COLLEGE STATION, Tex., Dec. 1.—A tract of six acres, adjacent to the Buckhorn experimental station near Temple, has been purchased by the Temple Chamber of Commerce at the cost of $1,200 and donated for growth and erosion and root rot studies being carried on by the station. Director A. B. Conner of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, A. & M. College of Texas, has announced the land becomes the property of the state for use by the experiment station.

The topography of the six-acre tract is especially suitable for the studies in question and special equipment is being placed on the land for use in the research program now under way by A. & M. in cooperation with the United States department of agriculture.

The Buckhorn station near Temple is now using 250 acres for experimental work. The recently donated six-acre tract brings the total of land owned to a little more than 300 acres. The station has 50 acres additional under lease for soil erosion work.

Bush To Open Terrace Work

When he returns this evening from a conference in Abilene of county farm and home demonstration agents and banks, J. B. Bush, county agent, will announce the tremendous program of land terracing which has been started by application from farmers to terrace more than 5,000 acres and by purchase by individuals and by Chamber of Commerce of a dozen or more farm leases.

"Perhaps some of the farmers have wondered why they have not heard from my office as to when terracing will begin," said Mr. Bush. "The farm levels will be here by Friday and we then can work without interruption. Every farmer will receive a letter from me informing them when and where the terracing will be done."

Besides Mr. Bush at the Abilene conference from Howard county will be Louie Allgood, county home agent and representatives of the local banks.

NEW YORK—Aboard the ocean liner De France there were reports that tricky gentlemen of the green cloth were keeping a sharp watch for victims. A stranger strolled up to Harry Fox, who helps make Broadway laugh, and invited him to bridge or poker. Harry replied he played cards only at home. "But," he added, "I'll tell you what I will play with you." The stranger's eyes brightened. "I'll play postoffice," said Harry.

THE TOMB CLEMENCEAU CHOSE FOR HIMSELF FOUR YEARS AGO

Georges Clemenceau, the "Lion of Justice," was buried in a tomb erected under the guidance of his own hand. This picture shows the grave which was chosen by Clemenceau four years ago for his own resting place. It is seen in the picture and is probably surrounded by the same trees which he saw when he chose a stone for his own grave. The grave of his wife is on the left. It is seen in the picture and is probably surrounded by the same trees which he saw when he chose a stone for his own grave. The picture only shows the grave of Clemenceau and it would not be seen until after his death.

Rail Chiefs To Help Keep Prosperity Rolling

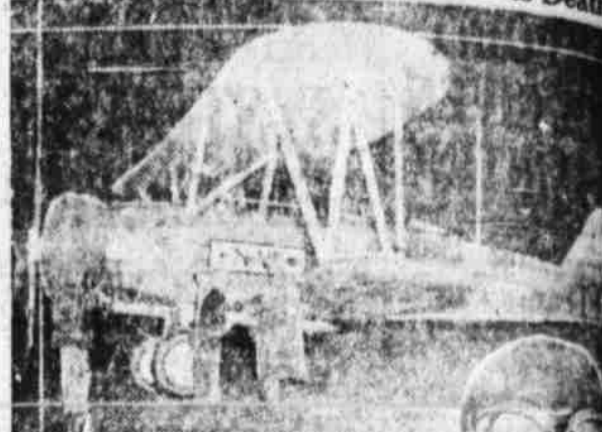

Unworried by the stock market collapse, leaders of the railroad world informed President Hoover, at a White House conference, that they would spend $1,000,000,000 for needed improvements in 1926. In courses at which the conference, pictured above, took place, (left to right) Agnew T. Bice, Reading Railroad; R. D. Ashton, president of American Railway Association, Secretary of Commerce; Secretary of the Treasury Mellon; Hale H. Hollis, Southern Railway; and R. E. Jones, Baltimore and Potomac. Standing, left to right, Jerome B. Milbank, Southern Railway; J. J. Berger, Chesapeake and Ohio; Fairfax Harrison, Southern Railway; P. F. Crowley, New York Central; J. B. Pease, New York, New Haven and Hartford; E. W. Suran, Chicago and North Western; Arch W. Shaw, Washington, D. C.; Julius Barnes, Chicago and North Western; Charles W. Cummings, and William Butterworth, president of the United States Railway of Commerce.

