Two County Men Hurt in Lake Scuffle

Two Coleman County men were in stable condition at Humana Hospital-Abilene Monday after a shooting and stabbing incident Saturday night at Lake Santa Anna.

Between ten and fifteen people were injured in an argument that eventually resulted in one man being shot and three others getting stabbed, a spokesman for the Coleman County Sheriff's Office said.

Joe Guerrero Jr., 25, had been removed from the intensive care unit and was in stable condition Sunday, suffering from a gunshot wound, a nursing supervisor said. The News received word Tuesday that Joe Guerrero, Jr. will probably be moved later in the week, to a Dallas hospital, for further treatment.

Guerrero was standing in the shallow part of the lake with some friends when he was shot in the face with a single blast from a .410-gauge shotgun, according to reports from the sheriff's office spokesman and Santa Anna Police Chief Bill Allen.

Two men, Rob Kuykendall and Glen Kuykendall, tried to take the gun away from a third man, Sidney Jones, and a scuffle with a knife and shovel ensued, authorities said.

Jones, 35, was being treated at Humana with stab wounds, the nursing supervisor said. One man was admitted to Overall-Morris Memorial Hospital with minor stab wounds and another was treated and released, the sheriff's department spokesman said.

Both Guerrero and Jones were taken to the Coleman hospital, then transferred to Abilene by ambulance, officials said.

Police and sheriff's department officials said they are continuing to investigate the incident.

Police Chief Bill Allen of Santa Anna said that the lake camping area will remain closed to the public until all evidence is collected.

Other local police activities has been a report of a stolen school bus from Robnett's Garage. The bus was driven past the cemetery and the driver then attempted to turn the bus around. The driver got the bus stuck in the ditch and left the bus there until found.

There was also some vandalism at Ione Caton's house at 1203 Mahoney. The vandals were ages 5, 6, 7 and 9. Boxes were dumped, but nothing appeared to have been stolen.

Police Chief Bill Allen stated that police activity has been relatively quiet, especially on the fourth of July. Most of the town went out of town for the holiday.

Watermelon Bust a Success

Rod Musick, member of the Chamber of Commerce kept watermelon cut and ready for eating. The watermelon was ice cold and good eating for all who attended. See more pictures inside.

The Watermelon Bust last Friday was a good fun time. The watermelon was good, the visiting was good, and the kids had a good time playing at the park. If you missed coming, you sure missed good, cold watermelon and good, clean fun.

At the Watermelon Bust the Chamber of Commerce also took donations for a pothole repair fund. The Chamber is hoping the city will match what is collected. Those donating were: Danny Kellar, Texican, Susie Voss, Rod Musick, Joe Guerrero, Harry Crews, Henry Sorrells, Era Walters, Lucille Wylie, R. W. Balke, D. D. and Pat Wright, Gwen Walker and Mike Pritchard. The Chamber would like to thank these people for donating and any other donations of either money or labor would be appreciated.

The first work day will be held August 10 and anyone wishing to work should show up at the armory at 8 a.m.

Alys Pelton Contestant for Texas Miss T.E.E.N.

Alys Pelton

Miss Alys Pelton, age 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. (Tex) Wright

Real quotes of my children's sayings: My little son, age 4, said, "Mother, when I lay on this side something in my ear says tick, tick, tick." I said, "Well, I wonder what it could be." He answered, "Oh, I guess it's just my ear beating its drum."

Another little son, Boyd, came running in and cried, "Mother, something killed a chicken out here in the yard and chicken leaves are just everywhere."

Little Bobby came in the house crying and told his mother that he heard an old snake a trottin' through the bushes.

We had a few goats and my husband was talking about selling some of the kids. I said, "Oh, I hope we don't have to sell any of the kids. Our son, Dalton, playing near by came over looking very serious and worriedly exclaimed, "Are you thinking about selling us?"

If you have never had a battle with a computer, you do not know what kind of a headache you can get! Well this past two weeks, I have learned the kind of headache you can get, a severe migraine!

