Registration shuffle needs revamping

Mass confusion, closed classes, late drop-adds and occasional overenrollments have long been a part of the "registration shuffle." Many students face registration with the same dread that used to accompany the receipt of a draft notice.

Though the draft has been abolished, Tech's over-worked registration system lingers on.

Academic Council members voted unanimously last week to form a committee to study the idea of preregistration at Tech. The committee will consist of representatives from the admissions office, computer center, faculty and students, according to Charles Hardwick, vice president for academic affairs.

Charles Hardwick, vice president for academic affairs.

MOST MAJOR universities are using a preregistration system of one kind or another, according to Dr. Floyd Perry, dean of admissions. If the Academic Council states that an advanced registration system is feasible, he will support the change, he said.

"I'm prepared to work in a cooperative manner," Perry said. "There are several options regarding the assignment of registration times which I'm sure the committee will be looking into," he said.

Tech's College of Business Administration was thrown into a mild panic this fall after registering 1,100 more student semester hours than was allowed by their accreditation board. The college was forced to shuffle schedules, re-adjust its add-drop procedures and generally work to the brink of exhaustion to drop the number of registered semester credit hours below the required level.

THIS COURSE overload was a direct result of current registration procedures. By the time the college was aware of the overload, classes had started and BA officials were under severe pressure to straighten the situation out.

Preregistration would probably alleviate problems such as this, Perry said.

"The dean has ample time to make enrollment adjustments" between the time of enrollment and the time classes start, according to Perry.

ACADEMIC ADVISEMENT within all academic departments is aided through the use of an advanced registration system, according to a report Perry has been studying. If students find after preregistration that a course is closed or they can not take it for some other reason, they have more time to consult with department members on replacing the course with another. The current add-drop procedures leave students very little time to think or discuss problems before they must change their schedules.

Assignment of faculty to comply with class loads is also made easier with the implementation of advanced registration, according to the report. Administrators are given early assessment of paid and auditing students within their department.

"IT WILL NOT be difficult to initiate an advanced registration system at Tech; however, it will be expensive," according to a report from D. N. Peterson, registrar. The Computer Center has estimated it would require approximately $125,000 over a 12-to 18-month period to rewrite and develop programs necessary for advanced registration. Increased costs in the registrar's office would probably result from the necessary hiring of additional staff members.

Some universities have found preregistration a workable process, others, such as the University of Texas at Austin, are hopelessly bogged down in problems.

But Tech's registration process could stand to be reworked. Should the committee appointed to study the idea of preregistration conclude that it is not suited for this university, they should certainly discuss the possibility of revamping our present system.

Carter steals show in second debate

In predicting the outcome of the second debate, observers said Ford would either appear more knowledgeable in foreign affairs or would be on the defensive. The latter proved to be the case Wednesday night.

In a debate on foreign policy, Ford had the advantage of incumbency. Carter had the advantage of having no foreign policy to defend. Ford did not make the most of his advantage. Carter did and, as a result, came out on top in the debate.

Ford could have made much of his experience in handling foreign affairs. He could have indicated that no amount of foreign policy briefings can take the place of actual on-the-job training. Instead, Carter was able to trap Ford into defending his administration's policies.

Some said Ford would be able to make Carter look like a fool in this area by tripping him into a totally incorrect statement. But it was Ford who blundered. Polish-Americans will be surprised to learn their former homeland is not dominated by the Soviet Union, as Ford insisted.

Ford's speech was full of pauses and not as persuasive as in the first debate. It was clear Ford was feeling the pressure that literally the whole world was listening and one false move could jeopardize U.S. foreign policy.

Carter was able to work domestic issues, which are his strength, into the debate. He skillfully wove into a debate on foreign affairs his themes of a faltering economy and lack of moral leadership. Carter said the United States cannot be strong internationally until it is strong at home. He said Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has been the President in the area of foreign affairs.

Carter also handled the Mayaguez question well. There is no way Carter could have criticized Ford's decision without the complete knowledge the President had at the time. Yet, Carter was able to tie the issue in with his overall theme of the debate, by saying the information should have been released to Americans immediately following the incident.

