

MUN Session Passes Weapons' Resolution

A resolution for the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons was passed with a 73-11 vote at the third session of the Model United Nations.

The resolution calls for all nations to take part in a test-ban treaty in space, water and in the atmosphere. It recommends that the General Assembly should:

- Draw up a treaty on the complete disarmament of nuclear weapons under the supervision of the U.N. forces;
- Have the above treaty include banning of underground nuclear testing in all states;
- Use the nuclear energy and resources for economic and social betterments, being therefore realized from military uses;

- All nations, whether members of the U.N. or not, be admitted in all talks on disarmament and proliferation of nuclear arms;

- Carry out all disarmament measures in such a way that at no stage of disarmament, no state will gain any military advantage, by on site inspection, which will be under the authority of the U.N. commission controlled by an international disarmament conference.

The latter was an amendment proposed by France and amended by Russia. Two other Russian amendments were defeated.

In other action, the assembly discussed Kashmir.

Elata Ely, speaking for Tunisia, proposed an amendment that the General Assembly: recommend a plebiscite within four months; the plebiscite shall include the choices of Kashmir, to join India, Pakistan or to become independent; the plebiscite shall be under supervision of neutral forces under the command of the Security Council.

Bill Kider, speaking for India, then amended the amendment. India's amendment was defeated by a 53-28 vote. Tunisia's amendment was passed with a 60-24 vote.

The topics which will be discussed in the fourth session today are the representation of Red China in the United Nations and land reform.

The MUN will conclude tonight with a banquet in honor of the delegates.

MUN SPEAKER—Gerassimos Gigantes, former secretary-general for the King of Greece addressed the Friday session of the Tech Model United Nations. Gigantes is a diplomat, author and an international civil servant. He is now the Greek Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States and Canada.

Senators' Proposal Fails In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two Senate Democrats proposed Friday that Congress declare its independence of President Johnson's course in South Viet Nam—and both moves apparently were squashed.

Sen. J. W. Fulbright of Arkansas, who sponsored one, conceded as much, although his Senate Foreign Relations Committee put off until Monday a formal decision.

Fulbright said as he "sensed the mood of the committee," neither measure, sought as amendments to a $415-million emergency foreign aid bill, is likely to be adopted.

New Maneuvers

The new policy maneuvers by Fulbright and Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota came four days after the Senate refused, 92-5, to rescind a 1964 resolution supporting the use of American forces against the Communists in South Viet Nam. Long, assistant Democratic leader and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Congress could not cut civilian spending enough to pay the costs of war. He said President Johnson already has pared the budget to essential minimums.

Meanwhile, the Senate went to work on President Johnson's $6-billion tax bill. Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., called it "the only responsible way to meet the expenses of Viet Nam."

"I think that unless we cut back on some of these 'Great Society' programs," countered Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., "we are going to have a tax increase that will shock many people."

Williams said the administration wants to postpone major tax increases until after November's congressional elections.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he hopes to see the Johnson tax bill, speeding income and corporation tax payments and reinstating some automobile and telephone excise levies, passed by the Senate next Tuesday. It already has passed the House.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., insisted that the new policy proposals be sent to Secretary of State Dean Rusk for his comment. The committee agreed.

"We are in pretty deep now in Viet Nam," Mansfield told reporters. "We must do what we can to pass the necessary legislation to carry out our program, without attaching policy statements to it."

Proposals Made

McGovern and Fulbright made their proposals as the committee began voting on the economic aid measure—which would provide $275 million to bolster Viet Nam's war-torn economy.

"I have drafted an amendment," said McGovern, "which I think makes clear that members of the Senate who vote to sustain our men and our assistance programs in Viet Nam do not necessarily indicate by such votes that they approve of the policies that have involved us in hostilities in Southeast Asia."

McGovern said he also sought this congressional policy declaration: "United States foreign policy in Asia should seek to minimize the risks of military involvement and to promote orderly economic and social development."