Everything we have typeset these past two weeks has been lost on the computer here at the News. The computer here has gone haywire and the editor (myself) has been having to go to either Brownwood or Bangs to do my work. Such an inconvenience.

So, please bear with us if you find a mistake. Working in a different office and atmosphere is not easy, in fact it is very difficult. At Brownwood, they are trying to get their work done, and look at an outsider as if you are in their way. At Bangs, you always have to wait your turn for the machine, as there are three other people working there as well.

The United Methodist Church was so honored to have in worship with us Opal Riley's granddaughter, Cathy Caldwell, who is a sophomore at Texas Tech in Lubbock, also Lucille Smith had a niece, Helen Beall from North Carolina, also Christ Denehal and Ginny from San Angelo.

Five-year-old Michael Donham came to his grandmother in great excitement, "Grandmother, come out here, I want to show you something." It was a small bull-snake about a foot long.

"Isn't it cute," said Michael. "Yes, it's cute. But you must never touch a snake. This one won't hurt you, but you might find a rattlesnake sometime, and they bite." Michael wanted to reassure Carmen, "I picked this one up and shook it," he said. "And it didn't rattle."

They Came In Peace

by Leona Bruce

(Editors note: This is the fourth book of Central Texas history by Leona Bruce. In preparation for the 1986 Sesquicentennial, Mrs. Bruce has waived her copyright and permits this series of Coleman County stories to be published. All her books are out of print except two.)

CHAPTER 8 A LOGE HOUSE IN THE GAP

In the early '70's, and perhaps the late '60's, a stage line from Fort Worth to Yuma, Arizona, was formed, with stopping places, or "stands," about twenty miles apart. The line entered Coleman County at Turkey Water on Mud Creek, a big pool which never goes dry, went a little southwest to stay on rolling prairie, and ran north of Bead Mountain and on to cross the Colorado near where Ballinger now is.

A stand at Turkey Water was owned by W. W. Hunter, who was helped in its operation by his son, John; some oldtimers claim that there was another stand about six miles west of Coleman, but this writer has never seen the authority for this. However, there was a stand north of Bead Mountain, which will be discussed at some length later in this book, a more logical site, as the little mules were able to run at good speed from one stop to another and this distance was about that required.

This line roughly followed the telegraph line from Fort Worth to Fort Concho, which by this time had steel poles to replace the logs which the Indians persistently burned. The only piece of these steel poles known to this writer is owned by John Bomar of Valera, who now owns the site of the stage stand at Bead Mountain.

At Turkey Water, W. W. Hunter had a comfortable log home. The corral of the stage stand had several sheds, one of which contained articles for sale to travelers or settlers. His wife was the former Lou Fiveash from down on the Mukewater, daughter of Enoch Fiveash.

In 1877, an ox-drawn wagon came along the trail, crossing the creek at Turkey Water; J. C. Walton, his brother, William, their wives and children and their aged mother, Susan Hardin Stith Walton, all had come from Jasper County, Missouri, the year before. They stopped on beautiful Salado Creek in Bell County for a year, then headed northwest. William and his family liked Hamilton County and located there, but J. C., his family and his mother pushed on westward.

The Waltons had been rich before the Civil War. The two brothers joined the Confederate army, and while they were away, a troop of Union soldiers shot the father as he stood in the front door of his fine plantation house. The home was not burned, and most of the contents were left by the Yankees; but after the boys returned, the disorders and hatreds left from the divided loyalties of the Missourians made life dangerous, there was no money to pay taxes on the land or to make a living. J. C. and his young wife, Louise, at last decided to go to Texas, where there might be dangers but at least there could be peace. They traded for two ox teams and wagons, packed supplies of food for a trip to Texas, and loaded on Louisa's organ and their nice feather beds, nearly all they had left of their former affluence. Walton knew that he could trade for their needs, and he bought a box of articles to take along, for trading.

