Board OKs new degree

By DAWNA COWAN
The University Daily

The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board unanimously approved a master's degree program in restaurant, hotel and institutional management (RHIM) at Texas Tech and a $2.1 million addition to the Tech Regional Academic Health Center (RAHC) in Odessa Thursday, Interim President Elizabeth Haley said.

"Both projects were approved unanimously with no questions asked," Haley said.

The RHIM master's degree program required two reviews from the Coordinating Board, Haley said. In the first review, Jan. 27, the Coordinating Board unanimously approved the academic content of the program.

The Coordinating Board's staff recommended approval of the second review, the financial status of the RHIM program, and the board approved the program Thursday, Haley said.

"This stage was to evaluate the financial support the university has for the project," she said.

Haley said no new faculty members will need to be hired for the new program, which will be implemented this fall.

"We already have students lined up ready to start the program," she said.

Tech's undergraduate RHIM program began in 1983. Since then, Haley said, Tech graduates have been recruited by major firms around the country, and there is a need for graduates with master's degrees.

Tech has 700 students majoring in RHIM, making the program the fifth largest major at the university, she said.

A $2.1 million construction project at the Regional Academic Health Center in Odessa also was approved by the board, Haley said.

The 23,000-square-foot, second-floor addition will be used to expand the residential program in Odessa and the library that provides outreach services to 16 hospitals in the area, she said.

Haley said although she was prepared to answer questions, the Coordinating Board approved both programs without questions.

She said bids will be taken and construction will be started immediately.

Wright faces committee charges

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House Ethics Committee, with Democrats and Republicans united, formally charged Speaker Jim Wright Monday with 69 violations of the chamber's rules, including what the panel's chairman called "a scheme to evade" limits on outside earnings.

After a 10-month, $1.5 million investigation, the committee of six Democrats and six Republicans voted unanimously to issue a report finding "reason to believe" the Texas Democrat had run afoul of House rules requiring reporting of gifts, barring acceptance of gifts from persons with a direct interest in legislation and limiting outside earned income.

"I know in my heart I have not violated any of the rules of that institution," Wright said in a speech to a labor meeting shortly after the ethics report was released.

He said he had asked "very urgently, very earnestly" for a quick meeting with the the committee "to confront them, to confront the allegations head-on, face-to-face."

At a news conference, committee chairman Rep. Julian Dixon, D-Calif., emphasized that Wright is presumed innocent until the charges are proven, and he underscored that proving them requires a much higher weight of evidence than the step taken Monday, which is the panel's equivalent of an indictment.

The move set in motion a series of steps in which Wright can defend himself and the panel must prove with "clear and convincing" evidence that the violations occurred. That is likely ultimately to throw the matter before the full House, where the Fort Worth congressman's position as the nation's highest elected Democrat, or even his House seat, could be on the line.

Wright immediately began his defense in earnest, operating what one supporter, Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, called "a war room" out of his office. "At some point we've got to start figuring out who's on our side and who's on the other side," Wilson said.

Wilson predicted Wright will win on the floor, "losing a few cowardly Democrats and picking up some brave Republicans."

The most serious allegation against Wright, that he accepted about $145,000 in gifts over a 10-year period from George Mallick, a Fort Worth developer, also had the narrowest margin of support on the ethics committee.

According to records of internal committee votes released along with the report of the panel's special outside counsel, Chicago attorney Richard J. Phelan and Democrats Chester Atkins of Massachusetts and Bernard Dwyer of New Jersey joined the six committee Republicans for an 8-4 margin on that issue.

The panel agreed with its counsel, Phelan, that Mallick's major interests in real estate and oil and gas ventures and in redevelopment of Fort Worth's historic stockyards district gave him a direct interest in legislation on taxation and on certain appropriations bills. His financing arrangements with savings and loan institutions also gave him an interest in legislation involving the S&L industry, the committee found.

But Wright's lawyer, William C. Oldaker, called that "doublespeak" and said "it's one of the most outrageous readings of legislative history" he has seen. Overall, the report contains "a lot of noise, a lot of clamoring, but very little substance," he said.

Other matters before the committee were more clear-cut. The panel voted unanimously that there was reason to believe Wright failed to report as gifts the use of a car and Fort Worth condominium he and his wife received from Mallick. Committee members voted 10-2 that Mrs. Wright's $18,000-a-year salary from a Mallick-Wright company also should be characterized as a gift, saying she did little or nothing to earn the money.

The panel also voted 10-2 that certain bulk sales of Wright's book, Reflections of a Public Man, appeared to have been used to evade House ceilings on outside earned income.

"In the committee's view, seven bulk sales of Rep. Wright's book ... demonstrated an overall scheme to evade the House outside earned income limit because (speaking) honorarium payments were recharacterized as royalties," Dixon said.