Fog-Blinded Flyer Cheats Death

Lost in a blinding fog over England, the head and tail of a biplane were seen by a pilot on the ground. The pilot, a 22-year-old man, was flying a biplane when he was caught in a fog so thick that he could not see his own hands. He was flying over a field and was about to crash when he was rescued by a farmer who took him to his home and set his flying plane on a path. The pilot was rescued after his narrow escape.

Secretary Good's Body Lies In State

Here is the first picture showing how Washington honored the memory of Secretary of War James W. Good, taken as his body lay in state at the Federal parlors, under a military guard of honor. The casket was later removed to the White House.

Mob Perils Accused Child Killer

Lyndell, Ill. — Well, show her how to treat babies. How angry mobs of men in a hotel about George P. Baker as the former night club hostess had been in the spot in National Park, N. Y., where she killed her only child. The girl, who was seen in the picture, is surrounded by a mob of men. At the top you see her pointing out the supposed murderer, Alexander V. Bellamy, right, and left, she is shown surrounded by the mob. The mob is seen in the picture and is probably surrounded by the same trees which he saw when he chose a stone for his own grave. The picture only shows the grave of Clemenceau and it would not be seen until after his death.

Prize Baby In Battle For $50,000,000

Even lion cubs are contesting in baby shows now, and above is pictured the winner of the annual "baby lion show" held at Los Angeles. Spittle is only one month old and weighs three pounds, but he was the "most perfect" of nine baby lions that competed. Mrs. Roy Palmerton, one of the judges, is holding him.

Wiry Jumper

Here's an ordinary parachute jump that got on the telegraph wires the other day. Eddie Graf, professional "white artist," found himself in this predicament after a thrilling leap from a plane over Hanover, N. H. Imagine the suspense!

Steel Heir And Housemaid

A $26,000,000 fortune didn't make any difference when the Bay, Long Island—see William W. Woodcock, Jr., son of the and his comely Swedish bride, who is a housemaid in the household, was Alchide Ing, long seen. Three hours in the air, yachts, stables, kennels and fleets of hyper-powered year-old youth now is supporting his fifteen-hundred-acre estate as a garage mechanic.

Seized Navy Base, But Not Safe

It took a safe expert only 20 minutes to do what a score of burglars had failed to accomplish in five hours of toil after they had audaciously seized the Brooklyn, N. Y., naval base. Though the bandits overpowered an officer and eight guards and were in complete possession of the big station throughout the early morning, the vault containing $20,000 resisted their attempts to open it with drills, crow-bars, an acetylene torch and dynamite. Here you see how the payroll stronghold was battered.

Millionaire Aids Swindled Bank

E. S. Mail, multi-millionaire vice president of General Motors, who put up more than $1,000,000 of his personal funds to cover a $5,000,000 shortage by employees of the Industrial Bank of Detroit, Mich., where "the greatest bank robbery in American history" is said to have taken place, is shown here at a conference with H. E. Williams (right), a bank's vice president and treasurer. He came from Detroit to aid Mail who resumed his former position after others had resigned. Inset is prosecuting Attorney Charles D. Bogle of Flint, who is conducting an investigation into the bank's $5,000,000 shortage.

Picked To Fly To Pole On Zep

First American to be chosen to go on the Graf Zeppelin's flight over the South Pole, scheduled for next spring, is Lieut. Commander Edward H. Smith, above, of the United States Coast Guard. Internationally known as an ice patrol expert, at present he is commander of the Coast Guard destroyer Downes.

Harold K. McCormick, head of the International Harvester Company, and his sister, Mrs. Anita McCormick Blaine, are shown here leaving the courthouse at Santa Barbara, Calif., where a suit over the $20,000,000 estate of Stanley McCormick, their mentally unfortunate brother, is under way. Stanley McCormick is the youngest son of the late Cyrus McCormick, the Harvester king.

