AWS OKs Pair Of New Resolutions

The Association of Women Students adopted two recommendations concerning campus coed policy Wednesday.

The first deals with the ruling on a coed's checking out to a local motel or hotel. In the past women students have been permitted to stay in a hotel with their parents, provided a parent signed for them at the residence hall.

The new policy provides that a coed can stay with any married relative or a friend's parents, provided her parents give written or telephone permission directly to the hall counselor and the relatives or friend's parents sign for her at the residence hall.

Wear Slacks

The second rule allows women residents to wear slacks in the dining halls during the day of no classes between Dead Week and finals.

Both recommendations came from the Women's Residence Council and will go into effect immediately.

Susan Wood, first vice president of AWS, said that any coeds having idea suggestions should give them to a wing advisor, who would turn them over to the dorm legislator. The legislator would send the idea to WRC, she said, which would consider it before making a recommendation to AWS. Final say on coed policies lies with the dean of women.

Donate Money

AWS also decided to donate money from its budget to the Tech Library. The money will be raised during the spring "penny-a-minute" night.

During the March 10 AWS meeting the group will hear officer nominations from the floor, and the final slate of nominees will be announced. Elections are set March 16; run-offs will be March 17.

Quilliam Action Fails To Save Law School

AUSTIN (AP) — Lubbock Rep. Reed Quilliam failed Wednesday to strike from the general appropriations bill a rider that would keep Texas Tech from starting a law school.

The Texas Commission on Higher Education approved a law school at the college, but no funds were included for it in the $3.57 billion House appropriations bill, which passed to the Senate.

The rider provides that no funds appropriated for faculty salaries may be spent for law faculty pay in law schools not in existence on Feb. 1.

