Tech visiting prof arrested by FBI

by AMY COLLINS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech visiting professor Charles L. Mitchell was arrested Friday afternoon by the FBI on suspicion of making threatening telephone calls to Indiana Secretary of State Joseph Hogsett.

Mitchell, a political science professor, is charged with abusing interstate communication to harass and threaten Hogsett. If found guilty, Mitchell could face a $1,000 fine and five years in prison.

Don Ramsey, a special agent in charge of the Dallas Regional Field Office of the FBI, said the threats made to Hogsett on Aug. 14 were placed from Mitchell's house which made apprehending him less difficult for the FBI.

"It almost seems as if he wanted to get caught," Ramsey said.

Mitchell's threats to Hogsett are supported by an affidavit from Hogsett's office. The affidavit states that Mitchell allegedly said, "I'm really mad at Joe Hogsett. You tell me I am going to kill him, shoot him or kill him with bomb, but I will literally kill him."

Mitchell allegedly stated in the Aug. 14 telephone conversation that he thinks Joe Hogsett should be killed on the basis that he was once a good man prior to his entering politics but now is doing "bad things."

A second telephone call from Mitchell was made to Officer Patricia A. Head of the Capitol Security Police in Indianapolis on the security line.

During this conversation, Mitchell is charged with saying "I am from Rushville, we don't want Hogsett in office. We will kill him, and we are not afraid to do so," as alleged in the affidavit.

Margaret Simon, Tech's director of News and Publications, said a termination notice was sent to Mitchell's home shortly after his arrest.

"Background checks on visiting professors are not as thorough as the background checks on a tenured or a permanent professor at Tech," Simon said. "This incident has caused us to improve the procedure we use to check backgrounds for any type of record."

Simon said the FBI is investigating other charges which allegedly occurred in Lubbock and she added that Tech Police Services would cooperate in the investigation.

She said a replacement for Mitchell's classes has already been arranged and that students should attend the class as usual.

"If Mitchell is found guilty of a second count of harassment, he will face a $2,000 fine and 10 years in prison," Ramsey said.

Mitchell's detention hearing is scheduled for Monday at 9 a.m. in Judge J.Q. Warnick Jr.'s courtroom at the U.S. Magistrate Court in Lubbock to determine whether he will receive a bond or remain in jail until his trial.

Codes trouble for multi-roommate houses

by KENDRA CASEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Attention Texas Tech students renting houses and duplexes: beware of Lubbock's zoning codes.

The city's zoning codes prohibit more than two unrelated persons from living together in a single-family dwelling.

Tony Bustillos, with the city's codes administration division, said that houses and one-half of duplexes are considered single-family dwellings.

A family unit is defined in the zoning codes as "one or more persons related by blood, adoption or marriage, or not more than two unrelated persons living and cooking together as a single housekeeping unit."

Students living in houses or duplexes with two or more roommates are living in violation of the city's zoning ordinances, Bustillos said.

Apartment complexes are not considered single-family dwellings, and therefore residents in apartments are not restricted by the city to the number of residents living in a single unit.

Bustillos said residents in violation of zoning codes will be evicted if city officials are aware of the violation, however, evictions are done primarily on a complaint basis.

"There are a couple of evictions involving Tech students each month," he said. "Ninety percent of evictions are complaint-generated."

Bustillos said the worse case scenario of a violation is 3 or 4 four-person families living in a single-family residence.

While this is not the case with most student renters, the city still enforces the zoning codes when a confrontation occurs.

The purpose of the ordinance, Bustillos said, is to maintain a low-population density in residential areas.

In addition, parking and excessive noise problems usually are a result of multi-families occupying single-family dwellings, he said. Bustillos explained that many complaints the city receives relating to zoning violations concern parking problems and excessive noise.

Section 29.7 of the city of Lubbock's zoning code states that the development of single-family districts was created to "protect established and future single-family residential developments from inharmonious and harmful land uses, and provide a 'quality environment' for the residents of the district and city."

Sky's the limit for blind Tech student

by CATHERINE DUNN
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

"It's total darkness that I see. Sometimes I have my eyes open and I think, 'Dang, I wonder if I can see.'"

Samuel Earl Jackson, a senior telecommunications major, is like any other Texas Tech student. He entered Tech as a music major, switched to psychology, returned to music, then again gave it up. Now after seven years, he will graduate in December with a telecommunications degree.

But Jackson is not Tech's everyday student. Out of 25,000 students on the Tech campus, Jackson may be one of the few that everyone seems to know.

"You say, 'Sam Jackson,' and people say, 'Yeah, I know Sam.' They see this blind black guy walking around campus with a dog, and everyone thinks they know me," Jackson said.

Jackson, who plays the clarinet, entered Tech in the fall of 1984 with the intention of majoring in music education.

"I jokingly like to say to people that I've been here since the Nixon years," he said. "He and I used to sit out at the picnic tables and have coffee and doughnuts for breakfast."

Jackson left the music department because many of the professors were not very encouraging. He was told that because of his blindness, it would be very difficult for him to find any job related to music, and if he did find a job, it would be one teaching students who shared his disability.

Jackson, however, is one person who has not let his blindness limit him. There is very little that he is incapable of doing, and very little that he will not try. In the spring of 1988 he did a weekly sports cast on KTX, the campus radio station, and last summer he worked as an intern for KSAT channel 12 in San Antonio.