Shown here with one of her attorneys, Paul Patterson, of Cleveland, Ohio, is Mrs. Anita McCormick Blaine, who has brought suit to oust the brother and sister shown above as co-guardians of her husband, who was adjudged mentally incompetent in 1923. She charges they have attempted to alienate his affections for her, alleging that they employed psychoanalyst experts toward this end.

Section 8. Judge Mullican didn't forbid anybody to publish his opinion of the trial. He did not pass a law curtailing the liberty of the press. Had his order been violated, there would be no "prosecution," within the meaning of the section. He would simply clap the offender in jail—and the truth of the matter constituting the offense would be utterly immaterial. For the judges of District Courts in Texas are given blanket authority to issue "ad writs necessary to enforce their jurisdiction."

Bo-Broadway

By Central Press NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Joe Smith, the singer, who passed on the other day, was an old friend of Greenwich Village of a dozen or so years ago, in the palmy times before they became famous. Eugene O'Neill, who probably used much of the knowledge of the Negro he gained from his association with Joe for "Empress Jones" and "All God's Children," Harry Kemp, Dorothy Day, Hutchins Haggood, Frances Gifford, Jimmy Light and a good many others remember Joe as a happy philosopher who foregathered with them at the Golden Swan at 810th Avenue and 11th Street in their post-war days.

O'Neill never forgot Joe. He made it a point always when he was in town, to look the old Negro up and regularly he sent him a substantial check which Joe called his "royalty."

MOODY CITES $350,000,000 BUILDING SLATE TO PRESIDENT, WIRES FORD HE'S IN ERROR

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 2.—An estimate of a $350,000,000 to $500,000,000 building program for Texas, together with several suggestions of ways the federal government might contribute to state and national prosperity have been telegraphed to President Hoover by Governor Dan Moody as Texas' answer to the President's prosperity stabilization plan.

Almost in the same breath Governor Moody dictated a vigorous telegram to Henry Ford, disputing the statement that "one of the remedies for the present business situation was a lower price for commodities." The governor was especially concerned about the wages cotton growers receive for their efforts which on the basis of federal government estimate, he placed a $325 a year, or less than $1.20 a day.

The governor's estimate of Texas' building program for 1930 was based on a survey of thirty of the metropolitan centers, which reported projected work of over $293,338,000, which he added "at least a third more" for the 224 other counties in the population and half the assessed Texas, representing more than half of the value of the state.

He added there was no way of estimating the amount for construction of rural school buildings, or improvements on farm and ranches, or the continuing development of the state's oil resources. His estimate of $350,000,000, he said, was "conservative," and added "I verily believe the total may reach $500,000,000."

Among suggestions made, the governor stressed that Texas would be willing to match any sum the federal government may wish to advance for road construction. He also suggested that there must be "meritorious applications" pending for construction and extension of railroad lines, and if prompt action were taken on these, the result would be to increase the demand for labor.

In the matter of public improvements, Governor Moody asserted the bond market has not been good, because of high rates of interest. "If our campaign," he said, "can be advanced, and steps taken to strengthen the market for bonds issued by various political subdivisions, more money would be available for construction of all forms of municipal public improvements."

While deploring the stock market collapse had not depressed business conditions in Texas, Governor Moody declared there is one branch of state industry, agriculture, "that does need help, and needs it badly." Present prices for cotton, wool and wheat fail to yield a fair return to the producer, he said. The cotton grower, he said, gets an average return of about $50 monthly with which to feed and care for his family.

The situation of the cotton farmer, who was amplified in the governor's message to Mr. Ford, in which he referred to the statement made immediately after Mr. Ford's conference with the president that wages should be higher and the prices of commodities lower.

You are doubtless aware," he wired Mr. Ford, "that the price of cotton recently has declined, and I am sure you are aware that the market of this staple article seems to be so sensitive that it is even affected occasionally by the statements of prominent business men. It is my judgment that an investment for cotton is too high a price for this commodity."

These government figures, he developed that there, concluding that the cotton farmer, with his family of three or four children, receive a wage of $32.75 a month for the "fruit of himself and his entire family." "I ask you," he said, "if you think that an adjustment of the present economic situation should be brought about by reducing the price of cotton?"
