Edward's Love For Wallis Almost Overthrew Empire

By RICHARD KLEINER
NAE Staff Correspondent

Play a little soft and sentimental music. Maestro, while we relive one of history's most unbelievable romances.

The love of Edward (by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India; for Wallis Warfield shook an empire, almost overturned a government and gave the world a few breathlessly thrilling days. In short, it was a humdinger of a story.

A gloomy America was fighting the blue despair of the depression in the mid-1930s when it began to perk up as the first trickle of rumors about the King and the Divorcee reached across the Atlantic.

Rumors about the handsome Edward and various ladies were common, but this one was different. In the first place, Edward was no longer just a Prince, but a full-fledged, responsible King. And, in the second place, he had been seeing the striking brunette for some time.

America began to do some checking on Wallis Warfield, the girl who might—but that's fantastic—become Queen of England. They found she came from Baltimore that her family traced itself back to William the Conqueror, but that their fortunes had taken a turn for the worse and their once fashionable home was being run by Wallis' mother as a boarding house.

Her schooling was paid for by a rich relative, Uncle "Sol" Warfield, a railroad president. With 33 other debutantes, she made her bow at the Bachelors' Cotillion in Baltimore in 1914. Two years later she married a young naval aviator, Lt. Earle Spencer, Jr.

The Spencers separated in 1922, and were divorced in 1927. The next year, she married Ernest Simpson, who was in the shipping business in London.

Soon, the society columns in London began to note that the Simpsons were pretty popular with the gay Prince. They were his guests at Fort Belvedere, outside London, for week-ends; they were seen in the Royal Box at Covent Garden; they dined together in restaurants; they were constant companions on the Riviera. Always, the three of them.

The Prince became King on the death of George V on Jan. 21, 1936. On May 27, the Simpsons were guests at a dinner in St. James palace. In August, however, when the King took his first vacation on the yacht, Nahlin, in the Adriatic, only one Simpson was invited. Wallis went, but Ernest Simpson didn't.

The American press carried news of that cruise, but not the British. The story of Edward and Wallis had gone underground, by a voluntary censorship. English papers failed to note the news from Ipswich on Oct. 27, that Mrs. Wallis Warfield Spencer Simpson had won an uncontested divorce.

Behind the scenes in England however, there was considerable stirring. Led by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, the staid English were trying to talk the King out of his intention to marry Wallis. Their objection was not based on her being an American. It was her two divorces that rankled. They felt that the King, as Defender of a Faith that refuses to remarry divorced persons, would not appear to his religious subjects as married in the eyes of God if he went through with his plans. He would be a King living in sin, and she would not be a Queen worthy of respect.

The English people, too, had quarrel with Mrs. Simpson as an American. But they visualized her as a night-clubber, not quite Queenly timber. They probably wouldn't have minded had her relationship to the King become simply the historic role of "friend."

But a stubborn King held out against an equally stubborn group of advisers. Then, the advisers decided to let the English people in on the secret, early in December 1936.

Headlines shrieked the astounding story to a shocked Britain: "THE KING WANTS TO MARRY MRS. SIMPSON. CABINET ADVISES 'NO'!" Government securities sold off sharply. The pound declined in Paris. The coronation which had been scheduled for May, 1937, was postponed. There were parades, pro and con, rallies, pro and con, and speeches in the House of Commons, almost exclusively con.

Baldwin gave the lovesick and determined King 48 hours to think over his ultimatum—give her up or abdicate.

At first, Edward said, sternly, "I will brook no interference in my personal affairs." But he thought it over and came up with a compromise. He suggested a "morganatic" marriage, meaning that Wallis wouldn't be Queen nor would any children have any claim on the throne, but she would be his legal wife.

Baldwin studied the offer, but ruled that English law did not recognize a marriage of that type. Edward was faced with four choices, at this point: he could abdicate; he could continue opposing Baldwin, hoping for his resignation, but the House of Commons was steadfastly backing the Prime Minister; he could give Wallis up; or he could seek to govern without Parliament, thus becoming a dictator.

Then Wallis, the cause of the furor, took matters into her own hands. Angry and embittered, she fled from England to seek peace on the Riviera. Besieged by reporters, she issued a statement: "I am willing... to withdraw from a situation... both unhappy and untenable."

But Edward wouldn't have things that way. On Dec. 11, 1936, he decided to abdicate the throne. In a quivering voice, he told a world that stopped work to listen to his words: "I have found it impossible to discharge my duties as I would wish to do without the help and support of the woman I love."

That night, he boarded the HMS Fury, and sailed from England. A story that Hollywood, in its wildest flights of fancy would have never dared to present, had come true.

Wilson Predicts U. S. Production Upturn In 1951

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 2. — Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric Co., predicted Wednesday the nation's industrial production will be rolling along at a high level again by the end of 1951.

There's nothing permanent about the current decline in output, Wilson said, and it won't be very drastic. The General Electric president estimated the slackening may continue until about the second quarter of 1950 before it turns upward.

But by the end of 1951, he said, industrial production may again reach the high level of 1948.

He anticipated a slackening of about 15 per cent from the fourth quarter of 1948 through the second quarter of 1950 and he gave three reasons why he felt it would not be more drastic than that.

"We lack the great speculative excesses in such areas of our economy as inventories and the stock market which featured the 1920, 1929 and 1937 setbacks," he said.

"Adjustments in the form of curtailed production, reduced prices and inventory control are already well along in some industries. The large and increasing volume of government expenditures for security and construction, government support of farm prices, and the anticipated federal deficit should cushion the decline."

