

GOLDEN PEANUT RESEARCH AWARD GOES TO DR. BYRON C. LANGLEY, STEPHENVILLE

One of the high points of the 25th Annual Convention of the National Peanut Council occurred on the evening of April 29. There was a ceremony to salute the scientist of the year with the presentation of the National Peanut Council's Golden Peanut Research Award. On that occasion the assembled peanut growers, shellers, brokers, and manufacturers warmly saluted Dr. Byron C. Langley for the work he has done in developing the Starr variety of the Spanish peanut. This is as it should be. The whole industry benefits from the dedicated work of the scientists that have helped develop peanut production, marketing and processing techniques.

Dr. Langley, born at Bullard, Texas in 1903, received his BS and MS degrees in agronomy from Texas A&M University. He has been with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas A&M University, since 1929 and since 1940 has served as Superintendent and Agronomist at the West Cross Timbers Field Station at Stephenville, the Texas station's major peanut research unit.

Langley's research efforts with peanuts span a period of 25 years during which time he has been an active participant in many phases of peanut production research. His primary endeavors, however, have related to peanut breeding, and in 1961, as an outcome of the breeding program, the Starr Spanish peanut was released to Texas growers. This variety represents the first improvement in Spanish peanuts in the United States to come from a controlled breeding program. In field tests in all of the peanut-producing areas in Texas Starr has averaged approximately 10 percent higher production than commercial varieties previously available and equals or exceeds them in quality. The new variety has been widely accepted by Texas growers and is being grown extensively in Oklahoma and Georgia.

The Starr peanut was named for Mr. W. B. Starr of Cisco, Texas, a long-time peanut grower and agricultural leader. The variety was developed at the West Cross Timbers Experiment Station at Stephenville under a cooperative breeding program of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Southwestern Peanut Growers' Association.

Langley is involved in a continuing breeding program with Spanish peanuts and is now evaluating numerous promising advanced breeding lines resulting from hybridization and irradiation. In 1964 he was the recipient of a citation and plaque from the Comanche County Peanut Growers' Association for "Distinguished Service." He is a member of the American Society of Agronomy, Crop Science of America, Soil Science Society of America and Association of Southern Agricultural Workers.

COUNTY IS THE BEST INFORMED FOR ATTRACTING INDUSTRY

Abilene Reporter-News, May 5 — CISCO (RNS) — The last of five Industrial Training Seminars was conducted in Cisco Tuesday, with five speakers in a program arranged by the Texas Industrial Commission.

Director Harry W. Clark of TIC reported that Tuesday's speakers brought to a total 26 experts in a wide variety of fields who have sought to give Eastland County the proper training in how to attract payrolls.

He said that no city or county in all of Texas had received any better instruction during his tenure.

Pilot Program

The program, which is known as the EC-65 project in this county, was suggested to the TIC by Gov. John Connally as a pilot program for Texas counties. The final meeting of the series will be a summary meeting at which Gov. Connally will speak, scheduled in about a month.

Clark said the date would be determined by the success of the legislative program. This meeting will be held at the new Cisco High School, which includes an air conditioned auditorium.

The Tuesday seminar was opened with an address by Ed C. Burris of Houston, executive secretary of the Texas Manufacturers Assn. He said the most important thing in seeking new payrolls is to create a good attitude and atmosphere in your community.

"Fair Treatment"

"Industry expects only fair treatment and will pay its fair share of the costs," Burris said. "Industry asks only a fair opportunity to earn a reasonable profit, expects fair tax evaluation and levies, and wants to be in a community with a good atmosphere."

He expressed the hope that the Texas Legislature now in session would not be too busy with the redistricting program to consider overhauling the Workman's Compensation Law and other matters that he said are not too attractive to industry.

James J. Kelley of the TIC staff spoke on "The Man With the Idea." He said that many large factories were the result of an idea by one man and that all Chambers of Commerce should be alert and anxious to consider anyone's suggestions and ideas for payrolls.

All Ideas Heard

He said the recent inventor's congress held in Galveston was a

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS" By C. WILSON HARDER

Perhaps now the tumult and shouting has died, and it is possible to analyze recent events in Alabama with a logical perspective.

