Board Would Give Power To Residents

By CECIL GREEN
Editor

A new plan is in the offering which, if approved by college officials, will give male dormitory residents a larger share in the making and administration of dorm rules.

The plan is the Resident Standards Board, and has been the object of extensive research by the Men's Residence Council this semester.

Originally proposed by the Dorm Supervisory Committee to give more responsibility to students, a board in each men's dormitory would have the power to hear and rule on student violations of residence hall rules and regulations.

A committee of the MRC, headed by Johnny Ramirez, Canadian junior, has been working out details of the proposal with the supervisory committee, composed of five dorm supervisors; Jess Parrish, the coordinator of men's supervision; and Lewis Jones, dean of men.

The composition of the board, as already approved by the joint committee, will include five regular members and three alternate members, all appointed by the elected presidents of each dorm.

However, all appointments have to be approved by a two-thirds vote of the hall council present at the second fall council meeting. Each hall council consists of the hall officers and the representatives of each wing.

Under this system, any student may file a report of violations of any dormitory rules listed in the MRC manual, the Code of Student Affairs, the college catalog or any posted hall rules.

The board would then have the power to hear each incident that involves a resident of the men's residence halls which takes place in or near the hall in which the board operates.

Under the present system, only wing advisors may file violation reports, and then, any disciplinary action is handled by the dorm supervisor or by the dean of men.

But under the board, any person or persons charged with violations will be given a hearing before the five board members and a representative of the dean of men. Any persons charged will have the opportunity to present witnesses or describe any corrections or alterations to the report.

The board will then be responsible for deciding what penalties, if any, should be handed out. However, only the five board members will have a vote, and the representative of the dean of men will serve as an advisor.

No exact penalties have been discussed by the coordinating committee as yet, but they will probably include either monetary forfeiture, constructive hall work, suspended fines, hall probation and/or referral to higher offices.

The committee is expected to discuss penalties and methods of appeal at their next meeting Monday.

The MRC currently wants all appeals to be directed to the Texas Tech Supreme Court instead of creating another judicial system to parallel the Supreme Court. All such appeals will follow already-existing procedures.

It is also proposed that any appeals from the Supreme Court can, if desired by the complainant, be made to the dean of men for final hearing and disposition.

Rodeo Activity Begins With Parade, Blocker

Throngs of interested on-lookers and throngs of not-so-interested traffic-jammed motorists witnessed the Tech Rodeo parade Thursday afternoon, a prelude to three days of cowboy and cowgirl activities.

Parade marshal was E. J. Holub, Tech all-American and now line-backer for the Kansas City Chiefs.

Featured in the parade was Miss Rebecca Ramsey, Tech sophomore from El Campo. Miss Ramsey holds the titles of 1964 Miss Rodeo Texas, runner-up Miss Rodeo America, 1964 National Intercollegiate Finals Queen and 1965 International Rodeo Queen.

Also featured in the parade was Dan Blocker better known as Hoss Cartwright of "Bonanza" TV fame. Blocker will make appearances at all rodeo performances.

There were nine riding clubs and sheriff's posses from South Plains towns. The parade consisted of 25 units including the high school bands from O'Donnell and Friendship.

Highlight of the Thursday night performance was the crowning of the 1965 Tech Rodeo Queen. She was chosen from a field of six finalists: Myfie White, San Antonio sophomore; Jan Yates, San Saba freshman; Sugie Gayle, West Columbia sophomore; Diana Cahill, Sonora freshman; Meg Garland, Fort Worth freshman and Suzy Ferrell, Lubbock freshman.

Tech is competing with 11 other college rodeo organizations for points towards the championship of the Southwest region of the national Intercollegiate Rodeo Association. The points will count toward qualifications in the national finals slated this summer in Laramie, Wyo.

One-hundred seventy participants come from these schools: Eastern New Mexico State University, Sul Ross, New Mexico State University, South Plains College, Midwestern University, Oklahoma State University, Panhandle A&M College, Hardin - Simmons University and Texas Western State University.

Events for men will include bull riding, bareback and saddle bronc riding, tie-down calf roping, steer wrestling and ribbon roping.

