Reagan asks Congress for political support of Middle East policies

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, seeking to defuse congressional calls for the withdrawal of Marines from Beirut, visited Capitol Hill Tuesday to urge Senate Republicans to resist election-year challenges to his Middle East policies.

"In Lebanon, the peace progress has been slow and painful, but we've made genuine progress," Reagan said.

"In Lebanon, the peace progress has been slow and painful, but we've made genuine progress. President Reagan"

As he addressed his political allies in the Senate, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill (D-Mass.) said more than half the House Democrats who voted to back the continued presence of Marines in Lebanon have changed their minds.

"They would vote for the president to move them (1,600 U.S. Marines) and to cut off funds," O'Neill said.

In a closed portion of his meeting with most of the 55 Senate Republicans, Reagan gave general answers to about a dozen questions on Lebanon, taxes, the federal deficit and other issues likely to be raised on Capitol Hill during the shortened election-year session.

He was to return to Capitol Hill tonight to deliver his State of the Union address to a joint session of Congress.

Those at Tuesday's meeting said Reagan urged unity among GOP Senate members, but offered no specific reasons to believe the Marines can leave Beirut soon, or that there will be any major effort to reduce federal deficits of almost $200 billion.

Donald Rumsfeld, Reagan's Middle East negotiator, also was present Tuesday, briefing Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker (R-Tenn.), Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman John Tower (R-Texas), members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and O'Neill.

Baker said diplomatic efforts are under way in the United Nations and elsewhere to bring Lebanon's warring factions together, but gave no indication Rumsfeld reported significant progress.

Asked if there should be a pullout, Baker said he would back Reagan while efforts to negotiate an agreement continued.

But O'Neill said Baker has misread the depth of opposition in the Senate to keeping the Marines stationed outside the Beirut airport: "Baker is not a candidate for re-election. I don't think he gets the same perspective as candidates running for re-election."

In September, with O'Neill's support, Congress gave Reagan an 18-month War Powers Resolution permitting the Marines to stay until April 1985.

On Tuesday, O'Neill said he was "misinformed" by the administration at that time about the likelihood of unifying Lebanon, and so now he has withdrawn his support.

Meanwhile, Reagan accused the Soviet Union, Syria and Iran of playing a "complicating role" in attempts to find peace in Lebanon.

In a letter to Democratic House members, he said he will not pull out the Marines until a settlement has been negotiated in Lebanon.

The letter was sent to Democratic Reps. Lee Hamilton of Indiana and Les Aspin of Wisconsin, who had written Reagan to ask if his commitment of the Marines in Lebanon was "open-ended."

Meanwhile, Democrats took their turn attacking budget deficits as House Majority Leader Jim Wright declared the nation's priorities have grown "cruelly deranged" at the White House, with spiraling military spending draining human resources.

Wright called for the Senate to endorse House-passed legislation calling for an economic summit including the president and congressional leaders of both parties. The summit would be aimed at producing a plan within 45 days to cut the projected deficit for the coming year by one-half.

His strongest rhetoric was reserved for an attack on military spending, which he called a "grotesque misuse of our God-given treasure."

Two of Wright's colleagues took deficit reduction into their own hands by returning money appropriated for office expenses to the Treasury.

Rep. Hank Brown (R-Colo.) said he has refunded $27,471 from his official office allowance fund, which totaled $165,441 in 1983, and Rep. James Olin (D-Va.) returned $12,207 from his office payroll along with the 3.5 percent pay raise that House members voted themselves last year. That amounted to $2,443 of the new $72,243 salary to which Olin is entitled.

Brown said, "When our nation faces budget deficits of $200 billion a year, it is essential that all public officials be as efficient as possible in the use of public funds."

In other developments, FCC Chairman Mark Fowler informed Congress by letter that radio and television stations have the option to refuse political advertisements that are "obscene or indecent."

Although FCC rules prohibit the censoring of campaign ads, Fowler said FCC attorneys concluded that the law was not intended to override the "prohibition against the broadcast of obscene or indecent materials."

The issue was raised when Larry Flynt, the publisher of Hustler magazine, announced he was seeking the presidency and would use political TV commercials featuring explicit sex scenes. Flynt has since withdrawn from the race.

State school may be drilling site for oil

By KEVIN SMITH
University Daily Reporter

A special public hearing is scheduled for Thursday's city council meeting for the purpose of hearing the request of Texland Petroleum for an oil and gas drilling permit that would allow them to sink an oil well on Lubbock State School property.

Texland first applied for a permit to drill "Lubbock State School # 3" on Dec. 12, 1983. If the permit is granted, the well will be drilled approximately 675 feet west of University Avenue, and 390 feet south of the one-half section line of Block A, Section 12.

Approval for the permit will be considered following the hearing.

The council also will hear a recommendation from Lee Stafford, chairman of the Electric Utility Board, regarding the late payment penalty for residential customers of city-owned Lubbock Power and Light.

The Electric Utility Board recommends that the 5 percent charge be dropped since the Public Utility Commission has ordered SPS to suspend its late charge because it is inconsistent with PUC regulations.

Because of the marketing problems that would arise with competing utility companies charging different rates, it has been recommended that LP&L drop its late charge by filing an amended tariff with the city secretary.

Bill Armstrong also will make a presentation to the council on behalf of the Cultural Affairs Council.

Secretary of Defense writes to Student Senate

By GILBERT DUNKLEY
University Daily Reporter

U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger has written to the Texas Tech Student Senate expressing his appreciation of three Student Senate resolutions passed Nov. 17.

One resolution denounced the Oct. 23 suicide truck-bomb attack that killed 241 U.S. Marines and Navy personnel while they slept in their headquarters building at the Beirut airport in Lebanon. The resolution offered sympathy to the families of the men killed in that attack.

The other resolutions conveyed "support, approval and congratulations to President Ronald Reagan" for the Oct. 25 Grenada invasion and expressed sympathy for the families of U.S. military personnel who died in that operation.

"America again holds its head high both nationally and internationally," one resolution states.

All three resolutions were sponsored by Student Sen. Carl Beson.

"I share your pride in these gallant men and your sadness for their loss," Weinberger wrote.

"In Grenada and Lebanon, we have seen American forces give their lives for peace and freedom. Their supreme sacrifice adds new luster to the American heritage of valor and dedication," Weinberger continued.

Copies of the three resolutions were sent to the Department of Defense in Washington, with a request that "the military transmit copies of this document to the units and men involved (American and Caribbean units)."

In his letter, Weinberger said copies of the resolutions were being forwarded to the relevant military departments, from which they would be passed on to the units and persons requested.

Baier resigns to accept job in Alabama

By DAMON PEARCE
University Daily Reporter

Texas Tech Dean of Students Jack Baier has resigned his post effective June 1 to accept the position of vice president for student affairs at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

"Tech has been a great university and I'll miss it very much," Baier said Tuesday. "It was a tough decision to make, but it will be a good career move."

Baier came to Tech in 1977 from the University of Nebraska, where he was the Dean of Students, to accept the position of assistant vice president for student affairs. In 1979, he assumed the duties of the dean of students in addition to his responsibilities at the student affairs office.

Baier and his wife, Nancy, have two children, John, a senior in high school, and Karen, a junior.

"Lubbock has been a great place to raise my family, and we will all miss it. It's been a great seven years," Baier said.

Baier will be moving to a university that is 153 years old and "the leading university in the state. The school is the first and the oldest in the state, and the flagship in a system of schools, much like the University of Texas at Austin is here in Texas," Baier said.

The school is considered to be a comprehensive school, much like Tech, with separate colleges ranging from law to nursing.

"They have just been around a little bit longer than Tech and have had time to develop a little bit further," he said.