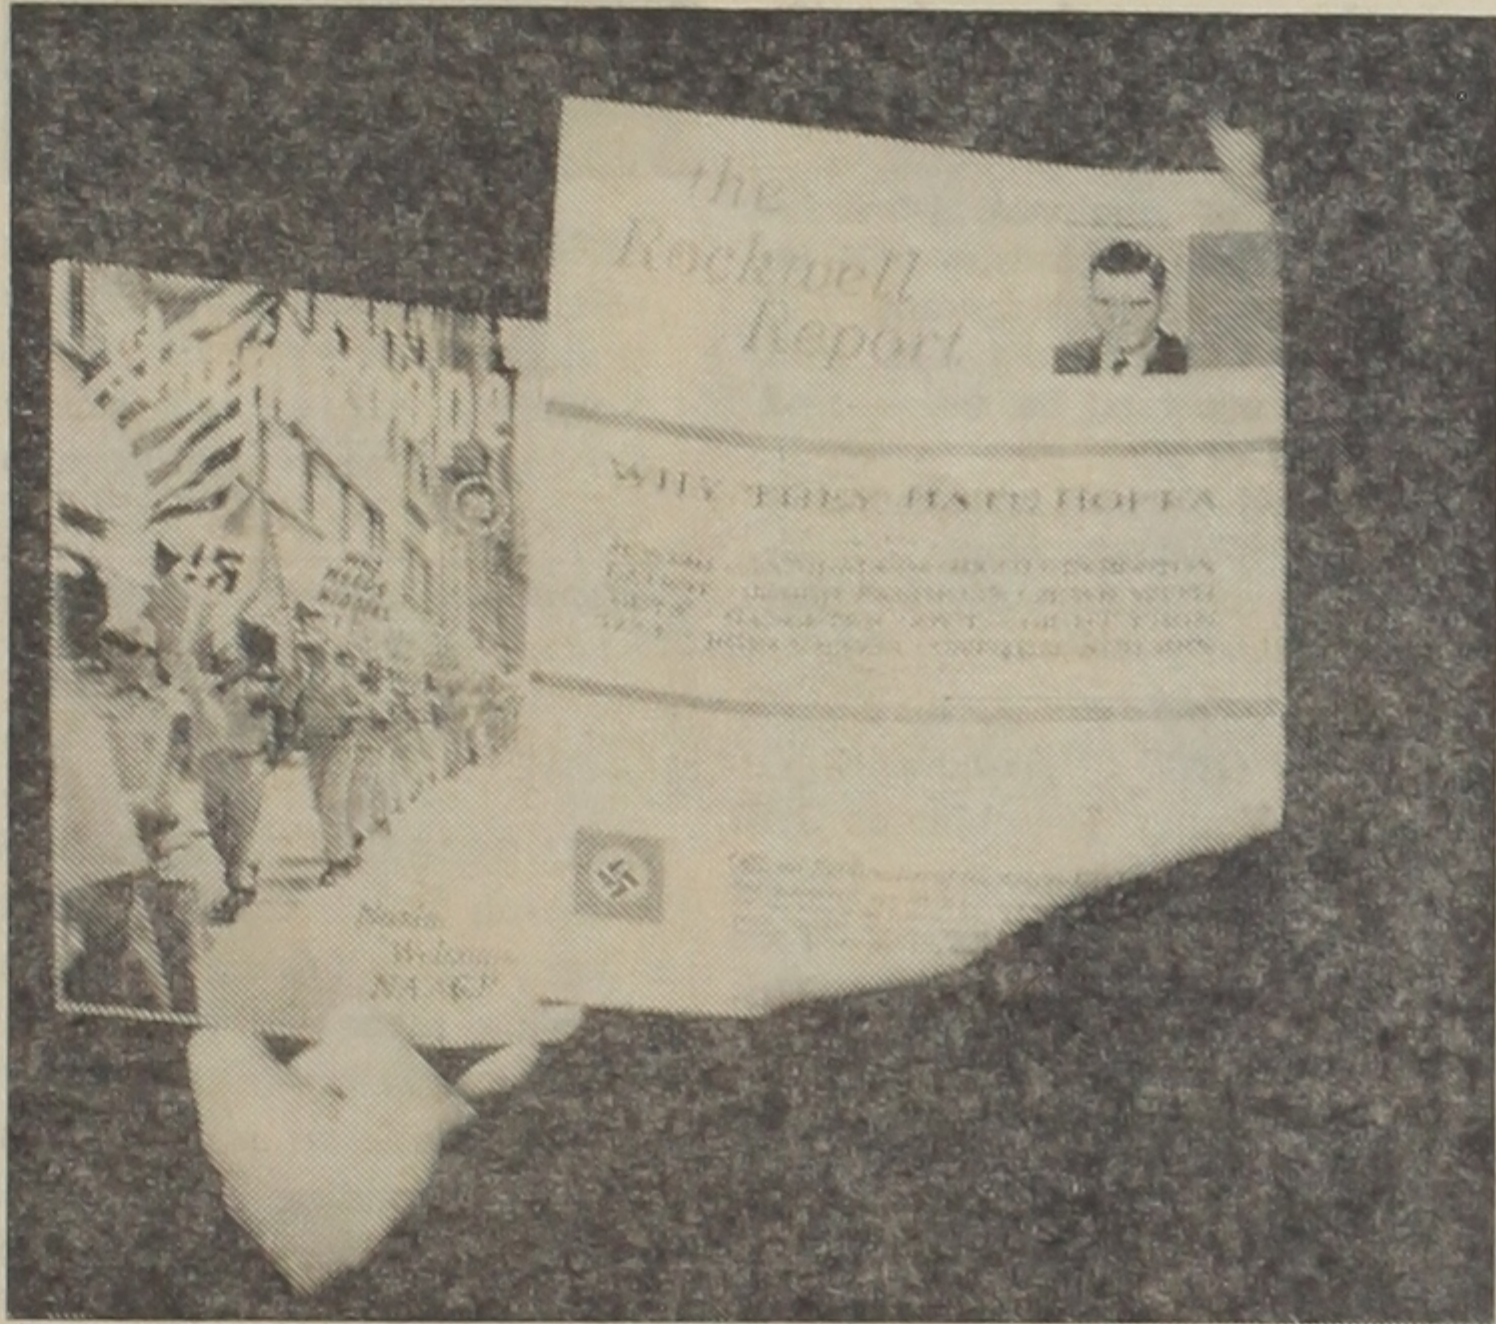

"There is no law school serving the western half of the state," said Quilliam. "We have the largest area in the United States without a law school."

Quilliam said Texas Tech's board of regents has been interviewing prospective law school deans, and "a lot of work has gone into it."

Rep. W. S. Heatly, sponsor of the bill, said 1,800 lawyers are graduated in Texas each year, and "we have a much greater need for veterinarians than lawyers."

Referring to Gov. John Connally's proposed new college coordinating board, which the House has approved, Heatly said "Let's let it decide whether they need a law school."

Quilliam's amendment striking the rider was tabled, 78-55.

