—J—
Old man winter sure reached out and popped us a good one on New Year's night as this area was hit with a sleet and snow storm Tuesday afternoon and night that left about three to four inches of accumulation on the ground. The sleet that fell at first melted and formed ice on the ground before the accumulation of snow started falling. By 9 p. m. the snow was falling so thick it was hard to see with the visibility falling very low. The snow drifted up in pretty high drifts in spots.

On Wednesday morning the sun came out about 8:30 and shined for a few minutes, then was covered with clouds around 9 a. m. When the paper was being readied for printing the sun was shining and it looked as though things were clearing out. However, it's hard to know what the weather will do. The weather has been rather odd anyway the past few weeks as we have received several inches of rain. However, as a couple of area folks were stating: "I had rather complain about it being wet than complaining about it being dry." So I guess we will take the moisture anytime we can get it.

—J—
Ugh! I ate so many blackeyed peas on New Year's Day that I don't know if I will want anymore the rest of the year. If quantity has any result on how much better off you will be, then this old boy should be okay, 'cause I really put those blackeyes away. And of course, I had to add a "little" ham and other goodies with it. And then the dessert on top of that. Ugh! I may not even want to eat again before mealtime. We hope that everyone ate their blackeyed peas and hope that you and yours have the best of everything in 1985.

—J—
Noticed that Tommy and Mildred Roberts have a bricking project underway at their home. Maybe if the weather will ever cooperate, the project can be completed soon. Tommy said he hoped so, because those knots on his head keep getting bigger and bigger. It sure is going to look nice when the project is completed. They live out on the Duster road.

—J—
The Lions Club was planning a junior varsity basketball tournament for this Saturday, the 5th. However, at this time the club could not secure enough teams to make a good bracket, so it will not be held. The Lions were hopeful that the event could be held later. If so we will let you know.

—J—
The news was a little short for this week so we are putting in some pictures of the snow fall scenes in town and some more fill-in news since the regular news is so short. Maybe we can get back to the regular run on news for next week.

—J—
And remember to smile - - because God Loves You!

SOIL, SPACING, IRRIGATION CONTROL PECAN FORTUNES

COLLEGE STATION--While new, fast growing varieties with high production potential are capturing the Texas pecan industry, production and profits continue to rest with the best soil, optimum spacing and modern irrigation.

The major key to successful pecan production is deep, well drained soil with a high nutrient and water hold capacity, emphasizes Dr. George Ray McEachern, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. Of the 10,000 acres of pecan trees planted in Texas the last three years, at least 30 percent are on soils that drain poorly and will never produce an economic crop. No management practices can correct poor soil selection.

Potential growers should contact their county Extension agent or Soil Conservation Service to determine the internal drainage of soil on which they intend to plant pecan trees, suggests McEachern.

Two basic soil types support excellent pecan orchards-- alluvial soils adjacent to major rivers and upland, well drained, sandy loam soils. In either case, a minimum of 32 inches of topsoil is needed and 4 to 7 feet of well drained subsoil is essential, notes the horticulturist. This will enable the pecan tree to develop a massive root system that will subsequently result in high yields of top quality pecans in a short period of time.

In their zeal to increase production, growers often plant trees closer than recommended. This causes poor quality nut production and failure to produce. Wide spacing of trees also reduces disease problems and the number of sprays needed annually. McEachern recommends planting trees on 30-foot centers in western areas of Texas and on 35-foot centers in eastern and southern sections.

As trees begin to crowd in the twelfth to fifteenth year, some will need to be removed to allow adequate space for those remaining. Unfortunately, tree pruning has not been successful in reducing tree size and maintaining yields, notes McEachern.

Another key factor in pecan production is water use. Since 1972 drip irrigation has developed rapidly throughout the state's pecan industry. About 70 percent of the pecan orchards planted in Texas in 1984 have either drip irrigation or micro-sprinklers.

These new low volume water management systems bring trees into production faster and help maximize irrigation water use, says McEachern. Also, salt as well as internal drainage problems can be better managed through drip irrigation, and zinc and nitrogen management can be more efficient.

However, weed control is more difficult with drip irrigation, so growers have to use a sophisticated weed management system. Fortunately, new herbicides have been developed that give excellent weed control in pecan orchards, says the horticulturist.

During a lifetime, the average human heart beats 2.5 billion times.

receive a Form SSA-1099, Social Security Benefit Statement, during January 1985, Glyn Hammons Social Security manager in Abilene, said recently.

Form SSA-1099 will show the amount of Social Security benefits the person received during 1984. It should be used just as any other form 1099 received from a financial institution should be used when the person completes his or her Federal income tax return for 1984, Hammons said.

Starting with Social Security benefits paid in 1984, people who have substantial other income may have to include up to half of their Social Security benefits in their taxable income.