Foreign policy is an area most Americans are ready to entrust to their President. Ford could have made the most of that sentiment. Instead he left viewers with the impression he had no more knowledge in the area of foreign affairs than Carter. But don't forget, he was the first President to go to Japan.

Carter ambiguous

To the Editor:

Jimmy Carter continually perpetrates lies and ambiguities concerning the economic and employment issues of this election. Carter bases his platform, his programs, and his promises on one basic falsity — that increased government in Washington can cure the ills of the nation.

In Carter's platform he calls for the federal government to formulate "a comprehensive national health insurance system with universal and mandatory coverage", "a federally financed, family-centered development and educational child care program", a federalized welfare system, and a federal program to "reduce unemployment to 3 per cent." What all this plan for a "greater society" adds up to is MONEY. Right now government usurps 44 per cent of our annual income. The addition of one hundred billion dollars to the federal budget (a verified conservative estimate) for Carter's programs averages out to a $2,000 increase in taxes for every family of four. Even if we don't pay for it in taxes, we pay for it in inflation.

To add insult to injury, Carter has the audacity to insinuate that he will balance the federal budget. As Ronald Reagan put it, "If you think he can institute all those programs without raising the federal budget, I'd like to sell you some land in Florida just as soon as the tide goes out."

Federal government is too intrusive, too coercive, and just too damn large. Don't allow Carter and Washington's spend-thrift Congress the chance to team up and make government larger!

Registration a fallacy

Dear Sirs:

I am writing this letter in regards to the priorities of student registration. It has come to my attention that students with advanced placement hours are at a disadvantage. A student who receives hours in this manner does not receive grade points for them. Since the time of registration is computed by the addition of grade points and hours, this student would be registering behind his class.

An example of this problem is the second year student placing out of 15 hours. By December he will be a junior, yet he will register at the time of the sophomores. Since the registration system seems to be designed to reward those students with higher grade point averages and heavier course loads, this practice appears to be a fallacy.

To the Editor:

We are now well into our third year here at Tech; thus, we are also into our third year of reading the University Daily. Oddly enough, in all of that time we have only noticed one staff writer that has deserved the title of "Writer;" that being Robert Montemayor who was the U.D. editor in 1974-75. Mr. Montemayor always had something of interest; whether it be serious or humorous, it was always a piece of decent journalism.

By this point, all of the present U.D. staff are probably up in arms over this letter and shouting: "Well let's see you do a better job." We probably couldn't; however, we do have a suggestion: Limit your articles to two hundred words as you do for people who are writing "Letters to the Editor."

Club sponsors outdoor activities

By CINDA JOHNSON
UD Staff

Listening to mountain streams gurgling over riverbed rocks, breathing fresh, clean air and sleeping under tall green trees are a few of the pleasures experienced by members of the Tech Outing Club on weekend camping trips.

"This year more new members have joined the club than any previous year," said Karen Cota, a member of the club. "Interest in outdoor activities is growing every year among students."

FIRST BEGUN as a spelunking (cave exploring) club, the organization branched out over its 10-year existence to include a wide variety of outdoor activities, Cota said. Included in the Outing Club's activities are camping, rafting, caving, rock climbing, and backpacking.

"The club is designed to give students who enjoy outdoor activities a chance to meet other students who have the same interests," Cota said.

Pat Azzato, freshman from Dallas and a new member of the Outing Club, said that the club has everything she wants in an outdoor club.

"I WANTED to come to school at Tech because of its location," Azzato said. "Lubbock is close enough to the ski resorts in New Mexico so that it isn't such a long drive on Friday afternoons just to go skiing," she said.

"Being a member of the Outing Club gives me a chance to go snow skiing with students who enjoy the sport as much as I do," Azzato said.

The Outing Club plans a variety of weekend trips throughout the year, including a caving trip to the Guadalupe Mountains, a canoeing trip in October, and skiing trips every weekend that snow conditions are good on the slopes, Cota said.

MEMBERSHIP TO the Tech Outing Club is open to any Tech student, faculty member, or staff member. A $5 membership fee is required every semester. Meetings are every Thursday night in room 55 of the Business Administration Building, or more information can be obtained by contacting Mike Morlock, president of the organization, at 765-5723.

