Santa Anna Proud of The Record Made

The track and field team of Santa Anna High School won the district interscholastic track and field meet at Brownwood last Saturday with 24 points. Brady and Indian gap, tied for second and third with 15 points each and Coleman won fourth place with 12 points. This is the first time within recent years that Santa Anna has won the district in track and field. This year's team was the outstanding team of the district, which is composed of ten counties. Members of the team are: Richard Jennings, Audos Smith, Leon Ward, Edwin Rollins, Milton Howard, Clifford Wheeler, Deggs Traylor, and Wilburn DuBois. DuBois, broke the district record in the 880 yard run with a time of 2:03.2 which was 2.5 seconds better than the old record. Wheeler was second high point man of the meet with 10 points.

Santa Anna scored in the all round championship with 45 points which was only 5 points behind the winner, Brownwood. 20 of these points were made by the track and field team, 10 points were made by the tennis doubles team composed of James Gipson and Max DuBois, and 15 points were scored by Mae Campbell in winning the Ward School Essay. Santa Anna was an outstanding school in winning a number of points in each division of the meet. The school scored 15 points in various literary contests, 20 points for winning the athletic meet and 10 points for winning boys tennis doubles.

Coleman County was high county in number of points scored in the meet with a total of 91 1-2 points. Brown County was second in number of points scored by a county with 82 points. Mason county was third with 70 points. McCulloch county was fourth with 64 points.

Santa Anna can justly be proud of the record this school made in the district meet.

Citizens Making Improvements on City Park Site

Four different contests will end Saturday afternoon at 3:30 when the youngsters of the town will meet at the park with the bird-houses, windmills and hanging baskets they have been preparing for the park during the past two weeks.

A prize will be awarded for the best boy's bird house and one for the best girl's bird-house.

A prize is offered for the cleverest windmill and one award goes to the schoolroom who gives the prettiest hanging basket.

Since the first of March improvement has steadily gone forward on the small plot of shaded ground just across from the station.

Flower beds have been made, some painting has been done, benches were donated, trees trimmed and a side-walk fixed.

More benches and a few tables have been promised, water and lights are to be put in, and swings will be erected.

To Miss Josie Baxter goes a great deal of credit and appreciation for these improvements and the Santa Anna children will have cause to be grateful to her because of the hours of pleasure they will have in the little park during the coming summer months.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

First we had the Secretary's report and the roll call then each Patrol went to their places and Patrol No. 3, studied about birds. When the time was up Patrol No. 3 gave a short program. Then several games were played. One was on observation test. This game had been played on the Girl Scouts by Miss Durham the meeting before the other Girl Scouts. It was very funny because Miss Durham laughed and said that the Girl Scout book told her to do that and we said that it told us, too. After other games were played we sang our songs and went happily home.—Reporter, Dolphine Richardson.

Miss Lillian Durham, spent the week-end in Hamilton, with home folks.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Boone of Coleman were Sunday guests in the home of Mrs. Boone's parents Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hall.

LIVE OAK CLUB

The Live Oak Club, met with Miss Virgil Brown on Tuesday, April 21st.

We had intended this meeting to be in picnic form, as we all took a prepared dish and were going to meet at a tank and make Willow fern stands, but old father Winter, played us a trick, and we all were still scared of the cold.

So we spread lunch with Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Brown. Had a fine lunch, then had our regular business-meeting and adjourned. We decided to meet with Miss Virgil, Wednesday of next week and make the fern stands.

We had twelve present and a very interesting meeting. We wish more would join us and meet with us.—Reporter.

SANTA ANNA CITY LIBRARY GROWING

One of the growing institutions in Santa Anna, is the Public library, organized less than three years ago, it has encountered and overcome the various obstacles that usually beset any new movement, new books and valuable old books, the gifts of friends have been added. From time to time until it has almost outgrown its room in the City Hall. Recently 16 new books were bought, mostly those suitable for young people and children and Mrs. Harrell before leaving for Corpus Christi, made a donation of books, Mrs. Clinton Love, who has been its president of the board of managers; recently resigned and Mrs. J. R. Banister, was elected in her place. Much of the success of this institution has been due to Mrs. Lowe's faithful and untiring efforts and as Mrs. Banister was instrumental in getting the library started and has manifested a great interest ever since, it seems that Elijah's mantle has fallen upon Elisha. The library is open each Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Jennie Oakes, in charge. The fees for membership in the association have been reduced to fifty cents per year for a limited time.