The committee voted unanimously to issue its statement of alleged violation formally charging the speaker with breaking the rules.

Forty-seven possible violations raised by Phelan were dismissed. Those involved allegations of improper lobbying of executive branch officials, misuse of congressional staff and misuse of campaign funds.

"No Republican is attacking Jim Wright," said Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind. "This is a bipartisan report of the ethics committee."

More corpses found near cult killings site

By The Associated Press

MATAMOROS, Mexico — The mystery of two bodies found near a ranch that last week rendered 13 mutilated corpses delayed filing of Mexican charges Monday against members of a human-sacrificing cult, officials said.

The cult also is suspected of killing the newly discovered victims, an official said.

Two bodies of suspected drug traffickers missing since May were unearthed Sunday on a collective farm two miles south of the Rancho Santa Elena, where 13 corpses were unearthed last week. The newly discovered victims, Moises Castillo, 52, of Houston, and Hector de la Fuente, 39, of Ejido San Francisco, west of Matamoros, did not appear tortured or mutilated like the other victims, officials said.

Castillo's father, Hidalgo Castillo, 76, of Brownsville, said he found $70, a pair of eyeglasses and a passport in his son's pocket when he unearthed the bodies.

Moises disappeared on May 30, 1988, the same day de la Fuente dropped out of sight, officials said.

Castillo said he first suspected his missing son might be at Ejido Santa Librada after children told him they saw something suspicious there while rabbit-hunting.

"They said, 'Look over there. There's a hand sticking out of the ground,'" Castillo said.

But Castillo said he avoided digging it up until after the 13 bodies were discovered last week at Rancho Santa Elena, about a mile south of the border and 20 miles west of Matamoros.

"I was afraid the police might detain me," said Castillo, who feared that he somehow might be arrested if he told anyone about the body.

Formal Mexican federal charges were to have been filed Monday against four men in custody here, but the new deaths complicated the case, said Jose Piedad Silva Arroyo, Mexico's chief federal narcotics investigator for northeastern Tamaulipas state.

Silva said authorities Monday were considering adding the latest victims' deaths to murder, kidnapping, drug and weapons charges already pending against the four suspects.

"It's a big case, not simple, and there are a lot of details to attend to before we take them before the court," Silva said.

The two new victims were drug traffickers somehow involved with the cult, reportedly led by Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, 26, and Sara Maria Aldrete, 24.

Castillo said he did not know what his son was doing at the farm where his body was found with the hands bound with wire. In Houston, he said, Moises worked as a mechanic and at other various jobs and was not a drug trafficker.

Monica de Leon, de la Fuente's wife, said she learned of her husband's death on television Sunday night. He was a farm worker and not involved with drugs, she said.

Mexican police said de la Fuente's pockets contained a mixture of U.S. and Mexican money totaling about $6.25.

Across the Rio Grande in Brownsville, Cameron County Sheriff Alex Perez described the deaths as drug-related, "revenge-type killings." At least three of the 13 victims originally found by authorities have been said to be tied to the group by the drug business.

Investigators have been told during interviews with the arrested suspects that cult members were involved in occult practices inspired by Palo Mayombe, a form of spiritism that draws on African and Caribbean influences.

The suspects also said that they were encouraged by Aldrete to watch the movie "The Believers," which deals with people practicing Palo Mayombe.

Open records again challenged

By LEANNA EFIRD
The University Daily

The Open Records Act again is being challenged by a bill that would allow exemption from the open records law for information regarding public school administrators and candidates for those positions.

HB 1793, introduced by Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa, would give administrators of school districts the power to withhold any information contained in a personnel file that identifies candidates for administrative positions such as superintendents or other administrative officers of the district.

"This bill will alleviate the burden for applicants who want to protect their current positions and relieve burdens in the decision-making process," said a spokesperson in Watkins' office.

According to the bill, no information about candidates applying for public school administrative positions would be available for public disclosure.

Nancy Monson, executive director of the Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas, said the proposed bill is not in the best interest of the public.

"School administrators are public employees and are accountable to the public," she said. "The public should have access to information concerning these officials."

Although some information in personnel files falls under privacy laws, Monson said she feels certain information should be accessible to the public.

"The way the bill is written, all information about administrative candidates would be closed," she said. "Although it is hard to define the line between private and public information, information on salaries of public officials and qualifications of candidates should be known."

Before applying for a public office, Monson said, candidates should realize and accept disclosure as one of the risks of serving as a public official.

The bill, which has been referred to the State Affairs Committee, is awaiting a hearing date.