"I've given a lot of thought to the joke that I tell people, 'Oh, we went skydiving. The only problem was I couldn't get the dog to stop screaming on the way down.' But I don't think I could really do that. I've gone water skiing and snow skiing, so I've done a lot of things. But that skydiving stuff, I don't know if I can get into that kind of stuff there."

However, Jackson found himself able to get behind the wheel of a car when a friend told him that because he had been joking about driving all weekend, Jackson was actually going to maneuver the car through some back dirt roads.

"She got in the backseat. And here I was sitting in the front seat all by myself, scared. I was more nervous than a one-legged man in a butt-kicking contest. I have never been so scared in my life. I think she was scared, too. She was like, 'Left, right. No! I mean go left!' So I swerved the car over, 'Oh, wait! Back to the right!' God, I was so nervous."

Jackson, who lost his sight at 11 months because of glaucoma, said he does not dwell much on his blindness. It is very seldom that he ever regrets not having his sight. The times that he does wish he had his sight are moments when he drops something and has to feel around for it but is unable to find it, or when he gets some urgent mail and there is nobody around to read it to him.

"It's really tough for people because they are used to doing with their sight, and when they lose it, they absolutely feel like, 'Well, I can't do anything now,'" he said. "I can understand when somebody says, 'I wouldn't want to live if I didn't have my sight.' But then, I've known a lot of people who have said that and then lost their sight. All of sudden they know they have to deal with it."

Jackson said a lot of blind people do not have a social life because they close themselves off to other people. They leave class, go directly up to the Library's Center for Visually Impaired and stay there until nightfall.

"The university is a safe harbor for them. They're scared to venture out. I don't want to be like that," he said.

Jackson enjoys his social life, and especially enjoys large crowds. His blindness has not stopped him from Local taxpayers group rallies against tax laws

by JULIE COLLINS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Signs proclaiming "Constitutional Amendments, U.S. vs Texas for Term Limitations" and "No More Taxes, Enough is Enough," dotted the South Plains Area Residents Taxpayers Action Network rally Saturday in the parking lot at 74th and Canton Avenue.

SPARTAN sponsored rallies throughout the weekend across the nation protesting increased government control of local tax laws, and also gave Lubbock taxpayers the opportunity to voice their dissension concerning the purchase of a piece of land to be used to build a new Omnimax Theater site, costing local taxpayers approximately $600,000.

SPARTAN is a nonpartisan, volunteer organization that gathers information for the public concerning present and future spending of various city taxation proposals.

Kirk Williams, rally coordinator for SPARTAN, said the rally was organized in part to express disseminating views concerning the purchase of the parking lot. He said Lubbock voters had no chance to approve the project.

"The lot is not worth the $650,000 that the city council paid for it. What we are saying is if the city government can't purchase a piece of land right, why do we want to give them more money," Williams said.

Likewise, the current debate for an increase in the city's sales tax is a "hot button" for local taxpayers, he said.

Williams said the controversy concerning a local sales tax increase has also caused many individuals to rethink government control of tax money.

The City Council recently voted 7-0 for a local sales tax increase. Proponents say the tax increase could generate approximately $6 million for economic development within the city.

"Our goal is to defeat the sales tax when it goes to vote in January," Williams said.

David Vernon, SPARTAN organizer, said taxpayers should be aware of the tax proposal and realize there should be a balance between public and private sectors of business concerning tax increases.

"We don't want more government control," Vernon said.

Williams said Congressman Larry Combest, D-Lubbock, was scheduled to speak at the rally, but declined the invitation earlier in the week because issues that were discussed at the rally were local in nature rather than national.

"Combest declined our invitation because he supports the Science Spectrum and the Omnimax Theater. It's a controversial issue and he does not want to get involved," Williams said.

He said if the theater is needed in the city of Lubbock, private enterprise should fund the construction and not local taxpayer's money.

"I'm not against the construction of the Omnimax Theater. I am upset by the way it was handled," he said.

SPARTAN also advocates the defeat of a state lottery up for vote on the Nov. 5 constitutional ballot.

According to the SPARTAN brochure, state legislatures have increased statewide spending during the special sessions by $2.8 million.

The organization does not want to see the implementation of a state lottery as a substitution for raising state taxes.

The brochure stated that state legislatures are out of control and that it's time for them to start living within their state budgets.

People walking on both sides of him and sitting on the West Hall stairs can be a problem, Jackson says. Boss, his companion for three years, helps make these situations less troublesome, however.