"My responsibilities will include all the parts of student affairs, including academics, health services, the dean of students office, student publications and student recreation," he said. "It is just a little bit more responsibility than I have here."

"Basically, my responsibility there will be for the entire division of student affairs, where I am responsible for only a portion of it here," Baier said.

Baier's announcement of his intentions came as little surprise to Tech Vice President for Student Affairs Robert Ewalt.

"We had been talking about it for some time," Ewalt said. "I knew that he was applying, and I knew that he was being considered."

"At this time, we have not taken any steps toward replacing him. Decisions about that will be made at a later time."

Emphasis on 'thinness' may lead to eating disorders

Editor's note: This is the first in a three-part series of articles on anorexia nervosa and bulimia. Today's article is an overview of eating disorders in the United States. Thursday's article will take a look at the diseases' impact on sufferers and their families. Friday's article will examine the problem through the eyes of a recovered anorexic/bulimic.

By GREG VAUGHN
University Daily Reporter

The development of serious eating disorders such as anorexia nervosa and bulimia often has been linked to cultures where dieting and thinness are peculiar to that society's "ideal" image of beauty.

Although research on anorexia and bulimia is relatively new, most experts agree that the diseases are a result of the emphasis American culture places on thinness.

Anorexia nervosa now is recognized not only as an eating disorder, but an emotional disorder as well. The number of cases of the disease has been rising at an alarming rate in both the United States and Great Britain. In the United States alone, there are more than 100,000 anorexics, 10 times more than there were 10 years ago.

The anorexic, obsessed with being thin, literally starves herself to the point where she is grotesquely emaciated and leaves herself highly susceptible to heart failure, infections, irreversible hypoglycemia and starvation. Furthermore, the anorexic continues to see herself as overweight even after losing as much as 25 percent of her body weight.

Bulimics, on the other hand, do not show any visible signs of having an eating disorder. Unlike anorexics, bulimics are compulsive overeaters who go on an eating binge and then induce vomiting or take laxatives to keep from gaining weight. They maintain their normal body weight and appear to be healthy.

Like anorexia, bulimia now is considered an emotional disorder. The practice of going on a binge and then purging now is estimated to be performed by 15 to 20 percent of college women.

Anorexia and bulimia can strike anyone, but certain generalizations can be made for the "typical" anorexic or bulimic.

More than 90 percent of all anorexics and bulimics are women between the ages of 15 and 25. The girls are from moderate-income families and are perfectionist over-achievers when the disorders start in their teen years. The girls also have a low self-esteem and have problems relating to others and life's problems.

A study published in 1980 by Psychological Reports on the cultural expectations of thinness in women showed an ironic relationship between current symbols of "sexual attractiveness" and the mean weights of women in America. The study was based on data from Playboy centerfolds, Miss America Pageant contestants and the number of diet articles appearing in six popular women's magazines.

The study showed that while there is a trend toward increasing population weights, the "ideal" weights and measurements of women have decreased in the past 20 years.

An analysis of 240 "Playmates" showed that the percent of average weight for age and height decreased significantly over a 20-year period, and the average weight of Miss America contestants has declined 0.13 kg (0.28 lb.) per year.

Population norm surveys revealed that, due to improved nutrition, the average female under 30 has become heavier in the past 20 years. The population average weight in all height categories has increased by five to six pounds for women between 17 and 24 years old.

The study also compiled data on the frequency of diet articles in the past 20 years in six popular women's magazines and found a significant increase in the number of articles over the past decade. Out of a total of 467 diet articles, the yearly mean for the first 10 years was 17.1 compared to 29.6 for the second decade.

Often called the nation's foremost authority on eating disorders, Dr. Hilde Bruch, professor of psychiatry at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and author of The Golden Cage, described the changing role of women in today's society with relation to developing an eating disorder.

In an article that appeared in People magazine, Bruch said, "During the 1950s, it was acceptable to be a compliant, nice, sweet girl. If she was bright enough, and from the upper class, she was supposed to go to college and meet a nice Harvard man and settle down."

"Now this same girl goes to college to write a Ph.D thesis and get a job in Washington," she said. "Girls with conforming personalities feel obliged to do something that demands a great degree of independence in order to be respected and recognized. When they get stuck, the only independence they feel they have is to control their bodies."

Super Bowl

Football season's end leaves empty feeling

REAGAN WHITE

As the clock ran down toward the end of Sunday's Super Bowl, I found myself exhibiting all the classic symptoms of panic; clenched teeth, racing pulse, excess perspiration.

Football season was almost over. Watching the players run off the field after the game was like waking up from an impossibly happy dream starring myself and Christie Brinkley. The good times are over.

I know there are a lot of wives and girlfriends who would like to declare the first day after football season a national holiday, but letting misfits think any ignorant thing they feel like is what America is all about. The educated, informed majority of the public know that good reasons to continue living are going to be few and far between until next fall.

Sure, basketball is bounding near mid-season, and baseball swings into action soon. But the main attraction is over, and the sports fan population of America knows both of these sports amount to little more than a sideshow until the main event is ready to roll again.

Don't get me wrong. I enjoy watching a good game of basketball, and an afternoon in the sun at a baseball game is — well, better than a sharp stick in the eye.

But the most spectacular slam dunk can do no more than make me ooh and aah, and after 160-odd regular season games, I WOULD rather have a sharp stick in the eye than watch another baseball game.

Now give me an average Dallas game. I sweat, I curse, I yell until I'm hoarse. Most fans do, whether they love the Cowboys or hate them. And after the season is over, I think back on key screw-ups that hurt them at one time or another during the season and cringe.

Think fast: who lost last season's World Series? Who won? Who cares? Sure, the Pro Bowl is coming up. But face it, the players don't even care who wins. And who can take a game seriously that has Tony Dorsett in the same backfield with Joe Theisman?

Not me.

So I might as well get used to the idea. With my apologies to Dandy Don, "Turn out the lights, the party's over ..."

Demos offer motley crew for 1984

LAURA TETREAU

A few months after the 1980 presidential election, a group of disgruntled Democrats held a star chamber meeting in an executive highrise complex in Washington, D.C.

"How did THEY win?"

"How could the American public do this to us?"

"Where did THEY get the slip on us?"

Something must be done.

And indeed, something was done — the word went out that the party was looking for candidates for the 1984 presidential elections. The party wanted Democratic politicians who had character, charisma, public appeal, and most importantly, the ability to fool the American public into believing they weren't like previous Democratic candidates.

They were looking for men with "the right stuffing."

With such a new approach to candidate selecting, many Democrats announced themselves as being Americans who could meet their party's high calling. After rigorous public surveying and pre-campaigning, eight candidates have emerged, and the flight pad is set for a stellar event at the New Hampshire primary.

Each candidate's personality has a different blend to afford him "the right stuffing," and the various campaign approaches reflect these different mixtures.

JESSE JACKSON: With the war cry, "Our time has come", Jesse Jackson opened his campaign with eloquent speech.

"From slave ship to championship — our time has come"

"From disgrace to amazing grace — our time has come"

Jackson contends that he is qualified for the job because he has the Democratic candidate fire and the slogan "I am ... somebody"

Forget the issues, just remember the slogan. It's a new one.

JOHN GLENN: As any true hero would do, Sen. John Glenn carefully weighs the risk in every situation, including each individual sentence in his speeches. And it shows.

Glenn's greatest quality is his ability to identify a problem without offering a solution, as in the Lebanon situation. Glenn's stance on the situation is that the Marine's mission needs to be redefined.

Thank you for clarifying the issues for the American public.

WALTER MONDALE: Fritzy is his nickname and walking all over the polls is his game.