Rules for the Texas Legislature require that a bill be read on three separate days prior to approval. Watkins asked state lawmakers to waive the three-day requirement, which would allow the act to take effect immediately after enactment.

Education prof helps create new science curriculum

By AUDRA SPRAY
The University Daily

A Texas Tech professor will participate in a program in July designed to overhaul the nation's science curriculum.

Education professor Gerald Skoog, a member of the National Science Teachers Association Advisory Committee, said the group will create a new science curriculum to replace the current "layer-cake" system, Skoog said.

Skoog said the layer cake science curriculum currently in effect requires seventh graders to take life science, followed by earth science, physical science and finally biology in the 10th grade. The new curriculum will be similar to the current European system, he said.

In other countries, students study all the sciences at the same time. For example, students in life science also would study physics to understand how blood flows.

"The major requirement will be the correlation of biology, chemistry and physics," Skoog said.

The new curriculum will be implemented through Science Reform Centers that consist of a university and one or more school districts, he said. Professors will work with public school administrators and teachers in implementing the new curriculum.

"The current educational reform hasn't touched science," Skoog said. "The emphasis has been on reading, writing and arithmetic."

A study released in January indicated that only 6 percent of Americans are science literate — another indicator of the United States' shortcomings in science, he said.

Results from the International Science Report Card comparing second-year U.S. biology, chemistry and physics students with foreign students placed the United States ninth in physics, 11th in chemistry and 13th in biology.

"One of the reasons is they spend less time in science than other nations," Skoog said. "The average U.S. student has 180 hours of biology, while a Russian student has 321 and a Chinese student 256."

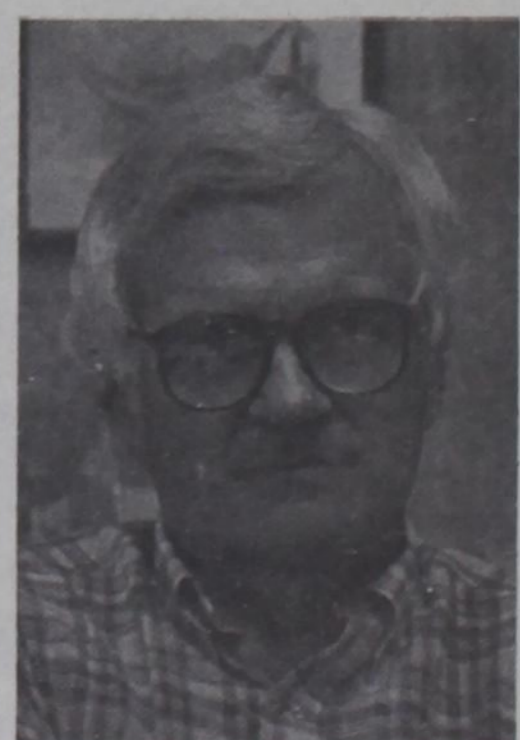

Skoog said American society has not supported appropriate learning environments. Teachers have poor working conditions and low salaries, he said, and business and government decisions as well as social problems outside the classroom all have had detrimental effects on American education.

Japan spends more of its gross national product (GNP) on education than the United States, Skoog said. During the Reagan presidency, the GNP percentage for education dropped from 10 percent to 6 percent, he said.

Despite the depressed trend, the situation is looking brighter, Skoog said.

"If you look at the scores, there are improvements," he said. "They are coming back up, but they're still lower than they were."

Abortion question menaces biological freedom

Beth George
News Writer

Despite what anti-abortion groups like the Right to Life movement and Operation Rescue would like the public to believe, the reproductive rights issue is not a question of being for or against abortion. It is about the matter of choice.

Supporters of reproductive rights and a woman's right to decide what happens to her unborn child are not pro-abortion. Labeling someone as pro-abortion implies that he or she believes abortion is an acceptable method of dealing with an unwanted pregnancy or an easy method of birth control.

Pro-choice supporters do not defend either of those positions. Anyone with the sensitivity to really think about the abortion issue and examine both sides before making an emotional or arbitrary decision knows that pro-choice supporters also endorse improving the availability of contraceptives and increasing both family planning and pregnancy counseling as means of reducing the numbers of abortions performed annually.

Pro-choice advocates are fighting for the right of a woman to maintain sovereignty over the use of her reproductive organs. Pro-choice involves more than making the choice to have an abortion. It also involves making the choice to have a child or never to get pregnant. The issue at stake is the right of a woman to make the final choice concerning her body.

Anti-abortion activists cloud the issue by saying they represent the rights of the unborn child over the rights and the interests of the mother. But no one, not the baby and certainly not a group of radical clinic-bombers or the federal government, has the right to keep a woman prisoner in her own body during the nine months she is forced to carry an unwanted child.