Techsans Speak On The Issues

Question: What do dormitory residents think of the continental breakfast that has been started by the food service? What other changes might lead to better meals?

By BILL RYMAN
Staff Writer

Commenting on these questions, residents unanimously praised the continental breakfast, but also said it would be more beneficial if it were served later in the morning.

Fred Wilkerson, a Carpenter Hall resident and pre-dental major from La Porte, said he liked the new breakfast, but also said it would be much better if served later. Wilkerson also commented that the meals in general have been good but he felt both lines should be opened at the beginning of the serving period, especially at lunch and supper.

Karen and Judy Stell, Spanish majors from Houston who live in Hulén and Clement Hall said they liked the new breakfast, but they couldn't see much difference in getting up in time to eat the regular breakfast and getting up at 8:15 a.m. to have the continental meal. Aside from breakfast they said they disliked the regularity in which meals were served—same meals served on the same days of the week, and the same foods served with the main course.

Lyn McClellan, pre-law major from Gruver who lives in Men's No. 9, said he thought the late breakfast should be served later. He added that he had had experience as a food representative last year, and that the best way to get anything done was to go directly to the representative.

Richard Huff, mechanical engineering major from Dallas, said he liked the continental breakfast, but that it might be nicer if it were served later. He also said he didn't like some of the combinations of food served at meals.

Denise Barker, a psychology major from Abernathy who lives in Horn Hall, said the breakfast would be of more help if it were served around 9 a.m. She also said there is a problem of only one line open when there is a tremendous crowd at the beginning of the meals.

Ron Heilhecker, a business administrative major from Abilene who lives in Gaston, said he would like to see the breakfast served later in the morning. He added that the milk is usually not cold enough, and that both serving lines are not open when there is a need for them to be.

Burnace Boles, a chemical engineering major from Kermit and a resident of Wells Hall, said he would like to see cereal served at the continental breakfast. Boles also said the problem of only one line being open at noon was a real problem because he has several noon classes.

Jinnie Winn Jackson, an elementary education major from Odessa and resident of Weeks Hall, said she would like the breakfast to be served later than 8:30. She also said she liked the variety offered at the regular breakfast.

Henry Stence, a Sneed Hall resident and a radio and T.V. major from Corpus Christi, said he thought the continental breakfast was a good idea. He added that he got tired of having the same meals on the same day each week. Stence also said there was a problem on Friday and Saturday nights when only one line was open as everyone is in a hurry to get through to get ready for a date.

Mona Drace, a Horn resident majoring in history from Abernathy, said she would like to see the new breakfast offered later, and that the problem of only one line being open was a big inconvenience when one is in a hurry to get somewhere.

In general, students like the new continental breakfast, but as usual, they believe there are still many changes that could benefit the food service in the dorms.

White Lines On Highway Becoming Obsolete Today

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—"Botts dots" are making the familiar white line obsolete on California highways. Backers claim they are also making life safer for millions of motorists.

State engineers predict that eventually the bright, bumpy little round markers will dot highways throughout the nation, at substantial savings in lives and money.

Highway men hung the "Botts dots" tag on the markers because they're primarily the brainchild of the late Dr. E. D. Botts of the California Division of Highways.

Experimental versions have come and gone on California roads for more than 10 years in a search for better lane dividers than the usual white lines, which tend to vanish in rain, fog and snow.

Dome-Shaped Gadgets

The end result, now being planted along major freeways is a dome-shaped gadget 4 inches wide and three-quarters of an inch high. So pleased is State Highway Engineer J. C. Womack with the little dots' work that he asserts: "The white line on California highways is obsolete. Our new type lane marking is not only more visible and cheaper, but will also make driving in California safer."

The plan mixes uses of plain white and reflectorized markers, the plain ones showing better in daytime, the reflectors better at night.

Groups of four plain dots, three feet apart, are used instead of the nine-foot-long white strips previously dividing lanes. On straight sections, a reflective marker is placed every 48 feet, and every 24 feet on curves.