Some of the recently purchased books, are the "Elsie" books that girls will enjoy; Six Little Bunkers, that small children, will enjoy, The Golden Snare by Curwood, Lindberg The Lone Eagle, Chronicles of Aviation, The Gaspards of Pine Croft and a number of others.

Boys are one of our most valuable assets and we must meet the task of giving them the right kind of training.

Get the scout work on your mind and heart and when the committee calls on you respond with just as liberal pledge as you can possibly make. It is a worthy cause and must not be allowed to suffer because of the hard times.

The First National Bank OF SANTA ANNA, TEXAS

THE COAT FROM WASHINGTON'S OWN BACK

Crowds of visitors to the national capital have discovered the drawing power of six certain glass cases in the Smithsonian Institution. If this is a harbinger of the interest in relics of George Washington, sure to be more and more evidenced at the approach of the year of the Two Hundred Anniversary of Washington's birth, the six cases at the Smithsonian will have to be moved to a space where larger crowds can be accommodated.

Recently a representative of the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission watched the throng one morning gathered about these glass cases through which all eyes were staring at the china that once graced Washington's dinner table, at his Sheraton and Heppelwhite dining chairs, at the extra faced watch that he presented to his wife Martha, at all that the Smithsonian Institution possesses that once was intimately associated with the First President. These crowds on the outside of the cases were almost as much of a study as the objects within. They were a sign that the power of George Washington to capture the interest and the respect of these Americans of today, far from waning, is rapidly on the increase.

In one case off by itself in another corner of the museum, it might be said for the benefit of future visitors to the city of Washington, hangs the famed buff-and-blue uniform habitually worn by Washington and portrayed in so many of his portraits. In this particular uniform he must have taken special pride, for it was the one he donned for the occasion of his historic resignation as General of the Army.

In the same case will be seen the flag of Washington's time as represented in this one of his ownership, consisting of the usual bars of red and white, but with the thirteen stars in a circle in the blue of the "Union Jack". Also here are a gold-headed blackthorn cane, Washington's service sword, the sleeping tent he used during the Revolutionary War (presented to the institution by George Washington Parke Custis), a larger field tent, and the poles, pegs and ropes that held them in position.

But of an importance and an interest greater even than that of these strictly personal mementoes of Washington, is a document that confronts the visitor to the Smithsonian Institution as he enters the very door. This is Washington's commission as General in Chief of the Revolutionary forces, awarded him by the Continental Congress and signed with the flourish of John Hancock, its president, and other officials. That not over-large slip of engrossed paper is almost as priceless as the Declaration into practical effect.

If the awed visitor has attention for anything else in the same case that contains this article, he or she will see something almost as important to history. This is the white brocade robe in which the infant George Washington was christened; not long after his birth in 1773. Along with these two outstanding articles are the compass used by Washington as a surveyor in laying out his land about Mount Vernon, his shaving mirror and razor-case, his medicine scales, his leather writing case (used during the Revolutionary War and looking very much like a modern lawyers brief case), trays of Sheffield silver from Washington's dining table, and various portraits, miniatures and medals.

Here also are the spy-glass and the larger field-glass used by General Washington in his battles and his reconnoitring, the brass of both of them now battered and tarnished. With them in the same case, is an object sure to attract especially, the feminine eye, a piece of embroidered velvet that once was the ornamented sleeve of one of Martha Washington's gowns.

In a companion case adjoining is an array of the china service used by Washington and Martha and by the unending line of guests entertained at the table. And with the dining chairs from the shops of Sheraton and Heppelwhite in another case are tables and a large wing chair, the attendants at the Smithsonian will tell you, the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association would give much money to possess and restore to their former places in Washington's historic home beside the Potomac.

DEPENDABILITY

Dependability is one of the most admirable characteristics of a person. What does dependability mean to you? Does it merely mean that it is only one of the many thousand words in the English language? No, it has a deeper meaning. It is a word of inspiration and sincere trust. It means, literally, the ability to be depended upon. As one travels the highway of life, he encounters difficulties which require dependability. One meets it everywhere, in the home and in the street, in city or country. It cannot be eluded. Dependability is one of the chief arts of life which should be developed in every possible way.