The battle to uphold the Roe vs. Wade decision to legalize abortion in 1973 is more than a fight to keep abortions safe and legal in this country. It is a battle to maintain a woman's legal right to decide when and if she will have children.

The upcoming Supreme Court case, Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, is a threat to more than just the right to legalized abortion. Use of contraceptive pills and intrauterine devices also is at stake. If the Supreme Court decides in favor of the Missouri law, the court is just a step away from outlawing birth control and legislating morality.

As Eleanor Smeal, chairwoman of the National Organization for Women's National Advisory Committee, points out, women have made birth control, as well as abortion, their right and responsibility. As a civilized society, we owe women the legal right to make those decisions safely, without laws or the morality of outsiders being imposed on those decisions.

Regardless of whether one agrees with abortion, one must realize that the choice to have an abortion must be defended. If the choice of how a woman will control her reproductive organs is denied, other human rights will fall by the wayside. The Supreme Court, Right to Life and the church have no right to take away a woman's biological freedom.

Egyptian president's quip represents one Mideast alternative

William Safire
Columnist

Israel's Prime Minister, Yitzhak Shamir, sent this invitation to Egypt's president, Hosni Mubarak: Stay an extra day in Washington and let us meet in President Bush's office. The Egyptian refused.

Bush, who had been asked by Israel to facilitate these talks, did nothing to bring the Israeli and Arab leaders together.

Instead, he damaged his credibility as mediator by calling for "the end of the occupation" of territories Israel considers vital to its security.

Why did Bush gratuitously insult Israel's elected leader by announcing his conclusion before Shamir could even make his case?

At a reception for Mubarak in the home of the vice president, I put that to Brent Scowcroft, our national security adviser.

He would say only, "We did not intend to make the news."

If that is true, then the State Department aide who drafted the statement, the NSC, which cleared it, and the president who spoke the blunt words did not consider as newsworthy a U.S. call for Israel to get out of the West Bank.

I think the statement was not a mistake, but a Bush/Baker calculation.

The Egyptian ambassador, Raouf el-Reddy, spotted me at the fruit-kebab table and motioned me over to meet his boss.

I cheerfully identified myself as a right-wing pro-Israel hawk and asked Mubarak why he had refused to meet Shamir in the Oval Office.

"I once offered to go to Jerusalem," said Mubarak animatedly, "and he issued the invitation, but then he started talking about his three 'no's,' so how could I go? What would be the public opinion?"

He left out the part about conditioning his visit on Israeli acceptance of an international conference, but my concern was this week's snub: What would have been the harm in meeting in Washington, since both were in town?

"To talk about what?" he counter-queried.

Free elections on the West Bank and Gaza, for a starter.

"Free?" He made a skeptical face.

It's not for the press to negotiate for anybody, but since he was asking, I threw in the compromise being bruted about: free elections under some sort of international supervision.

As if he had been waiting for that precise formulation, the president of Egypt leaned forward and put his finger on my chest. "You tell him this. You tell him if he is willing to have elections under international supervision, I'll help."

How much will he help?

"I'll help to the maximum."

As God, and the VP, our national security adviser, the Egyptian ambassador and our nail-nibbling chief of protocol are my witnesses, that's what the man said.

Let us now review the state of play.

Israel can be expected to hedge its free-elections proposal with restrictions.

This opening position will be frowned on by Egypt as "not enough," dismissed by ABC News as "warmed-over Camp David" and denounced by Yasir Arafat.

However, the Shamir offer provides running room for mediators — even those who impose settlement terms before negotiations begin.

