle East.

U.S. can no longer afford to continue being world police

Anna Quindlen
Columnist

Woman walks into a bakery where there's a sign announcing that the price of bagels will go up a nickel on Jan. 15. "War and an increase in the price of bagels on the same day," she says.

"I hope he backs down," says the baker.

"Who?" says the woman. "Saddam Hussein or George Bush?"

"Either one," the baker says.

Bagels were more expensive Wednesday, and war broke out. Real life was peculiar, with an edge of sadness and of slow motion, and a sense of New Year's Eve gone nuclear: only one shopping day till Armageddon.

"Now it is our job to shift without too much awkwardness..." Bob Costas said Saturday on NBC Sports, segueing from reports on war to a football post-mortem. That is what it is like. Dinner and war. Homework and war. The mundane and the horrible.

There's a moment in one of the Godfather movies when a capo is being executed for disloyalty. "It was business," he says of his traitorous behavior.

This is personal.

It's personal for Saddam. This war is a career move. His psyche has been dissected like a biology class frog, but it seems to me that he suffers from a lethal dose of that craziness that afflicts anyone audacious enough to lead a nation, egomania.

The secretary general of the United Nations came to call, hoping to avert the deaths of thousands upon thousands of people, and when he left Saddam delivered this non sequitur: "He met the American president four times before coming to us."

This brings to mind the moment in Woody Allen's "Bananas" when the new dictator of a Central American country belittles the danish Allen has brought him.

"He brings cake for a group of people," complains one of the dictator's aides, "he doesn't even bring an assortment."

Saddam's comment might be humorous in its egocentricity if it were not so ominous, such a clear indication of how he has intertwined this conflict with those two little words: Big Man.

For Bush this is personal, too.

I don't think the wimp factor is the only thing at work here. But I think that the sled of public positioning always stands at the top of a slippery slope, and when it begins to move, it is difficult to stop it or slow it down, even when half the electorate are yelling, "Wait a minute!"

Sanctions needed more time to work, more time that the sled allowed. But that, alas, is yesterday's story.

This is personal.

Most people agree that Saddam is pond scum and that he can't be permitted to take Kuwait as though it were the lunch money of the littles kid in the class. But then they ask themselves this question: Would I sacrifice my child for this?

And the answer is often no.

I only hope that we will continue, when this is done, to take these issues personally. We should take personally the fact that we habitually give aid to the kind of men we can easily and accurately describe as monsters.

We should take personally the fact that few politicians have had the guts or the vision to shape a coherent energy policy that would lessen our dependence on foreign oil. And we should take personal responsibility for the fact that we have not had the will to conserve or change.

We should take personally the idea that if there is to be a new world order, it must include a new answer to the question: Why us?

It is time for our messiah complex to get a good overhaul. We can no longer afford economically, psychologically or politically to be the policeman of the world, even if we are the first one called when someone needs a cop.

That will be then. This is now. Time has stopped. So do our hearts, each time a clince on "One Life to Live" is punctuated by the words "We interrupt this program to bring you a special report..."

In Des Moines, a teen-ager demonstrating against the war said he did not want a big black wall in Washington with his name on it. In the desert, a soldier wrote to his wife saying that he would understand if she remarried. It came to me that, no matter how swift the conflict, we will someday soon be reading about the design for the memorial to its dead.

"When do they decide to call it World War III?" a friend asked the other day.

I don't know. There's so much we don't know today. I only know that everyone seems sad and afraid, that the loss and mourning had begun even before the fighting. We are taking this very personally indeed.

Racial tensions may erupt as scholarships fall

By THOMAS PERRY
The Forum Syndicate

The recent Department of Education ruling which sent the so-called civil rights leadership into a frenzy should have become one of the cornerstones of United States education policy.

The department's ruling only reaffirmed what the language of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 so clearly states: discrimination on the basis of race, color or national origin is against the law. Why then would so-called minority leaders come out so strongly against the application of a law which many of them (are you listening Ben Hooks?) helped to enact?

