J. C. Traweek Addresses Large Group At Hankins College Homecoming Here

On June 2, 93 Hankins Ex-Students and teachers from all parts of Texas and other states met in the Gorman High School Auditorium for the annual Hankins Normal College Reunion. Many happy occasions were relived as the group renewed old friendships.

The occasion was remarkable from the viewpoint of an outsider in that the spirit of the meeting reflected to such marked degree the influence of the founders, J. H. Hankins and the late J. F. Hankins, who was remembered in 1948 memorial services.

Scarcely does one find more forceful reminders of the lasting influence which a teacher exerts on his pupils than at such a gathering as these reunions prove to be.

Men, women, boys and girls in their teens paying tribute to their beloved teachers from the years 1905-1912 while they were lauding their past efforts, and the imprints the teachers left on their lives, and even as one put it, the imprints their lives and influence had made even on the children of the former students.

The seven years the college was in existence, many worthwhile citizens were educated and have infiltrated every phase of our modern life, and have left themselves in what ever occupation or place they have chosen to fill.

As Mrs. Odie Alsbrook of Dallas said in her address to the group: "if everyone had the love, respect and loyalty that the Hankins students have for each other and their teachers, we would have everlasting peace in the world."

The highlight of the program was the short talk by Mrs. J. H. Hankins who still inspires her ex-students as she told them of the joys of living life to the fullest, even in the sunset years, and to keep active in church, clubs and the community in which one lives.

The meeting was called to order by the president C. S. Eldridge, and Mrs. Frank Rhymes, whose mother, Mrs. Lydia Brown Williams, was an ex-student of Hankins College, made the welcome address. Mr. Ed Layton gave the response and the Rev. J. C. Traweek of Amarillo brought the message, "What Are You Leaving Behind," taken from the Works of Darcus, and the 9th chapter of Acts.

Entertainment was furnished by the Shugart Quartet from Breckenridge.

The 1963 committees submitted the following resolutions: First, that we express our sincere thanks and appreciation to the citizens of Gorman for the use of the beautiful school building for the meeting place for our reunion. Second, that we extend our thanks to the committee that had any part in the preparation of the program and other details connected with holding the reunion. Third, that we extend to the personnel of the school cafeteria our great appreciation for the delicious food so well prepared for our enjoyment. Fourth, that we recommend to the assembly that this reunion be continued as an annual affair to be held on the first Sunday of each June. Fifth, that this group express gratitude to God that He has permitted several of our beloved teachers to be spared and we pray that their presence may be enjoyed by us, their students, many years to come. Mr. J. F. Hankins, Robert Palmer, Earl Bender, and Mrs. J. H. Hankins. Sixth, that we furnish a copy of these resolutions to the newspapers for publication. Seventh, that we thank Mrs. Frank Rhymes for her splendid welcome address, and Eighth, that we thank Ed Layton for his heart-warming response and Rev. J. C. Traweek for his inspirational message. Committee members, Ben Grant, Roscoe Reeves and Pearl Powers Duncan.

Officers elected for the coming year were Jesse Reynolds, President; Trimble Spratling, Vice President; and Mrs. Jess Richardson, Secretary-Treasurer.

The 1963 reunion closed with the memorial service for fourteen of those who have answered the

Another Case Of Screwworms In County Confirmed

Another case of screwworms in Eastland County was confirmed June 5 according to Roger Blackmon, Assistant County Agent.

This is the third confirmed case of screwworms in Eastland County this year. This case occurred in the northwest corner of the county. The first two cases verified were in the Gorman area.

Livestock owners are urged to report any case of screwworms to the county agent's office or to the local Vocational Agriculture Teachers' office. A sample of the worms should be collected and sent in a special container to Mission, Texas for positive identification. These containers are available free of charge at the county agent's office.

When a case is confirmed, thousands of sterile flies will be dropped in that area to control the increase of the screwworms. Assistant County Agent, Roger Blackmon, stresses the importance of reporting every case of screwworms in this county.

Gorman High School Represented At Science Symposium

Dr. Emmett L. Hudspeth, professor of physics at the University of Texas, explains one of the displays at the Texas Nuclear Science Symposium held this week at Austin. Listening to Dr. Hudspeth, one of the speakers on the symposium program, are Nelson Rand, Science teacher at Gorman High School, and science student Richard Watson. They were guests of Texas Electric Service Co. at the three-day meeting, jointly sponsored by the University of Texas and the Texas Atomic Energy Research Foundation, composed of 10 electric power companies operating in Texas.