Dedication scheduled Friday for Mass Comm Building

By CARRIE CLARK
UD Staff

Dedication activities for the Mass Communications Building will begin Thursday with a reception at 6:30 p.m. in room 223 of the Mass Communications Building.

All mass communications student organizations, faculty and representatives of the Mass Communications Advisory Committee are invited, according to Ralph Sellmeyer, chairman of the dedication committee.

At 7:30 p.m. in the multimedia room of the Mass Communications Building, two representatives of the Hughes Tool Company will present the department with original oil paintings commissioned during World War II, Sellmeyer said.

AFTER THE presentation, invited guests will attend a reception at the home of Mrs. Joe Bryant, wife of the late Joe Bryant, founder of Lubbock's Channel 11, Sellmeyer said.

Official dedication ceremonies will be Oct. 15 from 10:30 - 11:30 a.m. on the patio between the Journalism and Mass Communications Buildings, Sellmeyer said.

Featured speakers will be Jack Butler, vice president of the Fort Worth Star Telegram and chairman of the Mass Communications Advisory Committee, and Wendell Mayes, past chairman of the committee, Sellmeyer said.

FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY of the journalism department is being celebrated this year with the theme "Forward From Forty."

Harry Montgomery, former associate publisher of the "Arizona Republic," will represent journalism alumni. Montgomery was the first editor of the "Toreador" (now the University Daily), Sellmeyer said.

Foreign restaurants add variety to Lubbock food

By NANCY LUBKE
UD Staff

Lubbock has more taste than one would expect. People from Taiwan to France have come to the Hub City to operate restaurants, providing the public with a wide array of foreign foods.

The Great Wall will open soon, serving Chinese and American food, owner, James C. Young, said. "I am waiting for some cargo from Taiwan to complete the interior decor before I open the restaurant," he said. Young is also owner and manager of the Chinese Kitchen.

YOUNG CAME to Lubbock 2½ years ago from Taiwan to go to Tech as a graduate student in electrical engineering. "I dropped out to make a living and started in a small restaurant because I like to cook," Young said.

"I have made up most of my own recipes. I took a Chinese cooking course in Taiwan before I came. Some of the recipes are Americanized but most are cooked as they are in Taiwan," he said.

Ted Quan, owner of Ming Tree, also studied electrical engineering before he started in the restaurant business. He took over Ming Tree in 1951.

"THE MAN who owned the restaurant at this time was American and just couldn't handle it. Though I was practically born here (U.S.), I'm a second generation restaurant man," Quan said. His family had a restaurant and he practically grew up in it, he said.

At La Crepe Suzette, "Our food is not Americanized in any way. For instance, we don't serve any other salad dressing but French. No crackers are served with salad because they are an American food," Mrs. Larry Gautreaux, one of the owners, said.

The Gautreaux's do all the cooking though neither have professional training. "However," Mrs. Gautreaux said, "my mother and a professional cook in her private home all the time so I worked with him for fun when I was younger."

MRS. GAUTREAUX said she and her husband have eaten in famous restaurants all over the world so their standards are high.

At Papa Vincenzo's, "Our recipes come from Sicily and we make a different style of pizza than the Americans," Tony Vincenzo Mazzamuto, the owner's son, said.

The Mazzamuto family came to the United States eight years ago, he said, and he and his brother have travelled around the country opening pizza places. All these restaurants are owned by the family but all of them have different names to avoid the connotation of a chain, Mazzamuto said.

An open letter to my Aggie

DEAR SON:
 Just a few lines to let you know that I'm still alive. I'm writing this letter slowly because I know that you can not read fast. You won't believe the house when you come home — we've moved. About your father — he has a lovely new job. He has 500 men under him. He is cutting grass at the cemetery. There was a washing machine in the new house when we moved in, but it isn't working too good. Last week I put 14 shirts into it, pulled the chain, and I haven't seen the shirts since. Your sister Mary had a baby this morning. I haven't found out whether it's a boy or a girl, so I don't know whether you are an Aunt or Uncle.