Driver Aid

Carrying out the state's war against wrong-way drivers on freeways, who take a heavy toll each year, the reflective markers on roads with dividing medians show white to a driver headed the correct way.

But a motorist zipping along into oncoming traffic is confronted with a string of bright red "lights" ahead of him—the reverse side of the dot.

Raised markers are slated for all future freeways, expressways and two-lane rural highways in non-snowy areas. Tests are under way in the Sierra Nevada on markers implanted level with the highway, to survive assault by snow-removal equipment and abrasive sand.

The raised markers are held to the pavement by a high-strength glue that made their introduction possible.

One main effect of the markers is psychological. The rumble effect when a vehicle hits the markers cuts down lane changing by about 40 per cent, tests show. That reduces the number of accidents—waking a dozing driver, for example.

GI Bill Raises Enlistments

By DON ENGER
Toreador Staff

The passage of the long-awaited GI Bill has caused a considerable rise in enlistments in the armed services as well as an important but less prominent increase in college enrollment.

Sgt. I.C. Bill Jones, the non-commissioned officer in charge of army recruiting in Lubbock, said yesterday that army enlistments are up 250% since the publication of the bill.

The bill, signed Wednesday by President Johnson after being unanimously passed in both the House and Senate, offers educational benefits to veterans of over six-months active duty. The law will affect an estimated 3½ million veterans discharged since the Korea GI benefits program expired Jan. 31, 1955.

The rise in enlistments has caused a 10,000 man decrease in the March draft call.

Mack Sisk, junior from Idalou said, "I think it will be of great help to guys like myself who didn't have the money to go to college after high school to be able to go after the service."

"I don't think it will encourage guys to go to school as much as it will help the ones who are already in school. But I do know of at least one veteran who hadn't planned to go to graduate school until the bill was passed."

Assistant Dean of Admissions Don Renner said he didn't expect a large increase over last years enrollment the coming fall due to the number of students who enrolled this year to avoid the draft.

Techsans Object To Large Classes

By IONE HEARTSILL
Staff Writer

What do big classes mean to the student? Big classes seem to be an essential part of life on a fast-growing campus like Tech's, but students, faculty, and administration alike voice objections to them.

Carolyn Pepper, junior secondary education major, said she didn't like the idea of her grade being based on four or less test grades. "Students should be graded individually to get a true score."

Several students disliked the idea of feeding back the instructor's opinion on all the quizzes. "Without a chance to discuss in class, most instructors expect you to give their opinion on tests. You don't get a chance to make up your mind for yourself. You just get a one-sided view," said Suzie Kregel, sophomore pre-med student.

Want To Participate

Almost all the students questioned expressed the desire to participate in class. A few freshmen liked the idea of being lost in the crowd until they got used to the school.

Linda Smith, freshman elementary education major, thinks it is too hard for the instructor to keep the students' attention. "The class is half empty, and the other half is asleep."

Albert Andres, junior business administration major, is resigned to his fate. He says that although he would like more attention, he is getting used to going to classes, taking down what the instructor says and leaving.

Horace Burnett, freshman electrical engineering major, says grades are better in small classes because the students can ask questions. Another freshman declared, however, that most instructors of large classes will be very helpful in answering questions after class or during office hours.

Joan Blanscet, senior accounting major, thinks the size of the class should depend on how well equipped the room is. "In some of my classes, I can't hear or see the blackboard, and the chairs are so close together that students hit each other's arm while trying to write."

"There are too many student teachers who don't have the experience to handle many students effectively," says Rick Freivogel, senior finance major.

Ill-Equipped Classrooms

Several complained of ill-equipped classrooms and of instructors who could not conduct large classes effectively.

Dr. William Pearce, vice president for academic affairs, said, "I deplore the lack of personal contact in large classes, however, I feel the effectiveness of these classes depends entirely on the instructor. Some can inspire 500 as well as others can inspire 30."