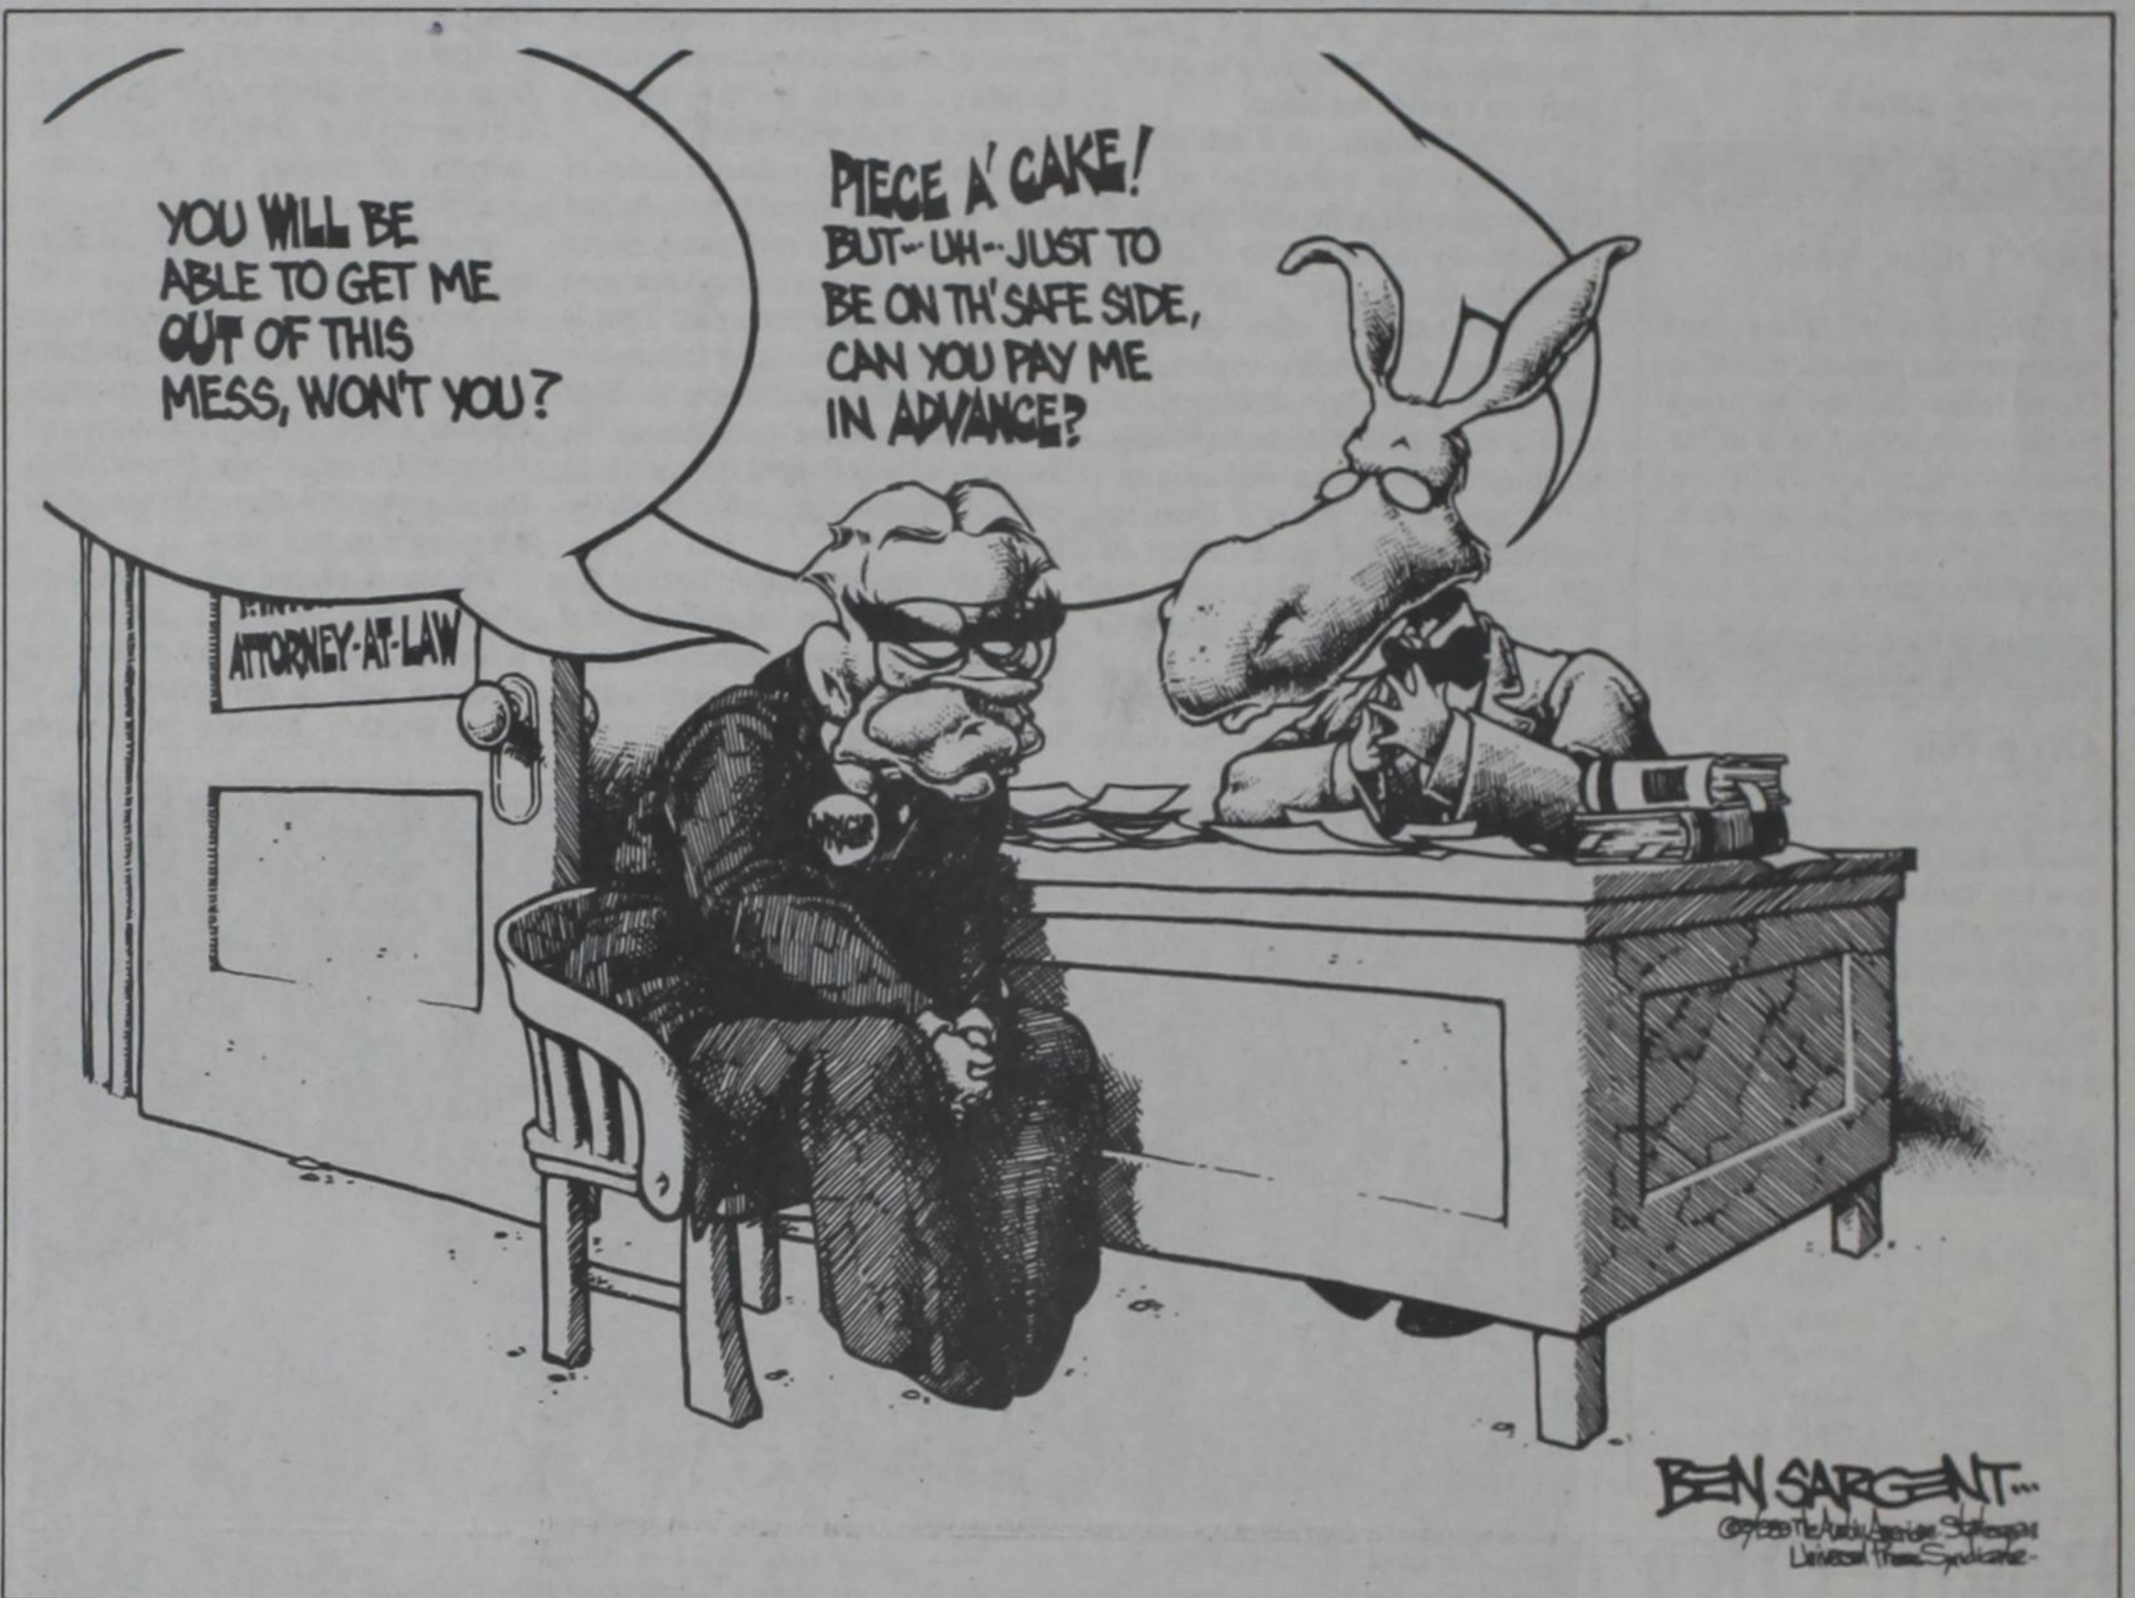

Not "new"? Nothing could be newer to most Arabs than a secret ballot.

Arab regimes do not tolerate elections that offer genuine choices.

But Mubarak says to tell Shamir he is ready to "help to the maximum" to conduct such elections under international supervision.

Message passed. Worth following up.

Opinion

Protect right of choice

To the editor:

Weekend before last, 600,000 people and I were demonstrating to the public and our "representatives" that we believe that each woman must have control over her own life.

The choice of whether or when to bear children is fundamental for such control. But our "representatives" are not listening to us. They are, however, listening and acting upon the lobbying efforts of the wealthy Right to Life and conservative caucus movements. These movements and their key supporters in Congress are pushing to legalize abortion.

This parallels many other sexist, racist, and agist attacks. The New Right wants the government to have complete authority over all aspects of our lives, from our education and work to our most intimate social relations: Nothing threatens patriarchy as much as women free of bonds.

The right of choice must be protected, just like freedom of speech and assembly and the right to vote.

Today, women have too few choices in our society. We want the world to know we are the pro-choice majority and we will not let women die.

I would like the Texas Tech campus to get involved in the upcoming Supreme Court decision.

We simply cannot sit here in Lubbock and not take stands on important issues such as this. Students are protesting on campuses nationwide, showing support for what they believe in, pro-choice or pro-life.