Your Uncle Dick drowned last week in a vat of whiskey in Dublin Distillery. Some of the work mates dived in to save him, but he fought them off bravely. We cremated his body, and it took three days to put the fire out. Your father didn't have much to drink at Christmas. I put a bottle of castor oil in his pint of beer and it kept him going 41 New Years Day. I went to the doctor on Thursday and your father came with me. The doctor put a small tube into my mouth and told me to keep it shut for ten minutes. Your father offered to buy it from him. It only rained twice last week. First for three days, and then for four days. Monday it was so windy that one of our chickens laid the same egg four times. We had a letter yesterday from the undertaker.

He said if the last installment wasn't paid on your grandmother within five days — up she comes! Your lovely Mother.

P.S. I was going to send you $10.00, but I had already sealed the envelope.

Red Raiders travel to Aggieland

By SCOTT KELM AND FRED HERBST
 UD Sportswriters

"If you like football (as a player), you've got to like these kinds of games," Tech defensive coordinator Bill Parcells said about Saturday's upcoming Tech vs. A&M contest. "You spend a lot of time getting ready to play these types of games," he added.

The team Texas A&M will place on the field for its conference encounter with Tech will sport a very experienced defense but a questionable offense.

The Aggies are coming off a victory against Illinois last week and a conference loss to Houston two weeks ago. If the Aggies lose this weekend against Tech, all reasonable hopes for a SWC crown will be lost.

The Aggie's backfield will have the same signal caller under the gun that guided them to a 38-9 victory over Tech last year, senior David Shipman. The starting fullback for A&M will be bruising runner George Woodard, with frosh standout Curtis Dickey as the number one halfback.

One thing about the Aggies this year that differs from last season's team is the passing game. According to Head Coach Emory Bellard, "We have been throwing the ball with success. David (Shipman) is hitting on a little bit more than 60 per cent of his passes.

One can only wonder about the quality of the Aggie running game. With the exception of Shipman and Woodard, the other top-flight runners are freshmen.

The Aggies have the potential to match up with just about anybody in their defensive line and their linebackers. The rather drab Bellard seemed to gather some enthusiasm during this part of the conversation.

Coach Dockery said, "Overall they are probably the best group that we'll play against as far as strength and size are concerned. They probably have the best two tackles on a college team, in Jimmy Dean and Edgar Fields."

Experience also marks the Aggie linebacking corps, which is led by All-America candidate Robert Jackson. "He is as good if not the best linebacker we will play against this year," Dockery said.

The only inexperience of the defense is in the secondary. Safety Lester Hayes is the only mainstay in the backfield that has been beaten three separate times deep by Houston in their loss to the Cougars. "We feel like we're going to throw a little more than we have in our past two ball games," Dockery said with a wink.

Coach Bellard speaks with as much enthusiasm about his kicking game as his defense. Place-kicker Tony Franklin has been consistently kicking the ball deep into the end-zone on kick-offs. Bellard termed Franklin a "pretty good" kicker. The punting chores are in the hands of freshman David Applebee.

"Texas A&M has a very impressive football team with outstanding players in every position. They have plenty of size and quickness on both offense and defense," Head Coach Steve Sloan said. "It should be a tremendous football game."

Coach Parcells summed up his feelings on the game by saying, "I'm going to tell my players what I always tell them, 'you'd better assume your best is not as good as their best, so you have to do your best—longer.'"

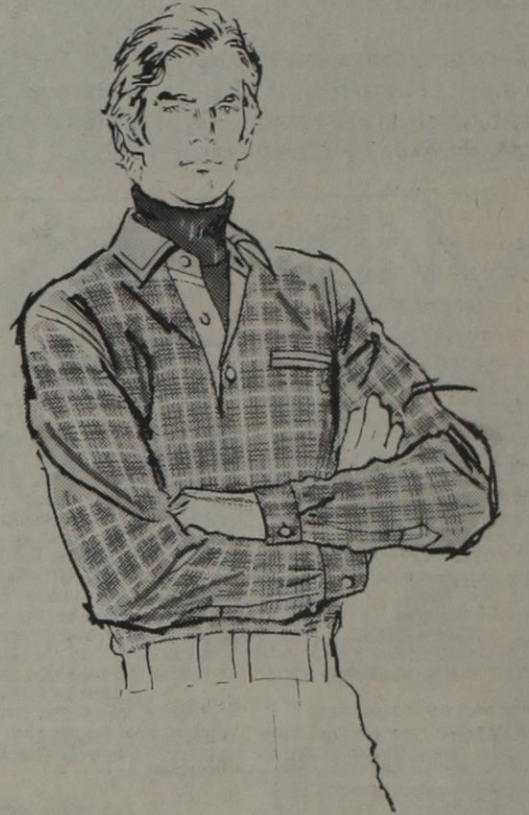

The game may be heard over Lubbock radio station

KFYO beginning at 1:30 p.m. Smith will do the commentary. Frankie Fallon and Dave mentary.