Dr. Tyndal Speaks in Chapel

Dr. Tyndal, Dean of the Bible Class, at Randolph College, spoke to the high school students and visitors Monday morning. The subject of his address was "The Seven Creators of Man", which was inspirational as well as informational. We feel honored to have such a noted speaker in our midst and are very grateful to him for the address.

HONOR STUDENTS

Scholarship has always been the main objective in our schools. Regardless of all that may be said against it, it is a well-known fact that when large companies seek the services of employees they scrutinize the scholastic records of the upper group of students in whatever department they may be specializing. Westinghouse, General Electric, and other similar corporations select from the engineering departments of the best colleges and universities of our nation each year the students who have outstanding scholastic records. They want people who have studied and developed their new brain, who have developed the neuroblasts of the cerebrum in manifold active cortical connections.

Santa Anna schools are run largely on the psychology of Dr. James, that eminent American psychologist and educator, who in his "Talks to Teachers" emphasized discipline work formation of correct habits and development of brain power. He emphasized the necessity of our doing some things every day if for no other reason than that we had rather not do them, discipline. He said that we need have no worry about the boy or girl who put in every working hour of the working day faithfully and earnestly and honestly that his opportunity would surely come, and some day he would wake up to find himself one of the outstanding members of whatever profession he chose.

Adhering to this psychology, teachers not only encourage a strict application of students to their studies, but see that intensive study and resultant learning obtain.

At the close of the past six-week period the grades of the highest students were computed with the following results:

Boys:

A. G. Weaver 96 15-16, Fred Faulkner 96 15-32, William Earl Ragsdale 96 5-32, William Foley 92 1-8.

Girls:

Irene McCreary 91 15-16, Aline Harper (3 courses) 90 23-24, Geneva Caldwell 87 9-16, Ona Mae Smith 85 25-32.

A. G. Weaver and Fred Faulkner will be co-valedictorians of this year's high school graduating class and will be awarded scholarships to college of their choice. William Earl Ragsdale will be salutatorian. Irene McCreary will be awarded scholarship to college of her choice.

WARD SCHOOL

Boys:

Eddie Vaughn Mills 96 33-56, Dosh T. McCreary 94 23-56, Holland Cheaney 93 31-56, Vernon Ragsdale 91 5-7, Billy Baxter 90 21-56.

Girls:

Bess Inez Shield 99 9-56, Francine Merritt 98 11-14, Ernestine Thames 97 31-56, Beth Barnes 97 3-7, Dolores White 93 11-56.

Bess Inez Shield will represent her class as valedictorian in the graduation exercises. Francine Merritt will be the salutatorian.

SENIOR PLAY TO BE GIVEN ON APRIL 25TH

"A henpecked Hero" a hilariously funny three-act farce, revolves around the misfortunes of a meek little man, Fred Faulkner, with a romantic minded mother-in-law, Mary Harriet Simpson. His studious nature and unathletic physique make him a victim of domestic tyranny, until the bride's longing for a cave man type of husband causes him to go to a real cave and become a real cave man, with nearly fatal results.

Before it is over Dame Fortune pays call after call upon the unhappy husband in the guise of Curry, Emmet Stiles, Carl Flores.

Sophomores: various veiled persons dressed in widow's weeds, with dire consequences. In all, five "widows" are in evidence and get the poor man, as well as each other, hopelessly mixed up. In fact, it gets so that nobody except the audience knows who is which.

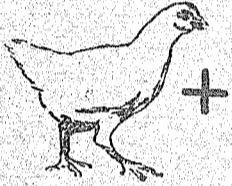

There is a splendid action with fast developing plot that culminates in literal explosion. The only object of "A Henpecked Hero" is to produce one outburst of hearty laughter after another, and this it does from start to finish.

Be sure to see William Earl Rags Dale disguised as a Russian Countess!

The play will begin promptly at eight o'clock. Admission price will be thirty cents for adults, and twenty cents for high school students and ten cents for ward school students.