Mondale's campaign has been described as being flawless, with few problems and high endorsements from all sectors of the Democratic community.

The campaign is a back-to-basics approach, with much hand-shaking and many public appearances, in order to meet the "little people" that matter.

Mondale was vice president under Jimmy Carter, so he has White House experience. Because he already knows the White House, shouldn't that be enough experience for a presidential candidate?

Forget the issues, remember the experience.

ALAN CRANSTON: Sen. Alan Cranston also has chosen a new approach to campaigning; his philosophy is that there is no generation gap.

His greatest asset is the simplicity in his campaign, as shown by his television ad slogan in Iowa: "For jobs. For peace. For president, Alan Cranston."

It's kinda catchy in its own '60s way.

GARY HART: Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado has an undying spirit in the face of a dying campaign.

Hart maintains that he is "not dead," despite the fact that his campaign is in heavy debt, causing him to move his Washington headquarters to the second floor of a dingy warehouse and to voice many of his speeches from the Senate floor.

Such undying drive is encouraging when considering America's deficit budget.

ERNEST HOLLINGS: Second to Jackson's unique approach to a campaign style is Sen. Ernest Hollings, who replaces issues with razor-sharp wit.

An ability to make light of America's most pressing political issues makes me sleep better at night.

REUBIN ASKEW: The candidate quality that makes Reubin Askew stand out from the others is his realistic outlook on his campaign. Askew's campaign manager predicts that he will make a respectable finish in the top four in the New Hampshire primary.

A realist always is nice to have around when the threat of nuclear holocaust is in the air.

GEORGE MCGOVERN: The outstanding quality of McGovern is his ability to come out of the history textbooks and go public with his chronic disease — "presidential campaignitis."

His campaign will be a textbook example of how campaigns of the early '70s failed, and how name recognition is not enough for today's type of candidate.

My political history will now be complete.

That completes the menu of Democratic candidates for the 1984 election, and the delegates of the New Hampshire primary will determine which turkey, I mean politician, has "the right stuffing."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Waiting line

To the editor:

The article on the Tech computer registration process in The University Daily (Jan. 23) brought to light several interesting points.

- 1) The computer system was installed with inaccurate and incomplete analysis.
- 2) The students should be considered a primary output of the university.
- 3) The problem with the computer system does not lie in the inexperience of those using the system.

These will, however, never be implemented as the university does not consider the student's time as valuable.

NEWS BRIEFS

Disaster ice storm hits Northeast

(AP) — An ice storm created a "disaster area" Tuesday in major cities of the Northeast with cars, trucks and buses colliding helplessly on a glassy blanket as thick as a pancake in places.

Thousands of morning commuters were stranded, highways were blocked by overturned trucks and multi-car smashups, and hundreds of schools closed as freezing rain, sleet or snow fell from the Virginias to northern New England.

An elderly man was killed in an accident on an icy highway in New Jersey and another died in a smashup in Kentucky.

But most of the nation enjoyed a respite from the record subzero cold of last week. "It's a nice break, a nice little week-long thaw," said Nolan Duke of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., but said it's not likely to last: "It looks like by the weekend another big blast of cold air is coming in."

Long distance rate hearing begins

AUSTIN (AP) — General counsel Allen King of the Public Utility Commission said Tuesday that as far as the staff is concerned the agency should grant AT&T Communications $103.7 million in additional intrastate long-distance rates — or nothing at all.

PUC hearing examiner Phillip Holder took another look Tuesday at AT&T's request for an immediate increase of $115.4 million in long-distance rates.

He already has rejected the request once, and AT&T turned to state court in Austin, where it failed twice this month in attempts to get a rate hike.

King said the PUC staff, in effect, made two recommendations — $103.7 million or zero — depending on which test the three-member PUC uses.

Rescuers find cap of buried man

LANGTRY (AP) — Members of a search party Tuesday discovered the cap worn by a man missing for four days in a massive landslide, but they failed to locate the body in the rubble strewn throughout the Amistad National Recreation Area, authorities said.

Edgar Joe Dorroh, 45, of San Antonio, disappeared about 12:30 p.m. Saturday when a canyon wall collapsed.

Assistant park superintendent Joe Goldman said it was "extremely doubtful" that Dorroh, a diabetic, had survived three days buried under the rocks and in sub-freezing temperatures.

High-pressure hoses carted to the scene Tuesday to help dislodge some of the rocks were "pretty much ineffective," he said, because they lost much of the pressure going uphill.

Inflation down in 1983, economists say

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer costs rose 3.8 percent in 1983, the least since the price-controlled years of 1971-72, the government said Tuesday. President Reagan's chief economist called it "outstanding" and private analysts agreed inflation appears "down for the count."

Prices rose 3.9 percent in 1982 after shooting up 12.4 percent in 1980 and 8.9 percent in 1981.

Restraints appeared everywhere, from falling energy prices to scant pickups in food, housing and transportation costs.

Medical costs, soaring at a double-digit pace in the four previous years, rose 6.4 percent, the least in 10 years, according to the Labor Department's report on the Consumer Price Index.

Martin Feldstein, head of Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, said by all the key measures of inflation "1983 was an outstanding year." Earlier this month, the government said producer prices rose just 0.6 percent last year for the best showing in two decades.

Allen Sinai of the New York investment house of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb said, "Inflation looks down for the count for a while."

Helping hold down 1983's rise was a seasonally adjusted increase of just 0.3 percent in December, the same as in the previous month.

The yearly gain was the best since the 3.4 percent of both 1971 and 1972, when wage and price controls were in place.

Analysts attributed the good price news largely to abundant crops through most of the year and oil glut. They also said the cost of labor rose only slightly, and the dollar's value remained strong, which made foreign goods less costly compared to U.S. products.

The Labor Department said food prices went up only 2.7 percent, the least since 1976. They were up 0.3 percent in December after a tiny 0.1 percent increase in November.

A breakdown of food costs in 1983 showed beef and veal prices were off 1.6 percent, and pork prices fell 11 percent. Fresh fruit prices fell 1.3 percent and fresh vegetable prices were up 16.9 percent. Egg prices soared 35.7 percent and poultry prices surged 10.2 percent.

Energy prices tumbled 0.5 percent last year, best since 1963. Contributing was a sharp 10.9 percent fall in home heating oil prices, the biggest drop since 1945. Gasoline fell 1.6 percent, and natural gas rose 5.2 percent after soaring 25.4 percent in 1982.

Analysts expected a bigger increase in food prices in 1984 because of the effects of the unusually harsh weather last summer and in December. They also expect energy prices to rise a bit more in coming months as the cold

Still, they do not foresee any return to the double-digit pace of a few years ago. "I expect only good things for a while on inflation," said economist William Dunkelberg of Purdue University.

The department also said the average weekly earnings of U.S. workers rose 2.5 percent in 1983, compared to a rise of 0.5 percent in 1982. Before adjusting for seasonal factors and inflation, workers' average weekly earnings totaled $289.68 in December, compared to $273.70 in 1982.

Insulation bill

House Democrats introduce measure to heat homes of poor

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House, in its first choice of 1984 between widening social programs or cutting deficits, was asked Tuesday to begin a $28.5 billion project to help the poor heat their homes.

Republicans dismissed the idea as an extravagant budget-buster the nation cannot afford when annual deficits are nearing $200 billion.

House Democrats introduced the measure, designed to ensure that 13 million homes of the poor over the next decade are insulated, and which might reduce heating bills for each home by about $225 a year.

Rep. Richard Ottinger (D-N.Y.) said it would blunt the impact of "one of the most punishing costs that low-income people face: the cost of heating their home."

But Republicans said Democrats should worry more about the cost of running the government than the cost of home heating.