The Department of Education via Assistant Secretary Williams recently declared that the practice of awarding race-based scholarships was against public policy. Many legal scholars, including Derrick Bell of the Harvard Law School, have declared the Department of Education's ruling could easily have withstood judicial scrutiny. Similarly, there has been no outcry from the legal community attacking the legality of Williams' policy statement.

It seems that the legal community understands the concept of applying the various laws of our country equally to all people, not just to specific groups. I would call the application of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to all Americans as being a type of intellectual honesty.

What defines intellectual honesty? It means that one group shouldn't ask for the protection of its rights under a law unless it is willing to submit itself to the possible detriments that may occur within an equal application of that same law.

Does it not seem unusual then that civil rights leaders such as Benjamin Hooks of the NAACP cry foul when one of the arguably more important laws of our country is simply applied to blacks in the same fashion that it would apply to whites?

It seems that Dr. Hooks is leading minority students down a yellow brick road of resentment and perhaps increased racial hostility on the nation's college campuses.

This resentment will undoubtedly result as a by-product of the president's decision not to follow Mr. Williams' findings. This resentment and animosity may manifest itself in the form of racial hostilities at college campuses where race relations were somewhat amicable.

However, if Hooks truly believed in bettering the racial climate in the United States, he could have spoken a thousand words simply by uttering nine, "I support the ruling of the Department of Education."

Yes, uttering these nine words may have altered the college plans of hundreds if not thousands of black and other minority college students, but it would have also sent a message.

The message sent to millions of Americans would have read "blacks and other minorities can be intel-lually honest even when it hurts." Hooks, however, choose not to send this message.

President Bush also failed to seize this opportunity to stand up for fairness. The result of the president's lack of leadership means that for the next four years minority students would be able to receive scholarship monies for which the non-minority population on most college campuses will not have a chance to compete.

If I were a non-minority college student, I would be madly upset at the fact that I did not have the opportunity to compete for the same scholarship that was awarded to a minority solely based upon race.

Do you want to get a clearer picture of what non-minority students may be feeling?

Put yourself in the shoes of the non-minority college student. Your family has realized that it cannot afford to continue financing your education. Imagine walking into the financial aid office at the university that you now attend. Upon inquiring about financial aid opportunities, you are told that the only financial aid that remains is designated specifically for minority students. Wouldn't you feel a certain amount of animosity toward the next minority student that you came in contact with?

The so-called civil rights leadership regularly issues inflammatory statements detailing how either public or private actions and/or policies will result in a backlash of racism. One should wonder whether the so-called civil rights leadership has recognized that its actions will cause a backlash of racism.

Many Americans, who genuinely want to provide equal access to education for all, and who believed, if not participated, in the civil rights movement, will stop supporting the traditional civil rights organizations such as the NAACP, PUSH, and the Urban League.

I believe that many God-fearing Americans will do just this because now it is clear that these so-called civil rights leaders no longer want equality.

Now these so-called leaders want to have their respective groups placed above the law. The American people, college students included, will not stand for this.

Civil rights leaders have used the Civil Rights Act to protect myriad Americans from the "vestiges of racism which pervade this country." However, these leaders now feel that minorities should be excluded from the class of Americans to which the act applied.

Benjamin Hooks and others are making a mockery of the system and are certainly diminishing the earnest efforts of leaders across the country who truly want equal rights for all.

Many thanks go to Ben Hooks and to other so-called civil rights leaders for showing Americans that people of color don't want to be judged by the content of our character but rather by the color of our skin.

Government not only culprit in price increases on luxury items

By KIRK BAIRD-PARKS
The University Daily

Alcohol, along with several other luxury items such as tobacco, faced a new problem on Jan. 1 — an excise tax.

The increased alcohol tax on an average caused a $9 barrel, which is the equivalent of 31 gallons, to double in price.

All breweries, distributors and retailers were required to inventory their merchandise and pay a floor tax at the new taxation level. In turn, the businesses increased consumer's prices in order to cover the tax hike.

Several retailers and distributors are upset about what they see as a regressive tax.