He made his prediction at the second session of the Edison Electric Institute's three-day 17th annual convention.

Mother's Blood Stops Arthritis

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

NEW YORK, June 2. — The blood of mothers who have just had babies has stopped rheumatoid arthritis, cruelest of all forms of rheumatism.

This was reported to the seventh International Congress on Rheumatic Diseases Wednesday, by Dr. L. W. Granitz, of New York.

The relief, he said, was temporary but lasted sometimes from three to twelve weeks. Stiffened joints eased, pain and swellings went down.

The cause of this form of rheumatism is unknown, but in a Mayo Clinic report yesterday there was a possible explanation for the effectiveness of mother's blood.

The Mayo doctors and five other American medical centers have treated 20 persons with this form of arthritis, using a newly discovered hormone from the adrenal glands. Everyone got better.

Like those of mother's blood, they got better only temporarily, although one woman has been practically well for four months. The Mayo and mother's blood work tie together because during pregnancy woman produces more hormones.

At the Mayo Clinic one reason for trying the hormone was the known good effects of mother's blood. Blood carries all the hormones the body makes.

The new hormone is called Compound E, a discovery of Dr. Edward C. Kendall of the Mayo Clinic.

In the entire world, the Mayo men said, there is now only enough of this hormone to treat 20 human beings. Merck & Co., Rahway, N. J. manufactures it, and hopes by next year to have enough to treat some thousands. The making is partly synthetic, including 30 chemical steps, and at present quantity production is not possible.

Silent Coolness In Conditioners

Coolness with the silence of a mountain breeze is the product of a concern proud of the items which bear its name. Such is the result of Dearborn's evaporative coolers, offered in the Big Spring area by Smith Butane company at the juncture of the north end of the Lamesa highway and the city limits. For a long time Dearborn has been a familiar name where heaters are concerned. Now, in a move designed to stabilize year around employment for its experienced craftsmen, the Dearborn company has turned to the air conditioning field. With emphasis on quality—but with surprisingly attractive prices—Dearborn has turned out three basic models for use. Two employ the highly efficient squirrel cage type blowers. One of these models delivers 3,500 cubic feet of cooled air per minute—and yet it is unbelievably quiet. The heavy construction is responsible in part as is the rubber-mounted motor. But also a heavy metal disc in the center of the blower fins holds them firmly in place and minimizes vibrations. A smaller unit delivers 2,500 cubic feet of cooled air per minute. Another type utilizes the "air-are" window fan for blower and delivers 2,200 feet of cooled air per minute. This is ample for one large room or a small apartment. All units use an exclusive patented water distribution system, 100 per cent white aspen wood filter pads, perfect fitting side panels to seal out insects, dust and rain, have adjustable louvers for air control and the famous Dearborn copper-tone finish.

SOURCE UNDETERMINED
Salt Water Found On Wildcat Test

Salt water developed on a final drillstem test of the Snelair-Prarie No. 1 Sterling Williams, north-west Borden wildcat, Thursday, June 17. The test was from the same zone, 9,945-10,000 feet, which had previously returned 20.75 barrels in 30 minutes. The breakdown revealed 1,300 feet of salt water in the drill pipe. Source of the water was undetermined.

The pipe unloaded oil while being pulled. Operators then reamed the hole from 9,945 to 10,000 feet and resumed drilling. It is now below 10,005 and is to go to 10,025 for another drillstem test.

Many observers are skeptical that this wildcat is in the Ellenburger. A majority of geologists who are watching it think it likely is in the Devonian or Silurian-Devonian.

Location is 660 feet from the north and east lines of section 45-32-6n, ELARR, 11 miles northwest of Gall.

Seaboard No. 1 Clayton & Johnson, in section 37-31-6n, T&P, six miles northwest of Gall, drilled to 5,875 feet in shale. This test may assume added importance in view of the Snelair-Prarie No. 1 Williams showing.

In northeastern Borden county Ryan, Hays and Burke No. 1 W. H. Miller, center of the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 418-97, H&TC, projected for 8,500 feet, set 8 1/2-inch string at 2,704 feet with 250 sacks.

Southern Minerals Corp. No. 1 S. C. Houston, in the southeast quarter of section 13-36-2s, T&P, a 6,000-foot northern Glascock shale, spudded to 232 feet in shale and cemented 10 1/2-inch casing at 223 feet with 150 sacks.

New Consolidation Elections Planned By Mitchell Schools

Representatives of all Mitchell county schools will meet here Friday night in the office of County Superintendent Roy Davis Coles.

The meeting, said Charles C. Thompson, chairman of the county school board, will be for the purpose of working out plans for new consolidation elections or for annexations of certain common school districts.

Thompson pointed out that he is required under the newly enacted Gilmer-Aiken law to consolidate with or become annexed to active schools.

In a consolidation election involving eight common districts of the county and the Colorado City Independent school district, May 28, a tie vote in the community of Cuthbert apparently killed the consolidation effort in its first try-out with the voters.

Districts which voted on the issue of consolidating with the Colorado City Independent district were Buford, Hurst, Chapel Payne, Lowe, McKennie, Seven Wells, Fairview, and Cuthbert. The vote carried in eight of the nine districts concerned.

All districts except Buford and Seven Wells have been dormant for several years. Those two communities have continued to operate their primary and grammar schools.

Whether the districts will petition for new elections will be one of the first problems confronting the entire Mitchell county school system.

A consolidation vote, May 27, in the west part of the county joined four western districts with Westbrook to create the Westbrook Rural high school district.