Pearce pointed out that the student-teacher ratio for the college was 22.09 in 1961, and that it was 22.68 for last semester. Despite the increase of students, there has not been a substantial increase in the ratio. "The basic problem is space, therefore the new buildings should help keep the classes from growing past their present size."

In the school of Home Economics last fall the student-teacher ratio was 16.06 to 1, in Engineering 14.14, in Business Administration 26.76, in Arts and Sciences 26.04, and in Agriculture 15.97.

Professors' Problems

Several professors explained some of the difficulties in arranging their classes.

Speaking of classes such as English and biology which all freshmen are required to take, one instructor pointed out that it was impossible to hire enough teachers to make these classes small and still have instructors for the advanced courses.

In courses which are not required, the professors do not know until after registration how many students they will have. Then provisions have to be made to accommodate the students.

Students Shortchanged

"The students are the ones who are getting shortchanged. The administration is working toward its goals for fast growth of the school, and the instructors are working to keep up with all the regulations thrown at them while the student flounders around just trying to survive under what is best for those who are running things. Somewhere along the line, the best interest of the student is lost," says one instructor.

"Those outside the school don't realize what is going on. If the parents realized that their children were not always getting what they go to school for, then something would be done. The state legislature is not going to stick the public for more money for hiring teachers and building classrooms until the public demands better schools," he said.

Another instructor pointed out the students' loss in classes where subjective quizzes and themes should be given. She said, "Teachers are being forced to compromise on standards in order to meet the demands of increasing enrollment."

John Bagget, sophomore mechanical engineering major, thinks that any class over 200 is too large. However, many students think large classes with smaller discussion classes are very effective. Others think that classes such as biology which are purely technical can be taught to large classes as well as small ones.

Most of the people interviewed concerning the student-teacher ratio at Tech disliked large classes, but agreed that discussion classes help until other arrangements can be made. Most agreed that a solution to this problem should be found soon if Tech is to become a great institution of higher education.

Have astronauts made pilots old hat?

Sure, the boys who go off the "pads" get the big, bold headlines. But if you want to fly, the big opportunities are still with the aircraft that take off and land on several thousand feet of runway.

Who needs pilots? TAC does. And MAC. And SAC. And ADC.

There's a real future in Air Force flying. In years to come aircraft may fly higher, faster, and further than we dare dream of. But they'll be flying, with men who've had Air Force flight training at the controls. Of course the Air Force also has plenty of jobs for those who won't be flying. As one of the world's largest and most advanced research and development organizations, we have a continuing need for scientists and engineers.

Young college graduates in these fields will find that they'll have the opportunity to do work that is both interesting and important. The fact is, nowhere will you have greater latitude or responsibility right from the start than on the Aerospace Team—the U.S. Air Force!

Interested? The place to find out more is at the office of the Professor of Aerospace Studies, if there is an Air Force ROTC unit on your campus. Ask about the new 2-year AFROTC program available at many colleges and universities. If you prefer, mail the coupon below.

Raiders Split Double-Header With Lobos

By GARY TILORY
Staff Writer

David Callerman shut out the University of New Mexico Lobos on five hits to take a 1-0 victory in the first game of a twin bill yesterday, but the Raiders dropped the second game 3-1.

"Callerman, (a Cisco Junior College transfer) looked great" said coach Burl Huffman as his diamondmen won the first game of their 1966 season.

No Time Wasted

The Raiders didn't waste any time in jumping on Bob McAulay and Co. Jim Miller led off the first inning with a single and was advanced to third on a double by Jerry Haggard. Miller scored on a fielders choice on Don Champion. The Raiders never threatened again the entire game.

The Lobos threatened in the sixth as Scot Childress led off with a single and advanced to third on a double by Dave Shelter. Callerman worked his way out of the jam by getting Dave Chase to ground out to second and Mick McLaughlin to ground out to short.

The Raiders committed two errors and completed one double-play. The Lobos had two errors and no double-plays. Callerman was the winner while McAulay got credit for the loss.