For John Broome, owner of Crossed Keys, this new tax is an example of the negativity heaped upon the liquor industry.

"It (the excise tax) is a regressive tax, meaning it doesn't promote a growth. You end up getting less activity within the industry," Broome said. "It's just another negative in an industry that is the whipping boy — some of which is justified. But when a tax becomes regressive, you've got to wonder what they're doing about it."

Dave Gentry, general manager of Great Plains Distributor said, "It's a regressive tax in that people will buy less of the product. It's been proven it doesn't increase revenue. It drops volume and therefore you don't get the increased revenue."

However, the excise tax was not the only increase on the price of alcohol. The manufacturers also raised their prices in what has become an annual increase.

Broome said the wholesale price on a case of beer has been raised $1.40. Of that $1.40, only 65 cents is from the excise tax. The 75-cent difference is from a manufacturers' price increase.

"Distillers and wineries realize there will be a decline, so they increased the price on top of the tax," Broome said. "Whenever there is an excise tax they will usually increase the price because the public is already confused."

"It allows the breweries to get their licks in. Then the wholesalers get theirs in," he said.

Ted Sanders, manager of Pinkies, concurred: "What they (the breweries) have done is to take this opportunity to push it off on the government."

However, Gentry said the price increase was going to come regardless of the excise tax.

"Historically we'll have an annual increase to cover the cost of operation right around the first of the year," Gentry said. "Their increase to us we had to pass along because we couldn't absorb all of it and stay in business."

"(The breweries) had the price increase simply because of the cost of the product. You could have several increases during the year but the breweries have held off to an annual increase," he said. "In my opinion, they weren't trying to hide anything."

Many consumers stocked up on liquor before the price increased. With some retailers paying the tax for the customer until February, thus keeping the price at last years' level, the consumer hasn't been greatly affected by the increase.

But one fact the retailers and distributors have agreed upon is that no one knows what effect the increased alcohol price will have on consumers when they begin to pay the difference.

Sanders said people will eventually get used to the price increase, but some will downgrade from their normal beer and begin purchasing less expensive brands.

Broome said the downgrading will cause fewer dollars to be made in total sales.

"A typical scenario will be a guy who is buying a brand of whiskey for $15.89 that went up to $18.99, will have to find another $15.89 product," Broome said.

Does this mean breweries will manufacture more less-premium beer?

Gentry said the industry will probably take a wait-and-see approach.

"Adolph Coors Company has prices between imports and super premiums. We don't carry anything lower than Keystone and Keystone Light — our popular priced beer," Gentry said. "I really doubt if Adolph Coors will produce a less-premium beer. But they said for years they wouldn't come out with a premium-priced beer, and Keystone has done quite well."

Gentry added that the difference in price between Coors products isn't in the ingredients, but the brewing method, advertising and packaging.

As the breweries, distributors and retailers ponder the increase's consumer-related effect, several Texas Tech students have said the tax and manufacturing price increase will have little to no effect on them.