NAZI PROPAGANDA — Students in all but one of Tech's men's dormitories have been receiving propaganda material from the American Nazi Party through the mails. The magazines and pamphlets are "anti-Jewish, anti-Negro" and call for "white supremacy."

Nazi Propaganda Material Infiltrates Campus Dorms

By MACK SISK
Staff Writer

A rash of propaganda material from the American Nazi Party has begun cropping up in the men's dormitories on campus.

So far every men's dorm on campus, but one, has received several issues of "The Rockwell Report," official publication of the American Nazi Party, and "Stormtrooper," another Nazi publication.

Sneed Hall was the only men's dorm "not aware of any" if they were being received through the mail.

The publications have been received by individual students in plain manila envelopes, apparently in a pattern planned to place one on each floor of each wing of every men's dorm.

None of the women's dorms have received any they are aware of.

Robert N. Lawrence, assistant government professor, described the American Nazi Party as "primarily anti-Jewish, secondarily anti-Negro, a religious and racial white-supremist group."

Postal Inspector A. A. Slingerland says that the literature itself does not violate postal laws.

Postal Authorities

Gary Sharp, freshman engineering major living in Gordon Hall, is the only Tech student who has turned his publication over to postal authorities.

Sharp said he turned it in because he plans to go into the service after graduation and should be checked for security clearance, he doesn't want any Nazi affiliation cropping up in his background.

Wednesday Sharp received a letter from the postal inspector in Fort Worth saying "... It does not appear to violate the postal laws. For that reason, an investigation of its mailing is not considered appropriate."

Picked At Random

Wells Hall supervisor Aubrey Lewis said that 15 or 20 students living in that dorm have turned in both kinds of publications to him. He said apparently the names are picked at random in order to place a few on each floor.

Slingerland said, "College students may be vulnerable for receiving this kind of literature and many of the organizations send-

Delegates Will Air Current Problems

The third annual Model United Nations will begin at 1 p.m. today when 360 Tech students, as "delegates" representing 77 countries, begin marshaling arguments in support of international policy issues.

This year's session will discuss charter revision and the Jordan River conflict.

John MacVane will speak on "Is the United Nations Doing Its Job?" at 10 a.m. Friday. The veteran newsman has reported United Nations news since the international organization's first meeting at Hunter College.

MacVane will arrive at the Lubbock Municipal Airport at 9 p.m. today. He will be the guest of honor at a coffee at 9 a.m. Friday. There will also be a noon luncheon Friday for MacVane, steering committee members and MUN advisors.

Open Session

MacVane's talk, as well as all sessions of the Model U.N., will be open to all students, faculty members and area citizens who would like to observe the delegates at work.

Two new committees have been set up for this year's MUN. The delegates have created the U.N. Truce Supervisory Commission and the Mixed Armistice Commission. The committees are patterned after committees in the United Nations. The former is set up to keep peace in Palestine and the latter is concerned with border disputes between Israel and Arab countries.

Keith Strain, Lubbock junior, explained the committees: "Last year we had a problem at the sessions because the delegates didn't know what was going to happen. For instance, the Albanian delegation added an amendment to the Nigerian resolution for the admission of Red China. Because the countries weren't prepared for it, they didn't know how to vote... its purpose was to kill the resolution."

"This isn't realistic. In the United Nations, the other countries know something like this is going to happen. This is the reason we have set up these committees," he said.

Only Meetings

In the past, there have been only bloc meetings between the countries in one area of the world—Asian bloc, Western bloc, etc.—and there was no inter-bloc cooperation. With the new committees, countries can find out what all of the delegations are planning.

The Security Council will be called in session sometime Friday. Jim Crawford, Tech Union public relations director, said specific plans for the sessions are tentative since the MUN will be as spontaneous as possible.

The General Assembly will convene from 1-5 p.m. today, from 10 a.m.-noon and from 1:30-5 p.m. Friday, from 9 a.m.-noon and from 1:30-3 p.m. Saturday. Sessions will be in the Union Ballroom.

Officers Set

Zafer Cetinkaya, Istanbul, Turkey, junior, is Secretary-General for this year's MUN. Lonnie Dillard, Lubbock sophomore, is president of the General Assembly and Sherrell Andrews, Houston sophomore, is secretary.

The General Assembly will be followed by an awards banquet at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Union Coronado Room.

No Early Seats For Friday Game

Due to a high school basketball tournament in the coliseum Friday, doors will not open for the Tech-TCU basketball game until 6:30 p.m. No freshman game will be played.