SANTA ANNA TO HAVE EXTENSION OF STREET LIGHTING SYSTEM

Utilities Company Extends and Improves Service Over West Texas

Extending and improving utilities service to Urban, rural and oilfield customers, the current construction report of the West Texas Utilities Company indicates a period of considerable activity according to information received from the company construction department here. The major project included in the report involves the addition of two 13 Kv lines to the existing line between Eola and Wall, a distance of eleven miles. This improvement will provide more efficient service and make available a sufficient supply to serve new residential customers, a cotton gin and two dairies. Oil field extensions include a three-phase 11,950 volt line carry ing service to the Humble Oil at South Vernon, and a three-phase 440 volt line to serve the Humble Production Company at Iraan. Important service extensions will be made at Junction, where a private three-phase line will serve a new retail establishment at Vernon, where a new line will furnish power for a nursery, and at San Angelo, where two 6,800 volt rural extensions will be strung—one serving a ranch home south of Knickerbocker, the other a new dairy near San Angelo. Another important extension will be made to serve customers in a small community at milepost 64 on the Panhandle and Santa Fe Railway. The community, according to latest advice, has been named Etter. Distribution systems will be improved and lengthened at Melvin and Albany, the new work carrying the advantages of electric service to new customers and improving service to those already connected to the lines. Street lighting systems will be extended in Santa Anna and Ballinger, the latter city adding four standard and eighteen brackets to its existing equipment. Two-inch water mains will be extended at Dumas, Altman Sunray and Stratford, and a two inch gas main extended at Dumas. Each of these additions is to carry water and gas service to new customers.

According to available information, work on these projects is already going forward, scheduled for completion in the immediate future.

QUEEN THEATRE

A STAR UNDER FIVE FEET

When speaking of small screen leading women, it's necessary to include Barbara Luddy, Bob Steele's leading woman in Tiffany's "Headin' North," at the very top of the list. This diminutive brown-haired, blue green-eyed beauty measures exactly four feet, ten and five eighths inches in height. "Headin' North" is her first talkie role after three years on the stage and three years in silent films. Headin' North, will be shown at the Queen Theatre, tonight and Saturday.

Eric Von Stroheim, one of the most colorful personalities Hollywood has ever known, has been extra, star and director in his career in the movies, but prior to his entrance in motion pictures, his various escapades are worthy of an Arabian Nights' tale.

Von Stroheim, who is featured in the Warner Brothers and Vitaphone mystery drama "Three Faces East" at the Queen Theatre, the first of next week, was born in Vienna, Austria, on September 22, 1885. He underwent a comprehensive military education and became an officer in the Austrian army. In the war which resulted in the annexation of Bosnia, he was severely wounded, while his record in the campaign won him a high military decoration.

Deciding to seek his fortune in America, he crossed the Atlantic but a hard struggle for a living confronted him. During these years his lines of endeavor included such work as bundle wrapper in a New York department store, house-to-house fly paper canvasser, railroad section work-er-boatman on Lake Tahoe, California groom in the stable of a Pasadena millionaire, and for one week only a vaudeville actor in a sketch of his own writing. The dismal failure of this sketch kept him from further pursuit of the stage.

His first motion picture work was as an extra with the old Reliance Majestic company. A year later he became assistant director to John Emerson on the production of "Old Heidelberg," in which he also played the part of the valet to the prince. After that he was assistant on various films starring Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Norma Talmadge, and others.

Following this he played parts in "The Unbelievable" and "For France." In the first picture he attracted attention as a German officer and D. W. Griffith obtained him to handle the military detail on "Hearts of the World" and also to play a part in the picture. This was followed by the same assignment in "The Hun Within" and "The Heart of Humanity."

A short time afterward, the Armistice was signed and Von Stroheim, branded as a German officer type only, verged on starvation for almost a year.

Finally gathering together his characteristic courage and daring, he went to Carl Laemmle and told him a story he had written in which he wished to star and direct. His colossal nerve impressed the executive and he was given the assignment. The result was "Blind Husbands."

Since then he has written and directed "The Devil's Pass Key," "Foolish Wives," "The Merry Widow" and "The Wedding March." He played the star part in "Foolish Wives," the heavy role in "The Merry Widow" and also starred in "The Wedding March."

"The Great Gabbo" marked Eric Von Stroheim's debut in talking pictures. "Three Faces East" is his second talking film and his first Vitaphone production for Warner Brothers.

THE WORTH OF ONE'S LIFE

Merely living means to get the full worth of one's life. Whatever vocation one should choose it should always be clean and upright and he should enter into it with vigor and wholeheartedness. It should not be a vocation on which to fall back on if another should fail.