Night performances begin at 8 p.m. with a Saturday matinee performance slated for 2 p.m.

South Rises Again

Yankees take heed, for the Confederacy, complete with secession speech, horses, military costumes and beards, will rise again Friday afternoon.

Such will be the case at 4:45 p.m. in front of the Tech Union when Kappa Alpha Order reaches the mid-point of its parade in preparation for the fraternity's annual "Old South" ball, scheduled Saturday night.

The parade begins in front of the KA lodge on Broadway, continues around Memorial Circle, stops at the Union and concludes back at the lodge.

Tech Dames To Get Degrees

By PAULA HOOD
Staff Writer

Thirty-seven young women will be awarded one of the toughest degrees there is to earn at Texas Tech Monday night.

The degree is that of P. H. T., commonly known as Putting Husband Through School.

It is awarded to members of Tech Dames, a club for wives of students, whose husbands are graduating this year. Marshall Pennington, vice president of business affairs, will present diplomas to the wives who will wear caps and gowns at the ceremony at 7:30 p.m. in the garden room of St. (Mac) McAlister of KSEL will speak.

Graduates

Graduates are Mmes. Lonita Beaty, Delonn Bowie, Pat Brownlee, Ann Cobalt, Sandra Dingle, Heavia Doyle, Barbara Eckles, Nancy Fisher, Margaret Fritsche, Martha Gardenhire, Janice Green, Connie Hale, Beve Harper, Wilena Harry, Sue Herring, Gwyn Holden, Myrna Hollums, Paula Hood, Joyce Hunst, Linda Knight, Jo Ann Lancaster.

Carolyn Lawrence, Rosemary Longnecker, Nancy McDavid, Carol Ann Mabee, Peggy Meyers, Louise Mulkey, Sue Piland, Vickie Ratliff, Jerry Reams.

Beverly Robertson, Linda Wheelless and Ann Williamson.

The impressive-looking document is signed by Dr. R. C. Goodwin, Tech president. It congratulates the graduate on "Aiding, babying, consoling, loving, nagging, tutoring, pushing, shoving, and otherwise abetting in the pursuit of obtaining a baccalaureate degree."

Surprise Honor

Also at the ceremony a surprise honorary membership will be given to one of the chapter's friends. A distinguished graduate will also be named.

Officers for the 1965-66 year will be installed. They are Mrs. Wanda Lankford, president; Mrs. Betty Aldridge, first vice president; Mrs. Linda Davis, second vice president; Mrs. Linda Arnold, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Donna Gent, recording secretary; Mrs. Cheryl Dickerson, treasurer; Mrs. Carolyn Cantwell, historian; Mrs. Le Ann Prather, publicity director, and Mrs. Beth Arthur, parliamentarian.

Many of them have to work to help support the household. Some work and rear a family. Others work, take care of a family and go to Tech. With a restricting job and family, and a husband who is either at work or school or at home with his nose buried in a book she cannot understand or doesn't care about, the student wife can become pretty lonely.

The Dames come to their aid with a monthly meeting interest groups and other activities.

The monthly meeting features a program or speech. This year a marriage counselor, a success school operator, an artist and others spoke at the meetings.

Interest groups include a Slim 'n' Trim club, for those who enjoy and perhaps need exercise; bridge foursomes, from beginner to advanced and an arts and craft group, where knitting and other crafts can be learned.

RODEO PARADE — Tech's three-day rodeo activity was kicked off Friday afternoon with a parade down Broadway. Performances of the rodeo featuring Dan Blocker are at 8 p.m. tonight and at 2 and 8 p.m. Saturday.

CSC Coordinates Campus Projects

Campus organizations looking for a worthy cause and worthy causes looking for a campus organization have an agent to work through, the Campus Service Council.

The council was created to organize, supervise and coordinate campus service projects which are performed by volunteer organizations. Each of the service organizations is represented by membership on the council.

Membership in the Campus Service Council includes the Junior Council, an honorary organization for junior women; the Women's Service Organization; Alpha Phi Omega, a men's service organization; Circle K; Chi Rho, a Catholic men's service fraternity and the Saddle Tramps.