Different Story

The second game was a different story altogether as the Raiders came out on the small end of a 3-1 score.

The Raiders could only manage five hits while they left 11 men stranded on base. They scored their only run of the second game on a double by Miller and a throwing error by the right fielder Joe Duffy advanced Miller to third. Miller then scored as Lee Watts flied to center.

The Lobos score in the second on a hit batter, pass ball and a fielders choice. Dick Ness led off the second and was hit by pitcher Eldon Fox. Ness advanced to third on a single by Dave Shelter. He then scored as Fox's wild pitch went into the New Mexico dugout. Shelter scored on a fielders choice on pitcher Bill Posen.

Fourth Inning

In the fourth inning Dave Chase led off with a triple to right and scored on a fielders choice on Duffy. Duffy remained on first on an error and advanced to second on Greg With's fly to right. Posen walked and was followed by Paul La Prairie with a walk. Fox got Scot Childress to strike-out and end the inning.

In the bottom of the sixth the Raiders threatened with runners on second and third with two outs. Posen pitched his way out of the jam by getting Chris Galanos to pop out to the catcher.

Posen gave up one run on five hits, struck-out five and walked five. Fox allowed three runs on four hits, struck-out seven and walked three.

Today the Raiders and the Lobos will square off again at 1 p.m. final game between the two at Huffman Field for the third and squads.

Bryant Will Stick With Alma Mater

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP)—The bulging pocketbooks of the booming professional football game hold no lure for Paul Bear Bryant, coach of Alabama's national champions.

He prefers to stick with the college boys—and his alma mater at Tuscaloosa.

"The pros do a terrific job, but they never interested me," the pride of Fordyce, Ark., said Friday. "I'd much rather coach the unfinished product."

Biggest Kick

"My biggest kick in this business is taking a boy not blessed with ability and watching him develop, through dedication and hard work, into a winning player.

"The pros can't give that to me." Bryant, successful at Maryland,

Kentucky and Texas A&M before returning to Alabama, for years has been rated one of the top coaches in college football.

Pros Tried

Through the years, the pros have tried to draw him into the big time. The offers, never officially revealed, are reported to have been fabulous.

If quarterback Joe Namath is worth $400,000 to the New York Jets, wouldn't the man who helped fashion him be worth five times that figure? The Washington Redskins, who recently signed Otto Graham as coach, were particularly interested.

Not Interested

The Bear just wasn't interested. "I've had offers," Bryant said. "The pros are not for me."

Bryant's salary is said to be $25,000 a year. But he has his own television show in Tuscaloosa, is connected with a soft drink firm and has other sources of income.

...did you hear a knock?

Regardless of where you are, BE READY when opportunity knocks! There's a knock at your door right now, in fact . . . and it's KROGER (Third largest food retailer in the business knocking). Kroger sales hit somewhere near 2 3/4 billion dollars annually.

what can Kroger offer?

Kroger offers you a wide variety of management positions loaded with challenging problems for guys like you who obviously think ahead (otherwise you would probably have overlooked this high-class ad). Jobs you might wind up with could be in the field of store management, merchandising, finance, and personnel (to mention just a few).

how can I find out more?

Wherever you may be right now (tub, shower or rushing to make your next class) . . . take time to check your placement office . . . or write: Personnel Department, The Kroger Co., P. O. Box 6528, Dallas, Texas 75222.

where does Kroger operate?

Primarily in the Midwest and Southern United States. Expansion is so rapid that we rarely ever publish a telephone list any more . . . we can never seem to keep it up-to-date. Planned new store openings are a happy habit at Kroger . . . just as shopping Kroger is an equally happy habit of thousands of families over the country.

Answer that KNOCK!

Check Kroger out! . . . Investigate Kroger opportunities! Kroger is the company that offers you a future with many, many benefits . . . and that, my friend, is FOOD for thought!