Included with Form SSA-1099 will be IRS Notice 703. This is a worksheet that people can complete to see if any of their Social Security benefits may be subjected to Federal income tax.

This Land Is Your Land
Garry Mauro
Texas Land Commissioner

Recently, Texas Treasurer Ann Richards and I went over to the basement of InterFirst Bank in Austin to have a look at the computer system that will save Texans more than $100,000 in expenses and in additional earned interest.

Ann Richards and I are making a cooperative effort as part of the Texas Treasury's Rapid Deposit Program, which was started last year in an effort to place state money in interest bearing accounts as quickly as possible.

By placing payments from Texas Veterans participating in the Texas Veterans Land Program in the interest bearing accounts two days sooner, we are making an additional $22,000 a year in interest, as well as saving $72,000 in Texas General Land Office clerical expenses. This is made possible by the use of automated equipment to handle the payments.

An additional savings has been achieved by not having to purchase the automated equipment, which will be supplied by the depository bank—$77,700 plus an annual maintenance cost of $3,000.

As Texas Land Commissioner, this is part of my common sense approach to running our state government.

Managing the Texas GLO is not a conservative question or a liberal question, but a question of effectiveness with modern business practices, and the application of those practices to the people's business.

In the case of the Texas Veterans Land Board, this meant taking advantage of modern banking techniques like the InterFirst Bank computer. We receive about $60 million annually for Texas Veterans participating in the Veterans Land Program. In the past, those payments often weren't deposited into the treasury for several days.

Now they come to a central post office box which will be emptied daily and the receipts deposited in an interest bearing account the same day of delivery.

The "lockbox system" will cut about two days off the former method of handling Texas Veterans Land Program payments—a rapid deposit system used by many modern businesses—increasing the interest this money makes for you and cutting down on state clerical expenses.

The fiscal reality of today's dollar demands that government use cost-efficient, modern cash management techniques to squeeze the most out of every state tax dollar. Using these sound, aggressive business practices and common sense management, I can promise you that the Texas General Land Office will continue to be a partial solution to our state's fiscal crisis.

LEASE ARRANGEMENTS FOR RENTED FARMS

COLLEGE STATION—Lease arrangements satisfactory to tenant and landowners can enhance success of operating rented farms.

Written leases are best because they stimulate all parties to evaluate the lease contract and provide more understanding of the lease terms, say economists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Lease agreements are controlled by laws relating to leases and contracts. Parties should consult an attorney before finalizing a lease since lease agreements are legally binding contracts, explain Dr. Ashley Lovell of Stephenville, Dr. James Novak of Corpus Christi and Dr. Gerald C. Cornforth of Overton.

Items relating to lease considerations include:
• Description of property leased (a legal description for leases longer than one year).
• Length of lease and beginning date.
• Procedure for determining amount of rent.
• Time and place for rent payment.
• Landlord's right of entry, inspection and reserved rights.
• Subleasing rights.
• Land use provisions including crop acreage, rotations and restrictions.
• Agreements on participation in government programs.
• Tenant's investment and expenses such as general maintenance, weed control, improvements and conservation practices.
• Landowner's investment and expenses such as replacement/repair, taxes on farm real estate and personal property, and conservation.
• Tenant's duties in operating the farm, including maintenance of soil and water conservation structures and buildings, fences and other real improvements in the same condition as leased, not making alterations, additions or improvements without landlord's written consent.
• Arbitration provisions.
• Conditions causing termination of the agreement.
• Harvesting and removing timber, nuts, fruit, water and minerals.
• Renewal provisions including notice period and rent adjustment.
• Provisions for amending or changing existing lease.
• Provision for termination, including compensation for crop expenses.

Other personal or business situations will require different considerations that will add provisions in a lease agreement.

To minimize misunderstandings, even matters that are to be "according to local custom" should be spelled out in the agreement, note the economists.

Share leases are common in farming. Freedom to negotiate terms can serve to allocate land among tenants in a way that contributes to economic efficiency in agriculture, the economists say.

Negotiations is an effective method of establishing land rent if expectations are realistic, if projected costs of production are calculated accurately, and of weather conditions are favorable.

Many owner-tenant leases are negotiated using a one-third sharing ratio on feed grains for both inputs and income during the growing and harvest seasons, they add.

IMITATION CHEESE NOT ALWAYS LIKE THE REAL THING
It may look and even taste cheese, but these days, only the label will tell you what you're eating. Under Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations, a dairy product which does not meet the relevant standard of identity must be called "imitation," says Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist Mary K. Sweeten. But if the product substitutes for and resembles another food and is not "nutritionally inferior" it does not have to be called imitation, she adds. Some imitation products, like imitation cream cheese, are not nutritionally equivalent to the products they resemble says Sweeten. But others are a popular and economical category of substitute cheeses which have been fortified to contain the same amounts of protein and 19 other ingredients for which U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances have been established.