Society forsakes unborn

To the editor:

I want to write in response to the political cartoon seen on the top of page two in the issue from Friday. I am shocked! I am astounded at the insensitivity of our society.

Every person with whom I have talked so far has been surprised to find that second and third trimester babies are commonly being aborted and that if the baby is fortunate enough to be born alive, the "doctors" leave him on the operating table to die, leave him in a bassinet, or chunk him into a five-gallon bucket as garbage.

What I would ask those who regard these young infants as tissue blobs is: what is the difference between killing one month before or killing one month after birth? A descent down the birth canal is not magic. Furthermore, if we decide that first trimester babies are not human, exactly when does the infant become human? Shall we assign to ourselves the awesome task of deciding when the body gets a soul?

Perhaps the reason that we resist so strongly the rights of the unborn is that we know these children would need our love, our time, and our money!

How long can we justify our actions? Abortion is not necessarily a religious or moral issue. Killing for convenience is savage. If our hearts are not big enough to sacrifice from our wallets for the young, which group will we justify killing next for our personal comfort?

College prepares for accounting awareness week

By AUDRA SPRAY
The University Daily

Accounting students will celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Texas Tech Accounting Society during Accounting Emphasis Week today through Friday.

"The primary purpose of accounting week is to recognize outstanding students," said accounting Director Gary White.