The cabin on Mud Creek was small and crowded, with a dirt floor and a chimney of rocks, but even here, he found space for a small stock of things for sale to passengers on the stage, Rangers riding by, and other settlers. They were not far from the Hunter stage stand, and Walton soon saw that if he were farther away, and on a different trail, he could make more money. He had no horse, so he walked west along the stage line but turned south to the Santa Anna Mountains, where he found several springs of good water, plenty of game and grass, and a cattle trail from the south through the gap. Here he would build.

The family went into camp while he took the cabin apart and hauled it, log by log, to the new site. A scout of Texas Rangers camped at the mountain to watch for Indians, helped him raise the bigger timbers and he and the children put on a new roof. The passing trail herds bought everything he had for sale, the rich sandy soil would grow anything put into it, and they soon grew to love their home.

Louisa Walton was a musician, who loved to play her organ and sing; she taught all the children to sing well, including the twin baby girls, and what music they had! Travelers were glad to come there, and the little store prospered as the cattle drives grew in number and size. From this height, they could see the dust of the approaching herds for miles to the south. There was no store on this trail nearer than Trickham, nearly a day's walk for a herd, although there was a small rock cabin at the west end of the mountain which had been built by a squatter in 1873.

In 1879, a young man named W. C. Brooks came to the Walton store and offered a good price for it, which was accepted, and the Walton family went east across the Brown County line and bought a place on a creek, likely Clear Creek.

Friendly Indians were still in the country, probably Tonkaways, and they would go to any cabin begging food. Louisa Walton was not at all afraid of them, and usually divided with them whatever she had.

One day after they moved to Brown county, some Indian women, one of them with a baby in a shawl on her back, came to the new cabin asking for meat. All the settlers had smokehouses, where they thriftily salted or smoked a supply of meat each fall. This was in warm weather, and the meat was all used up, so Louisa took them to the smokehouse to show them that only a hambone or two still swung from the rafters. One of the women indicated with signs that they were good and she would like to have them.

As they were talking, a big worm fell off the bone into the dirt, and the woman picked it up and put it into the baby's mouth. The Walton children were horrified, and one of them, Mrs. Julia Catherine Wilson of Brown County, now 93 years old, has never forgotten the sight.

Along with W. C. Brooks to the Walton store came romance; Emrna Jane Walton was soon married to the Brook's son, William. The other Walton children were Hugh, who married Nora Hasty, Susan, who married Duke Herring, Martha, who married Franklin Rutledge, Ida May, who married Gordon Martin; and the twins Lula and Julia, who married John Swenson and Henry Blachley Wilson. This last son-in-law was known as Blache Wilson, a very unusual name, still remembered well here, and it is his widow who survives to this day (1969).

J. C. and Louisa Walton are buried in the Mukewater cemetery in Brown County, as are his mother, Susan Stith Walton, and several other members of the family.

One feels that a song never really dies, as Longfellow said in his poem. Emma Jane Wilson Brooks learned to sing and to play the organ as well as her mother did, and as soon as she was able, William bought her a new one for her own. When one knows the Brooks family of Bangs, most of them musicians and singers, one thinks of the work-worn hands of Louisa Walton, playing her organ with her little children singing around her on her dirt-floored cabin. Those sweet old songs seem to echo somewhere still, down the years.

King Reunion

The descendants of the late Lily and Arthur King of Rockwood, Texas met for their annual reunion at Camp Arrowhead on Lake Brownwood, July 19-21. Activities enjoyed by the family included: swimming, boating, water skiing, visiting, hiking, fossil hunting, dominoes, aerial darts, Trivia Pursuit, horseshoes and photography.

Saturday night a slide presentation was given by Artie Jean Sitterle on the Moore Family genealogy, the ancestors of Lily Stewardson King. The family history can be documented as far back as 1760 with the marriage of Selah Williams and James Moore of Southampton County, Virginia.

