THE GORMAN PROGRESS, Eastland Co., TEXAS, JUNE 22, 1961

NUMBER SEVENTEEN

HULLS by Kernel Gene, aPe

Members of the Order of Eastern Star and Masonic Lodge will miss the dedicated and untiring efforts of M. F. Boston to assist in the rituals of these organizations.

As long as he was certain the water supply for Gorman was taken care of, Maynard would round up a carload of Masons and travel to Waco or far West Texas most any time to attend an installation service. He will be missed.

In company with D. B. Warren and Quincy Fuller I attended the Southwestern Farm Conference in Rosebud, Texas Saturday to hear Secy. of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman. Mr. Freeman, who was reared on a farm, impresses one with his sincere desire to formulate a program that will boost the farm family's economic situation to a level of the working man, the Union employees, and others who reap the benefit of the farmer's efforts.

Mr. Freeman's speech is long, but it contains so many suggestions that will affect all of our lives that I am going to try and publish it in its entirety hoping that you will take time to study it. In doing this I may leave out some local news this week, but I believe it is that important. After all, the strength of our nation depends on the farmer and his family.

Congressman W. R. Poage introduced Mr. Freeman. Mr. Poage has been very cooperative in helping to push legislation favorable to the peanut producer.

Rosebud, population approximately 1750, about 24 miles east of Temple, did a fine job of playing host to several thousand visitors. Citizens directed cars to parking places near the football field where the meeting was held. Concession stands were available for food and drink and signs along the way pointed to available rest rooms. These folks were so courteous one had the feeling that it was just normal procedure in the way they treat visitors everyday.

Mr. Kilgore and his son, who publish the Rosebud News, "rolled out the carpet" for representatives of the Press, Radio and TV.

B. T. Stubbs, a photographer, radio and TV man of Rosebud, saw I was having camera trouble and immediately offered to help in every way he could. Nice folks, those Rosebudians.

Bill Fox, former TV artist on KRBC in Abilene, recently purchased Radio Station KERC in Eastland. His brother, George Fox, former Eastland County Treasurer, will assist Bill in operating the station.

Bill and George visited Gorman last week and made arrangements with Joe Collins to tape the local and Blackwell Hospital news and it will be broadcast each day at 12:20 noon over KERC, 1590 on your dial.

If you have news you would like to hear on KERC, Phone 5410 and we will see that it is forwarded.

OUT-OF-TOWN FOLKS ATTEND BOSTON FUNERAL

Out-of-town relatives and friends attending the M. F. Boston funeral services on Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Bickle, Mr. and Mrs. Orian L. Donaldson, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Wood, Ronny, Mike and Bobbette, and Mr. and Mrs. Gale Williams, all of Ft Worth.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ragland, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wade and Mr. L. E. Clark of Desdemona; Mr. Tom Ames and Mr. and Mrs. Homer, Pittman of Eastland; Phynis Pittman Enens, Gladys Perry, Gertrude Joiner, Mr. and Mrs. Denny, and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Morgan and Kathryn, all of De Leon;

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Preston, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Long, Dannie and Dona Long of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Brauks, and Mr. and Mrs. Whit Scheidegger of Gerald, Missouri, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rodgers and Joy of Odessa.

CHARLIE HARRISON'S CONDITION IMPROVING AFTER HEART ATTACK

Mr. Charlie Harrison suffered a heart attack on June 10th. and has been critically ill in the Blackwell Hospital. At last report (Tuesday) his condition is some better.

Congressman W. R. Poage, right, introducing Secretary of Agriculture, Orville L. Freeman, to a crowd of several thousand at Rosebud, Texas on Saturday, June 17th.

SECRETARY FREEMAN OFFERS HIS SOLUTION TO FARM PROBLEMS

I welcome this opportunity to talk with you about the policies and objectives which Pres. Kennedy seeks for agriculture.

Open discussion of these goals will lead to understanding, and understanding will result in the active support needed to achieve them.