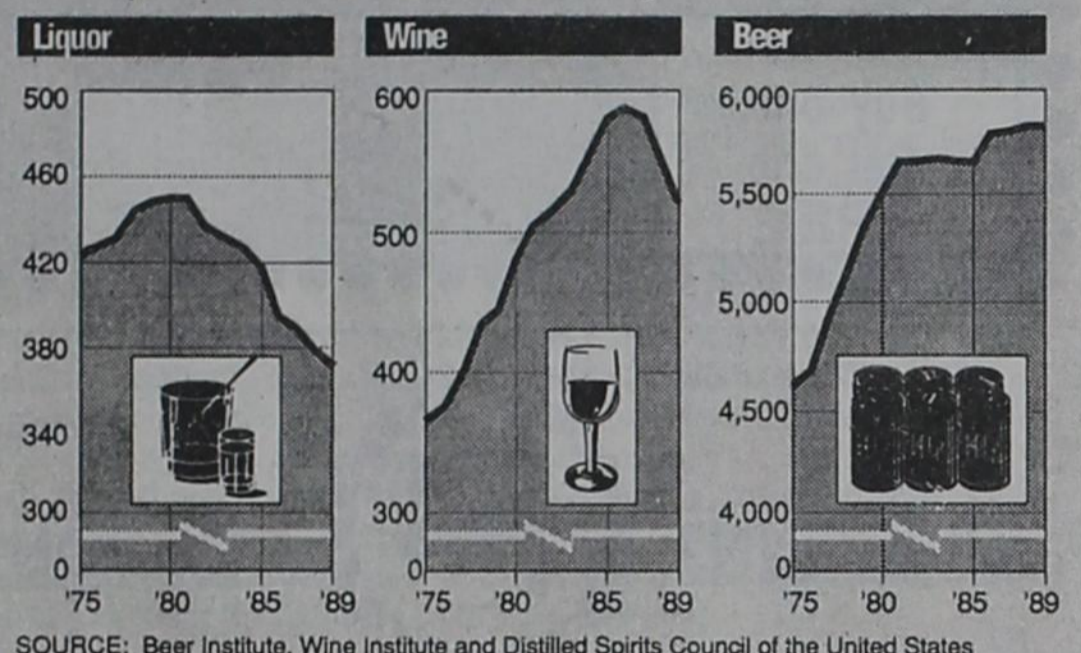

"I don't think (the excise tax) is a good idea because we're paying so many taxes now," said Tai Ngo, a senior pre-optometry major from Houston. "On a weekend, I'll usually buy a couple of packs and I'm not really going to cut back now."

Laura Garner, a senior photography communications major from Lubbock, said she doesn't have a problem with the increases in tax and price for luxury items.

"It doesn't affect me because if I want it I'll pay for it."

When stars become has-beens

Andrew Harris
Sports Editor

- Holds single-game and all-time Super Bowl records for most passing yards and touchdown passes.
- All-time NFL career passing efficiency leader.
- 1989 and 1990 NFL player of the year.

The list goes on and on. Montana has been around for many years. And in those years, his body has taken some brutal punishment, which is only natural when you have every defensive player in the NFL wanting your head on a silver platter.

As the sporting world prepares for the upcoming Super Bowl, attention is focused on the match-ups and mud-slinging that always accompany football's biggest game.

Tuesday, Buffalo and New York traded blows in front of a media circus that would have made even P.T. Barnum, himself proud.

But one man forgotten amidst all of the Super Bowl-week hype, thanks in part to a Matt Bahr field-goal and a bone-crushing sack by Giants' defensive end Leonard Marshall, is San Francisco 49er quarterback Joe Montana.

San Francisco's 15-13 last-second loss to New York in the NFC championship game ended any hopes Montana and the 49ers may have had of becoming the first football team in National Football League history to "three-peat".

During the game, Montana sustained a broken right hand and bruised sternum, to add to the long list of injuries he has suffered over the years.

But, throughout his career, Montana has won every award, set numerous records and led San Francisco to four Super Bowl titles in eight years.

So perhaps it is time for the 49ers' "Savior of the Bay" to turn in his cleats, put his "Golden Arm" away for future Hall of Fame enshrinement and simply hang 'em up.

Since coming into the league, Montana has done just about everything a quarterback in the NFL can do.

- Super Bowl XVI, XIX and XXIV Most Valuable Player.

My point is, Montana has done a lot for the NFL, and the NFL has done a lot for him. I just think it is time for him to bow-out gracefully, before he becomes a washed-up quarterback that has stayed in the NFL past his prime.

Other one-time stand-outs like Oakland/Houston's George Blanda, Oakland's Darrel Lamonia, Washington's Billy Kilmer and Buffalo/San Francisco's O.J. Simpson were all once great players who simply played past their prime and turned into mediocre ball players just looking for a place to play.

Montana is too good for that. He has demonstrated that he is arguably the best quarterback to ever bark signals between the hash marks.

So what's next for football's version of Joltin' Joe?

Perhaps a five-year wait for a leisurely trip to Canton, Ohio, to take his place among football's best in the Hall of Fame.

If I had a say-so, I'd induct him tomorrow.