"This bill blows the budget to smithereens... a first-class boondoggle," charged House Minority Leader Bob Michel (R-Ill.).

Citing Democratic expressions of concern over deficits,

Michel said, "If you want to do something about the deficit, stop spending."

Congress voted in 1976 to begin helping the poor insulate homes, and since then more than 1 million homes have been renovated.

But the administration has tried for three years to kill the program. Although Congress has prevented this, spending on the program has slowed, and Ottinger, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on energy conservation and power, said at the current rate it will take 50 years to finish the job.

When all the homes are weatherized, sponsors say, the country will burn the equivalent of 65 million fewer barrels of oil each year, and $3.3 billion a year will be saved in fuel costs.

Until then, he argued, the poor will keep dying of cold. He said 500 people died in December's frigid cold snap.

For those who are eligible, he said, the government will pay much of the cost of heating poorly insulated homes through welfare programs.

The federal Low Income Energy Assistance Program, giving direct financial aid to the poor for heating bills, now costs close to $2 billion a year, which could be sharply cut if homes were insulated.

While the bill starts out relatively small — $500 million each year for 1984 and 1985 — it escalates rapidly. From 1986, it authorizes Congress to spend any money necessary, and the congressional Budget Office estimates it would exceed $3 billion a year by 1988.

Money for the program is sent to the states, which distribute it to the needy under their own guidelines.

Rep. James Broyhill (R-N.C.) senior Republican on the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said the Budget Office prepared a new estimate on the bill's total cost, putting it at $28.5 billion over the decade.

He said the bill presented "a clear choice... between fiscal responsibility and fiscal irresponsibility."

Rep. Carlos Moorhead (R-Calif.) called it "irresponsible."

"We have the opportunity, on the first vote of this Congress, to put our vote where our mouth is on the question of deficits," said Rep. Phil Gramm (R-Texas).

House majority leader attacks 1985 spending plans

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House, in its first choice of 1984 between widening social programs or cutting deficits, was asked Tuesday to begin a $28.5 billion project to help the poor heat their homes.

Republicans dismissed the idea as an extravagant budget-buster the nation cannot afford when annual deficits are nearing $200 billion.

House Democrats introduced the measure, designed to ensure that 13 million homes of the poor over the next decade are insulated, and which might reduce heating bills for each home by some $225 a year.

Rep. Richard Ottinger (D-N.Y.) said it would blunt the impact of "one of the most punishing costs that low-income people face: the cost of heating their home."

But Republicans said Democrats should worry more about the cost of running the government than the cost of home heating.

"This bill blows the budget to smithereens ... a first-class boondoggle," charged House Minority Leader Bob Michel (R-Ill.).

Citing Democratic expressions of concern over deficits, Michel said, "If you want to do something about the deficit, stop spending."

Congress voted in 1976 to begin helping the poor insulate homes, and since then more than 1 million homes have been renovated.

But the administration has tried for three years to kill the program. Although Congress has prevented this, spending on the program has slowed, and Ottinger, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on energy conservation and power, said at the current rate it will take 50 years to finish the job.

When all the homes are weatherized, sponsors say, the country will burn the equivalent of 65 million fewer barrels of oil each year, and $3.3 billion a year will be saved in fuel costs.

Until then, he argued, the poor will keep dying of cold. He said 500 people died in December's frigid cold snap.

For those who are eligible, he said, the government will pay much of the cost of heating poorly insulated homes through welfare programs.

The federal Low Income Energy Assistance Program, giving direct financial aid to the poor for heating bills, now costs close to $2 billion a year, which could be sharply cut if homes were insulated.

While the bill starts out relatively small — $500 million each year for 1984 and 1985 — it escalates rapidly. From 1986, it authorizes Congress to spend any money necessary, and the congressional Budget Office estimates it would exceed $3 billion a year by 1988.

Money for the program is sent to the states, which distribute it to the needy under their own guidelines.

Rep. James Broyhill (R-N.C.) senior Republican on the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said the Budget Office prepared a new estimate on the bill's total cost, putting it at $28.5 billion over the decade.

He said the bill presented "a clear choice ... between fiscal responsibility and fiscal irresponsibility."

Rep. Carlos Moorhead (R-Calif.) called it "irresponsible."

"We have the opportunity, on the first vote of this Congress, to put our vote where our mouth is on the question of deficits," said Rep. Phil Gramm (R-Texas).

Wright also attacked the administration's record on education, saying, "It is one thing to pray for better schools ... but of little avail unless we are willing to pay for better schools."

He also recommended creating a computerized national job bank in the Labor Department to use constantly updated government statistics to keep track of "exactly what jobs are planned to become available, in just what numbers and in what locations, six months in advance."

But his strongest comments were reserved for an attack on ever-increasing military spending, which Wright called a

"grotesque misuse of our God-given treasure." He decried the costly arms race, adding that the cost alone should be sufficient inducement for the two countries to negotiate a solution.

"But peace, no less than war, must be waged," he said. "Someone must take the initiative. I would like that someone to be the president of the United States."

Wright said the president "should publicly propose to the Soviet Union that each of us reduce our military expenditures this year by 10 percent — say $27 billion each."

Tech restaurant program receives first state charter

By STEVE KAUFFMAN
University Daily Reporter

The Texas Tech Restaurant, Hotel and Institutional Management program has received charter status, which makes it the only Texas chapter of Eta Sigma Delta, the national hospitality management honorary.

David Hayes, director of the program, applied for the charter in October 1983. The application was reviewed in December, and the department was notified of the board's decision this month.

"Our program is based on academics," Hayes said. "We wanted to recognize those students who show scholastic excellence in the Restaurant and Hotel Management curriculum."

Membership in the organization is granted by invitation only to the top 20 percent of juniors and seniors enrolled in the management program.

Hayes polled a management class last fall to see if there was any interest in forming the organization at Tech. He also asked students to come by his office if they thought they met eligibility requirements for the club.

A faculty committee named three officers from those students who inquired about joining and who were eligible for the organization. To apply for the national affiliation, Hayes had to list officers of the Tech chapter.

In preparation for the first meeting, scheduled for Feb. 15, officers are planning activities for the group.

"We hope to be a visible society and get people who are majoring in restaurant, hotel and institutional management interested in it (the honorary)," chapter President Mark Keefer said.

He added that the group, being the sole chapter in Texas, also could be used as a tool to recruit students into the management program in the College of Home Economics.

"There is a definite growth toward the hospitality industry, and more people are going to be going into it as a career," Keefer said.

Invitations to prospective members will be sent this week after reviewing grade reports of hospitality management majors.

Hayes said a unique aspect of the group will be that the meetings will take place at various Lubbock restaurants and hotels. The manager of the hosting establishment will give an explanation of his business and its structure to orient students with the operation of a professional institution.

Police eye two suspects in Kilgore slayings

By The Associated Press

KILGORE — Police, focusing on two suspects in the slayings of five people abducted from a fast-food restaurant, may take their evidence to a grand jury in March, officials say.

Police have made no arrests and need to gather more evidence before seeking indictments, said William Brown, an investigator for the Rusk County district attorney. He told The Dallas Times Herald the case could go before a Rusk County grand jury in March.

Authorities know where to find the suspects if indictments are returned, he added.

"It will not be too hard to come up with them once the case is put together," Brown said. "We've got something we think is good."

The five victims were taken from a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant Sept. 23 and shot in the head as they lay face down beside a dirt road 18 miles south of this East Texas city. The victims' arms were folded and the hands of some were clasped across their eyes, police said.

About $2,000 was taken from the restaurant, investigators said.

"It might still blow up in our faces," Brown said. "We thought we had enough (evidence) for the last grand jury, but we didn't."