Activities for the event will begin with a luncheon at 11:45 a.m. today in the UC ballroom.

The keynote speaker will be Bernard Milano, personnel committee vice chairman for Peat Marwick Main & Co., an international accounting firm.

A job fair will be conducted from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday in the business administration rotunda to introduce juniors to prospective employers, White said.

The Tech Accounting Society's 50th anniversary reception will begin at 4:30 p.m. Thursday at the Holiday Inn Civic Center. The 1989 Distinguished Alumnus, Haskell Taylor, will be recognized at 7 p.m. Thursday at a banquet at the same location.

Taylor, founder of the Tech Accounting Society, received a bachelor's degree in accounting from Tech in 1936 and a master's degree in 1937. He served as accounting department head as well as an associate, assistant and acting dean of the college.

White said more than $30,000 in scholarships will be awarded Thursday night.

Other activities include student-faculty softball and basketball games and a golf tournament at Lakeridge Country Club.

Road to happiness in Lubbock can be found in rearview mirror

Maria Hunt
Lifestyles
Writer

As the semester winds down, I must admit that I'm looking forward to NOT spending the summer here in Lubbock.

For the past four years I have had the opportunity to completely experience the West Texas summer season. Everyone should try it once; but if you have other options, I would say take them.

Going to summer school at Texas Tech isn't so bad. The early mornings are pleasant, and the semester is only six weeks long. It goes by pretty fast, especially if you take six or seven hours per session.