In my efforts to help achieve Pres. Kennedy's objectives for agriculture, I seek the greatest possible cooperation, in the development of policies and programs, from farmers, farmers' organizations, consumers, and from the Congress of the United States.

That is my purpose here. That was my purpose when, six days after I took the oath as Secretary of Agriculture, I met in Washington with representatives of farm organizations from all across the nation. At that first public meeting I promised to be guided by two other basic principles.

FIRST, all of us must become salesmen for American agriculture. We must develop a recognition on the part of the general public of agriculture's contribution to our high standard of living -- a public understanding of the importance of a sound farm program, not only to farmers, but to all Americans. There can be no effective farm program without this understanding.

SECOND, a successful program for agriculture must take into account our entire economy, including help for distressed areas, the interests of consumers, our balance of payments problems, our national strength and security, and our position of leadership in the free world.

In short, a successful farm program must be a program for 183 million Americans, because all of us are consumers -- and most of us are taxpayers.

Any serious study of farm problems, any serious effort to solve them, must recognize that American agriculture is the outstanding success story of modern time. Our farmers and ranchers are providing food and fiber for this nation to an extent without parallel in history, and they are enabling the United States to feed and clothe millions of people elsewhere in this hungry world.

American agriculture is progressive and efficient.

One hour of farm labor produces four times as much food and fiber as it did 40 years ago. Crop production is 65% higher per acre. Output per breeding animal is 88% greater.

One farm worker produces enough food and fiber for himself and 25 others. And productivity of the American farm worker is growing three times as fast as the productivity of workers in industry. We are better fed, and at lower real cost, than ever before. An hour's factory work buys 83% more round steak, 126% more milk, 138% more oranges, or 169% more bacon than in 1929.

Measured by industrial work time to earn it, food costs less than in most, if not all, other countries. Studies made in 1958 in major cities of the U. S. and in western European countries prove our great advantage. To buy a loaf of bread took two to four times as much work in those countries as it did in the United States -- 5 minutes of work here, 20 minutes in Austria, nearly 12 minutes in France, 13 minutes in West Germany, and 16 minutes in Italy.

To buy a pound of beef sirloin took two to nearly six times as much work as it did in the U. S. -- 30 minutes work here; 133 in Austria, 155 in France, 63 in West Germany, and 169 in Italy.

In Moscow in 1959, it took four times as much work as it did in New York City to buy a pound of beef rib roast or a quart of milk; 8 times as much work to buy a dozen eggs; 9 times as much work to buy a pound of butter; and 21 times as much work to buy sugar.

But what about the American farmer whose efficiency and hard work enable us to have abundant food at such low cost?

His productive success is rewarded with economic distress. Let's look at a part of the record for 1960. The farmer had to work nearly three times as long as the factory worker to buy food, clothing, appliances, and other products. For example;

Last year, it took over 14 minutes of farm labor to buy a loaf of bread, and 5 1/3 minutes of factory work.

It took 69 minutes of farm labor to buy a pound of round steak, and 28 minutes of industrial work. To buy a man's $50 suit last year a factory employee worked less than 22 hours; a farmer more than 81 hours.

To buy a $2000 automobile took 873 hours factory work and 2,451 hours of farm work.

These are NOT comparisons of prices paid by Americans and foreigners. These are comparisons between the real cost of living of Americans.

It would appear that we have had a farm program for everyone except the farmer. Certainly, the farm programs we've had in recent years have permitted farm income to drop behind nonfarm income.

Farm income per person from agricultural sources is now almost the same as it was in 1947, while farm income from all sources has increased only slightly. In terms of 1947-49 dollars, the average person living on a farm had an income of $830 in 1959 and $828 in 1960. Yet the average non-farm person has had an increase in income -- from $1,512 in 1950 to $1,804 in 1960.

Underlying this has been the continued squeeze of the cost-price vise. Since 1947-49 the prices the farmer receives for his crops and livestock have dropped 12 percent while prices he pays have risen 20 percent.

This administration is working for a national farm program -- a program in the best interest of all our people -- farmers, labor, business, industry, all consumers.