Edison made many failures before the electric light appeared but he worked on, never tiring, with a grim determination and he won. The interests of one's vocation in life should absorb the time and thought of the one involved. To get the worth of one's life, one should put forth every effort and strive to reach the heights. The rewards of getting the full worth of one's life are many: A peaceful contented heart and soul, and a comfortable life wrapped in the brightest sunshine.

"Inhale quickly one-half teaspoonful of baking powder; lower the legs and mash two hard boiled eggs in a sieve. Exhale breathe naturally and sift in a bowl."

TIGER EYE

by B. M. Dower

FIFTH INSTALLMENT
 The Kid was Bob Reeves, but back home on the Brazos they called him Tiger Eye, because one eye was yellow—the eye with which he sighted down a gun barrel. His father was "Killer" Reeves, but the boy did not want to kill. If he stayed at home he would have to carry on his father's feuds, so he headed his horse, Pecos, northward and encountered Nate Wheeler, who drew his .45 and fired just as Tiger Eye did. The kid didn't want to kill Nate, only to cripple him, but his aim must have been wild, for Wheeler dropped from his horse. Babe Garner came riding up. Wheeler was a "nester," he said, and had it coming to him. Tiger Eye rode to Wheeler's cabin to notify the dead man's widow.

The kid breaks the news of Nate's death to his widow and then goes out and brings in the body, discovering he had not missed his shot to disable Wheeler but had broken his arm, while another shot had killed the man. A gang of strangers rides up. One of them insults Mrs. Wheeler by coupling her name with the stranger. The kid shoots a hole in each of the ears of Pete Gornham who hurled the insult, making his escape in the confusion.

Learning that the "nesters" plan to draw the Poole riders into a trap, the kid informs Babe Garner, telling him at the same time he had learned that it was the latter's gun that had killed Wheeler and not his own. Babe is grateful and gets the boy a job riding range for the Poole outfit. The kid sees a lone rider attack a man and a girl driving in a wagon and wounds the assailant, and then finds out he is Gornham.

After rescuing the girl's dad, the kid is given a grateful warning by the girl, who thinks he is one of the Texas killers, to get out of the valley before the nesters shoot him. The boy is touched by Nellie's concern and lets his mind dwell on her, realizing she must have liked him personally to warn him when he was supposed to be one of the important gun-men. Later he tells Babe he wounded a nester who tried to ambush him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 "You, son-of-a-gun!" Babe stepped forward and clapped a hand admiringly down on the kid's shoulder. "I knowed there was some reason why you let that damn' fake funeral get by."
 "Yo'all says it was a fake funeral, Babe?"

"Shore, it was a fake. One of the boys got wise 't they was going to pull off something. You was sent over here to keep cases, but one of the boys over at the Poole happened to see them as they come up on the bench. Old man, he suspicioned something was wrong about that percession, so he sends all over to the buryin' ground over on Cotton Creek. That's where they was headin' for. Shore had more mourners than what they figured on!"

"Yo'all didn't fight 'em, Babe?"
 "No—shore, we didn't. But we shore beat 'em to that buryin' ground! Thirty-five punchers was settin' on their horses back on the ridge about a hundred yards away, when that funeral percession come along. There wasn't no grave dug, so we set there and watched 'em dig it."

"Yo'all shore the buried Nate Wheeler ovah theah?"

"Nate Wheeler? Naw, they never buried Nate Wheeler here. Jim Poole's nobody's fool. He saw through their little scheme right out. It's like this. Right up the creek, about two miles from that buryin' ground, is the Poole ranch, and it's a good seven miles across to Cotton creek from here. If they got over on Cotton Creek with a funeral percession, they could sneak on up to the creek to the Poole. Seven miles of bald prairie, and four miles under cover. Savvy now?"

"Shoah do, Babe," said the kid, his thoughts flashing back to the girl and what little she had dared to say.

"Shoah hope yo'all didn't have no trouble Babe," the kid said. "Never had a word of trouble, Tiger Eye." Babe's eyes veiled themselves suddenly from the kid's questioning stare. "Know what they done, Tiger Eye? They knowed they had to go through with that buryin' or we'd smell a rat. So they did. They buried a coffin full of rifles they aimed to use on us. When they was gone, the old man had us dig up the box and open it."
 Babe folded a paper into a trough, sifted in a little tobacco evened it with a careful finger tip, rolled it deftly and drew the edge of the paper lightly along the tip of his tongue before he pressed it down and folded up one end. He fished a match from a pocket, flicked his thumb nail across the head and got a flame, and lighted the cigarette, then snapped the match stub in two and dropped the pieces at his feet. The kid watched him piecing together in his mind certain details that Babe did not know.