The council has already worked on a number of projects and is presently working on others. Dr. Paul Larson of the speech department needed some letters addressed. The Junior Council took the job and Dr. Larson's letters were mailed. They also worked on making the paper sacks with candles inside (luminarios) for street decoration during Homecoming.

Alpha Phi Omega also worked on the Homecoming decorations. Marking car accessories for both on and off campus cars as a protection against theft was also an Alpha Phi Omega project.

WSO was another organization working on the Homecoming luminarios. WSO members are now working for KTXT-FM on a project, cataloguing and filing of records.

WSO also helped in the planning for Dads' day and are now taking part in the planning of the Little 500 Bike Race.

Circle K, Chi Rho and Saddle Tramps have added their services in these various activities and others as a part of the functions of the Campus Service Council.

UNION FILM

Tech Union will present its select film, "The Quiet One," at 4 and 8 p.m. today in the Coronado Room. The film is the story of a young man who grows up without love and security. He becomes one of the "quiet ones" who build walls of silence around themselves to hide their conflicts, fear and bitterness.

SERVICE COUNCIL — Representatives of the several service organizations meet to discuss past projects and projects which can be done in the future. The Campus Service Council was formed to coordinate campus service projects.

Local Attitudes About Tech Vary From Time To Time

Give 'Em A Try...

THINGS ARE GOING TO BE different around Texas Tech next fall, but only if students start taking a more active interest.

And there's going to be a lot to do next year. Witness, for example, the new Student Association Constitution and its meaning.

Under this new constitution, essentially a revision of the old Student Council, more students will have the opportunity to take a hand in the affairs of state here.

This new organization will divide student government into three branches, much like the federal government. And, whereas the Council members formerly handled both legislative and executive posts, the new Student Senators will work just with legislative matters next year.

That leaves a broad vista of executive jobs out in the cold. Or does it? President Roland Anderson is now taking applications for the executive posts.

This means that many students who have tried to enter student politics, but who didn't want to buck the fraternity—and sorority—backed candidates, can now serve their school in an important area.

These executive positions will involve all the jobs that were handled by Student Council committees in the past, including:

- Student Government Services Committees: freshman orientation, freshman advisory clinic, summer employment and current events.
- Student Affairs Committees: homecoming, rodeo council, student organizations, traffic safety, traffic, college awards board, discipline, student welfare and publications.
- Public Relations Committees: SWC queens, sportsmanship, World University Service, TISA and ASG.
- Academic Affairs Committee: academic recruiting and academic evaluation.
- Student Athletic Affairs: Athletic Council, athletic recruiting and athletic seating.
- Board of Student Organizations.

Surely among all these future jobs, there is at least one that suits your particular interests and ambitions. Give them a try; you'll be welcome.

News Editor

One of the most important factors governing the environment of a university is the attitude of local citizens toward the school and toward higher education generally.

West Texans' attitudes on both these are currently undergoing changes which will affect the future of Texas Tech.

Charles Guy, editor of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, said, "The average West Texan feels students should learn, but not be indoctrinated."

A government teacher here spoke of an "inherent anti-intellectualism" in the area, while Dr. F. W. Maddox, president of Lubbock Christian College, said the teaching profession is respected here, though not enough.

In an effort to obtain a true picture of these attitudes, one thing which must be examined is the "image" of the teacher. Two facts then become apparent about this area's attitudes: (1) the teaching profession is not as respected here as it is in some other areas, and (2) it is gaining greater respect all the time.

Maddox said teachers do not have the prestige they deserve anywhere in the country, but he attributed part of this lack to bad public relations on the part of the profession. He said a teacher should be afforded the same position in society enjoyed by medical doctors.

An official high in the local public school system said there was a high regard for the public school teacher on the part of most people, but some wonder if college education hasn't lost sight of its purpose. He said he thought the profession as a whole enjoyed more prestige than did individuals within it.

Another important idea is that of the position students and teachers should take in relation to the rest of the college.

R. C. Goodwin, Tech president, said, "Constructive criticism is everyone's right." Is this true, or should student and teacher criticism be restricted?