The Agricultural Act of 1961, sponsored by Senator Allen J. Ellender and Rep. Harold D. Cooley, would provide such a farm program. It would:

1. Enable farmers to achieve incomes more nearly comparable with those received by other Americans for similar investments in labor, capital, and management skills;
2. Achieve a healthy and increasingly efficient and productive agriculture that will provide abundant food and fiber for each of us at fair prices;
3. Advance our economic growth and national prosperity, through better farm incomes and sound farm economy.
4. Reduce costs of Federal Government over the long-run;
5. Get maximum use of our agricultural abundance to meet the needs and promote freedom at home and abroad.

The Agriculture Act of 1961 would attack both sides of the farm problem -- over-production and under-consumption. It would enable us to manage and use our abundance for the best interests of all Americans, and for strengthening the newly developing nations of the world.

This proposed legislation would provide farmers with the machinery for coming together to develop supply adjustment programs, commodity by commodity. It would provide democratic methods for approving or rejecting such programs. And it would specifically provide safeguards for consumer interests.

A committee of democratically chosen farmers -- including a consumer representative appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture -- would consult with the Secretary to develop and recommend a commodity program based on these consultations. To become effective, a proposed program would require approval by the President, sanction by the Congress, and approval by at least two-thirds of the producers of that commodity.

I urge you to note these important points in the proposed Agricultural Act of 1961:

The democratic procedures -- farmer elected advisory committees in consultation with the Secretary would consider and recommend individual commodity programs.

The safeguards -- consumer representative participates -- review by the Congress -- approval by at least two-thirds of the producers.

Flexibility for swiftly changing conditions -- the bill establishes agricultural procedures, not programs. It provides a flexible series of alternatives and, in the process, an open invitation to hard work for all those concerned with the farming economy.

The power of the Secretary to initiate programs will be diminished rather than expanded.

The new approach will give the Congress and its agricultural committees a closer, more direct relationship to agricultural programs than they now enjoy.

The Ellender-Cooley farm bill will cut the cost of Federal farm programs by helping producers bring supply into line with actual needs.

Let's use wheat as an example of how the procedures of the Ellender-Cooley bill could reduce government costs. We know that a supply adjustment program is urgently needed for wheat.

Suppose that, using the procedures of this bill, a program is developed to reduce wheat allotments by 10 percent beginning in 1962, to raise farm support levels and farm income and to provide growers an opportunity for diversion of additional wheat acreage.

Such a program would avoid adding nearly 100 million bushels to government stocks each year, as expected under present authority, and would reduce existing car-

Homecoming Here Set For Sept. 9th.

This reporter has been snooping and has uncovered some unconfirmed reports from usually reliable sources that several sessions of the Ex-Students Homecoming Officers and Committees have been held in secret meetings recently.

AREA RECEIVES GOOD RAINS LAST WEEKEND

Farmers and ranchers are indeed happy over the good rains received in this area which started falling on the 16th. and continued through the 18th.

The measurements varied from 5.72 inches reported by Mrs. Bill Slayton who keeps a weather chart for the Weather Bureau, to 7 3/10 inches southwest of Gorman. D. B. Warren reported 7 inches at his farm north of Gorman.

Leland Warren reported 8 7/10 inches of rain on his place southeast of Gorman.

It was a general rain, so we think everyone must have gotten enough to start planting. Some farmers have peanuts already coming up.

ryover by slightly more than 100 million bushels each year.
Four years of carryover reduction under the proposed programs, would avoid taxpayer expenditures for carrying charges and interest of more than $1.1 billion. On an 8 year basis, carrying charges and interest cost of about $2.5 billion would be avoided. We know that farmers will cooperate in sound and practical programs to adjust production to needs. Corn and grain sorghum growers have just proved it.