James Moore and a son, James Jr. both fought in the Revolutionary War, the elder Moore being killed in 1778. James Moore, Jr. moved to Enfield, North Carolina after the war and owned a plantation. Edwin L. Moore, one of James, Jr.'s eight children, and his family migrated from North Carolina to Rutersville, Texas near LaGrange in 1839. Edwin and his wife, Elizabeth, choose this area of Texas so their children, one being John C. C. Moore, could attend the Rutersville Methodist Preparatory College. John C. C. Moore served in the Civil War from 1862-1865.

In 1893, John C. C. and his wife, Louisa Dodson Moore and children moved to Santa Anna, Texas. It was here Artie May Moore met and married Arthur Stewardson. They had four daughters, Samie, Lily, Ada, and Artie Mae. Artie Moore Stewardson died in 1981. The presentation was concluded with an activity of Family Trivia Questions.

The meals for each day were prepared and served by different members of the family which included: Hearthal and Cummins Arnold of Oklahoma City and their granddaughter, Shannon Irvin of Choctaw, Oklahoma; Marjorie and Brian Harden of Houston, Texas and their daughter, Barbara Harden of Houston, and Carol Harden Kellison of Norman, Oklahoma; Opal and Trans King of McKinney, their son, Mark and his family, Elaine, Rhett and Brittany King of Dallas, Texas; Artie Jean and Gerald Sitterle of Houston, Texas and their daughters and families: Susan, Brock, Brian, and Derek Merritt of Dimmitt, Texas and Jill, Randy, Sid and John Jennings of Houston, Texas. Guests were Betty and Tom Norton of Bangs, Texas.

This is the fourth reunion held by the King family since the death of their mother in 1981.

Haynes Reunion

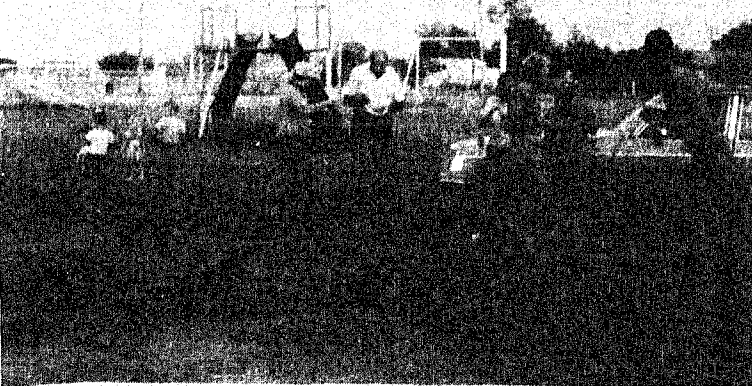

The 10th Annual Reunion of George and Goldie Welch Haynes was held July 26, 27 and 28 at Mountain View Lodge on Lake Brownwood with 44 in attendance. The group enjoyed good food of barbecue, fried chicken, hamburgers, home made ice cream, cakes, cookies, watermelon and cantaloupe.

Boating, skiing, soft ball, guitar playing, singing, picture taking, and visiting were part of the recreation. A devotional, singing and sharing time was led by James Haynes which was very inspiring.

Children attending were Dick and Wanda Titchen of Lovington, N. M.; Bobby and Connie Seals of Houston; James and Jackie Haynes of Smiley; Jerold and Carolyn Haynes of Houston; Wally and Jeanelle Permenter of Levelland; Al and Carol Faychak of Midland; David and Janice Kindel of Encinitas, Ca.

Capitol Update

George Orwell, in his 1940's novel titled "1984" made dire predictions of the power and authority the government would have by the year 1984 and suggested that "big brother" government would know all and see all and no citizen would have any private life.

These predictions are proving to be frighteningly correct in many areas. The latest and most pointed example is the commercial use of the information you and I provide to the Department of Public Safety in registering to get our driver's license.