Luchsinger To Begin BSO Retreat Activities

DR. VINCENT LUCHSINGER

Dr. Vincent Luchsinger, associate economics professor, will deliver a talk on assessment and improvement of individual assets to begin activities for Board of Student Organizations retreat participants.

Luchsinger will deliver the talk at a dinner March 5 for delegates to the Santa Fe, N.M., retreat.

Delegates will leave Tech at noon March 5 after Luchsinger's talk, and will participate in discussion groups seeking methods to improve Tech's numerous organizations.

March 6, delegates will again engage in discussion groups and officers of BSO will be installed at a dinner that night.

March 7 the delegates will participate in a devotional and later a panel discussion. Delegates will return that afternoon.

PRE-MEDICAL SOCIETY

Members of the Pre-Medical Society tour Methodist Hospital at 7 p.m. today. Those attending should meet in the Chemistry Bldg., room C-2.

OPTIMATES

"Roman and Greek Mythology" will be the topic of discussion at the Optimates Club meeting at 7 p.m. today in the Ad Bldg., room 211.

Council Fills 3 Vacancies

The Student Council elected three representatives in a special fill-in election Wednesday, with a fourth to be determined in a run-off Friday. 443 ballots were cast.

Sinah Goode and Suzi Thompson earned the run-off positions with 55 and 34 votes, respectively. Others entered in the School of Arts and Sciences election were Ann Annette Brewer, 25 votes; Sid Banks, 20 votes; and Dwight Fullingim, 18.

School of Business Administration's two vacancies will be filled by Scott Gilmour, 148 votes, and Bill Beuck, 112. Phil Roberts received 60 votes, and Tom Fuller 43.

Richard Varnell was the only School of Engineering candidate, receiving 19 votes to gain the vacated position.

YOUNG REPUBLICANS

Tech's Young Republicans will feature Frank Cromley, Dallas county commissioner, at a 7:30 p.m. meeting today in the Union Coronado Room.

TECH DELEGATES — Dick Varnell, left, and Mark Wheless will represent the local American Institute of Industrial Engineers at a student conference at the University of Arkansas today through Saturday. Varnell will present a paper on "Magneform—A Tool for the Future in Use Now," and Wheless will present "Numerical Control—A Maturing Tool." —Staff Photo

By EASTMAN

At the end of a play extras in the audience boo. Actors dressed as policemen "machinegun" the audience.

Does this sound absurd? It should, as it is part of a new conception in theater called the Theater of the Absurd. The scene described above is from "The Bald Soprano" by Eugene Ionesco.

Ionesco had another idea for the ending of that play. When "Bald Soprano" was originally performed, the director, Nicholas Bataille, couldn't afford to pay for the additional actors the scene required.

As an alternative, Ionesco decided to let the maid announce, "The Author!" He would then appear, raise his fists and shout at the audience, "You bunch of crooks! I'll get you!"

There are other interesting things in "Bald Soprano." For instance, there is the clock that always indicates the opposite of the correct time.

Perhaps the best scene is the classic recognition between a married couple. After a feat of logical deduction, they conclude that as they seem to be living in the same street, the same house, the same floor, the same room, the same bed, they must necessarily be man and wife.

Incidentally, in "Bald Soprano," no soprano appears, and no bald person either.

Another play by Ionesco, "Jacques," tells the story of a young man who wants to be different. He is brought together with Roberte, a girl with two noses. However, two noses are not enough for Jacques. He wants three noses in his future wife.

Although Roberte is an only child, her family finds a way out—they produce a second only daughter, Roberte II, who has three noses. Jacques is still not happy, because she isn't ugly enough.

Ashby To Solo In Amarillo

Robert Clark Ashby, Tech senior, will be featured in a performance of the Boccerini Concerto for cello with the Amarillo Symphony Sunday at 4 p.m.

Ashby is presently first cellist and a student conductor with the Tech Symphony and assistant first cellist of the Midland-Odessa Symphony. He has also directed the choirs at John Knox Presbyterian Church and Reese Air Force Base Chapel.

He was a member of the Lubbock High School orchestra for three years, a former member of the Lubbock Symphony for six years, a former member of the Abilene Philharmonic and placed in the All-State High School Symphony.

However, she wins him with a speech about a dream in which little guinea pigs grow out of their mother at the bottom of a bathtub.

Weird? But there is meaning in the Theater of the Absurd, Martin Esslin, author of the book entitled "The Theater of the Absurd," explains "Jacques":

"Jacques submits to the irresistible animal lure of the sexual impulse. And it is this submission that is decisive. It is man's enslavement to the sexual instinct that forces him into the iron mold of bourgeois conformity."