Drug use or drug dealing may have been involved in the killings, said Capt. G.W. Burks of Dallas, the Texas Ranger who has supervised the murder investigation.

"The people we're dealing with — the people we think might be responsible for it — were drug dealers," Burks said. "Either they were out of their heads when they did it, or there is the possibility that a drug deal went sour."

At least two people are believed to have taken part in the killings, police said. A ballistics test by the Texas Department of Public Safety indicated that more than one gun was used in the shootings.

West German leader pays tribute to victims of Nazis

By The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany paid tribute Tuesday to Jewish victims of the Nazi Holocaust while unforgiving death camp survivors dogged his steps, booing and jeering.

Kohl then opened talks with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. They were expected to focus on West German plans to sell sophisticated weaponry to Saudi Arabia, European support for Palestinian self-determination and on Israeli-European trade.

Kohl is the first West German Chancellor to visit Israel since Willy Brandt in 1973. He said on arrival that his six-day visit was a sign "of the bridge built between our two countries and peoples across the abyss of the past."

He also urged all involved parties to join in new Mideast peace negotiations, saying that only a negotiated settlement would "free the region forever from the scourge of war."

Shamir, whose parents and two sisters perished in the Nazi extermination camps, said before Kohl's arrival that he would also voice Israel's objections to Kohl's support for removing Waffen SS veterans from the list of banned West German organizations.

The announcement of Kohl's support for the move provoked an outpouring of protest from Holocaust survivors, even though the Waffen SS was a combat unit not directly linked to the extermination campaign.

Kohl's first stop was Yad Vashem, a stark and forbidding memorial to the 6 million Jews slaughtered by Hitler. After touring a museum portraying the Holocaust in documents and pictures, Kohl wearing a black homburg hat joined a traditional Jewish service for the dead.

Yitzhak Arad, director of Yad Vashem, told the West German chancellor that he had lost his parents at Treblinka in Poland.

The director also said SS units killed 3,000 Jews of his home village and urged Kohl to "please understand my feelings when I hear about the legitimization of the SS."

Fog grounds Sen. Glenn

By The Associated Press

ABILENE — Presidential candidate John Glenn, America's first man in space, was grounded Tuesday by a down-to-earth problem — fog.

Poor visibility at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport forced the U.S. senator to delay his presidential campaign swing through Texas by 38 minutes.

"It's foolish to take off if you can't shoot the approach (to D-FW Airport)," said Charles Murray, pilot of Glenn's chartered CV-580 turbo jet.

"We can't sacrifice safety for a time schedule for anybody."

The Ohio Democrat finally left Abilene at 11:38 a.m. for a 1:45 p.m. news conference in Fort Worth.

Stolen bicycles

Registering bikes with University Police helps deter theft

By DAMON PEARCE
University Daily Reporter

Students who have their bicycles stolen on the Tech campus have little chance of having them recovered, according to statistics released by the University Police.

During the fall semester, 36 bicycles were stolen, with only two of them being recovered, Detective Gene Mennick said.

The best way to prevent the theft of bicycles is to have them registered with the University Police, he said.

"We think that having the identification sticker on a bicycle is a good deterrent to a thief," Mennick said. "We have recovered several bicycles because the students had them registered with us."

To register a bicycle, officers put a sticker with an identification number on the bike, and they file cards in the University Police station by the student's name, serial number and identification number.

"This gives us a number of ways to trace the bike if it is stolen or lost," Mennick said. Although thefts are down from the same period last year, chances for recovery of stolen bicycles are not any better.

Most of the time, the thief will take the stolen bicycle to one of the flea markets around Lubbock and sell it there. "Flea markets are not required by law to account for the merchandise they purchase like pawn shops are," Mennick said.

"There are so many of these flea marts here in Lubbock that it is difficult to trace the stolen bicycles."

The University Police have recovered several bicycles since they started the program during the fall of 1982. He said the identification program was a major contribution in the recoveries.

"Even when the identification sticker has been scraped off, it takes the paint off with it and we can then check the serial number for identification," Mennick said. "We have had several convictions because of the program."

In addition, the identification sticker can help if the bicycle is ever lost or if it is left on campus during the summer. "We can use the number to call the owner and let him know that he forgot his bicycle," Mennick said.

"We auctioned off about 50 bicycles during October because we could not find the owners," Mennick continued. "There were some really nice bicycles in that bunch, but there was nothing that we could do."

According to Mennick, the University Police registered around 800 bicycles during the first two days of the program, but this year, registrations have not been as numerous.

The registration process is relatively simple, Mennick said. "All a student has to do is come by the Police Department office on campus and fill out a card. They can do it anytime 24 hours a day, and it takes about five minutes."

There is no charge to register a bicycle.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

La Ventana pictures to be taken

Texas Tech students who want to appear in the class section of the 1984 edition of Tech's yearbook, La Ventana, have slightly more than two weeks to have their pictures taken.

The La Ventana staff has set up two locations to take class pictures, at Koen's Photography at 2222 Broadway from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., and in the Journalism Building on campus from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

To avoid long lines, the staff is asking sophomores to have their photos taken this week, juniors Jan. 30 through Feb. 3, and seniors Feb. 6 through Feb. 10. However, the staff may make exceptions for students who cannot arrange sittings during designated times.

Home Economics offers course

Students in the College of Home Economics seeking an opportunity to develop their academic skills, clarify values and educational goals, and engage in peer/adviser support and counseling may enroll in "Foundations for Achievement in Home Economics."

The one-hour credit course will be taught by Pam Cummings, a home economics instructor, and Julie Haisler, a home economics graduate assistant.

The class will meet from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesdays beginning Jan. 31 in Room 216 of the Home Economics Building. The course will last the entire semester.

To enroll for the course, students should sign up in Room 211 of the Home Economics Building.

Controversy surrounds staff changes at KTXT-FM

By KRISTI FROELICH
University Daily Lifestyles Writer

The firing of two KTXT-FM executive staff members last week has brought out allegations of misuse of the Texas Tech radio station's equipment.

The questions concerning possible improper use of dance unit equipment arose when KTXT program director Charles Kyle "Stig" Daniels and music director Efrain Torres were fired Jan. 16 over what they were told by station manager Pat Schumacher was "a difference of opinion."

The pair say they believe more is involved than a simple difference of opinion.

Daniels and Torres say they think they were fired for having what they believed to be detrimental information about Schumacher concerning the station's dance unit and the proper procedure for using it.

They say the equipment may have been used free of charge at some dances, contrary to an unwritten station policy that said $50 should go to the station whenever the equipment was used.

The equipment consists of a set of portable turntables and some speakers that could be rented out for use at parties or events, and an investigation has resulted in a ban on using the equipment for such purposes.

Torres and Daniels say they believe the equipment was being misused by some personnel who were disobeying the policy as they understood it.

"It (the policy) was kind of loose, but basically you took the system out and could charge whatever you wanted, but $50 went to the station first. Even if you only charged $40, you still had to pay the $50," Daniels said.

"We were (fired), not verbally, but indirectly through our questioning of his (Schumacher's) activities and the fact that we didn't think he was doing his job right," Daniels said. "It just happened to be that probably, we took more of a stand than anyone else and therefore we were fired first. But I wouldn't be surprised to see more."

After his release, Daniels sent a letter to Bill Ross, chairperson of the mass communications department. Daniels wrote that he had asked Schumacher if he thought he had been doing his job right. Daniels said Schumacher replied "yes."

According to the job description of station manager, duties and responsibilities included "temporary or permanent replacement of persons unable to perform their duties." Daniels has asked to be reinstated on the grounds that Schumacher said Daniels was performing his job.

Torres also was under the impression he was doing his job properly.