"I shore was worried about you, kid," Babe said finally, drawing a mouthful of smoke. "Where'd that feller jump yuh, Tiger Eye—if it's a fair question?"

"Back down the rim about a mile."

"Unh-hunh. Musta took yuh quite a while." Babe fanned the smoke away from his face while he looked hard at the kid.

"Takes a right smaht while, Babe, to trap a wolf." A strange implacable look came into the kid's boyish face. Babe looked at him and looked away again.

"Shore. Well let's go along," he said after a silence, and there was a new note of respect in his voice. "I'll tell the Old man how it was. You done the right thing, Tiger Eye."

In the cabin at Cold Spring line camp that evening the kid was playing his mouth organ, his slim browned fingers cupped and touching the metal where the nickel was worn through to the brass.

"Moah ridin', Babe?"

"Why? Yuh like rim ridin', Tiger Eye?"

"Shoah do, Babe."

"Yuh shore look happy to-night, Tiger Eye."

Babe spoke from the bunk, when the kid's dreams could no longer be compassed by the music and he sat staring at the smoky bottom of the dish pan hanging back of the stove.

"Time to roll in, though. We got to be ridin' at dawn."

"Shoah feel that-a-way, Babe?"

Babe pulled off a boot with a vicious yank and sat holding it in one hand while he eyed the kid.

"Damned if I can see what there is to be happy about, Tiger Eye."

"Damned if I can eithah, Babe." He picked up the water buckets and went out into the night.

The air was clean and crisp and drops of dew on the grass winked like diamonds in the sun. The horses had galloped steadily for more than a mile, but now they had settled down to a walk and the reins lay loosely along their necks. Riding so, a habit born of the long trail up from Texas took hold of Tiger Eye. Instinctively his hand went to his breast pocket and pulled out his mouth organ, and he began to play soft snatches of old melodies as he rode.

The music timed the easy swing of the kid's slim body in the saddle, and the occasional click of his iron bound stirrups against Babe Garner's wooden ones. The tune didn't matter; a medley of this thing and that thing drifting along with his idling thoughts.

When the kid played, he thought of the girl down in the valley, behind him. Reckon her old pappy was a rustler, like all the rest of them down in the valley. Leastways, the kid had gathered that Nellie's brother Ed had been shot by a Poole rider, and they shoah seemed to hate the name of Poole.

The kid didn't feel that he knew Babe even after a week of living with him. Babe always seemed to have a lot on his mind. But Babe shore was a fine man and a fine friend, and the kid wasn't the kind to pick flaws in any one he liked.

Babe got out his tobacco and papers and rolled a cigarette as he rode along. He lighted it, blew out the match, broke the stub into and dropped the pieces to the ground. The kid was watching for that little trick and his eyes twinkled when Babe's fingers went true to form. Almost a week now he had lived with Babe, and never had he seen Babe throw away a whole match stub. Always broke it in two. The kid wondered why, but he didn't ask. Papp shoah had learned him not to ask questions

FORD RELIABILITY

Long, hard use shows the value of good materials and simplicity of design

EVERYWHERE you go you hear reports of the good performance and reliability of the Ford.

One owner writes—"The Ford Tudor Sedan I am driving has covered 59,300 miles through all kinds of weather. It is still giving perfect satisfaction."

Another owner describes a trip of 3217 miles in 95 hours over bad roads and through heavy rain and sleet in the mountains. "Throughout the entire trip," he writes, "the Ford performed excellently and no mechanical trouble of any kind was experienced. The shatter-proof glass undoubtedly saved us from serious injury when a prairie chicken struck the windshield while we were traveling at 65 miles an hour."

See the nearest dealer and have him give you a demonstration ride in the Ford. Then, from your own personal experience, you will know that it brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

unless he plumb had to. Far ahead across the level bench land a faint veil of dust crept slowly toward the north, carried far on the breeze that fanned the kid's left cheek as he rode. Cattle, bunched, and riders driving 'em. Reckon maybe Babe was taking him over so he could go to work on round-up. The kid hoped so, for that was the wrk he wanted and had come all the way up from the Brazos to find.