There seems to be a growing feeling that the teacher deserves a part in the policy-making machinery of his school, but the student's place in this area is questioned.

Said R. B. "Mac" McAlister, owner of radio station KSEL, "The teacher has a tremendous responsibility, not only to impart information, but also to stimulate students to look for their own answers. He also has a tremendous influence, good or bad. Such a person should certainly have a voice in decisions affecting his school."

Guy, asked about the teacher's right to criticize his superiors, said, "Criticism depends on whether it's a public matter and how it's done."

Maddox said the teacher should have a part in policy-making.

Students are considered in a different light, with opinions usually following one of two basic lines. Citizens either think the student is not capable of taking part or they think he could in some instances if he were better informed and/or more mature.

Maddox said that if a student body were well-informed, its opinions should be considered. He said he "worried about the maturity of some students."

Guy applied the same rule to students which he had to teachers in respect to criticism. Public school officials feel that the student should be given more freedom as he matures, but they often express concern about "frequent abuse of the freedom."

Of course, there is a more intangible factor which helps govern student opinion and action. John Moeser studied this in an article in the April 29 Toreador.

He said the conservation of West

Texas is spurred a great deal by the agricultural economy. Therefore, "the people have a tendency to shun progressive liberal thinking because . . . the 'stable' environment might be at stake."

He continued, "This willingness . . . to cling to the existing situation largely explains the apathy which exists on the Tech campus."

Opinions on another vital aspect of university life take on a very cautious tone. The issue is controversial off-campus speakers and the opinions range from a frank "Don't allow them on campus," to a cautious "Great care should be taken about how ideas are presented."

McAlister said, "There's nothing wrong with exposing students with the right upbringing and a good dose of patriotism to conflicting ideas. It can often undergird the strength of their beliefs."

Guy said, "The average youngster, 17 to 21 years old, is not mature. You can't turn some monkey loose on them."

Maddox said, "I wouldn't mind having a communist on our campus if we could put him in a panel or forum where he could be argued with."

Healthy controversy is another part of the "staff of life" for a campus. Most West Texans, like most humans, however, tend to shy away from controversy. It is human nature to stick to status quo if possible.

Said a Lubbock car dealer last spring when he was asked about the name-change controversy, "You kids shouldn't stir up trouble over this. You're just going to hurt Tech's appropriations."

However, Maddox said, "Truth was never hurt by an open forum if it was represented in that forum."

The name-change issue has been a good barometer of local feelings about Tech specifically for the past two years.

A poll conducted last spring during pre-election time showed a marked reluctance on the part of many prominent Lubbockites to have their names used.

Two townspeople, one a high official of the Chamber of Commerce, told how important Tech is to Lubbock, but said they would rather not comment on the name change because they graduated from other schools. The name it-

"Welcome to the University Sandbox."

★ ★ ★ ★

This publication has been pretty hard on certain people concerned with this campus in the last couple of years. Most caustic comment has been reserved for the Board and Administration, but I'm beginning to wonder if it's not time to apply the penjabs in some other areas.

★ ★ ★ ★

On April 20, the last Student Council met; and among matters considered was a report on dorm food service. The report was rejected on the basis that it "patted the Food Service on the back."

The discussion included such statements as:

"I question the committee's favorable report . . . when students have reached the 'boiling point' on the question," said Roland Anderson.

Kent Hance, vice president of the Student Body and a member of the Food Committee, said the report made the Council look as if it "rubber stamps" anything that may offend the administration. He said rejection was necessary to show the students that the council was not working with the administration.

Now look, people! First of all, it was a council committee! Next of all, Hance was a member of the committee, so you'd think he helped draft the report. True, he may have dissented during the drafting, but my big gripe is his last point.

When I was a little boy, we had a sort of half-play-half-war game that went something like this: "Whatever you do, I disagree with it because I don't like you!"

A lot of people think students at Tech are immature.

A lot of people think student government is a farce.

And when things like this occur, a lot of these opinions are strengthened. I don't know what the "students" Mr. Hance is worried about think, but I know that if the student body's representatives aren't "working with the administration," they should be.

One of the major things wrong with this place now is that everyone concerned with it thinks he's the only one who could possibly be right.