"I was reassured by Mr. Schumacher that I was to keep my job this spring semester and that if there were any miscommunications between the staff and me, then we would work them out. But I was assured that I would keep my job," Torres said.

In an interview, Schumacher disagreed with that comment and said the two weren't fired only because of poor job performance. He said their dismissal also involved missed executive staff meetings and the failure to open the station. When asked to elaborate on the incidents, Schumacher abruptly ended the interview.

Questions concerning the equipment's misuse first were brought up in an October meeting attended by faculty adviser and station general manager Clive Kinghorn, underwriter representative Scott Moore, Torres, Daniels, news director Bill Pettit and secretary Tanya Schwandt. During that meeting, Kinghorn expressed his concern over a discrepancy in the number of times the unit had been checked out and the number of times the $50 deposit was made to the station.

"The general opinion at the October meeting was that the dance equipment had been used several times without the proper $50 fee paid to the university," Moore said. "To the best of my knowledge, Pat supervised, at least in part, the scheduled use of the equipment. After questions were raised, Kinghorn took over complete control of how and when the equipment was used."

Another station underwriter representative, Elena Cotten, cited a particular instance when she said she believed Schumacher used the equipment against station policy.

Cotten said that last June, Schumacher used the station equipment at the party of a friend without collecting payment. According to policy, $50 should have gone to the station regardless of whether Schumacher charged for its use.

"I remember a discussion that basically, he could get them for free," Cotten said. "I know that Patrick never paid the fee that time we used it, because we talked about it. I know he didn't pay," she said.

Kinghorn refused to comment to The University Daily. After the release of Daniels and Torres, Ross launched an investigation into the use of the dance unit.

"I wasn't aware we were even doing it (renting out the equipment)," Ross said. "We should not have been doing it. It stemmed from many years ago when we would do it to promote the station and so we would have some money for damages, $50 would be put in. I don't know who made that decision. But when I found out about this I asked Dr. Kinghorn to look into it and find out if it's legal, and if it's not, to end it today (Friday). It has ended today."

"It is within our right to promote KTXT, but not the other (making money off of state property)."

The equipment no longer can be rented out. Ross said his concern with the $50 deposits was secondary. "I was more concerned with whether or not we should have been renting it out at all, and we shouldn't have," he said.

Tech General Counsel Marilyn Phelan could not immediately confirm late Tuesday afternoon whether use of the equipment was illegal, saying she would have to look into the matter.

The money that was given to the station as deposits will go into a general fund for station expenses.

'Theatre of the Airwaves' program returns to college station schedule

By KENT PINGEL
University Daily Lifestyles Editor

"Theatre of the Airwaves" will be signing ON the air tonight at 10 p.m.

"Theatre of the Airwaves", a Wednesday night staple last year, is a progressive radio program that features new avant-garde rock and synthesized pop. The program will be aired on KTXT-FM exclusively and is the brainchild of two KTXT radio personalities of the past.

John Moretti (a.k.a. "The Merry Prankster"), producer and compiler of the copyrighted radio feature, will return to the radio controls to conduct the live portions of the program.

Moretti said, "I'll try to put together some good music, some good comedy and some good sound effects. I think for two hours I'm just going to play music and tie it all together with sound effects I haven't used before."

The cameo presentation of "Theatre of the Airwaves" also will include Scott McMullen, a former KTXT jazz night regular, whose deep voice roared in the synthesized promotions during "Theatre of the Airwaves" heyday.

"Theatre of the Airwaves" is a three-hour program that airs the music of rising artists and classics in the new music category. The program, which garnered a large following a year ago, includes album cuts by bands and solo acts like The Members, Spliff, The Woz, Frank Zappa, The Trees, Lene Lovich, Joe "King" Carrasco and Altered Images.

Although "Theatre of the Airwaves" will be aired locally, the program may soon become a nationally syndicated radio show. At least that is the goal of Roaring Cricket Production Co.

Roaring Cricket, under the guidance of Moretti, has submitted audition tapes to several of the largest syndicators in the country. At least two of the companies have taken notice of the Tech student's efforts.

Moretti has received a reply from the vice president and director of operations at Westwood One, one of the largest syndication companies. The correspondence states that a large enough national market does not exist for the product to be syndicated at present.

But the letter does mention that the program audition tapes included enough thought and energy to remain in the company files for future evaluation.

Moretti said, "Westwood One has given the most positive response. Basically, what it turned out to be was that the program is a little too ahead of its time."

Another possibility involved a lack of spontaneity in the "Theatre of the Airwaves" taped versions that were submitted for consideration. "When we did 'Theatre of the Airwaves' every Wednesday night there was a live audience to deal with. The phone was always ringing and people were going bananas. In the produced version, that's what we missed," Moretti said.

But the Merry Prankster and friends remain optimistic. "From all of the research we have done — we scoured magazines and all of the trade papers — 'New Music' has been doing pretty well," Moretti said.

"There was a backlash by programmers in AOR (album oriented rock), who are starting to dislike anything with synthesized drums. But it ('new music') is growing really well in album sales. College radio has been a major part of that."

Moretti also stressed the importance of college radio as a mass communications major at Tech. "In radio you need experience or you'll get killed. That's why KTXT is so important — for people to get experience."

Moretti said he had experience playing requests from listeners' call-ins to help choose the music included in the program. "There is some 'different music' in the program. I think I have pretty good taste in music. That sounds vain, but I play some instruments and have been in radio long enough to become saturated with music of all kinds," Moretti said.

The "Theatre of the Airwaves" has included punk rock artists, comedy inserts and many uses of sound effects. Moretti incorporates segments of off-the-wall humor, home-grown antics and a three-minute blooper reel in the development of "Theatre of the Airwaves." Moretti said, "I want to give people an inside view. The blooper reel will consist of some of the wild goings-on in the studio."

Concerning the pre-recorded comedy, Moretti said, "Theatre of the Airwaves" includes lots of Monty Python. There is so much meaning in every word of their work. They're not like American sitcoms which go so slow you have to laugh in slow motion."

Currently, Moretti and McMullen produce the "Theatre of the Airwaves" taped shows with the equipment of a local AM station. "Since we didn't have money to construct a studio, it was kind of haphazard. A lot of the production took too long."

Raiders prepare to battle hapless Bears

Dwight Phillips scores on a tip-in

By JOHN KELLEY
University Daily Sports Editor

Baylor doesn't really have a dominating center. The Bears don't have a great playmaking guard. Their leading scorer is averaging less than 10 points a game. In fact, Baylor coach Jim Haller doesn't even have the type of player who needs to be guarded before, during and after the national anthem.

But it isn't one particular player Texas Tech is going to have to guard against when they host the Bears at 7:30 p.m. today in the Coliseum. Instead, the Raiders are going to have to guard against complacency and the looking-back-the-last-place-team syndrome.

Tech coach Gerald Myers has seen it happen before — last week to be exact. The Raiders had been drubbed by Houston and had five days to prepare for Rice. But they also had a game three days later against Arkansas.

What happens when a team has Rice sandwiched between Houston and Arkansas on the schedule? Tech fell behind the Owls by as many as 17 points early in the first half. Were the Raiders flat? Were they looking ahead?

Actually the early-game breakdown against the Owls probably was a mixture of all those reasons. Which leads to the game against the Bears. Tech is coming off a loss to the Razorbacks in the Hills and then must face SWC rival game average. Texas A&M Saturday on television. But first the Raiders must play the Bears, who are 0-5 in league play and 4-12 overall.

Myers has said that the Raiders must control their own destiny, worry only about themselves. The coach has emphasized the idea of all the games being of equal importance. He has said that no team can be taken lightly. Still, the symptoms for a let-down seem familiar.

