pretty well under control.

Aubrey Westmoreland was displaying a few vines Monday. He spoke of two-rows in one peanuts. As usual, Kernel Gene is a few months late in learning about things in general. Anyway, I rode out to Aubrey's peanut patch to take a picture. I could hardly see the ground for the peanut vines and they were about the tallest I have ever seen. Come to think of it I didn't see much foreign material such as grass and weeds. Estelle is writing the details to go with the picture.