FRANCISCO RODRIGUEZ

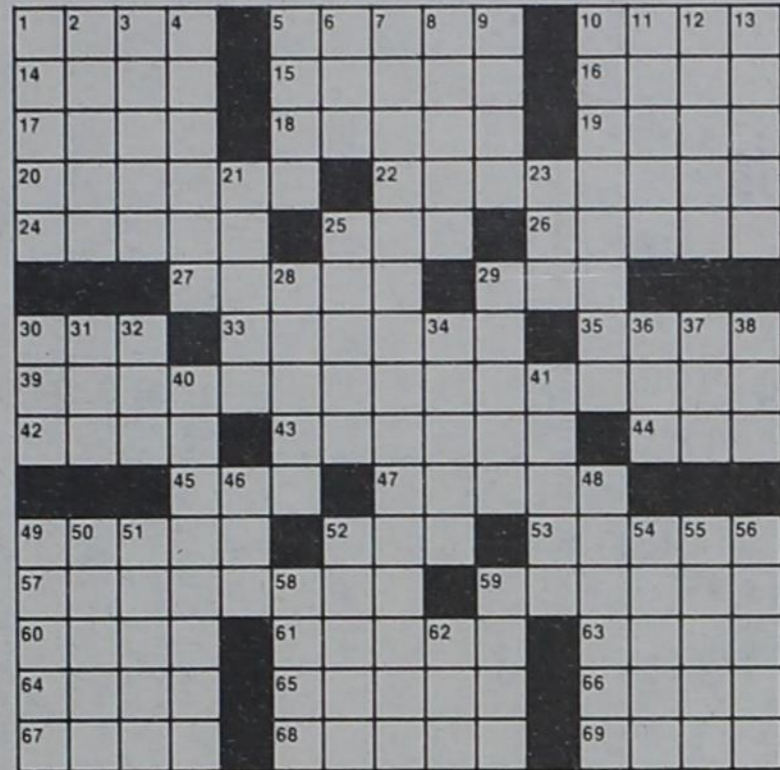

Why a fun page? Because we've all gone silly, that's why. It's things like this that almost make me want to go to class (like my history class), just so I can do the crossword. Well, we've made sort of a commitment to run The Far Side and the crossword every day, but when we don't have the space to run them, we've often had to make the choice to either skip them, or put them on the opinion page. I've often voted to skip them, but this time, I thought we should try something different. Tomorrow, we'll have lots of space (and the same number of pages). Oh, yeah,

I'm the editor of The University Daily.

Yesterday's Puzzle Solved:

'Pink Raiders' make me see red

This letter is in response to Greg Stehman's letter ("Tell Spike, he's fired!") and the comments of other Pink Raiders on the Texas Tech campus.

Now, you're probably asking, "Just what is a 'Pink Raider?'" That's what they called fair-weather Tech fans when my parents went to school here in the late fifties and early sixties. That's what you all are — fair-weather fans. That's why I have such problems with your comments.

I wonder, Mr. Stehman, if you were a Tech student or fan two years ago. That's right, two years ago, when the Red Raiders had an 8-3 season, beat both A&M and T.U. (in Austin, no less!), won the All-

American Bowl in a decisive victory over Duke, and ended the season ranked #17 in the nation? I'd be willing to bet that if you followed Tech football in 1989, you were one of its biggest fans. You might have even praised Spike when he was named SWC Coach of the Year. (I could be wrong on that point, but I doubt it.)

I am willing to agree with you that Spike is not doing that well this year and that he has botched some important plays. I also am disappointed that the Red Raiders have not lived up to pre-season expectations. But, parts of the team have surpassed all of those expectations. Mark Bounds, the NCAA's leading punter, is well on his way to a SWC record-breaking season with a 48+ yard average on the season so far. Lin Elliott, Tech's place kicker, is the second best in the NCAA; he has also broken records this year. Our special teams are doing an excellent job as well. Tracy Saul may be on his way to another season at the top of the list of punt returners, not to mention his interceptions for the defense.

Once again, don't get me wrong; some changes need to be made.

However, a new coach will not solve all of Tech's football problems. Look at the Dallas Cowboys — Jimmy Johnson did not change everything over-night. It's taken him three years to turn the Cowboys' record around. Even if Tech was to get a new head coach, we probably would not start having 10-1 or 9-2 seasons right away.

Also, in response to your incredibly rude and tacky comment about the fight song, Mr. Stehman:

Tech has some incredibly good athletic teams that are constantly picked very high. If you want to hear the victory bells, follow the women's volleyball team (#17 in the nation), the women's basketball team (picked to be #1 in the SWC this season), or the baseball team (last year was one of its best seasons in its history).

Now, I have two final comments to make.

First, "Fight, Raiders, fight! Fight, Raiders, fight! Fight for the school we love so dearly!" (or at least I do) We will hear the victory bells ring plenty for the rest of the year.

Secondly, Pink Raiders, Texas Tech is part of America: "Love it or Leave it!"

Dana Dick

P.S. Hey, Spike, I'll be there!!!

The real Tech ghetto?

Once again Housing and Dining has its "Best Dressed Space Contest" — can you say "Potemkin Village?"

Well, in the past I have criticized this contest as a farce, it still is in my opinion, and I promoted my farce of "Most Trashed Space Contest" instead, but this time I would like to take a different tact. It seems to me that the purpose of the "Best Dressed Space Contest" is to promote better community life through the improvement of the physical surroundings — not a bad idea. But even so, Housing and Dining obviously spends a lot of time and effort at this project: they have to see all the contestants rooms, decide on the winning room, and then award prizes.

Funny, if they only spent that much time on the up-keep of the halls I wonder how much improvement there would be in every resident's life? Consider this, the state of the residence halls on the campus ranges from excellent to criminal. For example, the toilet facilities in Carpenter Hall are atrocious: exposed plumbing, cracked and aging tile, and fixtures that leak or give little water.