After all was said and done, what was accomplished? What single new job was created?

To be sure, the march demonstrated that there is a desire for an easier way to register to vote. But the Congress is working on legislation to achieve this.

After the fervor and excitement died down, what footsore member of a minority race returning home to no job, but only a continuation of existence on relief can honestly say that his basic problem was solved?

What one of the thousands of unemployed members of a minority race in the northern cities claim that this demonstration in any way solved his problem . . . getting a job?

For after all, the keystone to human dignity is an income from gainful employment.

On this basis, if real accomplishment was desired, it would have been far better if this energy, this fervor, had been devoted to impressing on government that steps be taken to insure independent business in this nation is able to provide more jobs.

Surveys being taken by the National Federation of Independent Business

National Federation of Independent Business show that independent business proprietors in this nation, all 4,500,000 of them who now employ 30,000,000 people, are not reluctant to expand and provide more jobs if there is a common sense approach to the problem.

Results are showing that last year the independent businessmen have created in one year almost 4,000,000 new jobs, at a cost of somewhere around $7,000 in investment per new job.

It is reported that the Federal costs of protection of a demonstration that did not produce one new job, cost $1 million. This amount of money, retained by independent business, would have created 142,857 new jobs.

So what basic good was accomplished? And unless the problem of creating new jobs is solved, there will never be good understanding. Human nature being what it is, those who are paying heavy taxes to support others on relief will never have respect and consideration for those on relief.

Thus if the government and the Congress is really sincere in a desire to promote better relations between all its citizens, it will not look too much to the south as to the teeming masses of unemployed in the north. It will not spend huge sums to finance emotional demonstrations which fail to solve the basic problems. Instead, it will speedily enact such items as the "plow back allowance" which will not only encourage, but permit, independent business to provide the jobs which will convert tax eaters into taxpayers.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — 4TH IN A SERIES ON THE ORIGIN, INTERPRETATION AND APPLICATION OF LEGAL CONCEPTS — CONCLUSION.

JUST AS WE CHANGE OUR every-day living habits to meet changing conditions, so must it appear reasonable that governments, and even its courts, must find it necessary to alter the application of laws. In the name of States' rights, some will argue that the Supreme Court's restrictions have been applied to the States simply as a desire to centralize power. Some decisions have appeared in this light. More, however, has this concept been evidenced by the Legislative and Executive Branches of Government than by the Courts. The Constitution provides three separate and distinct Branches of Government — the Executive, Legislative and Judicial, each independent of the other. Depending on the personalities composing each Branch, at intervals in history one may be stronger than the other. When this is true, a greater influence is exerted by the one with the strongest leadership. When the philosophy of all are in practical agreement, there is reason to believe that the general prevailing trend to which they subscribe will become the policy of the Country. Strong measures recommended by the Chief Executive to meet changing conditions, authorized into Law by a sympathetic Congress and upheld in its legality by the Supreme Court, centralizes power in Washington and intrudes on the States.

eral Government is what is believed to be the abdication of responsibilities by some States. In the present day, if a few have abdicated certain responsibilities, then the onus is on all 50 States.

IT IS A TRUISM OF LAW THAT NO ONE MAY COME INTO A COURT of equity without clean hands. A number of people have been murdered in connection with certain Civil Rights activities. It makes no difference how or for what reason the murders were committed, if not in self defense. Murder is murder. No case can be made for States' rights if it goes unpunished. Basic rights must be protected, and unless they are, it lends impetus to the power of the Federal Government to see that they are.

THE REAL CONCERN IN ALL OF THIS is how far will the Federal Government go and how much damage will be done to our basic concepts of Rights of the States — Rights of the individual. No one seems to be thinking very much about RESPONSIBILITY which should go with claims of guaranteed Rights of whatever nature.

WE ARE DEALING, NOT WITH ONE PROBLEM, BUT WITH A CLUSTER of problems of the greatest confusion and danger. In the urge to meet what is considered to be certain fundamental guarantees of liberty, great violence can be done to the Constitution.