This, of course, is only part of the meaning of the play. One thing about Theater of the Absurd: it leaves the meaning to the audience. Esslin classifies the Theater of the Absurd:

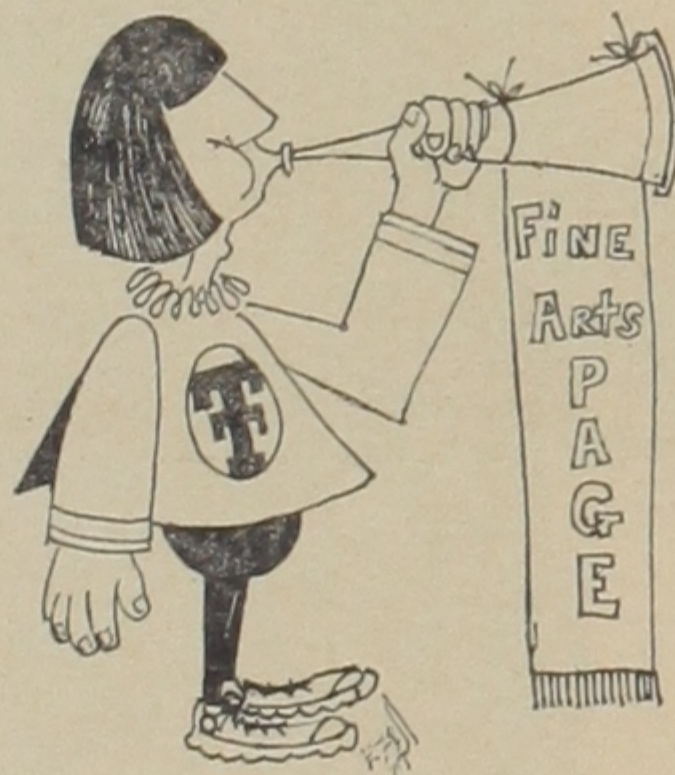

"Pure' theatre; i.e., abstract scenic effects as they are familiar in the circus or revue, in the work of jugglers, acrobats, bullfighters or mimes.

"Clowning, fooling and mad-scenes.

"Verbal nonsense.

"The literature of dream and fantasy, which often has a strong allegorical component."

A new concept in theater. A concept Esslin describes as, "An expression of the present situation of Western man."

JOSE GRECO — The master of Flamenco dance will appear in Lubbock March 18 for a concert at Municipal Auditorium.

Jose Greco To Present Concert Here March 18

Jose Greco, reigning master of Spanish costumes, made in Spain, were designed especially for the production.

The group recently completed a tour in South Africa. The performance is slated for Municipal Auditorium March 18. All seats are reserved; student tickets are $2 and others are $4 and $4.50. Tickets may be purchased at Varsity Bookstore.

Greco brings to America a new concept in the Spanish dance—an all gypsy-Flamenco program. Departing from the custom of past years, in which he presented an assortment of Spanish dances including classical, regional and folkloric patterns, he this year will have an all Flamenco program.

There are 25 performers in the company. According to Greco, artists such as these are usually reluctant to separate from families and make the journey to America, where they do not know the language and must adjust to new environment. However, Greco succeeded in securing them for the tour.

Other Performers

Besides Greco himself, the company includes prima ballerina Nana Lorca and featured soloists Maria Soso, Los Salaos, and Vicente Pastor (grandson of the bullfighter of the same name).

The production is staged and directed by Greco. Traditional

Cagers Return To Lubbock With Slim One Game Lead

The Texas Tech Red Raiders arrived back in Lubbock at approximately 4 p.m. yesterday from Waco where they had been stranded since Tuesday night.

After suffering an 88-86 setback at the hands of Baylor, Tech's departure for Lubbock was delayed by bad weather until noon Wednesday.

In the game Dub Malaise led all scorers with 31 points. However, Norman Reuther was close behind with 29 markers. Tech outscored the Bears 53-48 in the first half, but Baylor gained the advantage in the final half by posting 40 points to the Raiders' 33. Tech out-rebounded the Bears by nine grabs, 37-28.

The loss to Baylor cut the Raiders' lead to one game over Southern Methodist. The Mustangs whipped Rice 100-80 in Dallas to move their conference mark to 8-3. Tech is 9-2 for the current campaign.