But compared to the Bears' Haller, Myers has the cushiest job in the Coliseum. Not only has Baylor failed to win a conference game, but the Bears' last loss came against Texas Saturday. Baylor led at halftime, but still lost by 20 points.

It gets worse. James Stern, the Bears' 5-11 junior point guard — the man who was supposed to run Haller's offense — broke his foot and probably will miss the remainder of the season.

The playmaker's role has been handed to guards DeWayne Brown and Russ Capps. The bright spot for Haller is that Brown, only a freshman, is leading the team in scoring with a 9.3 points per game average. "Newness of players and inexperience at the guard spot is really hurting them," Myers said. "Their shooting percentage has been poor. Sometimes you see that with younger players."

If the Raiders do come out flat — well, even if they don't — expect Myers to start substituting early in the contest. The coach has shuffled his players and the lineup regularly, relying on Tech's depth to wear down other teams.

"We've played nine or 10 guys so much that who starts shouldn't be a factor," Myers said. "We've had a couple of guys come off the bench and play better than the starters."

Against Arkansas Myers went with a smaller-but-quicker lineup, replacing Quentin Anderson with Phil Wallace. Wallace responded with 11 points, which might earn him a starting spot against the Bears.

Then again, it might not matter who starts. As long as the Raiders remember the game starts at 7:30. And the A&M game isn't until Saturday.

GAME NOTES

TECH vs. BAYLOR — Raiders are coming off a tough 67-57 loss to Arkansas Saturday ... Baylor made only five second half field goals in 33 attempts in loss to Texas Saturday ... made only one of first 22 tries ... Tech is 38-33 against the Bears in all games played, 20-8 with Baylor at the Coliseum ... Raiders are 4-1 at home this season ... sophomore guard Tony Benford has been playing well lately, hitting 15 points against Rice, adding 10 versus Arkansas and averaging more than seven points in SWC games ... Bubba Jennings still leads SWC in free throw percentage, hitting at an 86.8 clip on the season, 89.5 in conference games ... Jennings is the leading Raider scorer with 12.1 points a game ... newcomer Woody Martin is adding 8.2 points in SWC games ... Tech led Arkansas by a 31-27 count at the half before Razorback center Joe Kleine took control of the game with 19 second-half points ... Tech's next home game is at 2:10 Saturday against Texas A&M on regional television.

Tech meets Bears in critical game

Who would have thought when Southwest Conference women's basketball tipped off last winter that the Baylor-Texas Tech game would be a pivotal contest? The Raiders were picked to finish well, but Baylor?

As the Raiders hit the most important spot in their SWC schedule, they find the 10-5, 4-1 Baylor Bears their next opponent. Tech has five straight home games, the Raiders need five straight wins. And it all starts at 5 p.m. today against Baylor.

The Bears come to Lubbock with confidence. They upset Arkansas 61-59 Monday night in Waco and find themselves tied for second place with Arkansas in the SWC race. The Raiders, meanwhile, lost to Arkansas 64-61 last week, then defeated TCU 72-51 on the road. Tech coaches believe the squad must finish with no more than four losses for second place. The Raiders, 13-4, 4-2, host Texas and Arkansas next week.

Tech needs to win. "We've almost got to beat Baylor," coach Marsha Sharp said, "because we're still looking at Texas, Arkansas and Houston again. Somebody is going to drop out of this second place situation pretty soon. We are playing critical, critical ballgames right here in a row."

The Raiders will have their hands full with the Bears and face a problem they encountered so many times last year — height. Baylor's players average 6 feet tall, while Tech's average 5-9½.

Julia Konecak is recovering from a knee injury and will not play against the Bears. Konecak's absence must be good news for 6-6 Baylor center Susan Cordell and for 6-0 Kim Hilbrick and 6-1 Kim Barnes. "They have a great advantage on the boards, so we are going to have to shoot the ball well and be extremely disciplined in our shot selection," Sharp said. "I don't think we can throw the ball up, except to get boards and win. We've got to realize that when we do get boards on the defensive end, we've got to get the ball out and get down the floor," the coach continued. "We've got to try to get off a high percentage shot before they get set in some kind of defense where they're a lot bigger than we are."

While the Tech coach is worried about the Raiders' height disadvantage, she knows her team has an edge the big girls don't have. "I think we are quicker at the post area than almost any team we play, with the possible exception of Texas," Sharp said. "I think we have to rely on that. I think our post players realize that's their asset."

Yet Tech has another positive factor going for it against Baylor. The last time the teams met was the first round of the SWC tournament last March in Austin. Carolyn Thompson was kept to just seven points as the Raiders shot 35 percent from the field. Baylor upset Tech 62-56.

Starting for Tech will be Thompson, who's averaging 22.5 points and 9.2 rebounds per game. Janet Mears (4.8, 1.9) will start at point guard with Camille Franklin (6.8, 4.6) and Kellye Richardson (13.7, 2.9) at the forward spots. Melinda Denham (10.3, 6.3) will start opposite Thompson at the post position.

Vince Taylor far from brother Jeff's shadow

By COLIN E. KILLIAN
University Daily Sports Writer

Vince Taylor has come a long way since the days when he was known as "Jeff Taylor's little brother."

At Hobbs High School, Jeff Taylor already was a legend when Vince was a budding junior high school star. And the oldest Taylor brother, Henry, once was the second-leading rebounder in the nation while playing at Pan American.

When Vince began his high school career, he knew much was expected of him for one simple reason: He was a Taylor.

Of course, the fans in the southeastern New Mexico basketball mecca were not disappointed. Vince led his high school squad to the New Mexico Class 4A title by averaging more than 24 points and nearly 17 rebounds a game. He was named the state's Player of the Year while garnering All-America and All-Greater Southwest honors.

But when Vince decided to spend his college career at Texas Tech, once again he found himself in Jeff's shadow. Jeff was an All-Southwest Conference performer at Tech who was named SWC Defensive Player-of-the-Year in 1982.

"It wasn't that hard coming up behind Jeff," the 6-5 forward said. "He told me just to be Vince and not try to be what everyone expected me to be; just go out and play like I knew how to play."

That is exactly what the younger Taylor has done. While he is averaging four points fewer per game this season than he did a year ago, Taylor was named to the All-

Conference defensive team in a pre-season poll of SWC coaches.

Much of the reason for his decline in scoring has been the substitution system Raider head basketball coach Gerald Myers began this season. But Taylor said that system has had a positive effect on the Raiders.

"I don't think it affected us in a negative way," he said. "Our young players are gaining experience, and I don't think we would have won as many games if he (Myers) hadn't done it."

"Our whole stand as far as last year is different," he continued. "Everyone is scoring less than last year; we have more balanced scoring with only a couple of people averaging in double figures."

While the tough schedule Tech has faced this season has taken its toll in the win-loss column, Taylor feels that the team has played well for the most part.

"We just hope to finish in the top three in conference and get a bye into the tournament (the SWC Post-Season Classic)," Taylor said.

Raider defense aids Allen

By The Associated Press

TAMPA — Reserve a ride in Marcus Allen's MVP car for three other who played vital roles in the Los Angeles Raiders' Super Bowl victory — nose guard Reggie Kinlaw and cornerbacks Mike Haynes records, as the Raiders beat the Washington Redskins 38-9 Sunday.

Still, in examining the Raiders' victory, one keeps returning to the defense that stripped the Redskins of their key weapons and left the most efficient offense in NFL history groping for something, anything that might earn a few yards.

AP ANALYSIS

and Lester Hayes.