My How The Time Flies

MIKE LUTZ

TODAY CASTS A contrasting shadow over various segments of the sporting world at Texas Tech and the Southwest Conference.

For Coach Gene Gibson and the Tech basketballers, today is a cool place in the shade to rest from the rigors of a disappointing campaign.

For Doc Hayes, head coach of the SMU Mustangs, it's a place in the sun to relish the comeback his Ponies made to win the conference basketball championship after a near disastrous beginning.

For coaches and players in track, baseball, tennis and golf, it's the spring sunrise of another season, filled with all the accompanying anticipation of a successful year.

AND FOR THREE graduating seniors from the basketball unit, Russ Wilkinson, Norman Reuther and Dub Malaise, today is the twilight of a rewarding, sometimes disappointing, three-year career at Texas Tech.

Reuther probably summed it up best for the trio in an emotion-filled scene in the dressing room following the SMU game Thursday night.

"Hey, Roo, sure was a fast three years wasn't it," someone yelled.

"Yep, three years sure do go fast, even if you have some rough stops along the way," Reuther said.

AND FROM GIBSON, who had watched his Raiders go from title favorites to also-rans, there was a long sigh of relief as the final buzzer sounded in Dallas, ending the long, long season.

"I can't point to any one thing that went wrong," Gibson said later. "There are so many factors involved, you just can't pick one and say that's it."

"We've been to the highest peaks and the lowest depths," the weary coach said. "But I'm not ashamed of the way we played (against SMU). You didn't see anyone loafing out there tonight."

"They gave all they had and you can't ask anymore than that."

And at the other end of the jubilation scale is an elated Doc Hayes, who nursed his SMU Mustangs from a 1-3 record early in the conference campaign, to an 11-3 finale and the conference crown.

"NO, WE HAVEN'T come down out of the clouds yet," Hayes said in a telephone interview Friday. "We're very jubilant about the whole thing. We fought uphill all the way you might say, from a discouraging 1-3 record."

"We were very fortunate to win, as any team who wins this conference has to be."

What did you tell your team when you were back down there with the 1-3 record?

"That's a trade secret. No, seriously, we just tried our best to encourage them and things started falling in place."

"We started rebounding, playing defense and hitting and that's it right there," Hayes said. "And we started getting a complete effort every game, that helped too."

HAYES BIGGEST PLAUDITS were for his all-SWC performer

Red Raider Tankers Close Out Regular Season Slate

Texas Tech's swimming team will close out its regular season with two dual meets with Arlington State College and Eastern New Mexico University here today.

Competition will begin at 4 p.m. instead of at 3:30 p.m. as originally scheduled.

Coach Jim McNally's Red Raiders, currently 8-9, could finish above the .500 mark with a pair of victories. Texas Tech last week lost to Texas and defeated Texas A&M. The Tech freshmen pulled a surprise victory over the Texas frosh and followed that up with a win over the Aggie freshmen.

Charles Peas'ey.

"Most of the sports writers feel he helped us more than anyone else," Hayes said. "They all feel his playing improved as we did."

About Bob Begert, who crammed 20 against the Raiders, Hayes said, "We couldn't have done it without him. But for that matter, we couldn't have done it without the entire team working as a unit the way it did."

Did you have any surprises concerning the conference race?

Well, I suppose the fact that we won it is a surprise. But that's really not a surprise because every coach must feel like his team has a chance to win and we felt like that."

So it's all over for the Raiders. Their post-mortem is complete. The only role left for them in the NCAA regional tournament in Municipal Coliseum next week will be that of spectators.

Texas Tech could score well in both divisions of the shotput, with junior Ed Mooney of Wallkill, N.Y., and sophomore Randy Hicks of Seminole in the varsity division, Lee LeBow of Lake Jackson and Ronnie Sewell of Artesia, N.M. in the freshman competition. Mooney, national junior college champion for Scottsbluff, Nebr., College last year, finished second in the Fort Worth indoor meet and first in the Dallas indoor this month.