Picadors fall in Shrine Bowl 7-0

By JERRY BURLESON
UD Sportswriter

The Tech Picadors were stopped on a fourth and five situation at the Houston 19 yard line with 44 seconds left in the game as the Pics suffered a 7-0 defeat in the 10th annual Khiva Shrine Bowl Thursday night at Jones Stadium.

A sparse crowd of 2000 people sat through a cold night to see the Kittens take a quick 7-0 lead in the first quarter and make it stand up for the rest of the game.

The Picador defense came out popping in the first quarter, limiting the Kittens to minus 23 yards on their first possession. This allowed the Pics to take over the ball on the Houston 39.

Runningback Terry Hill fumbled five plays later on a fourth down and seven play giving the ball back to Houston. The Kittens needed only five plays and 2:06 to drive the ball 79 yards and into the Picador endzone.

Halfback John Newhouse broke over right tackle for the final 39 yards and the TD and Mickey Thompson booted the extra point to make it 7-0, Houston, with 8:59 left in the first quarter.

The Kittens almost got on the board again late in the first quarter when a 10 yard

TD run by Terald Clark was called back on an illegal procedure penalty.

The second half was much like the first in that neither team could move the ball with great success. Tech's Johnny Haines and Houston's Gary White had a punting duel for much of the night. Haines ended the game punting 8 times for a 34.1 yard average, while White finished with 3 punts for a 31.8 yard average.

The Kittens gained 83 yards in total offense in the second half compared to 41 yards for Tech in the last half. For the game Houston gained 276 yards in total offense, while the Pics finished with 83 yards rushing and 41 yards through the air for a total of 124 yards.

Mike Wallace was the leading rusher for Tech with 57 yards on 16 carries. John Newhouse of Houston was the leading rusher in the game gaining 137 yards on 17 carries. Newhouse gained 104 of those yards in the first half.

The Picadors did not pick up their first first down of the second half until there was 5:28 left in the game. The Pics picked up three more first downs in their final desperation drive before Wallace dropped Johnny Johnson's screen pass attempt on the fatal 4th down play.

Tech hosts TCU in soccer match

The Tech soccer club hosts TCU Saturday afternoon at 2 at the Tech track field in a rematch following their game played two weeks ago in Fort Worth. In the first meeting between the two teams very little was settled as they played to a 0-0 tie.

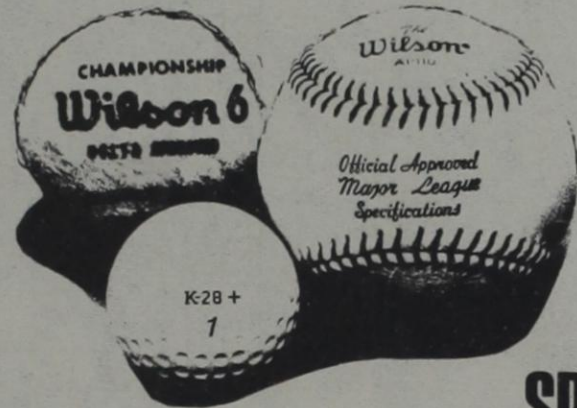

Starting at the forward positions for Tech will be Rob Crowley, Lane Holmes, Mike Benson, and Larry Thompson. Davie Collins and Marc DeChellis are set to open at the halfback slots, while Larry Kelley, Sheen Smith, Rick Bjorkman, and Vance Cheatham will be the fullbacks. The goaltender will be Eugene Barnes.

Bjorkman said, "They (TCU) haven't got any set patterns of offense, and they don't break or strike hard like Midwestern (a team that beat the Raiders 2-0 last week).