Frankly, Mr. Hance's ideas bring to mind a statement of another person who is supposed to be concerned with Tech's best interests.

Last December, J. Wright Armstrong, chairman of the Board of Directors, said the Board couldn't compromise on the name-change because it might look like they were "backing down."

"Backing down", "rubber stamps"—why don't we all forget about our "university" and go out and fight in the sandbox!

 self did not mean much to them, even though they thought the school so important.
 The poll showed how uniformed even prominent people are on the issue. Most had heard of only two names—Texas State University and Texas Tech University.
 Another survey made last February after Governor John Connally proposed his "university systems," showed only four of 30 people contacted who knew or would say anything at all about the situation.

According to one Tech professor who was active in last year's presidential campaign, this attitude is going to change, simply because it is becoming financially unprofitable.

"Gov. Connally has told Texans in effect that if they want to catch up to California and Illinois and some other places industrially or otherwise, they're going to have to ride the coattails of higher education."

"The systems thing has hit the Double T people and the just plain apathetic people in the pocket-book."

Others say the way in which local attitudes are transmitted to Tech will change as Connally fills vacancies on the Board of Directors with more liberal-minded men. They say these men will not feel so strong an urge to maintain previous concepts about the school.

The name change may seem a long way from academic freedom and attitudes toward education, but it is a live issue and a good barometer.

The Double T is becoming financially impractical in many local minds, so changes seem certain in attitudes toward "traditions." As this changes, it may very well, as one teacher put it, "carry in loco parentis and some Victorian child-rearing ideas down with it." That is to say, as the image of this school changes, ideas about the way it should be run may change also.

Another teacher spoke of the change in power distribution. "The same basic ideas and system have run this school and this town for 30 or 40 years. The power is just beginning to move into the hands of younger, different thinking men."

But perhaps Mac McAlister had the best idea.

"Tech belongs to the future," he said, "not to the past."

U.S. Open Golf Championship Draws Near Record Entries

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1965 U.S. Open Golf Championship drew 2,305 entries — nearly 200 short of a record — the United States Golf Association revealed Thursday. But advance interest in the tournament has been so great that the USGA already has put a limit on the number of spectators who will be allowed to watch the proceedings.

The Open will be played at the Bellerive Country Club, St. Louis, June 17-20. The USGA said the number of paying spectators will be limited to 20,000 each day to insure suitable viewing space.

Most of the players will be required to qualify in 36-hole local tests at 58 locations May 24-25. About 20 per cent of the entrants are exempt from local qualifying. Sectional qualifying rounds, from which 25 players are exempt, will be played at 13 locations June 7-8.

BITS 'N SPURS IN SPORTS

By TEX ROGERS

There has to be a change every once in a while, like the kid with the dirty diapers. So, I am the change in the Toreador sports staff.

Introductory columns are usually dry and consist of nothing but the writer's history, gripes and merits. Therefore, I will cut the introduction short and go into sports at Texas Tech.

However, I must be honest and admit that part of my previous education was obtained on the banks of the Brazos at College Station. But fortunately that place is far removed from West Texas.

Tech is new to me, this being my first semester here, and I'm glad to be a part of this university on the Plains. And, I am pleased to be associated with the Texas Tech athletic department, because it is the dawn of a great era in sports for the Red Raiders.

Sportswise, Tech, under the direction of dedicated coaches and athletes, is building an athletic power in the Southwest that can compete with the entire nation in every sport.

Therefore, The Toreador sports staff has the awesome task of reporting the facts in all phases of Tech athletics as accurately and colorfully as possible. We feel it is our duty to cover the campus as completely as time and space will permit.

That means Toreador readers will have a full-time sports editor, one who believes in writing for and about the students of Texas Tech.

Sports are looking up here, and athletic officials can envision strong finishes in football and basketball. The golf and tennis teams are also fairing well, giving Tech a reputation in the spring sports.

The athletic revolution is here, and it will be up to Toreador sports to keep up with it, if not ahead. And I'm sure it will be a pleasure writing about Tech athletics in the future, as it was for other sports writers in recent years.