Gorman High School was well represented last weekend at the third Texas Nuclear Science Symposium at the University of Texas, according to T. J. Hallmark, manager of Texas Electric Service Company.

Attending the four-day session that began Sunday in Austin were Richard Watson, a science student, and Nelson Rand, member of the school faculty. They attended the meeting as guests of Texas Electric Service Co. The session continued through June 12.

The symposium was jointly sponsored by the Texas Atomic Energy Research Foundation and the University of Texas. The Foundation is made up of 10 investor-owned electric utility companies in Texas, including Texas Electric.

Some 500 selected high school science students and teachers attended the sessions on the University campus at which some of the nation's outstanding nuclear scientists spoke.

"The Foundation, which is co-sponsoring with the General A-tomics Division of General Dynamics Corporation the world's largest privately-financed research effort in the field of controlled nuclear fusion, is also seeking through its sponsorship of science symposiums to contribute to scientific education and understanding in Texas," Hallmark said.

"These meetings, sponsored by the Foundation, seek to bring to Texas high school science students and teachers the latest information on nuclear physics and nuclear fusion research through lectures by outstanding scientists. They also provide the students with an opportunity to obtain answers to their questions on scientific careers and college curricula."

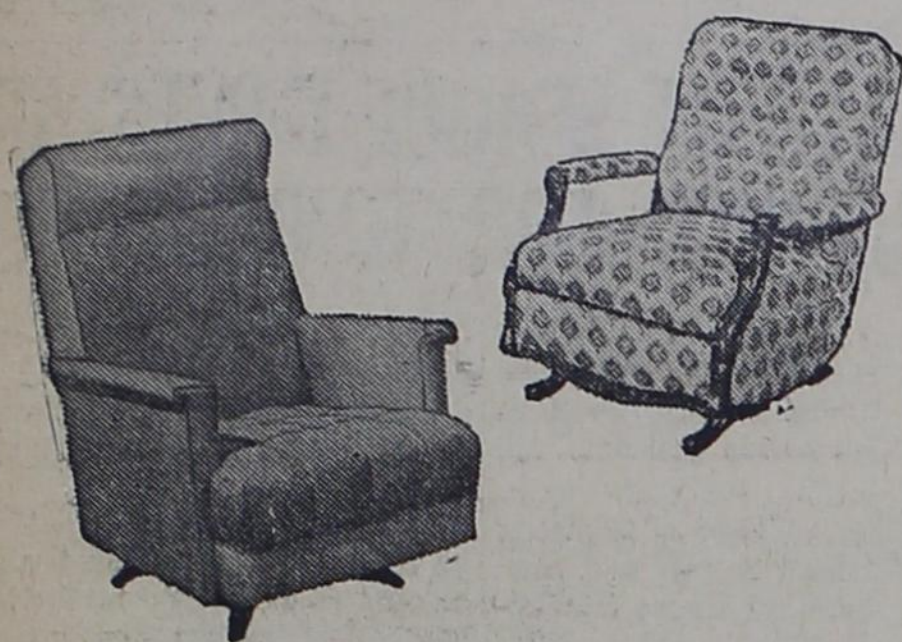

Speakers at this year's symposium included two General Atomic scientists from San Diego, Calif.; Dr. Martin Stern, acting chairman of the experimental physics department, and Dr. R. W. Pidd, manager of the direct conversion program. Featured speaker for the Tuesday evening session was Dr. W. W. Bee-man, professor of physics and biophysicist from the University of Wisconsin.

Other speakers on the symposium program included Dr. E. L. Hudspeth, professor of physics and director of nuclear physics laboratory at the University of Texas, Dr. R. N. Little, Jr., professor of physics, Dr. J. David Gavenda, associate professor of physics, and Dr. W. T. Guy, Jr., professor of mathematics, all of the University of Texas; Dr. W. O. Milligan, professor of chemistry, Rice University, Dr. Richard E. Wainerdi, associate dean of engineering at A&M College of Texas and Howard R. Drew, executive vice president of the Texas Atomic Energy Research Foundation.

Topics covered during the sessions included nuclear physics and nuclear reactors, nuclear fusion research, direct conversion and solid state physics, physics and mathematics, X-ray, electron and neutron defraction methods, neutron activation analysis and biophysics.

WASHINGTON AND
"SMALL BUSINESS"
By C. WILSON HARDER

The most frequent question brought up by independent businessmen, according to the 300 man field force of the National Federation of Independent Business is how government has gotten into the position it is now in. The emphasis is on the heavy expenditures. This is a source of wonderment, it is reported.