TAKING MEDICATIONS SAFELY -- Elderly people who take many medications may be tempted to crush or mix pills so they will be easier to swallow. But not all medications can be safely treated this way, cautions gerontologist Dr. Judith Warren. Some tablets are coated to conceal the unpleasant taste of the medication, prevent irritation of the mouth and esophagus, or to delay release of the drug, says Warren, a specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economics program. Crushing a coated tablet immediately release the drug and may cause a bitter taste in the mouth, stomach irritation and nausea. This may cause some elderly to avoid taking the medicine as prescribed, Warren notes. Drug overdose and side effects can also occur, she adds. Since crushing or dissolving may medication can alter its effects, elderly patients or those who care for them should ask the pharmacist, doctor or nurse whether an alteration will be safe or not, Warren suggests.

KOKOMO NEWS

By Mrs. Zelda Jordan

HAPPY NEW YEAR TO EVERYONE! We hope and pray that this new year will be a very good year for all. The Lord is giving us another new year and may we all vow to do more for Him this year and may all we do be for His Honor and Glory, then we will know for sure that it will be a good year no matter what comes our way.

The Christmas program and fellowship was held at the Kokomo Baptist Church on December 19. Santa came to delight the young and old, give each a fruit and candy bag and to pass out the gifts from under the beautiful decorated Christmas Tree. Larry and Paula Morrow and boys were presented going away gifts as they are moving to Plains, Texas very soon. Larry, Paula, Lance, Layne and Lenny have been very active in the Kokomo Baptist Church and will really be missed, but we wish them the very best in their new home.

Everyone gathered in the fellowshp hall at the close of the program for a supper of barbecue on buns and cobbler and a Wonderful time of Christian fellowship. Bro. Clarence Wilson voiced the prayer of thanks for the food.

SOYBEANS NEED GOOD SEEDBED, PEST AND WATER MANAGEMENT

COLLEGE STATION - Proper seedbed preparation, effective disease and insect control, and water management are key factors in profitable soybean production in Texas.

Using proven management practices, soybean farmers can boost income $30 to $60 an acre.

Proper seedbed preparation can eliminate weeds and provide environmental conditions for rapid seed germination and seedling emergence, point out agronomists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Soybeans planted in the flat, high rainfall areas of eastern and southern Texas should be bedded to provide surface drainage, says Dr. Arlen Klosterboer of Beaumont. Planting with the slope of the field and supplemental ditching also will help farmers achieve higher yields. Poor drainage can result in yield losses of three to five bushels per acre, Klosterboer points out.

Soybean fields drilled or broadcast planted require special attention to two production practices: surface drainage and weed control. Without furrows typical of row planting, drill planting may require additional supplemental ditching to remove excess water after heavy rains.

Because cultivation is not possible with drill or broadcast planted fields, weed control will depend on efficient herbicide use.

Fungal diseases are a major problem of soybeans in eastern and southern areas, Klosterboer points out. They can cut yields by up to 15 percent and reduce seed quality. Foliar fungicides can improve germination of soybeans grown for seed and can increase harvested yields an average of five bushels per acre.

To improve profitability from foliar fungicides, producers need to consider a number of factors, including variety selection, rotation, weeds and moisture conditions, says Klosterboer.

For farmers to stay abreast of insect levels and initiate effective insect management programs, Klosterboer recommends regular scouting of fields.

In the High Plains of Texas where soybeans are an important alternative crop, water management is of utmost concern, says Dr. Kirby Huffman, of Lubbock. A good program of soil moisture retention by using stubble, furrow dikes or other water conservation practices is essential.

Soybeans need from 22 to 26 inches of water to produce excellent yields in the High Plains, where normal rainfall is less than 20 in. a year. By using a conservation and irrigation program, these yields can be increased. With good preplant irrigation, many producers can avoid watering until bloom stage, Huffman points out. Stress during the bloom stage reduces yields by reducing the number of pods retained by the plant. From bloom through pod fill, irrigations are necessary to maintain adequate moisture that prevents low quality beans.

Farmers can use moisture blocks or tensiometers to determine loss of moisture at various levels. This helps manage water necessary to get good pod set and grain fill, says Huffman.

High Plains growers need to be concerned with the soybean stem borer. Larvae girdle the stalk near the soil surface as they prepare to overwinter in the root. This pest reduces yield mainly by causing plants to lodge prior to harvest.

While there currently are no insecticide recommendations for controlling the stem borer, destroying crop stubble soon after harvest by discing or deep plowing will significantly increase the mortality of overwintering populations. Early soybean harvesting before larvae begin to girdle plants will further minimize losses, says Huffman.