But the afternoons are hell if you don't have air conditioning. In my case, I was without that wonderful form of technology in the house AND the car. I got used to it.

It wasn't too bad in the house if I just kind of stayed in one place, preferably under the ceiling fan (which I WAS lucky enough to have), and tried not to move. It also helped to have lots of friends I could visit who had air conditioning.

The car, which gets unbearably hot after being parked for several hours in the sun, is fine once I get up to 40 or 50 mph with all the windows rolled down and hot air blowing around. It's either that or NO air.

Traffic always seems to be worse during 90-degree-and-above weather, and my tolerance for idiotic drivers lowers substantially with the rise of the temperature outside.

Many times I have wished for a huge tank that I could smash into others and get them out of my way. I'm not usually a violent person. It must be the heat. No wonder people shoot each other on the freeway in Los Angeles.

A few hours after the sun goes down, it's finally comfortable outside. In the evening, outdoors is the place to be because the house always takes until the next morning to cool down.

I have enjoyed taking walks around the block in the cool evening air. The only drawback here is that I like to go barefoot, but I'm terrified of stepping on bugs (or more specifically, roaches). I have been introduced to many new types of insects since moving to Lubbock, and I will not be sad to leave them behind this summer.

We're Ready For The New LSAT. Are You?

If you're one of the thousands of students who will be studying for the LSAT this June, you could be preparing for an exam that's already outdated.

While other prep courses are still teaching the old test, Stanley H. Kaplan has already designed a whole new course so you'll breeze through the new LSAT revised logic and reading sections.

What hasn't changed is our formula for success. Small classes, expert instruction, a distinguished research faculty, 135 Centers nationwide and our 50 years of experience. So call us today. We're ready to prepare you for the new LSAT.

Raiders try to build on win streak

By JOEL WEST
The University Daily

With a nine-game Southwest Conference losing streak erased, the Texas Tech baseball team finally can concentrate on building upon a streak in the "W" column. Tech, 24-17 overall and 3-9 against SWC opponents, will try to add to a three-game winning streak when the Red Raiders host Hardin-Simmons for a two-night doubleheader beginning at 5 p.m. today at Dan Law Field. Tech won both ends of a doubleheader against the Cowboys on Feb. 21 in Abilene by scores of 6-5 and 4-1.

The three wins over TCU gave the Raiders their first sweep of a SWC series in three seasons, since they aced Rice in 1986. Tech coach Larry Hays said he is anxious to see how the Raiders will build on something positive. He said outfielder Chris Moore's return to the lineup was important to the team's success. Although Moore did not play in the opening game, he went 2-for-6 in the doubleheader, walked four times and scored four runs as the leadoff batter.

Tech women's team inks TCIL prep star

Margo Graham, a 6-foot-2-inch post from Houston Marian Christian, signed a national letter of intent Friday to play for the Texas Tech women's basketball team.

Golfers in fifth at SWC meet

Michiko Hattori of the University of Texas lost a stroke but kept her lead Monday in the medalist's competition at the 1989 Southwest Conference Women's Golf Championship at Sugar Land's Sweetwater Country Club.

Texas continued to lead the team race after shooting a second-round 305, the day's top score. TCU's Elle Gibson (73-74-147) shot a two-over-par 74 to close in on Hattori (70-75-145) with today's third and final round still to play.

Texas Tech combined for a team score of 323 Monday but was unable to improve on its fifth place position in the six-team competition.

Laura Kleinmann (78-80-158), the Red Raiders' top finisher after round one, fell from 10th to 14th in the field and into a tie with teammate Amy McDougall (81-77-158).

Tech's Michelle Hapack (84-77-161) was in 17th place, Neisy Rodriguez (89-89-178) was in 28th.

Contract not renewed for Tech coach

Jim Wall, an assistant basketball coach at Texas Tech for six years, will not be offered a new contract, Tech Athletics Director T. Jones announced Monday.
"I felt it was in the best interest of the program that this change be made," Jones said.
Wall's contract runs through May 31.
Wall came to Tech in 1983 after coaching at Fort Worth Paschal High School for 12 years.

Tech's Moore returns to order

Moore suffered a lower back injury against Texas A&M, causing him to miss two games against Arkansas and the entire Texas series in Austin.
Donald Harris, who is hitting .347 in conference play, moved from right field to center, and Hays put Joe Mendazona in right. Upon Moore's return, Hays opted to keep Harris in center and placed Moore in right. Where Moore will play now will be up to Hays, Moore said.
The Raiders, who have a five-game home win streak, have been tough at Dan Law Field. The Raiders are 20-8 at home but will host only Rice in their last three conference series.