In other conference games Texas A&M beat TCU 102-95 and Texas topped Arkansas 74-72.

Slim Chances

Both Baylor and Texas still have a mathematical chance to win the title. With 7-4 records, each could grab a share of the crown if Tech lost any two of its next three games and they won theirs. Texas A&M has a chance to tie for the top honors, but this chance is very slim. The Aggies would have to win all of their remaining games, and the other contenders would have to lose all of theirs.

Tech must still play TCU, Arkansas and A&M, while SMU tackles Baylor, A&M and Arkansas. Baylor must play SMU, Rice and Texas, and Texas has A&M, TCU and Baylor remaining.

Tech Swimmers Sink Texas A&M

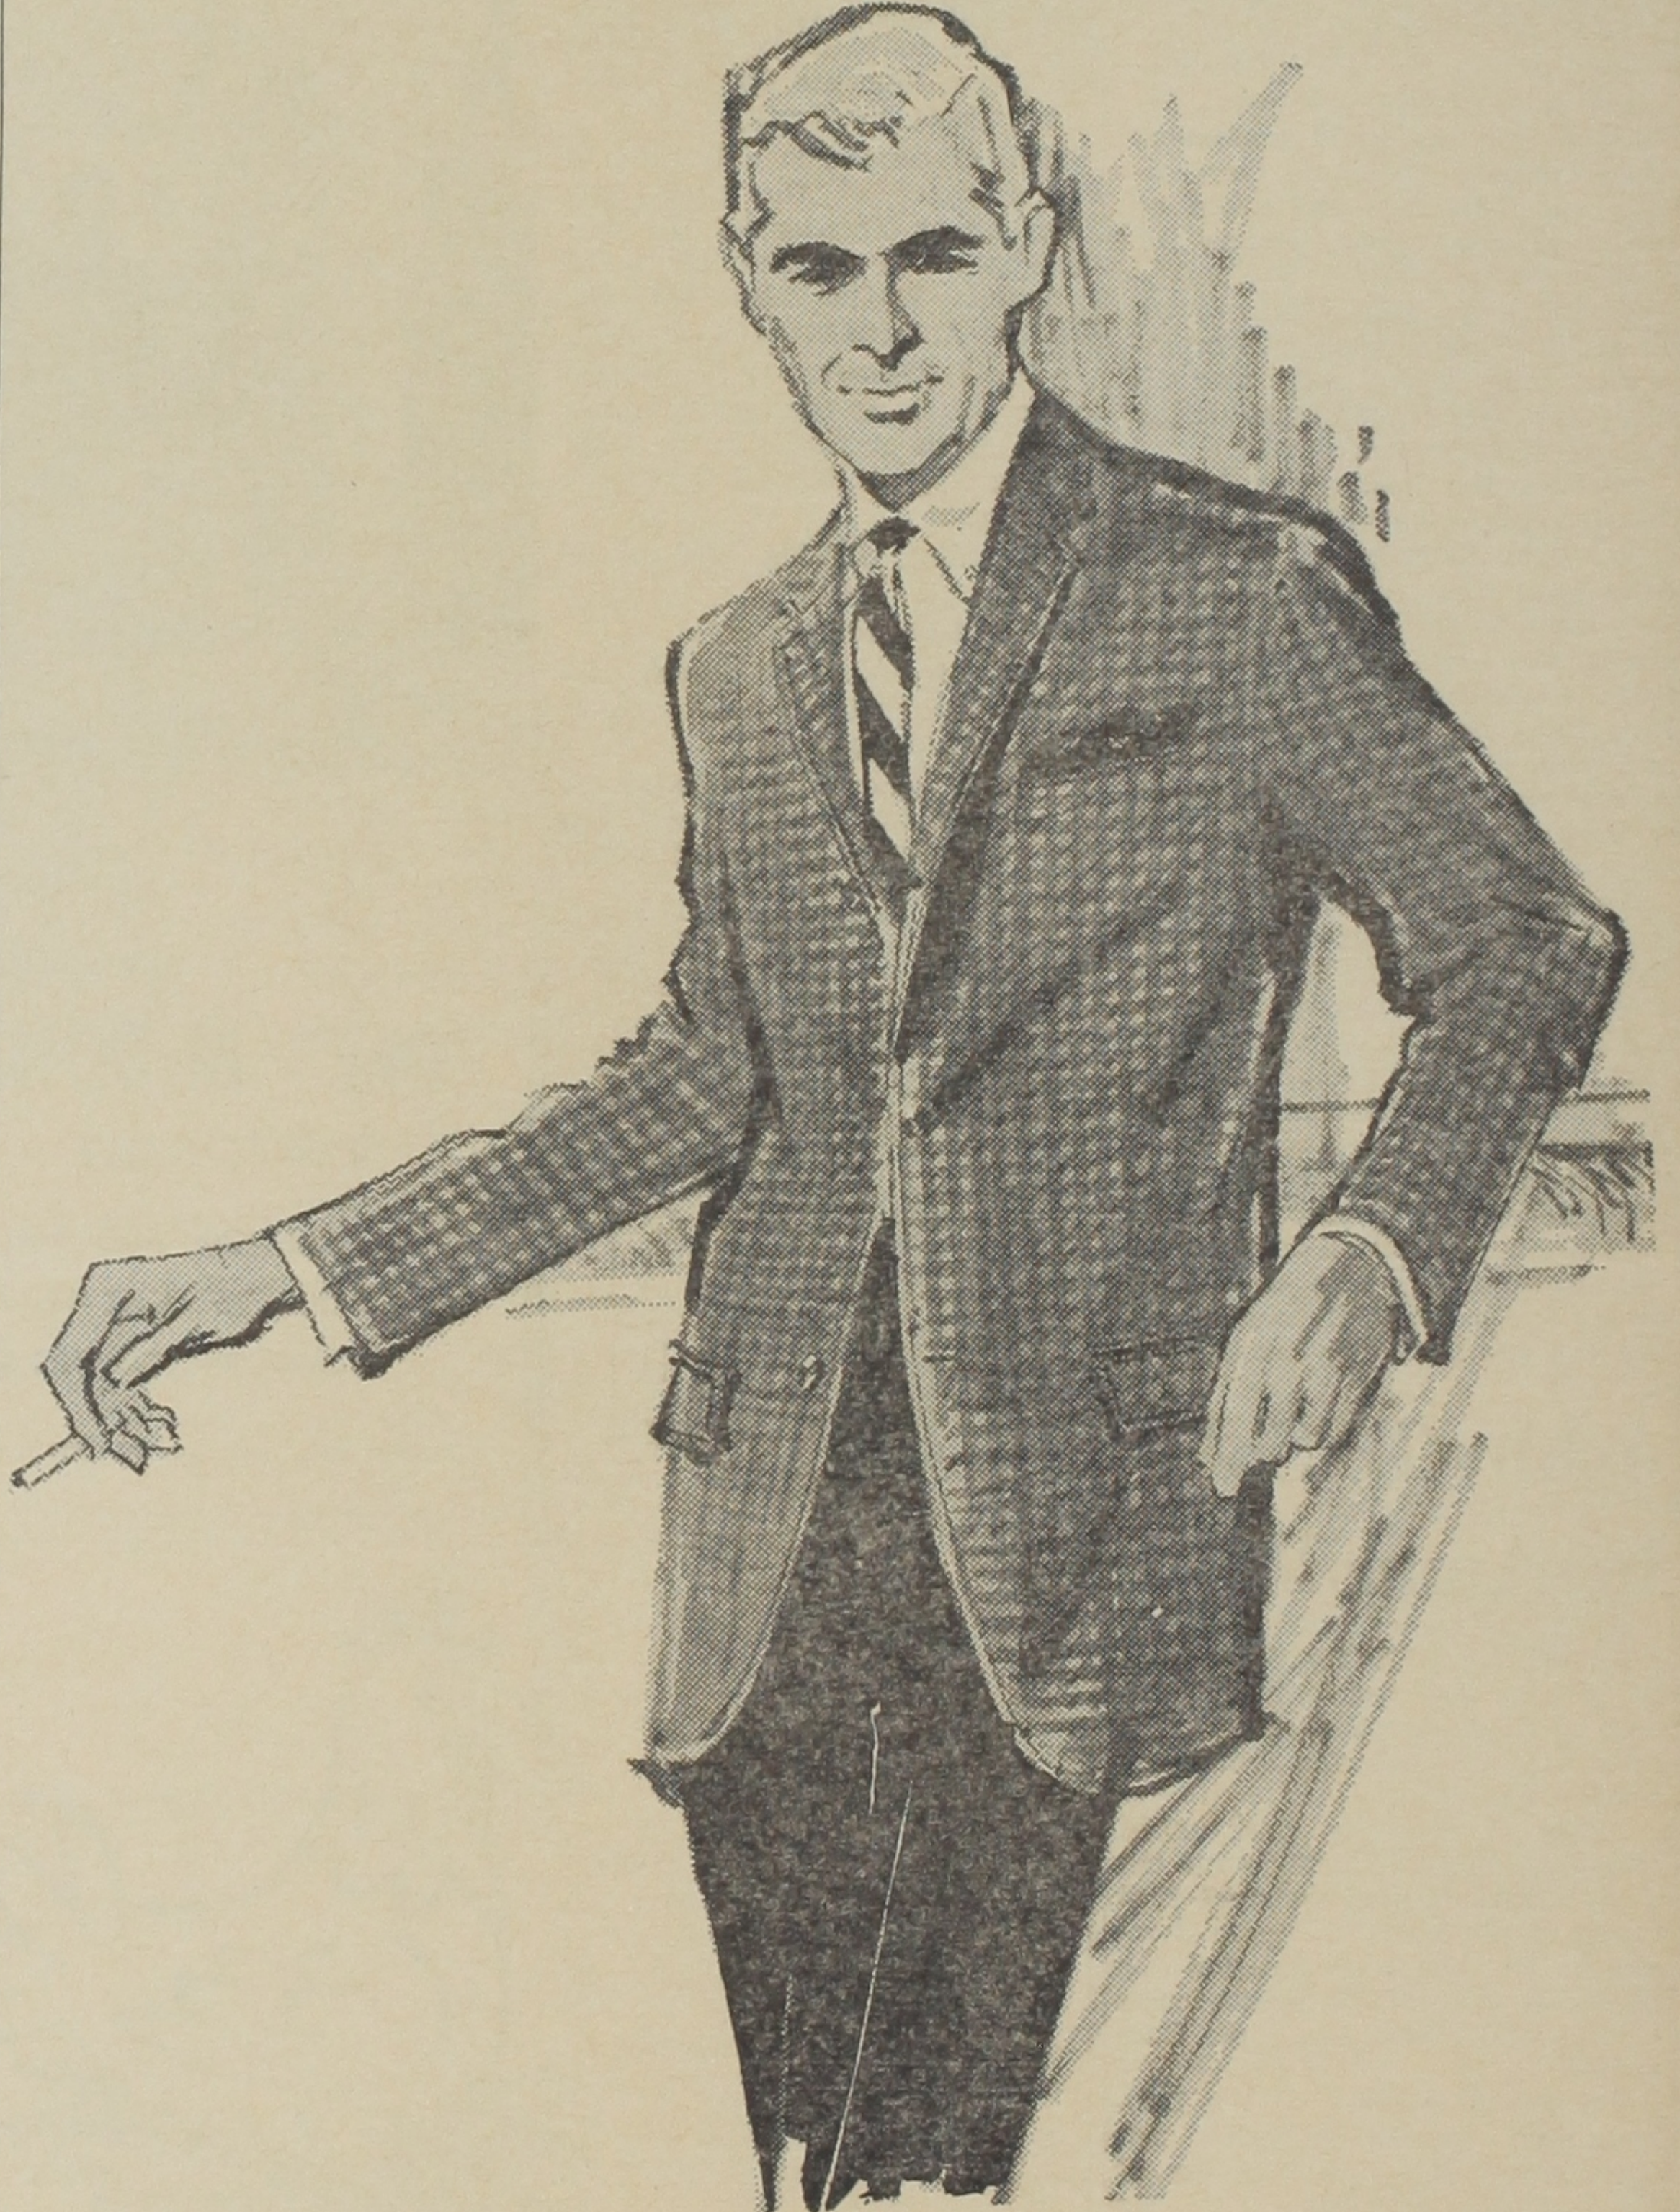

Texas Tech's swimming team swept nine of 11 first places in downing Texas A&M 64-30 Monday afternoon.

Jesse Marsh, Southwest Conference 3-meter diving champion, won his eighth consecutive first place, and teammate Robert Graham continued unbeaten through seven straight 50-yard freestyle competitions. Texas A&M's only firsts were Jerry Keating's victory in the 200 individual medley and Mike Offner's win in the 200 breast-stroke.

Tech's Phil Simpkins, who captured the 100 freestyle and swam on both winning relays, was high scorer with 8½ points.

Texas Tech next meets Colorado at Boulder Friday and Colorado State University at Fort Collins Saturday. The Red Raiders, 4-7 for the year, have one home meet remaining, with Eastern New Mexico University March 6.