When you're searching for an MVP, it is easy to go for the glamour guy who churns out the yards and scores the touchdowns. There can be no quarrel with the selection of Allen, who enjoyed a memorable day at Tampa Stadium with 191 rushing yards, including a 74-yard touchdown, both Super Bowl

The credit for that belongs to the LA cornerbacks, Haynes and Hayes, and to the man in the middle of the defensive line, Kinlaw.

"Our style is to come up with second down and four or five (yards to go)," said John Riggins, the Redskins' pulverizing runner. "We weren't able to do that consistently through the game."

Essentially, what Riggins was up against was a seven-man line — "The Slaughterhouse Seven," LA defensive end Howie Long called it. And the pivot was Kinlaw, who shut down the middle.

"We all knew that we had to dominate them at the line of scrimmage," said Kinlaw. Linebacker Matt Millen and Rod Martin noticed.

"Reggie Kinlaw was awesome," Millen said. "He was the key to the whole thing." (Washington center Jeff Bostic couldn't handle him, and Bostic's a great player.)

"He manhandled Bostic all day," Martin said. Generally the Redskins started each offensive series with a Riggins run. And generally the Raiders stopped him.

"We were really unable to get a lot of yardage on first-and-10, which I think is the most important down," said 'Skins quarterback Joe Theismann. "If you're coming up second-and-long, like we were a lot of the game, it forces you into passing situations."

Enter Hayes and Haynes. On Washington's first series of plays, after Riggins managed a first down, Theismann decided to probe the Raiders' secondary. He passed three times, the first to Charlie Brown, the next two to Art Monk. Each time Haynes was there.

It was a trend that would last all game. The "Smurfs" suddenly looked like comic strip characters instead of pass receivers.

"The Smurfs... ha, ha, ha," said Hayes. "The Smurfs cannot function properly with tight, physical, man-to-man coverage."

"To me," Haynes said, "that's the epitome of being a defensive back, being able to cover a guy one-on-one."

Eventually the Smurfs struggled and Theismann's frustration grew. The sideline passing Washington had used so well all season was gone.

City honors Super Bowl champions

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Los Angeles residents, who treated the Raiders with casual indifference during most of their two years here, turned out in force Tuesday to honor the Super Bowl champions.

A crowd estimated at 25,000 to 30,000 greeted members of the team during a noontime rally on the steps of City Hall in crowded downtown.

"This magnificent team has brought the city together like never before in history," Mayor Tom Bradley said. "... Sunday's victory was a clear demonstration of a commitment to excellence."

The Raiders — 22 players attended the civic celebration under clear skies and warm weather — were given keys to the city and proclamations from the City Council and the county Board of Supervisors. The crowd jammed onto a lawn outside City Hall and others watched the festivities from nearby office buildings — both from inside them and on rooftops.

Three popular Raiders spoke to the crowd, many dressed in the team's colors of silver and black.

"I am in love with Los Angeles," said running back Marcus Allen, the Super Bowl MVP. "I'm extremely excited to have everyone here to celebrate the world championship we brought back to L.A. The L.A. Raiders are here to stay."

Allen, who gained a Super Bowl-record 191 yards in Sunday's 38-9 victory over the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XVIII, was the crowd favorite. The former Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Southern California was serenaded by that school's marching band which entertained before the ceremony.

Defensive lineman Lyle Alzado, who perhaps symbolizes the Raider spirit more than any other player, told the crowd he had been waiting a long time for a championship.

"It's a great experience," he said. "There's nothing like a world championship. Enjoy the world championship."

Derrick Jensen, who scored the first touchdown Sunday after blocking a Redskin punt, said the title was "a result of the drive and dedication of (owner) Al Davis and (coach) Tom Flores."

"This (the crowd's response) is unbelievable," said Flores, who has guided the club to two Super Bowl titles in four years. "The excitement of this crowd showed in our locker room every day. We have taken over Los Angeles as our home."

Hypnotist slated for All-Nighter

Comedian-hypnotist Tom DeLuca will perform his unusual brand of psychic parody and hypnotism at 11 p.m. Jan. 27 in Rec Center court 3 as part of the fourth annual Rec Sports' All-Nighter.

DeLuca's appearance marks the first time a professional entertainer has performed at the All-Nighter. DeLuca's show features BSP, an original comic parody on ESP, and an intriguing segment of stage hypnotism. As many as 15 volunteers from the audience are simultaneously placed under hypnosis to give graphic and humorous proof of the power of the mind. Participants believe they are at an X-rated movie, in frigid cold or are inhabitants of Jupiter.

SMU's program council was so impressed with DeLuca's performance that it asked the comedian to return "for another evening of imaginative improvisation and hilarious hypnotic insanity," the first time the council had ever requested a repeat performance.

DeLuca has been touring the college circuit for four years. His hypnosis is backed by a B.A. in psychology and communications from the University of Miami, Coral Gables, and an M.A. from Sangamon State University in Illinois. He worked for three years as a hypnotherapist dealing with psychosomatic disorders then decided to go into entertainment.

Tourneys, games set for All-Nighter

Rec Sports' fourth annual All-Nighter, featuring games, tournaments, raffles and a movie, will be from 7 p.m. Friday to 5 a.m. Saturday.

Comedian and hypnotist Tom DeLuca will perform a hilarious show of psychic parody and stage hypnotism. DeLuca has intrigued college audiences around the country with his fascinating power over the mind. He is the first entertainer selected to perform at a Recreational Sports' All-Nighter.

Refreshments will be served in the Rec Center lounge. Open rec basketball, table tennis, racquetball and the weight machines will be available continuously.

Food coupons will be distributed, and records will be given away by FMX throughout the night.

Entries for certain tournaments are due by 5 p.m. Thursday in the Rec Sports Office. These are the basketball, co-rec volleyball, racquetball singles, table tennis, floor hockey and indoor soccer tournaments. Participants may register for all other activities at the All-Nighter.

IM BRIEFS

Water polo entries accepted

Entries for men's water polo and co-rec inner tube water polo will be accepted today through Thursday in the Rec Sports Office.

Ski trip offered

Participants will learn to Nordic ski during Rec Sports weekend cross country skiing trip Feb. 17-19.

Skiers will stay at Sipapu Lodge Ski Area in the heart of Carson National Forest near Taos, N.M. Cost is $70 for students and $75 for faculty-staff and includes transportation, lodging, equipment and rentals.

Registration will be accepted at the Outdoor Shop, 206 Student Rec Center. The trip is limited to 12 people.

Sportswear for sale

The Rec Center Sport Shop, located on the lower level of the Rec Center, is offering a new line of sportswear imprinted with the Rec Sports logo. Items include long-sleeve t-shirts, half shirts and running shorts. Sport Shop hours are noon-9 p.m. Monday-Friday and 2-6 p.m. Saturday.

Rappelling workshop offered

A rappelling workshop, providing basic instruction on equipment and techniques with actual practice, will be at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday and Feb. 9 in 201 Student Rec Center. Participants may register for either session. The workshop is limited to eight people.

Injury clinic resumes

Rec Sports' weekly injury clinic will resume at 7 p.m. today in the Rec Center Classroom.

Bowling club to meet

The Tech Bowling Club will have an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. today in the Rec Center.

Bowling will be from 3:30-5 p.m. Thursdays at Imperial Lanes, 3632 50th St. The club is open to all interested persons. For more information, call Helen Slezak at 762-2450.

Early bird swim offered

Lap swimming for early risers is available at the Early Bird Swim from 7-8 a.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at the Aquatic Center. The swim is open to student, faculty and staff.

Schedules available

Schedules for intramural basketball and indoor soccer are available from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday in the Rec Sports Office. Intramurals begin this week and run through February.

Carol Snipes, first-year law school student, takes time out from her studies to work out on one of the exercise machines at the Student Rec Center. The weight and exercise room is one of the most popular areas in the Center.