For those of you have not read or heard of the "Open Records Act" forces the DPS to make this computerized information available upon request. Insurance companies are using this information to target persons over 65 for purposes of selling medicare supplement insurance. They obtain name, age and address from the computer and immediately know who would be prime customers for their insurance offering.

Another example is the targeting of young ladies 16-18 years of age for purposes of mass mailings soliciting entries into "beauty pageants." The uses to which this information is being put is almost endless.

I feel reasonably sure that when you last filled out the information to renew your driver's license, you did not intend for that information to be used as a sales tool to single you out because of age, height, race, weight or some other characteristic, as a potential customer for some commodity that would apply to your particular condition. Unfortunately, the DPS has no choice and when requests are made, accompanied by payment to cover costs, they have to furnish the material. The ultimate possible use of this information is really frightening.

The computer can categorize all females in the state below 5 feet 9 inches tall, can then correlate the weight of those females to their individual height, and can immediately determine those who are "overweight." The computer can even determine, within fairly exact bounds, the degree of obesity. You can readily see that such a group, bombarded with mass mailings, would be a prime candidate group of customers for a weight reduction scheme. Not to single out women, the same process can be used to categorize potential male consumer groups for an almost endless number of products.

This provides a shocking example of how our continuing demands for the public's "right to know" has affected an extremely important personal right we have in this country and this state, that being, quite simply, the blessed right to be left alone. We, as a people, are very much like a child with a handful of candy. Each time we attempt to grasp another piece of candy, a piece we have must necessarily slip through our fingers.

I would pose the question to you as to whether or not our recent headlong rush to secure civil rights has not, in reality, cost us a great number of very precious civil and personal rights.

Charlie Morgan on Team

An 11-hit attack and the effective pitching of Charlie Morgan proved a winning combination for San Angelo here Tuesday night as the visitors knocked off the Brownwood Bulls 7-3 to complete a sweep of the best-of-three District Hi-Junior Teenage baseball series.

The victory qualifies San Angelo for next week's state tournament.

For the record, a four-run first inning fashioned on four walks and two hits slammed the door on the Bulls' bid. They did narrow the deficit to 4-3 with a run in the second and two more in the third, but San Angelo scored the game's final three runs.

Singles by Shane Matlock and Mark Barkley and a San Angelo error chased in Brownwood's second inning run. The Bulls came back with two more in the third on singles by Jeff Head and David Jones, Billy Baker's double and a walk to Warren Price.

The Bulls finished with eight hits, including two by Head and Baker and one each by Jason Allred, Jones, Matlock, and Barkley.

Brownwood also got a sharp pitching performance from Barkley, who relieved Matlock with two out in the first inning.

While eight different players figured in San Angelo's 11-hit attack, the big gun was Mike Virden, who picked up two singles and a double.

Charlie Morgan is the son of Bobby and Lanell Morgan of San Angelo. Proud grandparents are Garland and Virgil Morgan of Santa Anna and Edna Anderson of Coleman is also his grandmother.

CONFUSING ARROWS

One of the most common symbols used on traffic signs is the arrow. However, less than half of the driving population understands the meaning of the colored traffic arrow.

Driving along the highways of Texas, one sees a variety of arrows along the way. On one sign is a WHITE arrow on a black background. Further along you see an ORANGE arrow on a black background. Still further down the road you come across a BLACK arrow on a yellow background. What do they mean?

"HANKERING"

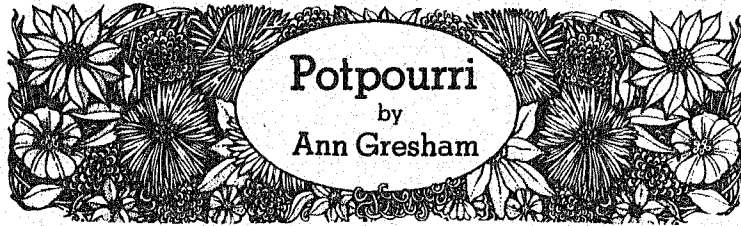

The only day in recent years that a person was not killed in a traffic accident in Texas was WEDNESDAY, January 5, 1977. When driving at high speeds and for long distances, the wind drag from rolled down car windows can decrease gasoline mileage as much as a car air conditioner.