UNDER OUR SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT it is impossible for it ever to emerge a totalitarian type of government. This is true if the fundamental concepts of this system are maintained. To destroy basic law relating to LIFE, LIBERTY and PROPERTY is to invite the conditions which break down a representative form of government to make way for something alien to these concepts. Centralized power must inevitably be a condition for these forces to take hold.

IT REQUIRES A FAITH IN OUR SYSTEM and a dedication to its preservation to remove these doubts and deep concern shared by many. Impetus change, brought about under a charge of high emotion for the attainment of certain Rights, imagined or real, can not be conducive to orderly government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS: "If in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed."

Although wool is not a new fabric, a new treatment is being used on wool that is new and you will soon be seeing it on the market in ready-made garments and in fabrics. This treatment is referred to as the Wurlan treatment. Wurlanized wool is a scientific development in the shinkproofing of wool which is really gaining in popularity.

This treatment is technically known as an interfacial polymerization treatment of wool — which probably doesn't mean too much to you.

In this chemical finishing process, an extremely thin film of polymer forms on the surface of the wool fibers. Wurlan differs from most previously used chemical treatments in that it does not weaken the wool. Instead, it appears to strengthen the fibers and should provide better wearing qualities and increased durability.

Total usefulness of any treatment or process to manufacture shrinkproof wool fabric also depends on other properties of the treated and laundered fabric. Adding shrinkproofness and laundering capabilities must not create other undesirable fabric properties for the wearer.

These properties of Wurlan-treated fabrics have been determined by observations of many different weights, weaves, and colors of fabrics that have been treated under both laboratory and mill operating conditions:

1. Hand - the hand (feel) of fabric treated in this manner is considered good to excellent.

2. Shrinkage - yard goods have shown less than 5 percent of directional shrink after continuous machine washing in 140-degree water 5 hours.

3. Permanence - indications are that the treatment will last the life of the garment.

4. Colors and shades - a slight change in the dye-bath was necessary to compensate for the darkening effected by the Wurlan treatment.

5. Permanent pleat - no problem to apply these to Wurlanized fabrics.

6. Strength - treated fabrics are from 5 to 10 percent stronger.

7. Wearability - laboratory tests indicate a significant improvement over untreated goods in abrasion resistance.

8. Drying - there is no essential change in the drying rate after treatment.

9. Air permeability - is slightly decreased.

10. Moisture absorption - remains unchanged.

Annual Spring Pecan Field Day Set May 17

Two of the top horticulturists of Texas are scheduled to be on the program of the annual spring field day of the Eastland County Pecan Growers Association set for May 17th at Cisco, according to Oscar Schaefer, Cook, president of the group.

Tom Denman, Stephenville, agricultural experiment station horticulturist, and B. G. Hancock, horticulturist of the Extension Service of A&M University, have accepted invitations to attend and appear on the program, Schaefer said.

The morning session, beginning in the conference room of the First National Bank at 10:00 a. m. in the above city, will feature discussions by both men on Di-Syston as a systemic insecticide for aphids that cause honeydew, shuckworm and pecan weevil research findings, use of thuricide as well as results of various fertilizer analysis tests.

After a Dutch Treat lunch at noon in Cisco the group will go to the Jim Jennings pecan orchard a mile east of Scranton to check on the stage in the life cycle of the pecan nut case bearer, most destructive insect of the pecan in the state.

Women as well as men are cordially invited. Out of the county pecan growers are also invited according to Schaefer, who is looking forward for a large group to attend the annual affair.

Besides the spring field day the association also sponsors a fall tour, the county pecan show and the midwinter meeting. It was organized in 1956 by County Agent J. M. Cooper to help in the development of the pecan industry in the county.

"The layman is the heart of the local church. You are the symbol of theology," he said.

He closed his address with an appeal to all laymen to always protect and defend their church.

Dr. Wayne Reynolds, district superintendent, reported that the churches in this district are 100 percent paid on conference pledges. Louis Pitcock, Sr. of Graham made the report of the Cisco District Methodist Foundation.