Within two and a half months after the Feed Grain Program was signed by President Kennedy, nearly 26.7 million acres on 1,172,000 farms had voluntarily been placed in the program.
Here is proof, also, that practical production adjustment programs will save tax dollars. By placing almost 26 percent of all corn and feed cropland in conservation uses this year, these growers likely will save taxpayers in the range of $600 million net, in comparison with the cost they would have had to assume if the existing program had been continued.

Such extensive participation in the Feed Grain Program should be heartening to the members of the Congress — especially to Congressmen from urban areas who said, in effect, "we will give the farmers an opportunity to cooperate together to manage their agricultural plant and see if they will take it."
Feed grain growers did take this opportunity, fully bearing out the faith of the Congress in the American farmer. As a result, members of Congress — and more and more of those who represent urban consumers — are taking a more favorable look at permanent legislation such as the Agricultural Act of 1961.

This year may offer the best opportunity the nation will ever have to enact a practical and flexible farm program in the best interest of farmers, consumers, taxpayers, business and industry. It could be the last opportunity we'll ever have to do it.

For that reason, I am working with a sense of urgency toward the objective of a sound farm program. Many others, including members of the Congress, leaders of farm groups, and representatives of consumers, share with me this feeling of urgency in dealing with the growing problem of production adjustment.

This Administration does not declare that the Agricultural Act of 1961 must be passed as written, or else there will be no farm bill. We are not inflexible on the exact provisions of the bill, but we do say that agriculture must have, and the nation needs, the flexibility which will enable farmers to meet the swiftly changing conditions now running so strongly through the farming economy, and through national and international affairs.

When I became Secretary of Agriculture, I did not pose as a farm expert, but I expressed a sincere desire to learn all I could about agriculture. I am learning. But it is impossible for any one man to have all the answers. That's why we have been in consultation with congressional leaders with long and valuable experience since the moment the bill was introduced, and even before then.

We are eager to discuss and to make changes in the omnibus bill which will improve the ability of the farmer to share in the rewards of his success. In the same constructive sense, we feel there is no point in accepting changes which would weaken the chance of attaining the goals we all seek — a truly national farm program for the good of all Americans.

In the meantime, we are using all the authority available to the Department of Agriculture:

- to help farmers achieve the greater material reward their successes have earned for them;
- to put our agricultural abundance to work at home feeding the needy and unemployed a better diet and to expand the school lunch and special milk programs;
- to expand the Food for Peace program abroad as a major instrument of our foreign policy;

- to expand credit for farmers; and
- to launch a vigorous rural areas development program to wipe out rural pockets of chronic poverty.

After consultation with agricultural leaders, we have raised price supports for a number of farm crops, including cotton, feed grains and peanuts.

We have increased consumption of farm products both at home and abroad.

At home, this has meant a substantial expansion in the amount and variety of food being made available to needy families. Since January, the Department has more than doubled the quantity of food available while placing it in the hands of 2.5 million more people. Less than three weeks ago, we opened pilot food stamp projects to enable needy families living in six communities and localities of chronic and high unemployment to purchase food required for adequate diets through regular retail channels. Two more pilot food stamp projects will be started in July.

New commodities have been added to the school lunch program. Distribution of milk through the school milk program has been increased. Federal support for both programs has been expanded.

We already have received from the Congress the authorization to expand our Food for Peace program by $2 billion for the current calendar year. In this way, the potent strength of our farm productivity is being used as an instrument in our quest for world peace and freedom.

We have increased loan funds to enable farmers to build and repair farm dwellings and essential service buildings, and to buy livestock, equipment, feed, seed, fertilizer, and to pay for other farm operating expenses.

The rural areas development program involves the use of low interest credit as well as a reshaping of the Department's resources to provide more technical help to farmers and to rural communities.

These actions, however, will not be enough, because of the root of the farm problem lies in the inability of individual commodity producers to adjust production to current needs at home and abroad.

Let's put democracy to work in every part of the farm program. Let's provide farmers the full opportunity to work together to solve their problems. Let's give them the tools that will enable them to keep pace with a strong and growing national economy.

This is the challenge we face. This is the task before us. Let's get on with the job.