A vehicle with a Disabled Veterans license plate MAY NOT park in a designated handicapped parking space unless it also displays a Disabled Person sticker or identification card.

ANSWERS TO QUIZ

- A. One-way sign—This regulatory sign directs traffic to travel in one direction only.
- B. Detour sign—This construction sign indicates an alternate route to follow from the highway.
- C. Sharp-turn sign—This is a warning sign to alert motorists to a very sharp turn in the road ahead.

Potpourri by Ann Gresham

It has been written that almost all of life is made up of journeys, beginning with our own departures from our parents' houses, continuing with the departings of our own sons and daughters, and on and on, until each of us takes our final journey.

In many respects, each embarkation upon a new journey brings a poignant air of sadness as we stand aside to watch loved ones take a step toward growing away. But the joy of new expectations most times outweighs the sadness while the anticipation of future gains through new experiences bring excitement to the moment.

Journeys mean new beginnings and new opportunities. Each journey will, however, oftentimes bring us back home again, whether it be in actuality or only in our memories. For after all, home is where the heart surely remains.

Helpful hints you've probably heard before, but might like to hear again:

1. Shoe bags are handy for many things besides shoes. You can hang one on the back of the pantry door for furniture polish, dust cloths, etc. And you can hang one over the seat of your car for a family trip, to hold toys, tissues, sun glasses, etc.
2. If you must drive a nail into a plaster wall, put a small bit of cellophane tape over the spot first. Then (usually) the plaster won't crack.
3. When you are creaming butter and sugar together, it's a good idea to rinse the bowl with boiling water first. They'll cream faster.

Aromas from the kitchen: If you're a potato lover and you thought you had just about exhausted all the ways to serve them, why not try this recipe:

Super Spuds

Give a good scrubbing to each potato (one medium sized spud per serving). Peel, if you like (they're delicious either way, but more nutritious when left unpeeled). Then slice each potato as though you were going to French fry it. Place on a square of foil large enough to fold up and seal the potato inside. But before you do, sprinkle the slices with seasoning salt and dot well with butter. Then fold up and seal the edges. Place the foil packets on a baking sheet in a 350 degree preheated oven and bake for approximately one hour. So-o-o good!

Green Thumb Gems: Give a house plant a good, long drink each time you water and it will never suffer damage from under-watering. You can water by three different methods:

1. Top watering - This is the fastest method. Use a long spouted watering can to push through the foliage and evenly soak the soil surface. And be sure not to water the foliage - only the soil. The moisture will eventually get back to the leaves. If you want, you can mist the leaves several times a week.
2. Watering from the bottom - immerse the pot to just below the soil line in a container of water. The water should be at room temperature. When the soil surface becomes moist and glistens with beads of water, the plant has had enough.
3. Wick watering - This method should be used only on plants requiring a constant supply of moisture. You can purchase a wick waterer, or you can make your own out of nylon pantyhose. A strip of pantyhose is inserted into a pot through a drainage hole and drawn up halfway into the pot. An equal amount of wick should extend below the pot. Then pot the plant as usual and fill a deep, wide saucer with clean pebbles and push the free end of the wick all the way down to the base of the saucer. Stand the pot on top of the pebbles and fill the saucer with water. Water the plant once from above and then water again from above only if the wick seems not to be working. Remember, the pot should be standing on top of the pebbles, not in the water.

This time next week when we greet you, we trust for a good rain which we need badly. It has been really hot in our community. Rather hard to really see how it could rain so much in Abilene (you can see rain standing in the streets on the News) and we do not get a drop. My daughter, Mrs. Patsy Smith of Abilene called Saturday and reported she had received 6 inches of rain for the entire week..