Gaston Hall has the same problem, the bathroom and its fixtures suffer from age and incomplete maintenance; the commodes leak or don't flush properly and the stalls are rusted and falling away from the walls. The argument could be made that it is our fault — abuse by the students — but this simply is not the case. The state that the dorms are in could be considered discriminatory. Other halls have better facilities, either the residents pay more or it is a women's hall. (this is not universally true but enough to cause me to question.) I would like to say to Housing and Dining and the people who sponsor the "Best Dressed Space Contest", if you can provide a campuswide standard of quality and sanitation in the halls, it would be much appreciated.

James J. Osburn

Where did the red go?

Yes, whatever did become of the "red" in "Red Raiders"? I am 100 percent in agreement with Ryan Hyatt's editorial in the Sports Section of the Oct. 16, 1991, University Daily. Instead of the "Red" Raiders, why not change to the "Black" Raiders or just plain old "Raiders." I haven't seen any red on the carpet in Jones Stadium in years.

The only red is an occasional red wrist band now and then. The next time Tech wants to have "All I see is red day," everyone should show up in black.

Wouldn't it be a beautiful sight to see the team with red jerseys and black pants, or black jerseys and red pants, or heaven forbid — all red uniforms?

Again I ask, what did ever happen to the "red" in "Red Raiders?"

Sharon Pope

You could fill in as quarterback ...NOT!

This letter is in response to Greg Stehman's letter of Oct. 16.

He said he believes Tech ought to adopt a new "Tell Spike, he's fired!" slogan.

I am ashamed to be going to school with someone of Mr. Stehman's apparent belief that a school should judge itself on the record of the football team.

If Mr. Stehman is such a football expert, then the inquiring mind wonders exactly why he doesn't apply for Spike's job — I'll bet you'll be hired on the spot, Greg!

Also, no one asked Mr. Stehman to be a Tech football fan. It's nice to have numbers in the stands, but I'm sure the team would rather have 100 people that really support the effort during the game than 10,000 fair-weather fans. I enjoy winning just as much as anyone, except maybe the players and the coaches, but really, Greg, it's just a game. I like being able to cheer my team on and would personally like to go to another bowl before I graduate, but I do not think insults to the coaches or players is going to help anything. Spike, in my opinion, is a nice man who cares about his players and wants everyone to be involved in supporting the team.

That is more than can be said about lots of other coaches! And also, Mr. Stehman, perhaps you would like to help the team win by walking on. Maybe a great talent like yourself could help Tech all the way to the Cotton Bowl! In closing, I would like to know why you, Greg, even bother with football when you are obviously on a higher plane than the rest of us. I hope when you get high in the ranks of whatever field you are in, you always look good, always make the right decisions, and never have a bad year. It would be a shame for one of your bosses to tell your fellow employees, "Tell Stehman, he's fired!"

Rebekah Turner

P.S. I am really glad to hear that you recorded the victory bells. Now I know what truly lonely individuals do for kicks.

Eating disorders hard to detect, says Tech dietician

by KIMBERLY WAINWRIGHT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

While diseases like AIDS and cancer continually receive public attention, other silent diseases — anorexia and bulimia — claim more victims than many other diseases combined.

Eating disorders are usually found in women in the upper-middle class who have family problems or who struggle in relationships.

These disorders are usually provoked by a feeling of no control or an extreme obsession or concern about weight.

Symptoms of anorexia nervosa include rough, dry skin, hair loss, constipation, low body temperature and strange eating behaviors. These victims, who consume between 300 and 400 calories per day, will be of extreme thinness and yet will see themselves as overweight.

In serious cases, women may lose the ability to menstruate and both men and women may begin to lose their teeth.

Lori Kiker, a registered dietician at Thompson Hall, said bulimics are harder to pick out of a crowd than anorexics.

"Bulimics are of normal weight or may be even a little overweight," Kiker said. "Rather than physical indications, there are more emotional signs of bulimia. Bulimics are obsessed with food."

Kiker said that bulimics can consume up to 20,000 calories in two hours.

They usually indulge in pastries, doughnuts, ice cream and other sweets high in calories.

After their binges, they look for ways to flush the food from their bodies. Regurgitation, laxatives and excessive exercise are the usual ways bulimics do this.

"Even though they try to get rid of these calories, usually up to 40 percent of those consumed remain in the body. This is the reason for there to be a tendency for these victims to be slightly overweight," Kiker said.

The Wesley Foundation of Texas Tech and the Baptist Student Union have joined to form a support group for those persons suffering from eating disorders.

"People with eating disorders don't just suffer from the disease, they suffer from extreme emotional pain. Somehow something brings them to the purging and then the binging gives them a sense of control and makes them feel OK about themselves. It is all about control" said Amy Lerner, an intern at Wesley.

She also said that Western culture seems to breed eating disorders.

"I have been to Taiwan, Haiti, Mexico and Europe, and it seems that there isn't a problem with these diseases in other countries. It is hard for Americans to escape weight problems when everywhere they look there are models who are extremely thin," Lerner said.

Eating disorders have a lot in common with substance abuse, and even though food is safer than most drugs, it can still kill a person if it is abused.

"Alcoholics or drug addicts can clean themselves up by staying away from what they are addicted to," Lerner said. "It is extremely hard for anorexics or bulimics to be cured because food is a necessity in their lives. They have to have food to survive."