"Shoah will enjoy swingin, a rope again, Babe," he said in his soft drawl.

"Swingin' a rope?" Babe's voice had a startled note.

"Er ridin' herd—anything, so it's cows."

"Yo're ridin' line with me," Babe reminded him shortly. "Old man ain't likely to put yuh on round-up."

The kid not argue the point, but his eyes clung to the slow moving dust cloud, and because his heart was there he unconsciously communicated his desire to the horse.

Riders wear visible now in the fringes of the dust cloud. Riders and a slow river of backs seen dimly as the breeze whipped up the haze. Cattle going to some chosen round-up ground. The kid's eyes glistened at the thought.

"I'll ride over and see who's in charge," Babe said suddenly, and struck his horse with the quirt he carried.

The kid's hand tightened on the reins. A cold weight feel like a lump of iron upon his chest. He didn't know those riders up ahead. They were not the same old boys, with Pap, tall and hawk-eyed, on his big horse, riding here and there, giving his quiet orders. Plumb strangers, these were. Babe knew them, but he didn't. He was just an outsider, and Babe wasn't taking him over to get acquainted.

A man galloped out to meet Babe and the two talked, hands and head making little unguarded gestures now and then. The kid's sidelong glance saw every move they made. They were talking about him, and they seemed to find seemed to find a right smart lot to say.

Babe finally turned in his saddle and flung out an arm in a beckoning gesture, but the kid kept his face straight ahead and gave no sign that he saw the signal. Babe cupped his hands around his mouth and let out a loud "Ya-a-hoo!"

"Hey, Tiger Eye! Y' asleep?" The kid slid over so that his dangling foot might find its stirrup, and yawned as he looked at Babe.

"Yo'all got me outa baid befo' daylight, Babe."

"Come on over and meet Jess Markel."

"Ain't impawtant, is it, Babe?" "Hell, no!" Babe gave him a studying look. "Thought you wanted to meet the boys. You said—"

"Said I'd plumb enjoy swingin a lass rope. Nevah said I was achin' to meet anybody, though."

"Jess is wagon boss," Babe further explained. "Good man to know. Might put you on, when this trouble with the nesters is settled."

"Reckon I bettah make shoah of my job first. And if yo'all want me line riding ovah on the rim, I'd shoahof my job, yo'all."

"Jess is a Texas man," Babe remarked in a too casual tone. "Thought maybe you might know him. Don't the name mean anything to you, Tiger Eye?"

"Shucks, Babe, names don't nevah mean anything to a Texas man. Not up No'th. Plumb easy to lose yo'all's Texas name awn the trail."

"Did you?"

"Ain't wore my name only twenty yeahs, Babe. No call to change it yet."

Babe accepted the reproof and said no more, though his eyes stole another sidelong glance at the kid. In an unspoken agreement they touchey touched spurs to their horses and went galloping steadily across the prairie at right angles to the herd. This way lay the headquarters ranch of the Poole, which was in reality a firm of Eastern capitalists dabbling in range investments.

The Poole owners never saw their cattle. John Poole, president of the Poole Land and Cattle Company, gave orders from his New York office. This sum for cost of operation, that sum deducted for normal loss, and certain percentage the investment paying a certain percentage to the shareholders. But when the calf tallely dwindled out of all proportion to adverse weather conditions, John Poole sat up in his office chair and dictated a letter to his superintendent. Rustlers or disease or whatever the cause, this alarming shrinkage must stop right there.

The superintendent was an old range man named Walter Bell and he was growing rich at managing the Poole. He replied to that letter and he didn't beat around the bush. The nesters, he said, were rustlers in reality and were stealing the Poole blind. John Poole replied that Bell must know what medicine to use on rustlers, and Bell wrote back that he did, but it would cost some money.

So Bell went quietly to work, hiring men skilled in the fine art of administering leaden pills as required, with no talk or fuss about it.

Saddled horses stood in the shade of a big cottonwood tree, some still breathing quickly from hard riding, others resting a leg while they dozed. These awakened with a start as the two rode into the unfenced yard. Lean riders perched on the top rail of the nearby corral or squatted on boot heels against the fence. The kid felt them eyeing him as he swung down from Pecos and followed Babe, but they didn't smile at the sight of him.