It is difficult to isolate a single cause, but the biggest factor is that the Congress has let too much of its authority slip away from it.

Thus, perhaps in the larger sense, the responsibility goes right back on the people of these United States for not paying sufficient attention to Congress.

It is probably quite fruitless to expect any single man in the White House, regardless of who it is, to correct the existent evils. There is little possibility of the American people electing either a stupid man, or a rascal to that job, because there is no selection that is made with a more merciless glare of publicity, more deeper probing into a man's background, connections, than goes into the election to any major political office.

The real issue today is the people versus bureaucracy. This battle has defeated the people in many countries. The usual solution is that eventually a dictatorship is established.

to head the nation, and with dictatorial powers, bureaucracy can be chopped down.

The Founding Fathers of this nation expected Congress to take care of this chore, and it is a chore that must be continually attended to, otherwise, bureaucracy, like Johnson Grass, takes over everything.

Recently Congressman J. Arthur Younger of California gave an example of unbridled bureaucracy at work.

Last year, he says, the Interior Dept. set up a new bureau known as the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation. It was set up with a budget of $28,000 and 15 employees. In the fiscal 1963 budget it had grown to $1,100,000 with 95 employees, and now in fiscal 1964, $2,462,000 is wanted plus 218 employees.

This has all been done, Rep. Younger says, before Congress has given any approval to the whole idea in the first place.

Congress could, with little effort, recapture fiscal control of the government and hence avoid such flagrant abuses of the public purse.

But before this is done, Congress must have the feeling of assurance that the people are most conscious of what Congress is attempting to do.

Thus, perhaps in the final sense, responsibility for a fiscally sound government lies with the people themselves. If the people continue to neglect their responsibility as citizens, then perhaps they cannot point the finger at anyone.

MRS. LOTTIE LEE CARD, 80, TAKES UP ART LESSONS

Mrs. Lottie Lee Card, who has celebrated her 80th birthday, began art lessons last week, proving the age old saying, "it's never too late to learn."

Mrs. Card, a patient in the Blackwell Hospital, has sketched and worked with crayons all her life, but has never had a lesson or painted with oil or water colors, and has decided to learn to paint.

Mrs. Walter Underwood of Gorman, a well known artist and teacher, is giving the "young" artist lessons.

Jerry Bywaters, head of the Art Institute in Dallas, has judged Mrs. Card's sketches as quiet good.

Most of Mrs. Card's sketches are of historical homes in and around Comanche. From her hospital bed she sketches scenes viewed from her window.

Her niece, Mrs. Wayne Hill, teases her aunt by predicting that she may become another Grandmother Moses.

Abilene Girl Shoots To Develop 'Babes'

ABILENE, June 11 — Texas, which has had only one woman ever to make the Olympics team — and that was more than 30 years ago — thinks it has a flock of Babe Didrickson's coming up. The immortal Babe was in the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles, winning three first places. Since then there have been only a few to try it and none has been successful.

But an Abilene secretary, Mrs. Margaret Ellison, who once ran the 100-yard dash in 11.4 and the 60 in 7.0 but didn't try for the Olympics because "I didn't know how to get there," is coaching some girls she thinks will make the next Olympics.

She has been at it for five years and as a result of her efforts there now are 13 track clubs in the state with 75 girls running and jumping and at least three of them are termed top prospects by Mrs. Ellison.

Mrs. Ellison considers two of her proteges — Janice Rinehart of Snider and Sue Schexnayder of Port Arthur — top material for the sprints, especially the 100-yard dash where they are carrying on a friendly feud, one winning one week and the other the next.

And they have done the 100 in 10.9 — "getting into the Olympics bracket," to quote Mrs. Ellison. Janice also is a good 220-yard man — er, girl.

Another thing: Mrs. Ellison wants her girls to look good, too. She thinks crowd appeal is important. Well, Janice and Sue are beauties. Just watch the judges follow them around after a race, pretending to check them on their performances. Well, the girls run them close, don't they?

Mrs. Ellison is taking 11 girls to Dayton, Ohio, July 6-7 for the Women's National AAU, and she'll find out there if she has another Didrickson or two to offer. She points out that Janice and Sue and Mary Rose, her top hurdler, are bettering the marks the Babe made back in her track days. Miss Rose runs the 80-meter hurdles in 11.9 and also runs the 440 in 60.1.