Kiker said that the longer a person suffers from anorexia nervosa or bulimia, the harder it is to cure them. After a diagnosis, victims must be treated by a physician, a psychologist and a counselor.

"Curing a person suffering from an eating disorder takes a team approach," Kiker said.

"Wesley tries to be gentle and careful with these victims. It's not really a chemical matter, but an emotional one," Lerner said.

Dean of Students starts ribbon campaign

by AMY COLLINS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The week of Oct. 19-25 has been declared Red Ribbon Week in Lubbock, and Texas Tech's Dean of Students Office is encouraging Tech students to participate in a commitment to a drug-free Texas.

Brenda Arkell, assistant dean of students, said red ribbons will be distributed to students at all residence halls, the University Police Department and all entrances into the Tech campus throughout the week.

"We ordered 18,000 ribbons this year and we would like to see as many students and faculty wearing them as possible," Arkell said.

The red ribbon campaign began as a result of the murder of federal drug agent Enrique Camarena by drug traffickers in 1985.

The red ribbon became a symbol of the nation's war against drugs just as the yellow ribbon symbolized the hostages in Iran and the POWs in Vietnam.

Arkell said this year's campaign is unique in that participation of the sororities and fraternities has increased 100 percent.

"We have provided these organizations with ribbons and pledge cards," she said.

She said this type of participation is important at Tech because it serves as a great role model to other organizations.

Arkell said this type of participation among sororities and fraternities is not segregated to Tech because this is a nationwide campaign.

"I can't speak for the participation of other universities, but Tech's participation in this campaign has increased among its students," she said.

"I feel this reflects very well on the faculty, staff and students at Tech," Arkell said.

Pledge cards will also be distributed at the Dean of Students Office throughout the week that students sign in favor of supporting the prevention of unlawful drug use.

"Studies have shown that people who place their signatures on any document tend to take that document more seriously," she said. "We are hoping these signatures will have this effect on students and they will lead a drug-free lifestyle."

The Dean of Students Office has sent 429 letters of invitation of participation in the red ribbon campaign to Tech vice presidents, deans, chairs and directors. Twenty-seven percent of those individuals will participate.

Ballet performance showcases future talent

by LYDIA GUAJARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Twists, turns and leaps were a highlight of the weekend as The Willis Ballet and the Texas Tech Dance Division presented a double feature ballet. The two works presented were "Dracula: The Ballet" and "Ballet Gala."

Featured in the works were dancers from the Willis Ballet and the Tech Dance Division, but the main attractions were six dancers from the Bolshoi and Kirov Ballets from Russia.

Thursday's feature presentation was "Dracula." The ballet, based on the original "Dracula" story set to ballet, featured the Russian performers as well as area performers. The piece, which was choreographed by Peggy Willis Aarnio, was a pleasant story for all to enjoy, especially considering Halloween is almost here. The soloists featured were two of the dancers from the Russian Ballets with an even more pleasant addition being the young talents of the Willis Ballet.

The Russian players' performances in "Dracula" were the highlight of the work. Time after time the dancers amazed the crowd with their talent and their feats of strength. It is no wonder this is the best of the best and booked year around for shows.

However, the local talent, which also was part of the cast, was a surprise for many Lubbockites new to the ballet scene. Freshman Jamy Meek was a thrill to watch, leaving one wondering about the future of this performer. Denise Scott, Meek's partner, was another example of the up and coming talent in the Lubbock area. For those who were unable to attend, the ballet was an emotion filled production which exhibited polished and fine talent from Russia as well as future stars.

As for Saturday's performance of "Ballet Gala," it was an outstanding performance not only by the Russians but those of the Willis Ballet. Aarnio's idea of featuring the best talent alone on stage provided a pleasant and entertaining view of each of the dancers.

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Tico Torres, Bon Jovi's drummer, ended a 20-year estrangement with his father thanks in part to Hector Torres' dislike for rock music.

"There's nothing worse than missing someone," Tico Torres, 38, said last week when he came to town for the reunion.