Texas squeaks past Tech 66-63

By ANDREW HARRIS
The University Daily

For 36 straight games, Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp and her Red Raider women's basketball team have entered the Texas game with hopes of coming out with a victory, and for 36 straight times they have come out on the short end of the stick.

Tech battled a tough No. 18 Lady Longhorn team throughout the game before Texas forward Vicki Hall took over and pushed the Lady Longhorns past the Raiders 66-63 last night in a Southwest Conference showdown in front of 3,411 Tech faithfuls at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

With the loss, the Raiders drop to 5-2 in conference play and 13-4 overall, while Texas took over sole possession of second place in the SWC and improved its record to 5-1 in league play and 11-5 overall.

"Obviously we're disappointed that we didn't win," Sharp said after Tech's second loss in 12 games. "I thought we got a great effort out of our kids and that's going to be a tough loss for them to recover from."

The Raiders had a chance to tie the game and send it into overtime, but the Lady Longhorn defense was too tough, keeping Tech from getting off a three-point shot before the final buzzer sounded.

Texas' Hall, who finished with a game-high 22 points, put the game on ice as she sank a four-footer with 26 seconds to play, giving the Lady Horns their final three-point margin. Hall also pulled down a game high nine rebounds.

Raider guard Alexis Ware pulled Tech within one at the 3:33 mark of the second half at 64-63 when she hit both ends of a one-and-one.

Sharon Steinhilber/The University Daily

Can't touch this

Texas Tech senior guard Rachelle Mullanax (22) tries to keep the ball away from Texas guard Amy Claborn (12) as the Red Raiders dropped a close decision to the Lady Longhorns 66-63 Wednesday night in Lubbock's Municipal Coliseum. Tech fell to 5-2 in the SWC and 13-4 overall, while Texas improved to 5-1 in league play and 11-5 overall.

Although Tech got to the free-throw line three more times than Texas, they failed to convert on many crucial opportunities.

Tech was led by junior post Jennifer Buck, who finished the contest hitting 10 of 15 shots for 21 points and five rebounds.

Texas Tech (63)
Buck 10-15 4-21, Kirkland 4-7 6-16,
Totals 24-50 13-22 63.

Texas (66)
Hall 9-16 3-4 22, Henderson 6-11 2-14,
Totals 27-59 8-15 66.

Half-time score - Tech 32, Texas 36. Three-point goals - Tech 2-4 (Kirkland 2-4), Texas 4-4 (Hall 3-3, Pointer 1-1). Rebounds - Tech 31 (Kirkland, McMillan, Buck 5), Texas 35 (Hall 9).

Is that really a sneaker I hear ringing?

helping them. I also wondered if they had any idea of how the public viewed the choice of quality actors they casted in the commercials.

The SI commercials remind me of those groovy K-Tel record advertisements.

Picture this: A couple is walking down a moonlit beach listening to K.C. and the Sunshine Band. Their champagne glasses are overflowing and their hair is blowing in the wind, when suddenly a phone rings and the guy says, "Excuse me honey, I have to answer my sneaker."

Do we have to wait for the next commercial from SI to get our cool new Ginsu knife phone, or do we demand what's rightfully ours.

Please SI, take us back to the good ole days of the swimsuit issue and leave the cheesy promotional advertising to the people at Ronco.

Maybe that would go too far and spoil the image that K-Tel has been destined to achieve, but it seems like the people at SI could use any help they can get.

The choice is up to the American public.

For many years, the lure of the swimsuit issue was SI's main promo, but now the company has fallen into the ranks with Time/Life Books and the infamous Mr. Microphone.

Although SI has not quite fallen to the depths of using, "Hey good looking we'll be back to pick you up later," the actors on the sneaker and football phone ads can probably be found holding their own on cable's Amazing Discoveries.

My problem is not just that the commercials are a total waste of SI's advertising dollars, but please, is it really sheik to fool your friends into thinking you could call home with this thing, and then lace it up and prepare for a little hoop at the Rec?

I was curious about how well SI thought the free phone offer was