The major disease threat to High Plains soybeans is the cyst nematode. Careful cleaning of implements used in infested fields should prevent its movement to clean soybean fields.

REYE SYNDROME

Reye syndrome is a rare but dangerous condition that can develop from flu or chicken pox. It occurs mainly in children under 16, usually when they appear to be recovering. Watch for these signs:

- Persistent vomiting
- Fatigue
- Confusion and belligerence.

If your child displays any of these symptoms, consult a doctor immediately.

Some studies indicate that there may be an association between the use of aspirin for flu and chicken pox and the development of Reye syndrome. Further studies are being conducted on this possibility. In the meantime, the U.S. Surgeon General suggests that you check with your doctor before using aspirin or any medication when your child has flu or chicken pox.

Help Your Heart

American Heart Association in Texas
WE'RE FIGHTING FOR YOUR LIFE

Smoking Causes Heart Disease

Many smokers don't realize that most cigarette-related deaths are from heart attacks, not lung disease. "Fifty-three percent of smokers do not know or believe that smoking is a cause of heart attacks," Antonio Gotto, M.D., president of the American Heart Association, said at a recent press conference in Washington, D.C.

For almost 30 years the AHA has opposed cigarette smoking with increasing vigor, Dr. Gotto said, because of growing evidence of the devastating effects of smoking on the heart and other organs. An AHA committee of experts has reviewed the evidence and concluded that "smoking is the single most preventable cause" of coronary heart disease.

Cigarette smokers have a two to four times greater risk of sudden death from heart disease than non-smokers. Their risk markedly increases when such factors as high blood pressure, high blood cholesterol or diabetes are also present.

Female smokers who use oral contraceptive pills increase their risk of heart attack approximately tenfold and their risk of subarachnoid hemorrhage, a type of stroke, approximately twentyfold.

The risk of disease from cigarette smoking is directly related to number of years smoked, number of cigarettes smoked per day and the habit of inhaling. The risk of death from coronary heart disease declines upon cessation of smoking.

Help your heart! Don't smoke. Millions of Americans have given up the habit. And as many as two-thirds of the more than 50 million Americans who continue to smoke would like to quit and most have tried to do so. Following an unsuccessful attempt to quit, some smokers switch to cigarettes lower in tar and nicotine. While switching may lower the risk for some diseases, there is no evidence that it reduces the risk for heart and blood vessel diseases.

FAMILY FARM GROUP CONTINUES TO OPPOSE NUCLEAR WASTE DUMP IN DEAF SMITH CO.

WACO, TEXAS - The possibility of locating the U.S. high level nuclear waste dump in Deaf Smith County drew quick criticism from the president of the states largest family farm organization last week.

Mike Moeller, president of the Texas Farmers Union and a farmer in Hays County, says the decision by the Department of Energy, "Flies in the face of reason."

Commenting shortly after the Dec. 19 announcement by the federal agency, Moeller said, "Who would think that anyone would actually consider placing the deadliest material known to mankind under prime Texas farm and ranch land?"

"Deaf Smith County is one of the most productive agricultural areas in Texas and the damage that can be done to the marketing of Deaf Smith and Texas agricultural products nationwide is too awful to think about."

"This is an issue that all Texas farmers and ranchers should get involved with. Each one has something to lose if the Department of Energy locates their waste dump in Texas. Most U.S. citizens don't know the difference, geographically, between Deaf Smith County and Duvall County and don't care. People just won't want to eat anything produced anywhere near nuclear waste."

Moeller also noted the present effects of the proposed nuclear dump.

"Farmers in close proximity to the proposed site report a probable decline in property value of up to thirty percent and that was before Deaf Smith County was named a finalist and before U.S. Senator-elect, Phil Gramm, told these farmers near the proposed site not to worry."

Moeller was referring to a campaign promise made by Gramm in which he and Secretary of Energy, Donald Hodel, claimed that Gramm would be able to keep the dump site out of Texas. The campaign promise drew criticism from several groups who accused Gramm and the Reagan Administration of making unkeepable promises for political gain.

"This further illustrates the lack of understanding the Reagan Administration has of agriculture," says Moeller. "Farming and ranching can't simply relocate anywhere - agriculture needs clean air, clean water, and good land to feed a hungry nation. We certainly don't need the Reagan Administration burying high level nuclear waste under that good land."

Drunk drivers don't discriminate.

Last year in Texas 200 kids were killed in alcohol-related auto crashes. And this figure keeps rising. People continue to drink and drive. They continue to kill. But like other significant social problems, this one can be solved if everyone helps out.

When you're out with friends, decide who will drive, and that person won't drink. Also, if you are with a drunk friend, don't let him get behind the wheel.

Drunk driving isn't someone else's problem. It's yours as well.