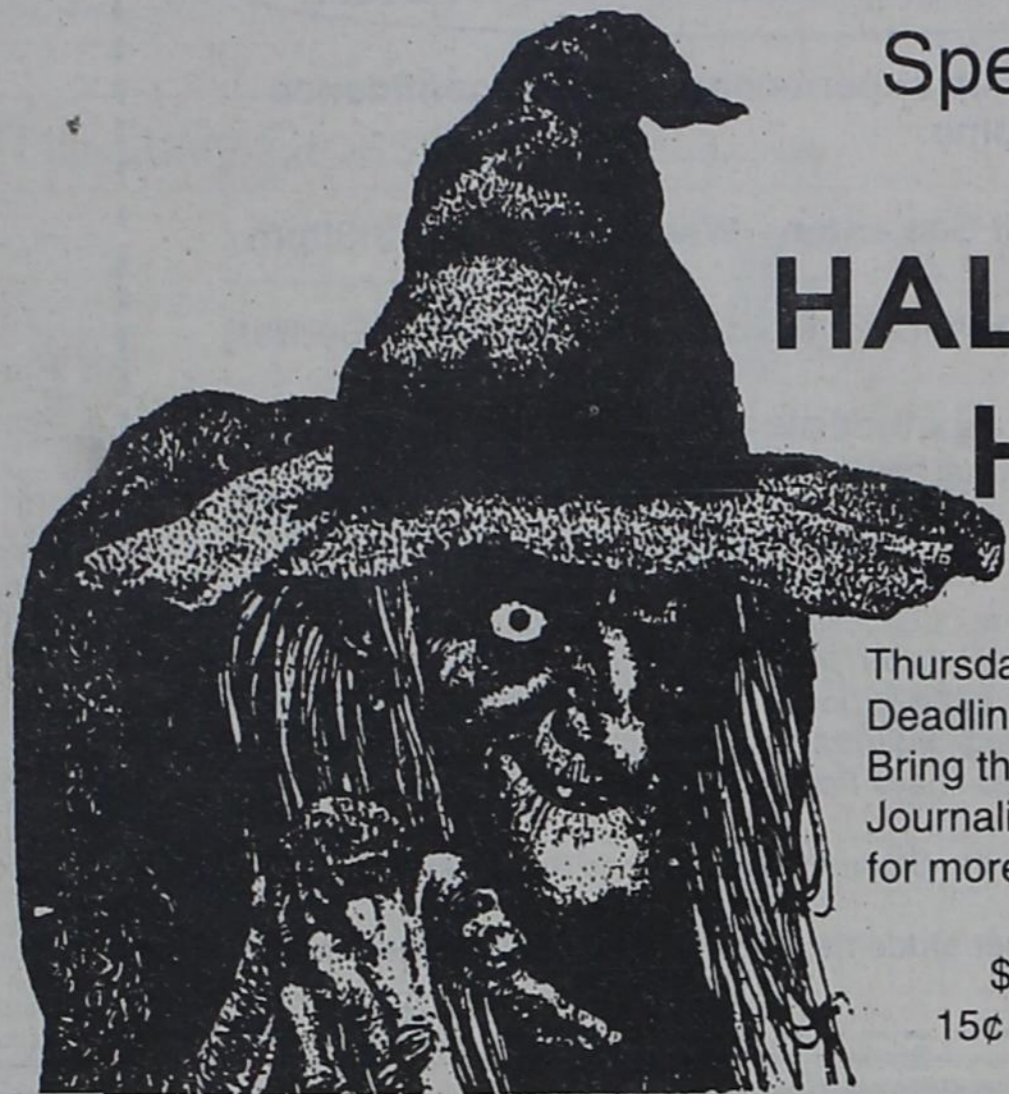

It came about because Andrew Torres was watching a Bon Jovi video called "Never Say Goodbye" and his father told him to turn it off. "I said 'Pop, you should be happy they got a Cuban in the band,'" Andrew Torres said.

"And he said, 'A Cuban? Where?' I pointed him out, then rewound the video, and he asked 'Where is he from?'"

And I said he was from Jersey ... and that's when he said ... 'That's Tico.'"

The video shows photos of band members in childhood.

Blindness fails to inhibit student's social activities

attending football or baseball games. He said he can tell by the reaction of the crowd if a player is going to pass the football or run with it. He also has tried his hand at golf and has made several holes in one, he said. He may not be able to see where the hole is, but he can hear where it is when people stand by it and tap their feet. Jackson said it is important that blind students try to educate the sighted as much as possible, but in a polite way. He runs across a wide variety of people who are ignorant to what it means to be blind. Once a man told him that if he opened his eyes, he would be able to see. "I like to travel as much as I can with a cane. Sometimes I get a question like 'Where's your dog today?' Sometimes it's tempting to say, 'Use common sense.' If he's not here, he's at the dorm," he said. Jackson said he tries to answer every question whether it is a dumb question or not because many people learn about blindness through others who are not blind. He said he does not usually view any question related to blindness as a dumb question because he realizes that people really do want to know the answer. "My hearing is no better than yours or anyone else's. We just pay attention more," Jackson responded to the myth that the senses of the blind are more intensified. "Some people hear the same sound that we hear, they just don't pay attention to it. We're just using our hearing more. It's imperative that we use our hearing more. If I were deaf, I would slam into every object around me." Jackson said he likes people to talk to him normally because he uses the same speech patterns that everybody else does. He said sometimes he feels left out because people question him when he tells them that he watched the news or the game the night before. "What do you mean 'watched'?" they ask. People identify objects with their fingers, Jackson said. They ask to see an object and then they handle it with their hands. He said he wants people to tell him, "Sam, go and see if you can find those papers on the table," not "Sam, go to the table and try to feel around for those papers." He said he does not get hung up on the fact that he cannot "see," he understands the word is used as a form of speaking. "I think I've had dreams that I could see," Jackson said. "It's kind of strange. I was not able to recognize the object, but I saw that it was there. I still had to go and identify it with my hands." Many people are uncomfortable being around blind people, which is why Jackson likes to make blind jokes. It relaxes people, he said. If a teacher hands him a syllabus, he will ask, "Can you give me one in large print?" However, he does not like it when people tease his dog, Boss. He said he understands that it may be their way of reaching out to him or trying to feel more comfortable, but it only ends in upsetting both Jackson and Boss. He said one time someone kept barking at the dog, and suddenly Boss took him running down a flight of stairs. Jackson said much of his positive attitude toward his blindness comes from the Texas School for the Blind, located in Austin. He said during the first four or five years of his life, both he and his parents did not know how to deal with his blindness. The school helped him work out some of his personal problems and also gave him the opportunity to participate in music and athletics.