Mrs. Ellison is elated because she has been chosen a chaperon for the girls team that runs aon Sunday. Mrs. W. L. Graham was visiting with Mrs. Sessum on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Luke Palmer were visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Scitern on Monday night.

Margaret Reeves is spending this week with her mother, Mrs. Faye Callison and family at Duster.

Electronic Engineers have made a big break through in a new hearing device. This new development now makes it possible for all sounds, all human voices to be heard as nature intended. This new way of hearing does not use the ear! Instead the vibrations of sound are brought directly to your sensory system. There are no cords, buttons, no ear

Americans spend about 500 million dollars a year on food supplements as a result of food fallacies. The money goes for supplements such as pills, capsules and compounds which are mixtures of vitamins, minerals, exotic herbs, sea weed and dried vegetables. Fancy prices are paid for these products because there are thousands of door-to-door peddlers, national advertisements, phony health lectures and authors, and self-styled "food scientists" who promote their wares in these typical patterns:

1. They make mysterious but appealing claims for the curative and disease-preventing powers of their products.

2. They denounce the nutritional value of common everyday foods which they claim are "grown on worn-out soils", or poisoned with chemical fertilizers and preservatives, or robbed of their nutrients by over-processing by food manufacturers, or other reasons — none of which are true.

"Quackery is at the highest point in history, and not only are there more frauds, but modern quackery is becoming more sophisticated. It is time we all take a fresh look at this difficult social problem — for if quackery is to be eliminated, the public must be correctly informed and more and better law enforcement is necessary."

There is a vast amount of untrue information being circulated about calories.

Calories do count, in dollars as well as in pounds.

From the middle of 1960 to the end of 1961, more than 100 new reducing aids were put on the market. There are no drugs which are effective to control appetite, which are safe to take without medical supervision. Most reducing products which can be purchased without a prescription are food supplements, which have no effect on food intake.

No safe reducing diet is quick — and no quick reducing diet is safe.

If one eats more calories than her physical activity burns up, there is a weight gain, and if one eats fewer calories than her body uses, there will be a reduction in weight — regardless of the source of these calories.

Calories do count — and there's much to be said for the steady-and-steady reducing diet that simply cuts down on the number of calories you eat.

Nutritionists in the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service say it's important for a person-on-a-diet to eat three well-balanced meals a day.

If you can, plan your meals around foods that are a part of the family's way of eating. This will make it easier for you to stick with your diet and easier, too, for the cook.

Another advantage is that, once you've achieved the weight you want, you can continue this pattern of eating. Perhaps you can gradually add a few more calories.

Say you've been eating only 1,200 calories a day. You can up this to 1,400 by switching to whole milk if you have been using 2 cups skimmed and adding another ounce of lean meat to the day's meals.

But — as you inch your calorie intake upward, keep an eye on the scales. Keep exercising and watching those high-calorie foods.

In this way, you'll be able to stay slim and healthy.

May I urge homemakers to get their information on food and nutrition from recognized authorities. Here are some suggested sources:

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

According to last reports, the Federal Trade Commission is still engaged in a study of trading stamps. But perhaps like so many bureau procedures, by the time FTC gets finished with its "study" the parade will have passed by.

The facts are now that trading stamps are no longer doing the intended job of bringing new customers to a retail establishment, and maintaining a hold on old customers.

C. W. Harder

In fact, the law of supply and demand has started to work in its classic manner, because now with trading stamps issued by so many retailers, no one is getting advantage from stamps.

Hence, there has come into being such devices as lottery type games such as Split the Dollar, Lucky Bucks, Spell C-A-S-H, Super Poker and other cash prize games.

But in most cases, the retailers engaging in this type of promotion are continuing to give stamps, not as a positive force, but as a defensive move.

Some states have outlawed trading stamps, some have laws requiring them to be redeemed in cash.

There are some brave psychologists who have attempted to explain what goes on in the housewife's mind relative to trading stamps. Some claim everybody is against trading stamps except the housewife.

This may, or may not be true, and presumably could be argued exhaustively with no conclusions reached. And perhaps if it is ever found that the majority of housewives do prefer stamps, the issue of whether government has the right to deprive them of this pleasure becomes almost a constitutional question.

But there does seem one logical approach to the problem. If, as some in government are now ascertaining, that some container labels mislead or fail to give the buyer the information she is entitled to have before purchasing, then it is equally as valid she should also be informed as to premium paid for stamps.