Houston prevails 17-13 in turnover fest

by STEVEN WINE
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI—In a game of giveaway, the Miami Dolphins and Sammie Smith fumbled their chance to upset the Houston Oilers.

Smith coughed up the ball on a first-and-goal dive play at the 1-yard line Sunday, and Houston's Cris Dishman recovered in the end zone with 3:40 left to clinch a 17-13 victory.

Miami's five turnovers also included an interception that rookie Darryll Lewis returned 33 yards untouched for the game's first touchdown. Surprisingly stout defense by the Dolphins limited Houston's run-and-shoot to one touchdown, partly by forcing four turnovers.

The Oilers improved to 6-1 and increased their lead to three games in the AFC Central. The Dolphins fell to 3-5; last season they finished 13-5.

Smith's fumble was his second at the goal line in as many weeks. The earlier bobble sparked a 42-7 Kansas City rout as Chris Martin returned it 100 yards for a touchdown.

This time, Smith took the handoff and appeared about to score when linebacker Lamar Lathon grazed his arm and the ball came out. The turnover squandered a nine-play, 75-yard drive. The Oilers took over at the 20 and ran out the clock.

Houston's winning score, on a 1-yard pass from Warren Moon to Curtis Duncan with 9:30 left, culminated a 16-play, 71-yard drive.

That the Oilers took so long to get in gear was an upset. Their offense entered the game ranked second in the NFL, while the Dolphins defense was ranked next-to-worst.

But Miami used up to eight defensive backs at the same time, still mounted an effective pass rush and forced Moon into errant throws. Safety Louis Oliver picked off two passes, and backup safety Bobby Harden had an interception and fumble recovery.

Houston stayed in the game only because of its defense, which forced four turnovers in the second quarter alone. Bubba McDowell had two interceptions, including one at the Miami 3-yard line to squelch a scoring threat.

Miami took a 10-7 halftime lead when Marino hit Mark Clayton on a 19-yard scoring pass.

Tech sweeps weekend matches

THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The NCAA volleyball tournament is getting closer, and the Texas Tech women's volleyball team is drawing ever nearer to a bid after returning from a five-day road trip with a 3-0 record.

The Red Raiders rolled over both the Baylor Bears and the Southwest Texas State Bobcats to improve their record to 17-3 overall and 3-1 in Southwest Conference play.

Tech entered the Ferrell Center in Waco on the heels of the win against the Rice Owls on Oct. 19.

The Raiders started quickly early in the match, as they swept the conference contest in three games, 15-3, 15-6 and 16-14.

The Bears entered the game with a 1-3 conference record, coming off a tough loss to Texas A&M.

Once again every player on the Raider roster saw action, with sophomore middle blocker Erica Ruegg leading the team in kills with 13.

Ruegg also led the team in blocks with four assisted and one solo, while hitting .524 in the match.

Senior outside hitter Sabrina Zenon added to her team-leading kill total with 12 in the match and a .286 hitting percentage.

Zenon also added 14 digs, with both senior middle blocker Chris Martin and senior defensive specialist Adrienne Salomone garnering eight each in the contest.

The Raider defense held the Bears to a hitting percentage of .075, as Tech had 42 kills compared to Baylor's 25.

The Raiders then traveled to San Marcos on Saturday to face Southwest Texas State.

Tech romped in three games, 15-5, 15-10 and 15-7, while the Raiders upped their season record to 17-3. Tech held the Bobcats to a .143 hitting percentage in the match.