A food store, for example, using the average trading stamp plan, must pay out for stamps an amount equal to 2% of its monthly sales. Food retailing is so competitive that no grocer can absorb this cost. Thus, when stamps are given, prices must be raised.

Thus, it would seem if there is any validity in government prescribing what shall be carried on a label, it is equally as valid that a store issuing stamps should be required to inform the shopper of the true situation.

For example, if all stores issuing stamps were required to post legible signs in prominent places, stating something to this effect: "The pricing schedule in this store reflects the 2% cost for trading stamps" the public would be protected. If the housewife wished to pay a premium to obtain stamps, she would not be under delusion that something is being given for nothing.

both area and population. America was largely a wilderness three hundred years ago. In this great, almost empty land, western civilization won an opportunity to begin all over again.

The people who built America came from many different countries. They brought with them many different skills, ideas and ideals. They put their abilities and beliefs together and formed a government designed to protect the liberty of the individual. They wrote into their Constitution what they believed in and wanted - freedom of religion, freedom of speech and political belief, and freedom to share in the bounty of the land.

America today reflects the riches of its lands and the vigor of its people. The United States has greater and more varied natural resources than any other country in the world. These resources include great stretches of fertile soils, an abundant supply of almost all important minerals, vast forests, many kinds of wildlife, and sufficient water for electric power, irrigation, and other uses.

The United States, as a whole, has probably a greater amount of fertile soils than any other area of the same size in the world. The soil in the United States is different and varies in fertility from one part of the country to another. This country is blessed with excellent farming land in some areas.

The United States has large reserves of all the more widely used minerals except tin. These minerals include coal, petroleum, iron, copper, bauxite, lead, zinc, stone and many others.

Great quantities of oil lie beneath the land in many parts of the United States. This country

Mrs. Alta Stacy Is Host For Willing Workers Meeting

The Willing Workers Class of the First Baptist Church met in the home of Mrs. Alta Stacy on Tuesday evening for their monthly social with Mrs. T. A. Thompson as co-hostess.

The meeting was opened with a prayer by Mrs. Donna Day and roll call with each member answering with a verse of scripture.

The program was in charge of the president, Mrs. Lizzie Jackson. Mrs. Merle Littlefield brought the devotionals using the 15th. chapter of St. John.

Following the short business meeting refreshments of cheese Ritz crackers and lemonade were served to class members Mmes. Mollie Bennett, Donna Day, John Wheeler, Jack Mauney, Donnie Parker, Alta Stacy, Merle Littlefield, T. A. Thompson, Lizzie Jackson, and guest Mrs. A. L. Dean.

Mrs. Mollie Bennett gave the closing prayer.

is one of the few areas in the world where large quantities of oil are available. The United States not only produces enough oil for its own needs, but it supplies the world with about two-thirds of the petroleum it uses each year. Natural gas is usually found with the oil deposits.

Water is one of the most valuable resources of a country. It is a necessity for farming and for home uses, and it is an important source of power in some manufacturing processes. Water is also a valuable means of transportation on streams and lakes. Most of the United States is well supplied with all the water it needs for all purposes.

Wildlife was one of the chief resources of the United States during the earliest years of its development. Today wildlife is fairly unimportant except for certain fur-bearing animals and fish. Hunting is a favorite sport in this country.

Religion in the United States is left up to the individual person solely. The people of the United States have complete religious freedom. The other two great freedoms we enjoy so much in this country are freedom of speech, and freedom of the press. These are the things that make this country a great country, and makes me very proud to say, "THIS IS MY COUNTRY!"

Stockmen Urged To Fill Out Larvae Sample Papers

Livestockmen sending larvae specimens to screwworm eradication headquarters at Mission are urged by County Agent J. M. Coper to be sure the information sheet that should accompany the sample is filled out completely and accurately.

Eradication officials have reported that numerous samples are received with no information included. Some have been identified as screwworms.

Cooper stated that prompt action is taken whenever an infestation is confirmed. In most instances, additional sterile flies are dispersed over the infested farm or ranch and livestock near the infested premises are sprayed at program expense.

"When samples are received with no information as to where it was collected, no action can be taken," the county agent said. "This could permit additional infestations to develop because no special sterile fly and spray treatment can be given to the area."

Eradication officials report less than 20 per cent as many screwworm infestations have been experienced during the first four months of 1963 as during the same period last year. If livestock producers continue to inspect their animals at least twice a week, treat wounds and infestations, collect samples and report cases, officials feel there should be no recurrence of heavy infestations as experienced last year.