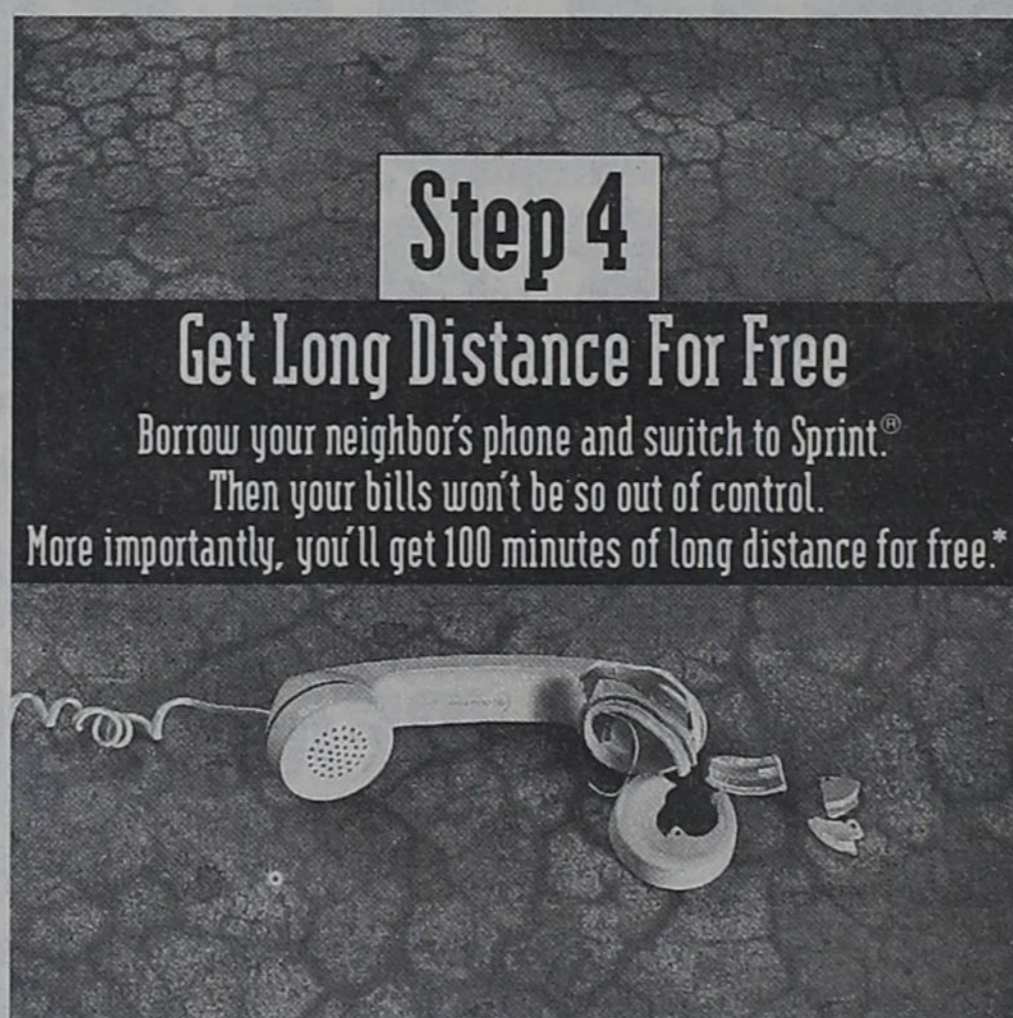

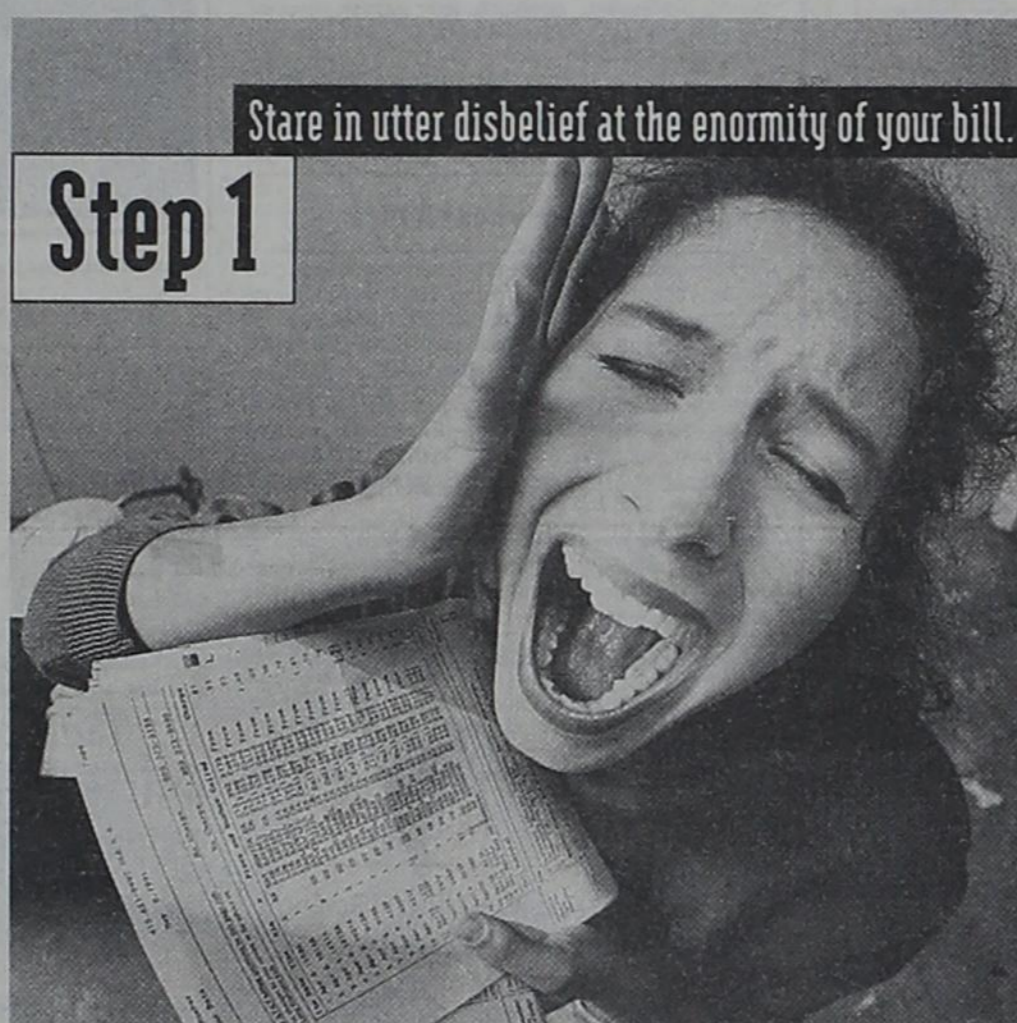

Tech will face the Texas A&M Lady Aggies at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.
